The selections of Slater and incumbent Municipal Judge Wendell E. Assemblymen Prince And Andrews Denied Party Endorsements, To Seek Nominations In Primaries

Harlem Democratic voters will have 2 interesting primary fights to settle this year when the incumbent Assemblyman, William Prince, in the 11th A. D., and William T. Andrews, in the 12th A. D., will fight for renomination as insurgents after being denied regular club endorsements.

New York Age

In the 11th A. D., Attorney Tom Dickens received the regular organization designation over Assemblyman Prince, while in the 12th A. D., Assemblyman Andrews, veteran legislator, was denied support of the 12th A. D. South club headed by Joe Ford, Adam Powell's right sand man, who designated Elijah Crump, a party wheelhorse, as the candidate. Assemblyman Andrews, however, was designated as the candidate by Cecil Carter, leader of the northern end of the district, so that the primary fight will really be a contest of strength between the two leaders.

In previous years, Assemblyman Andrews has often had to go into primary fights to get the designation and each time was successful. Whether he can repeat his performance this year remains to be seen, however, for this marks the first time that he will go against the candidate proposed by the Adam Powell followers.

South Carolina's New [redacted]

Down in South Carolina [redacted] are voting in today's Democratic primary election. It is the first such state-wide performance since the days of reconstruction, and is certainly an event of magnitude in that state. The event is naturally to be saluted, and it would be pleasant on this occasion to congratulate South Carolina for a remarkable recognition of human rights. But, as it happens, the credit belongs to one man, Judge J. Waties Waring, of the United States District Court, a native Charlestonian who has repeatedly cut through the elaborate evasions by which the South Carolina Democrats tried to preserve an all-white sanctity.

Herald Tribune

New York, N.Y.

34a(3)

South Carolina, to recall, erected a hocus-pocus theory that the Democratic party was a private political country club inhabited only by the whites. Restriction of the party's primary was a personal affair, by no means an assault on the electorate. If the Negroes wanted to vote, there was always the postscript affair called the general election. (The Republican vote in 1944 was 4.8 per cent, rather higher than usual.) Such sham failed quickly in the courts, but the local Democrats were not yet ready to give in. Rules adopted last May provided that the party exact from all participants in the primary election a signed oath of eternal loyalty to the Democratic party and of full subscription to "social and educational separation of races" and "the principles of states' rights," plus this assertion: "I am opposed to the Federal so-called F. E. P. C. law." As a result, the enrollment books were closed to Negroes. (A few upland counties, to their credit, declined to follow the state committee's rules.) This undistinguished piece of defiance was quickly halted last month by the same Judge Waring who had suggested on a previous occasion that it was time for South Carolina to "rejoin the Union." Under stinging rebuke, the Democratic enrollment books were forthwith opened to all, black or white. Judge Waring, a Southerner of Southerners, speaking to his own people in the sternest terms, is the man responsible. Trib. 8-10-48

In today's primary, Judge Waring is an issue. The 35,000 enrolled Negroes out of a state total exceeding 800,000 have an ironic choice among five candidates for the United States Senate, all occupied in denouncing Judge Waring. The resentment is to be understood, and we hope it will pass in time. Far more interesting is the long-run challenge presented to both races in South Carolina—whether they can develop within the same political organization for the greater common good, or the two-party (or even three-party) system is at last stirring in the South. 8-10-48

Draft Bill Faces New Hurdle As Civil Rights Rider Looms

Langer Proposes Hitching Racial Program to Defense Measure—Gurney Hits Use of Security as a 'Vehicle'

Tr. 5-27-48

By C. P. TRUSSELL

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, May 26—The Administration program for drafting men 19 through 25 years of age for a stop-gap strengthening of the armed forces ran into new trouble today.

Notice was served by Senator William Langer, Republican, of North Dakota, that he would force to a voting showdown a proposal that virtually the complete civil rights program of President Truman be incorporated in the draft.

He indicated that he would offer for recorded tests when the draft bill reached the floor, amendments designed to accomplish these objectives: 5-27-48

Eliminate entirely all traces of racial segregation in the drafting of men and in their assignment to military units.

Give the long-contested anti-lynching legislation a foothold in law by applying its principles to those involved in the draft. The general anti-lynching bill has been stymied for weeks in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Allow no "Jim Crow" transportation of draftees in interstate commerce. The President recommended an ending of "Jim Crow" travel. The Republican-controlled Congress has not given this issue even committee consideration.

Bar from Government contracts all manufacturers who might produce supplies, uniforms and equipment for draftees unless they adhered to the principles of complete nondiscrimination as to race, creed and national origin in employment of persons who produced the goods. 5-27-48

The Langer proposals caused great concern to sponsors and backers of the draft program, which had been encountering change and reverses and delays for weeks. This new move, it was conceded widely, came at a time when the proposed revival of selective service for prompt filling of gaps in military personnel was apparently losing strength in Congress.

Senator Chan Gurney of South Dakota, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said:

"It is my firm conviction that this manpwoer bill is so necessary for the well-being of the United States that those on both sides of the civil rights question should withdraw any amendments that in any way would tend to delay quick passage. 6-27-48

"A defense measure is no vehicle for use in fighting out the civil rights question. Congressional operation concerning the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps and the Air Force must be on an unencumbered plane for the best interests of the national security."

In his statement, Senator Gurney struck also at an amendment already introduced by Senator Richard B. Russell, Democrat of Georgia, which would write into the draft law a provision to the effect that any man drafted would have the legal right to demand that he be assigned to a military unit composed wholly of members of his own race.

After Senator Langer had announced his intention to propose a "civil rights" draft enactment, Senator Russell said:

"Such amendments will provide a test of the good faith of those in Congress who profess support of a draft deemed to be required to build the strength of our armed forces to a security basis. They also will provoke strong and prolonged resistance.

"I don't think any such provisions will be in any draft bill as finally w[illegible].

In some quarters the question was raised as to whether Senator Langer was a supporter or a foe of the proposed stop-gap draft.

Mr. Langer was asked: "What is your position on the proposed draft?" Tr. 6-27-48

"I'm against it," he said.

"Would you be for it," Mr. Langer was asked, "if your proposed amendments were adopted?"

"I am against the draft bill in its present shape," he replied. "If my amendments are adopted, I might be for it."

On the other side of the Capitol, the House Rules Committee made no further moves toward getting the draft issue to the floor. It held hearings, but on other bills.

THE DRAFT ON ITS MERITS

The announced intention of Senator Langer of North Dakota—an avowed opponent of the draft—to fight the battle of civil rights in the Senate over the body of the Selective Service Bill is an improper use of parliamentary procedure to cloud the issue on a vital question of national security. It is of a piece with Senator Russell's implied threat to filibuster the bill to death unless the present practice of racial segregation in the armed forces is frozen into law.

This effort to confuse the debate on Selective Service with the issue of civil rights is a poor service to either cause. The two are largely separate problems. Racial bigotry cannot be eradicated by legislation alone. But this country's national security can be and must be provided for by Congressional action, and that is the purpose of the Selective Service bill. In fact, civil rights depend on our maintenance of a democratic Republic. A rider on the Selective Service bill that caused defeat of the latter, and thus endangered the security of the United States, would be a poor way of protecting those rights for which the two Senators profess so much concern.

The situation on the House side at Washington is only slightly less disturbing than that in the Senate. There Representative Allen of Illinois—also an avowed opponent of Selective Service—has been leading the Rules Committee in a planned campaign of obstruction that has kept the draft measure bottled up for several weeks, and the end not yet in sight. Mr. Allen was quoted yesterday as being ready to lay aside consideration of it at any time "for more important matters." What is more important at this moment than guaranteeing to the United States the strong armed forces it needs in today's troubled world?

There has been far too much delay already, both in the Executive department and in Congress, on the vital problem of manpower for our armed services. The world is waiting on our decision, waiting to see whether this country intends to maintain its strength or to permit its defenses and its power to keep the peace to become so meager that its words will carry no authority in world councils. An Air Force is not enough. Unless it has the backing of a strong Army and Navy it would be helpless to defend this country against attack or to prevent such an attack materializing because of threat of quick and sustained retaliation. Experience has shown that the Army and the Navy cannot obtain the physically able and mentally able men it needs by the volunteer method alone. Selective Service is the right answer.

The responsibility for seeing that Selective Service is brought to the floor of both Houses of Congress and debated there on its merits must be accepted by the Republican leadership in Congress. The Republicans cannot have their political cake and eat it too. They cannot hold a majority in Congress and act like a minority at the same time. Lack of manpower in the armed services is an issue that must be faced now. Let us have an end to obstruction, delay and confusion.

South's Segregation Plan And U.M.T. Amendment Are Defeated In Voice Votes

Thurs 6-10-48

By the Associated Press.

Washington, June 9.—The Senate, laboring to reach a vote on a bill drafting men 19 through 25, today approved an amendment liberalizing the court-martial system o Army and Air Force.

It rejected amendments to:

1. Set up a system whereby draftees would be segregated by races if they desired it.
2. Establish a universal-military-training system.
3. A proposal by Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) to delay the draft 90 days and then make it effective only if the President proclaimed that volunteer methods had failed.
4. An amendment by Senator Morse (R., Ore.) that would have slashed to 18 months the two-year period a draftee must serve if inducted. Morse's proposal was defeated by a voice vote.

The Courier-Journal

The Capehart plan was defeated by a vote of 57 to 24. Senator Taft (R., Ohio) and acting majority leader Wherry of Nebraska favored it. Senator Tydings (D., Md.) opposed it, saying Congress should set the draft date. Senator Myers (D., Pa.) agreed, saying senators should have the 'intestinal fortitude" to ask for a draft.

GI's Would Sit On Courts.

Among other things, the court-martial amendment would let enlisted men sit on the courts. It also aims to make such courts independent of a commanding officer's influence.

The segregation amendment, offered by Southerners, lost on a voice vote after heated debate.

Universal military training, which has been sought in vain by the Administration, is different from the draft. Under the draft, men are inducted into the armed forces. U.M.T. is a separated system of training for youths. They would not be in the armed forces, but the idea would be to give them fundamental training so they would be at least partly prepared if the need arose.

Louisville, Ky.

Proposed By Malone.

Today's U. M. T. amendment was offered by Senator Malone (R., Nev.). It would have required youths of 19 to serve six months in a training corps.

Senator Gurney (R., S. D.), chairman of the Senate Armed Forces Committee, said it was an excellent idea but "at this late hour" there wasn't much chance of dovetailing it properly into the draft bill.

Thurs, 6-10-48

Senator Baldwin (R., Conn.) said the amendment, defeated by a voice vote, would not pass the House anyway. The House Armed Services Committee approved a separate U.M.T. bill last summer, but it has been bottled up in the Rules Committee. The draft bill pending in the House does not mention U.M.T.

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) opposed the plan.

"You can't build up an Army by training a great mass of young men to be good squirrel hunters," he said.

The amendment to overhaul the court-martial system was introduced by Senator Kem (R., Mo.) and was approved 44 to 39. Kem said the change was needed because military justice has been criticized bitterly.

And, he added, "If Congress has time to pass legislation to take young men from their homes, it certainly has time to see that they get a square deal."

The Kem amendment would make certain punishments less severe, would permit enlisted men to sit as members of a court-martial, permit the accused to have counsel at pretrial investigations, and establish a separate Judge Advocate General Corps.

He said the Army has "no serious objection" to the changes except for the provision setting up a separate Judge Advocate General Corps. But Kem said this was "the nub of the plan" to overcome "dangers of command influence."

Gurney opposed the plan. He said the Navy should be included, and the Senate should wait until an over-all study has been made and a uniform code adopted for all services.

The Courier-Journal

Killed By Voice Vote.

A voice vote killed the proposal by Senators Russell (D., Ga.) and Maybank (D., S. C.) to allow enlisted men to serve in separate white or Negro units if they wished.

The action was a setback for Southern senators in their long fight on the civil-rights issue. Earlier this week, however, they won a round when the Senate batted down or sidetracked amendments they opposed.

Although the debate was bitter, no senator demanded a roll call. The amendment was rejected by a chorus of "noes."

Senate rejection of the segregation proposal today followed hours of debate during which Democratic Senators Ellender (La.), McClellan (Ark.) and Eastland (Miss.) spoke in its support.

'Parents Want It.'

Louisville, Ky.

"The mothers and fathers of white boys back home want this amendment adopted," McClellan shouted. "This is not war. There is no emergency that demands there be mixed units in the services."

Thurs. 6-10-48

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) opposed the amendment, saying segregation or non-segregation should not be up to Congress but to the "wisdom and discretion of the armed services."

He said he was "not in favor of social equalization by legislation." He added that the Government has no right to say "who can visit your home, eat at your table, sleep in your bed, or marry your daughter."

Third P.M. Session Coming; Segregation Issue Due For Vote

34B

WASHINGTON, June 9 — (AP) — Weary senators embroiled in a dew draft-civil rights fight today faced their third straight night session in a drive to speed the measure to an uncertain House fate.

Called together once more an hour earlier than usual, they arranged to vote 90 minutes later on an amendment sponsored by Sen. Russell (D., Ga.) and Maybank (D., S. C.) which would let enlisted men serve in segregated units upon request.

In its second overtime session last night, the Senate adopted an amendment to limit the selective service law to two years instead of five as originally proposed.

Earlier it approved a provision to permit 25,000 aliens to serve in American armed forces here and abroad. At the end of five years the foreigners would qualify for U. S. citizenship.

Once the issue of separate white and Negro units is decided by the morning ballot, Sen. Gurney (R., S. D.), floor manager of the bill, said he is confident the measure can be cleared swiftly to the House.

THERE, HOWEVER, Chairman Leo E. Allen (R., Ill.) told reporters "there is a very good chance" his rules committee will vote against putting a draft bill up for prompt House debate.

The News

The Republican leadership has been pressing for enactment of the draft measure before the GOP National Convention 12 days off.

But Allen said only four committee members now favor sending the bill to the House floor, with four others—including himself—opposed, and the positions of the remaining four not yet known.

A rules committee turn-down on the measure would mean it would have to be pried out by a petition signed by 218 House members—a device that could be used only if Congress comes back to work after the party conventions.

Speaker Martin (R., Mass.), admitting the possibility of a rules committee log jam on the measure, said House GOP leaders still expect to pass it before Congress goes home for good this Summer.

THE SLOW PROGRESS on the draft bill on both sides of the Capitol increased talk of Congress' possible return to work after the Republican Convention which opens June 21.

Birmingham, Ala.

Senate leaders said that if work can't be finished June 19, they want to come back after the GOP meeting and try to pass several pending bills.

Wed. 6-9-48

Last night Russell and Maybank held forth at length on their plan to "guarantee to any individual citizen brought into the services the right to serve in a military unit composed of members of his own race."

Russell said opposition to his "fundamentally fair and American proposal" results from election year attempts by both Republicans and Democrats to capture the Negro vote.

The News

Yesterday's decision to allow 25,000 aliens to serve in the American Army was by a 43 to 33 vote. Sen. Lodge (R., Mass.) sponsored the amendment.

Later the chamber voted 47 to 33 to limit the draft revival to only two years.

Langer Drive To Add Rights Bill To Draft Gets New Opposition

The News

WASHINGTON, June 5—(AP)—An odd combination of Republicans and Southern and Northern Democrats formed today to fight Sen. Langer's drive to tack the controversial civil rights program onto the draft bill.

34B

Langer, who held the Senate floor more than three hours yesterday with a desk-thumping speech, said: "I've just begun to fight and I'll have plenty to say about each of my amendments." The North Dakota Republican added: "This is no filibuster."

CHAIRMAN GURNEY (R., S. D.), of the Armed Services committee which worked out the draft measure, plans to ask the Senate "to table" the Langer amendments when it resumes debate Monday.

"I have no desire to cut off actual debate," Gurney said, "but this is a major defense measure and time is short."

The News

Pending as the Senate quit for the week-end was the first of seven amendments Langer has introduced. It would prohibit segregation or discrimination in the armed forces because of race, color or religion. A violation could bring five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

SEN. RUSSELL (D., Ga.), spokesman for a group of Southern senators who have broken with President Truman over the civil rights issue, predicted support for the Gurney move.

Sat.

"I think an overwhelming majority of Southern Democrats will vote to table the Langer amendments," Russell said.

6-5-48

A final vote on the Senate measure to draft men 19 through 25 years of age is expected early next week. The House has not yet acted on its draft bill.

Action in Senate

The Times

34B

Last Tuesday the Senate Armed Forces Committee, by a vote of 7-2, approved a bill providing for registration of men 18 through 25 and virtually the same draft plan as the House bill—but merging with the draft a military training program for 161,000 youths of 18 each year.

[illegible] N.Y.

There arose in the Senate committee a dispute which threatened new delays. The dispute came over an amendment by Senator Richard B. Russell, Democrat, of Georgia, proposing that every new draftee and present enlisted man be given the right to request service in a unit of members "of his own race." The intent of the amendment was to write into law an official policy of segregation in the armed services. The amendment was defeated.

Sun. 5-16-48

On Wednesday the amendment was introduced for debate. Immediately there arose the prospect of a filibuster. On the House side there were indications that a similar amendment would be introduced when the House manpower bill came up for debate.

McGrath Agrees

And Senator McGrath (D-RI), chairman of the Democratic national committee and a supporter of the Truman program, said he will go along.

McGrath told reporters a national defense measure is no matter on which to fight out the civil rights battle.

However, Russell and other Southerners plan to offer an amendment that would put a reverse twist on the racial issue. Their proposal would make it illegal to assign any man in the armed services to a unit or quarters except with "his own race" if he so requests. Sat.

This, like Langer's amendments, probably faces a motion to table.

A final vote on the senate measure to draft men 19 through 25 years of age is expected early next week. The house has not yet acted on its own draft bill, but chairman Leo E. Allen (R-Ill) of the rules committee has said he will schedule it after the senate acts. 6-5-48

Three Anti-Bias Riders To Draft Bill Rejected

PM

New York, N.Y.

WASHINGTON, June 7 (AP) — The Senate today voted decisively against three draft bill amendments outlawing race segregation in the armed forces. Tues.

The roll-call vote was 67-to-7 to reject the anti-segregation and civil rights amendments to the 19-through-25 draft legislation.

Indications were that the Senate would take final action on the draft bill this week. The House is waiting for the Senate to act before taking up a draft bill of its own.

Treated as 'Must'

With the anti-segregation amendment out of the way, many Senators talked of likewise shelving a proposal by Sen. Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) to require the armed forces to maintain all-white and all-negro units.

But support appeared growing for another amendment. This one sponsored by Sen. Homer Capehart (R., Ind.), would put the draft on a standby basis. The President would get the power to order drafting of men only if the armed forces couldn't fill their needs with volunteers. The draft wouldn't start until 90 days after the Presidential order.

Among Seven Riders

Republican leaders of Congress are treating the draft proposals as "must" legislation — slated definitely for passage before June 19, the probable adjournment date.

The amendments put aside by the Senate today were among seven offered by Sen. William Langer (R., N. D.) to require the armed forces to put into practice President Truman's civil rights proposals. Tues.

Many supporters of the civil rights program, however, were among those voting to shelve the Langer amendment. They took the position that the President's proposals should be considered by themselves—not as "riders" to the draft bill. 6-8-48

The Draft Law's Passage Nothing Should Prevent

The Record

Republican leaders in both House and Senate have listed the stop-gap draft bill as one of the must measures to be passed before the session ends for the two conventions.

Neither the House nor the Senate bill makes any provision for universal military training, as asked by the armed services, but both merely provide for the immediate problem facing the country, the problem of providing the men to keep the armed services up to required peace-time levels. Columbia, S.C.

The Congress has been voting money for the armed services with a lavish hand. Somehow no congressman objects to voting money; it is other people's money. But voting to send men—and it takes men as well as money to make an army, navy an air force—is another question. Men can vote, if not today then tomorrow and every member of Congress is interested in votes. It is a short-sighted policy. Fri. 6-4-48

"This nation is foolishly gambling with the future safety and well being of its people and of its way of living," Chairman Gurney, South Dakota Republican, who heads the armed services committee, told the Senate. "We have no armed forces in being which are capable of protecting those things which we as a nation hold to be sacred, nor which are strong enough to uphold the dignity and position of the United States on the distant ramparts which we must watch if we are to continue as a free nation."

And there is truth in what Senator Gurney said. The logic of it ought to have led the House and the Senate long ago to write into law the necessary extension of the draft. The Record

Now the measure is likely to encounter further delay. In particular the Senate bill seems destined to become embroiled in the civil rights fight. Senator Langer, Indiana Republican, who is opposed to any draft, proposes to offer seven amendments to the bill, designed to incorporate in it the whole of the President's so-called civil rights program. Senators Russell of Georgia and Maybank of South Carolina, on the other hand, want to add an amendment which would provide that no person might be drafted to serve except with his own race.

Senators Russell and Maybank do have the excuse that they are afraid that the President will abolish segregation in the armed services. But they also have the assurances of the secretaries of defense and of the army that nothing like this is being planned. Columbia, S.C.

Both the Langer amendment and the Russell-Maybank amendment should be rejected and without too much debate. Neither has any place in the bill, the purpose of which is to provide men for the armed services, not to solve social questions. Fri. 6-4-48

Nothing should be allowed to impede the enactment of the bill. And no Southern Senator should do anything to put any impediments in its way. For the South knows first hand what it is to be a conquered land.

Army to Select Draftees Without Regard to Color

The Afro American

Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — The Army will abandon the practice it followed under the Selective Service and Training Act of 1940 and, under the new draft law, will not requisition them on the basis of color, Army Secretary Kenneth E. Royall disclosed at a press conference last Monday morning.

July 17 -48

The discriminating practice of requisitioning men for induction began when Selective Service first became effective in 1940. At that time, the drafting of colored men was deferred because the Army had facilities for white men only.

When facilities became available, Selective Service issued its calls for inductees also on the basis of color. This strict pattern of segregation followed right up to the Battle of the Bulge when colored rifle companies were attached to of color, fought shoulder to shoulder. The Afro American

To lay the anti-poll-tax bill asid the Republican leaders had to "ad journ" the Senate late today rathe than simply recess it. A struggl for political advantage at onc broke out.

The Administration Democrats led by Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, forced a roll-call o this test so that they could under line in the record that an adjourn ment meant the loss of the poll-tax repealer for this session.

Adjournment, and thus the death of the bill, was ordered by a vote of 69 to 16. Standing with Mr Barkley in opposition was every Democratic "regular," including Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, the party's national chairman, and Senator Scott W. Lucas of Illinois, its whip.

Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, the Republican leader on domestic affairs, marshaled his party without defection to uphold the policy of adjournment.

Thur 8-5-48

All voting Southerners, who were quietly jubilant at their victory, went along en bloc with Mr. Taft's side. Twenty-four Democrats, all but a handful from the South or border states, joined forty-five Republicans.

Mr. Barkley's attempt to put upon the Republicans the ultimate responsibility for the failure of the poll-tax repealer was resisted across the aisle.

Senator Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska, the acting Republican floor leader, who made the adjournment motion, declared that it had proved impossible to silence the Southerners in the present state of the Senate rules.

"At least we have shown to the American people why it is necessary to change the Senate rules," he said.

He asserted that the public knew as soon as the filibuster had started that "at a twelve or fifteen-day session" it would be "physically impossible" to break it.

To some criticism that the Republican leaders had not forced the Southerners into extended night sessions, Mr. Wherry replied:

"Night sessions would simply be hypocrisy. They wouldn't accomplish anything. Let's be honest about it."

Thur 8-5-48

Pepper Blames Vandenberg

Senator Claude Pepper of Florida, the only one of the twenty-two Southern Democrats who had favored the poll-tax repealer, issued a statement accusing the Republicans of having deliberately brought about the immobilization of the Senate by "throwing the poll-tax bill in at the start."

"They put in a monkey wrench to keep the Senate from doing anything on the rest of the President's program," he said.

Mr. Pepper stressed that it was "the Republican President of the Senate," Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, who had overruled on a parliamentary point the one direct Republican effort to apply closure.

He asserted that he had offered to the Republicans a plan to end the filibuster and had been "informed" that at the Republican conference this morning Senator Vandenberg had "bitterly opposed" it.

When the Republican credit and housing bills reach the floor, Senator Pepper and his associates are planning to offer as amendments items in the President's requested programs in these fields with the intention "at least to give the President some sort of a hearing and draw the issue plainly before the country."

The New York Times

Barkley Is Pessimistic

Senator Barkley recalled that he had long urged that the Senate rules on closure by sharpened. He promised his cooperation to the Republicans in their avowed intention to accomplish thiis, but reminded them that an amendment to that effect had been pending in the Senate "for seventeen months without action."

The break in th epoll tax struggle brought this sesssion to the beginning of the end, and the political weather was suddenly heavier here.

After a visit to the White House with other Democratic leaders Senator Barkley told reporters that the President was "anxious" about his programs.

"From what the Republican leaders are saying," Senator Barkley added, "I couldn't offer the country much encouragement."

This was before the Senate Republican conference had ended. When it broke up its chairman, Senator Eugene D. Millikin of Colorado, said:

"It was decided that under the present state of the rules it would be futile to go ahead with the anti-poll tax bill. The only way a filibuster can be broken under these circumstances is by wearing out everybody engaged in it. That would run for weeks and weeks.

"The fundamental approach in these civil rights matters is to put first things first—to amend the rules so that closure may be available at every stage of Senate procedure.

Thur 8-5-48

"We will make that the first order of business in the next session of Congress—in January or after the elections if there should be a Congress then. We will get at it and we will stay with it until we get the rules amended.

"We will go on with this matter to the exclusion of everything else until we get those rules changed.

Attitude Toward Bills

"It was decided also that before leaving we will consider housing and inflation legislation. Inflation legislation will not include price control, but may include some credit control.

"There was discussion about changing the DP (displaced persons) bill but no votes were taken and no decisions were reached. There was opinion that considerable hearing might be involved in such a change. There is no certainty that we will get around to it.

New York N.Y.

"The concensus was that we would try to adjourn Saturday night if that can be done in an orderly fashion—if not, as early as is possible next week in an orderly fashion."

Senator Millikin made it clear that adjournment on Saturday was essentially a wistful hope and said that if he "had to bet, the odds would be on next week and not this week."

The conference rejected a Southern "compromise," proposing that attempts at poll tax repeal by summary act of Congress be abandoned in favor of a Constitutional amendment to be submitted to the states.

Mr. Millikin declared that for the present session the Republicans felt committed to the direct repealer; he would not speculate about what their position on this point would be in the next session.

Senators Millard Tydings and Herbert O'Conor, Maryland Democrats introduced a proposal for a Constitutional amendment. Mr. Tydings said:

"If the Republicans really want to eliminate the poll tax, here's their chance. Let them put up or shut up."

Ten Republican Senators Are Named to Frame Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (UP)—Ten Senate Republicans were appointed today to draw up a measure designed to abolish filibusters. Senator Eugene D. Millikin of Colorado, chairman of the Senate Republican Conference, acted in the face of Southern Senators' warnings that ending filibusters would strike at "the very fabric" of American democracy.

Fri 8-6-48

He named Senator C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois as chairman. The others are Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska, B. B. Hickenlooper of Iowa, William F. Knowland of California, Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. of Massachusetts, William E. Jenner of Indiana, John W. Bricker of Ohio, Irving M. Ives of New York, Homer Ferguson of Michigan and Leverett Salstonstall of Massachusetts.

New Bill Seeks To Eliminate Opposition

Jan. 1-18-48

By Tom O'Connor

The current Legislature is virtually certain to pass some kind of a law forbidding racial or religious discrimination in education, with the sponsorship of the Young Commission and the blessing of Governor Dewey. 1-18-48

A preview of the probable provisions of the new law—which will differ substantially from last year's unsuccessful Austin-Mahoney bill—was offered with publication by the New York Committee for Equality in Education of a proposed Fair Educational Practices Law. PM New York, N.Y.

The Committee for Equality in Education, a broad interdenominational group headed by Dr. Alvin Johnson, President Emeritus of the New School for Social Research, and Dr. Harold Taylor, President of Sarah Lawrence College, has been working closely with members of the Young Commission and legislative leaders of both parties, and believes that its model bill embodies the thinking of the Commission on the subject, at the same time eliminating certain parts of the Austin-Mahoney bill which were objected to by Catholic groups and some educators.

Given Power To Act

1-18-48 New York, N.Y.

The bill now to be offered would establish in the Department of Education a Fair Educational Practices Division, headed by an Associate Commissioner of Education. He would be empowered to act either on complaint of an aggrieved person, or upon his own initiative, against any school, college or university believed guilty of an unfair educational practice.

Such unfair practices are defined denying a student [illegible] because of race, religion, color or national origin; limiting admissions through a quota system based on race, religion, color or national origin, asking applicants to state their race, etc. (except that denominational schools may ask religion), or penalizing an applicant or employe for participating in proceedings under the Act.

Persuasion First

PM

The Fair Education Practices Division (FEPD) would be required to proceed first by conciliation and persuasion. New York, N.Y.

If such methods were unsuccessful, a complaint would be issued and a hearing held before a hearing officer or committee appointed by the State Board of Regents. The hearing officer would file his recommendations with the Regents, who would then have power to issue a cease and desist order. 1-18-48

The respondent could appeal to the State Supreme Court, or the Regents could go into that court for an enforcement order if necessary. Thus the final weapon of enforcement would be contempt of court proceedings against the officers of the educational institution.

Important Changes

There are these significant differences from the Austin-Mahoney bill of last year: PM

Enforcement is placed in the hands of an Associate Commissioner of Education, responsible ultimately to the Regents, who in turn are elected by the Legislature for 12 year terms, instead of in the hands of a three-man Commission to be appointed by the Governor. This is calculated to allay educators' fears of "political interference" with education; conversely, it makes the FEPD less directly subject to speedy correction through political channels if it does a poor job.

¶ Certain "legislative findings" in the old bill have been eliminated, most importantly the statement that education is a public function. Catholic groups argued that it is a parental function. Framers of the new bill considered the whole debate superfluous. They also left out a statement that education is a civil right, believing that point adequately covered by other existing law. New York, N.Y.

¶ The old bill exempted all religious or denominational institutions entirely. The new bill is stronger in that it permits such institutions to give preference to co-religionists, but forbids discrimination among remaining applicants of other religions after preference has been exercised. Jan. 1-18-48

¶ The old bill forbade discrimination in the selection of faculty members and other employes. The new bill does not.

¶ The old bill would have forbidden discrimination against students already enrolled, in the matter of awards, living quarters, etc. The new bill does not.

Plan to Weaken Bill Opposed

¶ The old bill could have been interpreted as denying tax exemption to institutions which discriminated. The new bill does not mention tax exemption. Its framers believe the contempt of court penalty is much the strongest weapon for enforcement.

¶ The old bill was long and windy. The new one is short and terse. PM New York, N.Y.

There remains in some quarters a desire to weaken the bill by forbidding the Associate Commissioner in charge of the Division to act except upon complaint of an aggrieved party, which is the rule with the State Commission Against Discrimination. Jan. 1-18-48

Any such effort will be vigorously fought by the Committee for Equality in Education and its allies. They point out that a person denied admission to a medical school because of his religion, for example, will be unwilling to sacrifice his chances of a medical education by complaining to the FEPD and becoming known as a "troublemaker," unacceptable in any school. PM New York

The effective date of the proposed bill would be Sept. 1. 1948.

FIGHT FOR RIGHTS URGED ON STATES

34b

Hardy, Local Lawyer, Opposes Anti-South Bills in Talk to Mississippi Legislature

New York, N.Y.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 19—In a speech to a joint session of the State Legislature, Judge Lamar Hardy, a member of the New York Bar and native Mississippian, upheld today the doctrine of state rights, and denounced the anti-South bills now shaping up in Congress. Feb. 2-20-48

"It is time to apply the brakes to unbridled Federal control," he asserted. "As citizens of an indestructible union made up of indestructible states, I say to Mississippi and all other states who want to retain their sovereign rights, stand up and be counted. I have no doubt where Mississippi will be found on the roll call. I am proud of my native state's fight for her rights as a sovereign state."

FEPC Bill Attacked

"The most recent attempt on the part of the Federal Government to take rights that lawfully belong to the several states," he said, "is the abominable bill 'to prohibit discrimination in employment because of race, religion, color, national origin or ancestry.' This bill, as you know, was recently voted out by a Senate committee by a vote of seven to five and sent to the Senate for its consideration."

Judge Hardy vigorously approved the course taken by Mississippi in resisting Congressional proposals for a FEPC, as well as for anti-segregation, anti-poll tax and anti-lynching laws.

The people of Mississippi have a deep and abiding faith in the basic law under which they and their fellow Americans live and prosper," he said. "They revere the letter and the spirit of the American Constitution which guarantees their rights as free citizens of the United States."

Sovereignty Threat Seen

However, he asserted that although the last fifty years "have seen great changes in the economic complexion" of Mississippi, "the same years have witnessed an unprecedented challenge to its sovereignty."

"This is not only true of Mississippi," he added, "but it is true of every one of our states. The attempt to diminish the importance of the state in our scheme of things constitutes a direct threat to our democratic system."

Judge Hardy referred to Gov. Fielding L. Wright's leadership of the Southern democratic "rebellion" against President Truman's civil rights program. He said that he knew that under Mr. Wright, Mississippi would take care of the problems confronting it.

Bill To Build Dixie 'Harvards' Is Introduced By Alabamian

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Wed. 2-25-4

By A. F. MAHAN, JR.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—(AP)—A bill to let Southern States pool their money to build Harvards and Yales in Dixie was offered Congress Tuesday. (34b)

It was introduced by Rep Hobbs (D), Alabama. Senator Holland (D), Florida, said he would offer a similar bill in the Senate.

Separately, Southern States can not finance "the best in educatiton," Governor Millard Caldwell, of Florida, told the Governors Conference.

"By combining resources, we can provide the best in everything." The Advertiser

The plan includes some regional universities for whites, and some for Negroes.

Dixie spokesmen said this would fill all requirements of a Supreme Court decision requiring equal educational facilities for all races. Montgomery, Ala.

How many schools will be built, and where, will be worked out after Congress authorizes the plan. Wed 2-25-48

Sen. Holland (D), Florida, said he will offer the Senate bill as soon as senators from the 15 affected states can sign it as sponsors. Twelve have volunteered.

Rep. Peterson (D), Florida, said Southern representatives plan joint sponsorship in the House.

Governor Caldwell, education chairman of the Southern Governors' Conference, presented the plan to approximately 50 Dixie congressmen.

He asked anyone with objections to voice them. None responded and he told congressmen it was presumed the plan had their unanimous approval.

The legislation would let 15 states get together and form regional colleges. Its passage is necessary, under the constitution, before any may take action, Caldwell said. The Advertiser

All compacts must be approved by the legislatures of the affected states, the plan says. Montgomery, Ala.

The program would let the Southern States take over Meharry Medical College for Negroes at Nashville, Tenn., which may close June 30 because of dwindling finances. Wed. 2-25-4

Dixie spokesmen said Negroes wishing to enter white medical schools could be offered enrollment at Meharry.

Governor Caldwell and Governor James McCord, of Tennessee, said, however, this merely was incidental to the "overall plan of bringing the finest in education to the South."

Caldwell said the South now has "no top-flight" graduate school in medicine or dentistry, and no "great school" of mining or petroleum engineering.

Under the governor's plan the University of Alabama's medical school at Birmingham would be a "regional university" and students sent there from states having no medical schools of their own. They would help finance it.

Besides Caldwell and McCord, other governors at the meeting were: Beauford Jester, Texas; Strom Thurmond, S. C.; and R. Gregg Cherry, North Carolina.

Bill Fought as Aid to Negro Vote

[illegible]

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 23 (AP)—A bill requiring that the State Constitution be taught in public schools was contested hotly in the Mississippi Legislature today, opponents of the measure declaring that it might make it easier for Negroes to vote. Another measure introduced in the House would allow Democrats to bolt the party in national elections, and a third bill would create a Negro law school. Sat. 1-24-48 Times

House OKs Bias, Shuns Record Vote

(342)

New York, N.Y.

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON

A top-heavy House vote has defeated a proposal to withhold Federal funds from States discriminating against Negroes. Tues.

But the members averted a record vote on the controversial anti-discrimination amendment, which goes well beyond President Truman's civil rights program.

The test was on an amendment to the $1,017,851,000 appropriation bill financing the Labor Dept. the Federal Security Agency and several other agencies for the fiscal year 1949. 3-9-48

The amendment was offered by Rep. Vito Marcantonio (Am. Lab. N. Y.). It was defeated by a standing vote of 119 to 40. Then the House by voice vote passed the bill without change and sent it to the Senate.

'Call Upon Honest Men'

The parliamentary situation made it impossible for Marcantonio to obtain a roll-call vote on his amendment. The New Yorker pleaded in vain with his colleagues to permit a record count.

"I call upon honest men to stand up for the convictions they express," he said.

Marcantonio noted the heavy attendance of southern Democrats and the small number of Republicans. And he asked:

"Where are the Truman Democrats this afternoon?"

Bill Would Ban D.C. School Bias

Daily Worker

New York, N.Y.

Senator Glen Taylor (D-Idaho) has introduced a bill in the Senate to prohibit racial segregation in Washington, D.C., schools. 341

The bill, a companion measure to one (HR 6488) introduced by Rep. Arthur G. Klein (D-N.Y.) would direct the District of Columbia Board of Education to permit no segregation of persons in the public schools because of race, color, creed, national origin, or ancestry. Wed. 5-26-48

Taylor said the recent action of Dr. William Jansen, New York Superintendent of Schools, in cancelling a trip to Washington by 51 New York schoolboys, pointed un the problem anew.

The Senators and Jim Crow

PM New York, N.Y.

The draft bill is going through in this session of Congress, and it is now clear that Jim Crow will be doing business at his old stand in the armed services. The Senate voted down six of the seven Langer civil-rights amendments with cynical dispatch and by an overwhelming count. This is some kind of proof that the thermostat is running low in the American passion for democracy, just when the passions for a war crusade against communism are running so high.

(342) 9am

Here were the Langer proposals:

¶ That there be no racial segregation in the armed forces, in the assignment to military units and barracks—that is, that separate Jim Crow Negro units and barracks be outlawed. Thurs.

¶ That there be no racial discrimination when troops travel from one state to another. 6-10-48

¶ That no soldier need train or serve in Jim Crow states.

¶ That the federal government protect its armed forces against being Jim Crowed in restaurants and recreation places.

¶ That the anti-lynching provisions embodied in the Civil Rights report of the President's Committee be applied to the armed forces.

¶ That all war contractors be bound by non-discrimination rules in employment.

¶ These are, of course, sweeping guarantees of civil rights. No one expected that all of them would be adopted. It was even doubtful whether any of them would be adopted. But they were smothered under a consistently large vote that gauged the Senate's dedication to freedom. PM New York, N.Y.

The victory scored over the future Negro-inductees and volunteers was, let it be noted, a bi-partisan victory. Neither party can lay claim to it alone. The Southern Democrats were never really worried, the Northern and Western Democrats had entered a "gentlemen's agreement" ("general agreement" was what it was called on the floor of the Senate) with the Republicans to smother all the amendments, and the Republican high command did the strategic work involved in killing them. The credit for the victory and the dishonor attached to it must extend to both parties and all sections. Thurs 6-10-48

The "gentlemen's agreement" might never have been disclosed, had it not been that one of the parties to the gentlemen's agreement double crossed the other on the last of the seven amendments. This was the amendment to suspend the poll tax as it applies to the armed forces during the life of the draft. The same kind of provision had been adopted in the 1944 election law, and the Southerners had resigned themselves to it. This time, Senator Taft, speaking for the Republican high command, pushed it through by the narrowest of margins. The Democrats were outraged. Because of the gentlemen's agreement, said Senator Lucas, they had "submerged their rival convictions"; and now the Republicans had outwitted them and would get the credit for the one amendment that did go through. PM

I think Senator Lucas might have reserved his sense of outrage. The double cross by the Republicans on the poll tax amendment was a minor one compared to the larger double cross on the Negroes and the nation by both parties—the double cross embodied in the "gentlemen's agreement" itself. The fact that Senator Taft, by applying pressure, was able to squeeze the poll tax amendment through shows what the Republican leadership could have done with the other amendments, if it had the will. It preferred not to: partly, no doubt, in order to place the Draft Act itself out of jeopardy; partly also in order to have the whole civil rights issue available in the presidential campaign, to split the Democrats. New York, N.Y.

There has been a vast editorial clamor raised against the Republicans who are knifing the trade agreements, and an even vaster clamor against the Republicans who have cut down the ERP budget for European aid. I agree on both scores that the Republican leadership has shown blindness. What troubles me, however, is that the same newspapers have not spoken so clearly on issues like this one of civil rights in the draft, or of the racist Senate bill against the DP's. Thurs

If it be said that the trade agreements and the ERP funds go to the heart of our relations with Western Europe, and therefore of the Russian question, I agree. But the DP issue and the issue of Jim Crow in the armed forces go to the heart of our own democracy. I know the argument which is advanced for keeping civil rights questions out of the Draft Act—that freedom for minorities must come as the result of a slow educational process. But here was a chance to start the process—to start it in the area over which the federal government has the greatest control, the armed forces; and to start it among the men whom we may be asking to lay down their lives under the banners of freedom. We have muffed the chance. 6-10-48 —MAX LERNER

Stalling On Negro Rights

Daily Worker

SOME THINGS have to go in a hurry, and some things can wait indefinitely.

(342) 9am

Congress has rushed the democracy-killing Mundt Bill through the House; but the bills desperately needed by the 14,000,000 Negro Americans are bottled up.

The latest scandal is the refusal of the Senate Judiciary Committee to bring the anti-lynch bill to the floor of the Senate for a vote. This is the Committee which is considering the Mundt Bill for which the Negro-baiter, Rankin, is a leading spokesman.

As Henry Wallace pointed out, there are still two other bills bottled up in the Senate—the anti-poll tax and anti-discrimination bills, both aimed at the Jimcrow-lynch system. New York, N.Y.

The bi-partisan coalition of Democrats and Republicans is working smoothly against the Negro people, and hence against the Democratic welfare of the entire country. Tues. 5-25-48

The two old parties are simply part and parcel of the Jimcrow "white supremacy" tyranny, despite what all their apologists among the Negro people may say.

The refusal of the Senate Judiciary Committee to pass the anti-lynch bill on to the Senate gives special importance to the anti-lynch delegation which is going to Washington June 2 to press for civil rights legislation. This delegation will leave Penn Station at 7 a.m., (DST). Information can be obtained by calling SAcramento 2-8807 in New York City. Persons who are sick and tired of the way the Congress is protecting the lynchers by stalling on anti-lynch legislation should make it their business to join the June 2 delegation. 5-25-48

Negro Rights?—Senate Says No

(34b) Daily Worker

Gen

ONLY seven U. S. Senators voted to abolish Jimcrow in the country's armed services.

Sixty-seven Senators—Republican and Democrat—voted to keep Jimcrow, the system which degrades the Negro people to "second class citizenship" on the basis of the Nazi-like theory of "white supremacy."

These are the same Senators, no doubt, who rise to "view with alarm" mythical menaces of "Soviet aggression." They are, no doubt, the same Senators who quickly and easily vote billion after billion for jet bombers, atom bombs, warships, and all the rest of the "pork barrel' pickings disguised as "defense."

Wed. 6-9-48

The vote for a Jimcrow army smashes the absurd pretensions of "democracy" which the Marshall Planners are so fond of using as a disguise for their empire schemes. Fourteen million Negro Americans tell the world the true story of this Marshall Plan "democracy."

The vote upholding the vile Jimcrow system in the Army followed the refusal of any military leader to condemn it. Neither Eisenhower nor Marshall would urge an Army free of Jimcrow. Truman condemned Jimcrow in words, but his words were belied by the actions of Secretary of Defense Forrestal and Army Secretary Royall, both of whom insisted on segregation in the good old lynch style.

The fight against Jimcrow did not start yesterday, and it will not end today. The Mundt Bill conspiracy to imprison all Americans who fight Jimcrow on the ground that such a fight is a "Communist conspiracy," will not succeed.

The 14,000,000 Negro Americans and their army of allies in the labor and progressive movement will hit the line harder than ever. Jimcrow will get no rest.

Scholarship Bill Slated Next Year

(34b)

Montgomery Advertiser

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12—(AP)—A national scholarship program for college and university students will be introduced in the 81st Congress, the National Education Association said today.

Dr. Ralph McDonald, executive secretary of the NEA department on higher education, said in a statement the bill would have bi-partisan sponsorship.

Mon. 12-13-48

Department officials estimated the program would require a minimum appropriation of $100,000,000 for the first year. This, they said, would "open college doors to 200,000 to 250,000 students. The scholarships would be awarded on the basis of ability. Only the highest one-fourth or one-third of high school graduates would be eligible."

Montgomery Ala

As a basis for the legislation, Dr. McDonald said the department will urge:

1. No federal control of either the institution or the student.
2. A stipend of at least $400 to $500 annually.
3. Freedom for the student to select his own school and course of study.
4. Safeguards against any discrimination in scholarship awards because of race, creed, sex, or other "social circumstance."

Six Weeks Delay Seen In Rights Consideration

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

(34b) Wed. 3-3-48

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—Proponents of the Ives bill to outlaw race and religious discrimination in employment beat the gun and got the measure on the Senate calendar last Thursday ahead of other civil rights proposals.

This was accomplished by Senator Irving M. Ives, Republican, of New York, author of the bill, reporting the measure without a written report. The written report will be filed within a day or two.

The purpose of this maneuver was to get the Ives bill on the Senate calendar ahead of either the antilynching bill or the anti-poll tax bill. Its proponents want it called up for Senate consideration and fight made for its passage before either anti-lynching or anti-poll tax is considered.

As matters now stand, the FEPC bill is the only civil rights measure ready for Senate consideration. But whether it or one of the other two measures will be called up first depends upon the decision of the forty-one Republican Senators.

Wed. 3-3-48 Daily World

SIX WEEKS DELAY

After a meeting of the Republican Policy Committee last Thursday, Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, is chairman, said none of the civil rights proposals would be brought up for possibly six weeks.

The Senate Republican program calls for debate on the European, recovery program, the tax reduction bill, aid to China, additional aid to Greece and Turkey, and Federal aid to education ahead of any civil rights proposal.

Atlanta, Ga.

A Philip Randolph and the Rev. Allan Knight Chalmers, co-chairmen of the National Council for a Permanent FEPC, however, last Friday hailed Senator Ives' maneuver in getting the anti-discrimination in employment bill on the Senate calendar ahead of other civil rights proposals and urged that the Senate debate the measure before taking up either antilynching or anti-poll tax legislation.

34b

In a letter to Senator Taft, Mr. Randolph and the Rev. Mr. Chalmers brought to his attention editorials which appeared last week in newspapers in support of the bill.

Ives Bill Passage Urged By 15 Business, Professional Leaders

The Defender (34b) Sat 2-21-48

Sat 2-21-48

Fifteen prominent business and professional leaders urged passage of the Ives-Fulton bill against discrimination in employment in telegrams to Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, president pro tem of the Senate and Repesentative Joseph W. Martin Jr., speaker of the House.

Members of the committee signing the telegram under the chairmanship of Oren Root Jr., were: William L. Batt, Allen L. Dulles, Paul G. Hoffman, Nelson A. Rockefeller, Eric Johnston, Henry R. Luce, Martin Quigley, Dwight R. G. Palmer Anna M. Rosenberg, Spyros P. Skouras, Beardsley Ruml, Paul C. Smith, Herbert Bayard Swope, Charles H. Tuttle and Mr. Root.

The telegram reading that the great majority of people in the U. S. "know that such discrimination is uneconomical in that it results in an unsound use of manpower and retards the development of purchasing power. They know it is undemocratic and inhuman. . . . that it weakens the position of the United States in the eyes of the world."

The telegram asks Senator Vandenberg and Speaker Martin to use their "fullest influence" to expedite passage of the Ives-Fulton bill our judgement the Ives-Fulton bill if enacted into law will substntially advance the cause of non-discrimination in employment. It will strengthen the hand of those who believe in its purposes, and it will tend to bring into compliance those few who do not. . . . We do not believe that passage of this bill will eliminate prejudice from America but it will be an effective step along the road."

The committee was formed at the suggestion of A. Phillip Randolph.

Negro, White Unionists Fight Keefer Rider

Fri 5-21-48

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Delegations of thousands of Negro and white employes of federal, state. county and municipal governments from all parts of the country were in Washington this week to urge members of the senate to defeat the Keefer rider to HR-6355 which destroys their right to belong to a trade union of their choosing.

Hearings on the Labor-Federal Security appropriation bill are being held this week by the senate appropriations subcommittee. The bill, which was adopted by the house a few weeks ago, contains a rider submitted by Rep. Frank Keefer of Wisconsin, which provides for withholding of payment of salaries to federal employees who belong to unions whose officers have not filed Taft-Hartley affidavits. Although public workers are excluded from provisions of the Taft-Hartley act and cannot gain use of services under the National Labor Relations board, the rider attempts to compel compliance.

This rider, according to Lees Pressman, general counsel for the United Public Workers of America, violates the first, fifth ninth and 10 amendments of the constitution. Fri. 5-21-48

The rider further provides penalties of a year in jail and $1,000 fine for any federal employe who continues membership in such a union. The rider defines such membership as a felony.

ROBESON AMONG MARCHERS

White House Picketed by 3,169 on Mundt Bill

Detroit Free Press

Thur. 6-3-48

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The White House was picketed Wednesday by 3,169 marchers who are opposed to the Mundt-Nixon anti-Communist bill and who want civil rights legislation.

Marching four abreast, the pickets slowly moved back and forth in front of the White House.

TOWERING OVER all the others was Singer Paul Robeson, who helped organize the movement.

Robeson told the Senate Judiciary Committee last Saturday he would rather go to jail than answer a question as to whether he is a Communist.

Many of the marchers wore buttons saying "Henry Wallace for President."

They carried signs reading: "Defeat the Mundt Bill" and "Pass the Antilynching Bill, the FEPC and the Antipoll Tax Bills."

The crowd marched orderly and without incident. They once started to chant, "Jim Crow must go," but White House police quickly stopped that because it's against the regulations to chant.

THEREAFTER many of the marchers put handerchiefs over their mouths—as a sign that they were being gagged.

Robeson had told a news conference that the decision to picket the White House was made because President Truman refused to see members of their delegation.

Most of the protesters came down on three special trains from New York. But backers of the demonstration said that delegates came from as far south as Mississippi and as far west as Chicago. 6-3-48

The protesters spent most of the day buttonholing Congressmen and in mass meetings.

The protest group was organized after the Senate Judiciary Committee closed out hearings on the Mundt-Nixon Bill Monday. The House already has approved the measure overwhelmingly.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), a committee member, declared that he would not be "pressured" into reopening the hearings.

Mundt Bill Dead—For Present

CIO News

34b

Washington D.C.

THE widely-criticized Mundt-Nixon bill appeared likely to die on the books—at least so far as the 80th Congress is concerned.

At CIO News press-time, the Senate Judiciary Committee had issued no report on the bill—the most widely-discussed civil rights issue since the Taft-Hartley proposals came up in Congress a year ago. Mon. 6-21-48

The bill was sponsored by the House Un-American Activities Committee and was widely heralded by that committee as the best means of combatting subversive activities.

But labor, liberal groups, students of laws and many newspapers joined to warn that the Un-American Committee's cure was worse than the disease.

In addition, Washington's oft-quoted "usually informed sources" were reported in the daily press as believing that Attorney-General Tom Clark whose power to list organizations as subversive would be increased by the bill—had decided to turn thumbs down on the Mundt-Nixon proposals.

Perhaps the sharpest criticism of the bill came from elderly Zechariah Chaffee, Harvard Law school professor and world-renowned expert on constitutional rights.

CHAFFEE said, in a letter to Chairman Wiley of the Senate Judiciary Committee, that he saw "no necessity . . . of elaborate regulations of the opinions of private citizens and exceedingly drastic penalties for entirely novel offenses." 6-21-48

Chaffee said that "although he dislikes the Communists very much," they're far less dangerous today than after the Russian revolution in 1919-20.

If the country were really menaced by Communism, Chaffee said, "surely there would have been somewhere or other an outburst of unlawful acts or at least tangible evidence of an unlawful conspiracy."

He said the question is more than whether American Communists should be forced to register. It's whether "American citizens who have not been proved to be dangerous individuals should be made liable to heavy fines and long prison sentences, in large measure because of the activities of other people. A good deal of the bill creates guilt by association."

Such "novel penalties" as the bill provides, Chaffee continued, should not be used merely because "Communists are pestiferous people or indulge in big talk about taking over our government. The question is whether they are within a million miles of doing so." 6-21-48

The Harvard professor said he agrees with Thomas Jefferson that the American government is the strongest on earth, and for that reason the Senate committee should "reject this un-heard-of bill."

Communists Defy U.S. on Anti-Red Bill

34b

Free Press

Detroit, Mich

BY WILLIAM S. WHITE

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The American Communists would not support the United States in war with the Soviet Union nor would they obey pending legislation restricting Communism, their leader swore. Sat. 5-29-48

William Z. Foster, chairman of the Communist Party of the United States, so testified before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee in attacking the Mundt - Nixon Communist-control bill.

Foster

Foster and John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker of New York, both declared bluntly that in the event of armed conflict with the Soviet their one determination would be to find means to end that war on "democratic terms."

These terms, they said in substance, could only be the Soviet's terms, for such a clash could only be an "imperialistic" war in which the United States necessarily would be the aggressor.

FOSTER DECLARED the Communist intention to disobey the Mundt-Nixon measure, if it became law.

Gates, who identified himself as a veteran of World War II and of the Spanish Civil War, told the subcommittee:

"I would volunteer in any war against any enemy of the American people. I do not consider the Soviet Union an enemy." 5-29-48

"You would betray the United States to the Russians, then?" demanded Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.).

"I would direct myself," Gates answered, "toward the American people to put pressure on the Government or to change that Government to one that would bring about peace."

FOSTER SAID that the Mundt-Nixon bill was "a Fascist act of war preparation, just as Hitler's Nuernberg decrees and the Japanese ban on 'dangerous thoughts' were acts of preparation for World War II."

Opponents of the bill who testified Friday included S. S. Wuchinich, of the American-Slav Congress; Joseph Cadden, of the Civil Rights Congress; Lewis G. Hines, of the American Federation of Labor; David Scribner, of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (CIO).

Rep. Marcantonio (A.L., N.Y.); Osmond Fraenkel of the American Civil Liberties Union, and representatives of the National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions and the National Lawyers Guild also attacked the bill.

Thomas Y. Emerson, spokesman for the Lawyers Guild, filed a brief, declaring 5-20-48

"The enactment of the Mundt-Nixon bill would mean the end of Constitutional government in America. It would make possible the introduction of a despotism abhorrent to American traditions."

Branding Communists

Birmingham News

To the Editor of The News:

Washington was recently "invaded" by 5,000 Communists and fellow travelers. They came by three special trains from New York City and its boroughs, principally the Bronx and Harlem, for the purpose of attempting to prevent enactment into law by the U. S. Congress of the Mundt-Nixon anti-Communist bill. These people were made up from varied European races and a large sprinkling of American and Jamaican-born Negroes. They carried placards advocating anti-lynch, anti-segregation and other so-called civil rights measures. Wed. 6-9-48

The Mundt-Nixon bill may not be constitutional or workable—the Communist will tell you it is not—but it is certainly a step toward a means of identifying these vermin. The great American West had an established code that all cattle must be branded. This custom later was enacted into law by state statute. All mavericks were rounded up and given the branding iron. This practice protected the cattlemen from the thieving rustlers. The Mundt-Nixon bill purposes to place an identifying brand on these Communists to prevent their rustling against traditions planted on this soil by blood, sweat and tears.

Endangering Civil Rights

34b

Tues. 6-1-4

WASHINGTON—The best argument against the Mundt-Nixon "anti-Communist" bill may be found in the attitude of some of its supporters in their arguments for it before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The measure, recently passed by the House, is designed purportedly to curb Communism but it actually goes far beyond that to strike at basic rights of all citizens. 6-1-48

An insidious and seductive approach taken by some of its advocates is that anyone who is against the measure is, by that fact, either a Communist or the dupe or stooge of Communists. These dupes and stooges are perhaps "intelligent" persons, "well-informed," "well-intentioned" and "patriotic," They may be fine people, but, alas, they are just blindly following the Communists!

That's the technique, a familiar one, recalling a similarly familiar one of the shame-on-you-poor-fool type back in the Roosevelt days when anyone in favor of some of the economic and social reforms of that time was often dubbed a "softie" or a "do-gooder."

It was said here recently that the danger of the Mundt-Nixon bill is that its effect would go far beyond Communism and Communists to frighten and squelch sincere and loyal citizens interested in measures to improve our society and in speaking and writing and carrying on organized activity for them.

Detroit Free Press

THIS SEEMS now to be amply demonstrated by some of the measure's supporters who attempt to scare people from opposing this bill by saying that such persons are Communists or dupes and stooges of Communists. These champions of the measure obviously are disturbed that so many reputable individuals and organizations are raising their voices against it. And, in their condemnation of such free expression of opinion, there is the insinuation that this ought to be stopped somehow. You can almost hear the summons to the secret police.

And now, we discover, it is following Communist technique to say that this measure could hurt innocent persons, or so at any rate we are told by Paul Griffiths, former national commander of the American Legion. He said in his testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee that minorities and labor groups and some well-meaning "but not too sophisticated" liberals already have allowed themselves "to be panicked by the sly Communist scare tactics."

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), who holds the responsible position of chairman of the Judiciary Committee, also made his contribution. He said the committee already had evidence of the Communist campaign to defeat the bill in "thousands" of telegrams pouring in each day in opposition to it.

Maybe the Senator has examined all those telegrams, in spite of the press of business on every member of Congress these days, and knows what he is talking about. But the inference from such a statement might be that anyone who has sent a wire, or might send one later, is a Communist or inspired by Communists. Undoubtedly Communists have been drumming up wires busily, just as all sorts of groups do about this and that issue, but that hardly seems reason to criticize the traditional right of petition on this issue.

ANOTHER contribution came from Edgar C. Corry, Jr., national commander of Amvets, a veterans organization, who was aroused over a wire from a group of House members opposing the bill urging his organization to wire the Senate committee stating its determination to be heard. Mr. Corry answered them all right, saying among other things:

"Your position, knowingly or unknowingly, gives aid and comfort to the Communist cause and deserves utmost condemnation from American people. Your position clearly indicates that you are stooges, knowingly or unknowingly, for minority groups that speak chiefly for the various Red Fronts in this Country."

Both Mr. Griffiths and Mr. Corry harp on "minority groups." How embracing is this vague definition and the "Red Fronts" used by Mr. Corry, and how embracing will they be next week or next month if this sort of thing continues?

Some people seem to be getting very confused about what Mr. Corry calls "American freedom" which he says he wants to preserve. All this confusion must be very pleasing to the Communists, since confusion is their aim, and they must be very flattered, too, at the imitation of their methods in so much that goes on here now.

Wallace, Thomas Hit Mundt Bill

(34 D)

Free Press

BY WILLIAM S. WHITE
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Henry A. Wallace asserted that the Mundt-Nixon Communist control bill was an offensive act in "the cold war against Russia."

Its sponsors, he declared, were "war-mongers, fear-mongers and hate-mongers" who in history would stand as "American counterparts of Mussolini and Hitler."

Detroit Mich

HE SWORE that his third party "most certainly" would refuse to register under such a measure, if called upon to do so.

Testifying before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee, Wallace contended that if acts of subversion were afoot here, they could be got at by "adequate" existing law.

Sun. 5-30-48

Another presidential candidate, Norman Thomas of the Socialist Party, joined Wallace in opposing the bill as a violation of civil rights.

Thomas, however, told the subcommittee that he accepted as "approximately correct" the bill's contention that the Communists were bent upon criminal methods. He observed that to him there was no question that Communism in the United States was "strictly controlled from outside the country."

5-30-48

HE ASSERTED that he would be glad to debate with Wallace "his very bland view of what is happening in Russia," and contended that "well-trained and disciplined Communists" were "manipulating" Wallace's new party "to a considerable extent."

Thomas asserted that Wallace's party would not fall under the bill's ban.

(34 F)

Final Congressional action this session on the Mundt-Nixon Bill, which has already passed the House by a heavy majority, was cast into considerable doubt Saturday when the Senate subcommittee scheduled more hearings.

When asked if he thought the bill would apply to his party, Wallace said, "I don't know, it is so loosely phrased."

Circumventing Constitutional Rights

Sat. (34 C) Montgomery Advertiser

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch

President Truman is fully justified by both principle and expediency in his opposition to the Mundt-Nixon "Communist-control" bill. The right of American citizens to advocate change in their government is embedded in the Declaration of Independence. They have the right even "to abolish it and to institute new government, laying its foundations on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

This is not merely the guaranty of a right. It is also a practical guaranty of the flexibility which is necessary in human institutions if they are to survive. The free speech thus assured is the safety valve for the escape of social ferment. This bill would drive Communists and other malcontents underground. Merely as wise police procedure, J. Edgar Hoover of the FBI wants to keep them in the open where they can be better watched.

The Mundt-Nixon bill sets up new standards of treason, circumventing by careful phraseology the safeguards specified in the Constitution for the prosecution of that crime. The bill gives tedious and involved definitions of "Communist political organizations" and "Communist-front organizations," and empowers the attorney general to place voluntary associations of American citizens in these categories.

This confers on a cabinet officer the authority to smear whole groups of citizens as disloyal or treasonable, to limit their freedom of expression, and to visit stringent penalties upon them without trial. Judicial review of the attorney general's actions is provided, but this is no remedy for the fear of political persecution and no protection against the ordeal of a court trial. No wonder that Gov. Dewey puts this bill in the category of "hysterical suggestions" which "tarnish the Bill of Rights."

Montgomery Ala.

Under the wording of this measure, the attorney general might prescribe Henry Wallace's third party as Communist and subject its members to prosecution. Protection of all citizens of nonconformist opinions against conservative or reactionary swings of public opinion would be reduced to the vanishing point. In defense of this bill, Representative Mundt says:

"There is incontrovertible evidence of the fact that the Communist party of the United States is dominated by . . . totalitarian dictatorship and that it is one of the principal instrumentalities used by the world Communist movement, directed from within that totalitarian dictatorship . . ."

If this is true (and it may very well be) we already have federal laws which can be used for protection—laws which are general in application and not dangerously invidious. We have the McCormack Act and the Voorhis Act. These laws require agents serving foreign principals and organizations serving foreign governments to register their connections for the FBI and other government agencies to see. If Mr. Mundt is right in what he says or if the government wishes to determine in court whether he is right, Attorney General Clark can file charges tomorrow. No additional law is needed.

Sat. 5-22-48

Ideas, whether right or wrong, cannot be outlawed. They cannot be put behind bars. History proves the futility of all such efforts. The historic policy of the United States is to permit the free competition of ideas in the market place of the mind. Against treason we have sufficient law already, without any need for the addition of laws which threaten free speech, free thought and the resiliency of our institutions.

William Z. Foster's Views

The Courier-Journal (34 B)

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal:

Louisville, Ky

I have noted with considerable interest the statements made by William Z. Foster, chairman of the Communist Party of the United States, before a Senate judiciary subcommittee in reference to the Mundt-Nixon Bill. I am not going to argue the merits of this bill, which has been subjected to considerable unbiased criticism. However, Mr. Foster appears to be principally concerned over a provision of the bill which he regards as a ban on free speech. Moreover, he is quoted as saying that neither he nor any other member of the party would support the United States in any conceivable war with the Soviet Union. What he and others who think as he does choose to ignore is the fact that if he were a citizen of the Soviet Union and made similar criticisms and statements, he would not live long to enjoy the privilege of airing his opinion.

Tues

In the event of a war with Russia, I believe that his deportation to that country, which he evidently prefers to his own, would be a punishment that fits the crime.

Foes of Red-Control Bill Vow March On Capital

Senate Hearings On Measure Are Recessed Amid Demands That They Be Continued

From Wire Dispatches.

Washington, May 31.—Senate hearings on the Mundt-Nixon Communist-control bill were indefinitely recessed late today amid angry cries from its opponents that they would bring "thousands" to Washington to demonstrate against it.

"By God," shouted their leader, Len Goldsmith, "we are coming down by the thousands on Wednesday and if they won't listen we will find other means!" He promised an "orderly" march on Washington by "trainloads and planeloads."

Goldsmith stood in the Senate Office Building caucus room to issue his challenge in demanding a continuation of open sessions before a Senate Judiciary Committee.

Foes Take Most of Time.

Such an extension, if for any length of time, would make highly improbable, if not impossible, final Congressional action on the bill in the brief time remaining before the scheduled adjournament of June 19.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), the acting subcommittee chairman, had just announced a recess "without a date," saying that in the absence of the chairman, Senator Wiley (R., Wis.), he had no authority to do otherwise.

He acted at the end of the fourth day of public sessions, which originally had been scheduled to run only three days and at which the great bulk of the time had been taken by opponents of the bill.

Louisville Ky.

Demand Right to Hearing.

Goldsmith, who said he represented a New York City organization called the Committee for Democratic Rights, was on his feet at once, as were several others, some of whom wore the blue campaign button of Henry A. Wallace. Tues. 6-1-48

He and others began to demand "the right to be heard" and to insist upon "assurances" that these hearings would not be closed. The Courier-Journal

Ferguson, after explaining that a decision for or against further sessions could not be made by him, walked from the room in what had by then become rather an uproar. Louisville, Ky.

Women stood to protest that none of their sex had testified about the bill; a boy of about 18 called out that "at least one youth" must state his views.

Robeson Refuses to Answer.

Senator Langer (R., N. D.) told the crowd that for his part he would like nothing better than to continue sitting, but added: "I am powerless."

Goldsmith told Joseph A, Davis, a committee clerk: "Please get word to Senator Wiley that we are coming down by the thousands on Wednesday. If we cannot be accommodated at the Capitol we are prepared to hire Turner's Arena for the use of the senators in a hearing. We are prepared to assure orderly, senatorial procedure." Tues.

Davis undertook to pass this along to Senator Wiley by telegraph. 6-1-48

All this brought a disturbed end to a harsh and clamorous day before the subcommittee.

Paul Robeson, the Negro singer, and Joseph Kehoe, the secretary-treasurer of the C.I.O.-American Communications Association, each had refused to answer questions as to whether he was a Communist.

Hisses Mix With Applause.

A possible contempt citation did not arise in either case, Senator Ferguson told a reporter, because a subcommittee quorum was not present when either incident occurred.

Robeson told the committee he thinks members of the Communist Party "have done a magnificent job in America." Tues.

"Are you an American Communist?" Ferguson asked.

"I refuse to answer that question," Robeson replied with emphatic gestures. "This is an invasion of my right of secret ballot." 6-1-48

Ferguson fired back the same question a second time and a third, and Robeson finally broke out:

"Nineteen leading Americans are going to jail for refusal to answer that question and if necessary I will join them."

There were some hisses mixed with the audience applause that greeted the singer's statement.

Asks Many Questions.

The Courier-Journal

His reference to 19 Americans covered the Hollywood writers and others charged with contempt of Congress for refusal to answer similar questions before the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

The sharp give-and-take at times found Robeson asking as many questions as he answered.

Robeson, on the questions he was willing to answer, told the committee:

He has "many dear friends" who are Communists, and he is "interested in a party and a people who stand for complete equality of the Negro people in the United States."

"I walked the earth (in Russia) for the first time with complete dignity." Louisville, Ky.

His son went to school there and found complete freedom from racial prejudice. Tues.

He doesn't know whether the Communists believe in world revolution. 6-1-48

U. S. Communists "don't have as much allegiance to Russia as some Americans to Fascist Greece."

Would Disobey Law.

Robeson owes "allegiance to my Government" but in case of war "if it was a Fascist act I wouldn't support it. I would decide at the time."

He thinks Henry Wallace and his third party are "carrying on New Deal principles." He also thinks Wallace has the support of the Communists.

34b

The United States is on the "wrong side" in Italy and Robeson would choose the Communist side in Greece, China, and Spain.

And if the Mundt-Nixon bill is passed, Robeson will class it as fascism and refuse to obey it.

When Kehoe was asked whether he was a Communist, he refused and said: Louisville

"I am glad to associate myself with Paul Robeson." Ky.

John Rogge, former special assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, said the theory behind the Mundt-Nixon bill is that "the people can't judge ideas for themselves." The Courier-Journal

If Congress should pass the bill, Rogge said, "it is inconceivable to me that the Supreme Court would hold this monstrosity constitutional." Tues.

Rogge said he is chairman of the New York Wallace for President Committee. 6-1-48

The defeat of the Mundt police state bill has been urged by the board of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Three students, Sidney Butensky, Raymond Mones and Monroe Birns, assailed the measure, as did Peter Lawrence, the Theatre Guild delegate to the Progressive Citizens of America.

Against Mundt Bill

SOLONS 'OUT'

Woman Accused of Slapping Guard

WASHINGTON

In spite of all efforts to maintain discipline and avoid incident among the 5,000-odd protestors against the Mundt Bill, three persons ran afoul of the law near the Capitol on Wednesday.

Biggest trouble at the Astor Restaurant at 18th and M Sts., N.W., when the manager, John Roussos, summoned police to oust a mixed delegation after he refused to serve the colored persons.

Because she protested the undemocratic treatment in no uncertain terms, Miss Gloria Giovelli, white, of Woodside, Long Island, was charged with disorderly conduct and later forfeited a $5 collateral.

Sat. 6-12-48

Two others arrested were Alex Goldberg of Kearny, N.J. and Miss Amelia Lamb, a resident at Midway Hall, who were charged with disorderly conduct for failing to obey an order to move on when the Senate Building police tried to break the delegation up into units of six each.

Miss Lamb was accused of striking Wesley Wilbur, a guard who blocked her from entering the Senate office builling.

Came From 30 States

The group, the most impressive and perhaps the largest ever to converge on the nation's capital, poured into town Wednesday morning from 30 States by planes, buses and trains only to find their Congressmen none too gracious hosts.

The huge cavalcade of protestants had a dual purpose in Washington. One segment estimated at 5,000 came to oppose the Mundt-Nixon Bill, while another segment composed of 1000 delegates were here to launch an all-out drive for the passage of civil rights legislation by the 80th Congress, which is slated to adjourn soon for the coming party conventions.

About 3,000 of the visitors arrived in two sections of a New York train completely jamming the huge concourse of the Union Station reminiscent of a holiday throng.

Advised by Ex-Congressman

Jerry J. O'Connell, former Congressman from Butte, Mont., chairman of the anti-Mundt Bill delegation, termed the demonstrators as "patriotic defenders of ancient American liberties."

"You are in truth patriotic defenders of our ancient American liberties and I am proud to be associated with you in this common fight.

"It is more than passing strange that certain members of the committee can keep vital anti-lynching legislation bottled up in committee while the Mundt bill is railroaded through. Our delegation will make their views known on this question very emphatically."

Meet at Sylvan Theatre

Following the briefing, the delegates trekked to Capitol Hill where they visited their respective Congressmen.

After making their opposition known to Congress, the visitors met at the statue of John Marshall, U. S. Chief Justice from 1801 to 1835, where a wreath was laid by Rep. Adolph J. Sabath (Dem., Ill.).

The delegates then moved to the open air Sylvan Theatre at the foot of Washington Monument for a mass meeting, where a number of national figures delivered a blistering verbal blast at the proponents of the Mundt Bill and the opponents of the Civil Rights measures.

BULLETIN

The board of the Progressive Party of Oklahoma, through its chairman, Dr. Michael A. Shadid, today called upon the people of Oklahoma to express themselves against the vicious un-American Mundt-Nixon Bill which has just passed the House of Representatives in Washington. It will now go to the Senate and Dr. Shadid said that Sen. Thomas should be showered with wires, letters, and cards urging him to take a stand against the bill.

HERE'S PROOF MUNDT-NIXON BILL WOULD HIT NAACP

Sat. 5-29-48

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Any doubt that the NAACP would be hard hit by the Mundt-Nixon anti-Communist bill now before congress was dispelled last week when the house discussed the resolution for regional colleges in the south.

When Rep. Marcantonio told the house that the NAACP opposed the regional college idea, Rep. Rankin leaped to his feet and immediately charged the association was a "Communist front organization" that does not "represent the better element of the Negroes in this country."

34 b Sat. 5-29-48

Rankin, whose slick work revived the un-American committee when the 79th congress convened in 1945, is one of the key figures in this committee now headed by Rep. J. Parnell Thomas, and had a hand in writing the Mundt-Nixon measured aimed at destroying all organizations classed as "Communist frants." Its passage would give Rankin and similar politicians a means of blocking the NAACP and other groups working for Negro advancement.

IF CONGRESS fails to pass the MUNDT-NIXON Bill for "control" of U.S. Communism, it will not be the fault of WILLIAM Z. FOSTER, JOHN GATES or HENRY WALLACE. Tues. 6-1-48

In their testimony against the bill, Mr. FOSTER and Mr. GATES, two chief spokesmen for Communism in this country, have stimulated the fears that inspired the bill. They have announced flatly that in any conceivable war between the United States and the Soviet Union, they would support the latter—on the fixed premise that the United States would be the aggressor. It is another proof, as if one were needed, that the U.S. Communist Party is not a domestic political entity but the agency of a potential enemy.

Mr. WALLACE, too, contributes to the frame of mind which would accept the MUNDT-NIXON Bill when he attempts to oppose it. Its sponsors, he says, are "warmongers, fearmongers and hatemongers" whom history would consider "American counterparts of MUSSOLINI and HITLER." Louisville, Ky.

We are sorry for all this because we think the MUNDT-NIXON Bill is ill-advised. We think so despite the human impulse to endorse something that Messrs. FOSTER, GATES and WALLACE oppose. We think so because it would write into U.S. law for the first time penalties against a line of thought. Tues

As THOMAS E. DEWEY recently pointed out, there are 27 laws on sedition and treason. These apply, however, not to thoughts, but to acts. Even our laws against murder do not apply until some act proves the offender's intent to murder. 6-1-48

We do not believe the MUNDT-NIXON Bill would do what it is intended to do—even if we momentarily overlook the dangerous principle it contains. Mr. FOSTER, the general chairman of the Communist Party in this country, declares his party would refuse to register as the bill would require. Mr. WALLACE said his third party would do the same thing. And what happens then? The F.B.I. might jail the handful of principal leaders of either party but the membership could disappear by the simple expedient of silence or denial. The Courier-Journal

We would have a full-blown underground in the United States. Already we have the makings of one of its martyrs, PAUL ROBESON, who refuses to tell a Senate sub-committee whether he is a Communist. Already he has goaded Senator MOORE into some exceedingly foolish talk about "sometimes a year in jail cools some of these people off."

Foster Scores Anti-Red Bill; Robeson Mum On Party Beliefs

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

NEW YORK —(AP)— William Z. Foster, American Communist leader, said Monday night the real purpose of the Mundt-Nixon bill was a "deadly blow to the labor and progressive movement, American Democracy and world peace." Tues. 6-1-48

He said the bill "aims to outlaw the Communist Party" but that "actually, the Communists are only a secondary objective."

Foster, national chairman of the Communist Party, assailed the proposed measure in a speechprepared for a radio debate with Rep. Karl E. Mundt, (R), South Dakota, one of the sponsors of the measure now before Congress. Foster spoke from New York. 6-1-48

Mundt was to speak extremporaneously from Yankton, S. D. Foster had challenged Mundt to the debate.

Foster claimed that outlawing the Communist Party would "knife organized labor, undermine American democracy, clear the way for a police state and speed us into war."

He said passage of the bill, "like our barbarows theatment of the Negro people, would expose the weak state of our democracy and would ruin American prestige aboard."

He declared it would bring "ruin . . . to your unions and living standards, to your liberties and to world peace."

"Hitler," he said, "like the sponsors of this bill, also made wild charges against Communism, and for the same purpose—to plunge his country into Fascism and war."

Foster said America "is carrying on the biggest campaign in imperialist expansion in the history of the world." He said one of the main purposes of the Mundt-Nixon bill is "to push our country into the disastrous war that Wall Street is now organizing." 6-1-48

Foster reiterated that Communists would refuse to register as would be required under the bill.

Anti-Red Bill Foes Picket White House

Singer Paul Robeson Leads 3,169 Marchers In Civil Rights Parade

Montgomery, Ala.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House was picketed Wednesday by 3,169 marchers who are opposed to the Mundt-Nixon anti-Communist bill and who want civil rights legislation.

Marching four abreast, the pickets slowly moved the two blocks in front of the White House, and then back again.

Towering over all the others was Singer Paul Robeson, who helped organize the movement. Robeson told the Senate judiciary committee last Saturday he would rather go to jail than answer a question as to whether he is a Communist. 6-3-48

Many of the marchers wore buttons saying "Henry Wallace for President." [redacted]

They carried signs reading: "Defeat the Mundt Bill," "Pass the Anti-Lynching Bill, the FEPC and the Anti-Poll Tax Bills," and "Full and Adequate Hearings on Mundt Bill."

Carefully Lettered

Nearly all the signs were carefully lettered, and most of them had "Prompt Sign Service, Inc.," stamped in the lower righthand corner. Only a few signs—such as the "Brooklyn Consumer and Tenants' Council"—were homelettered. Thur. 6-3-48

The crowd marched orderly and without incident. They once started to chant, "Jim Crow Must Go," but White House police quickly stopped that because it's against the regulations to chant.

Thereafter many of the marchers put handkerchiefs over their mouths—as a sign that they were being gagged. [redacted]

The number of marchers—3,169—was supplied by a secret service man who counted them.

The demonstrators also held mass meetings and buttonholed members of Congress.

Wallace Rapped

Meanwhile the leadership of the CIO United Auto Workers, which also opposes the Mundt-Nixon bill, sent a telegram to Capitol Hill accusing Henry Wallace of trying to "provoke" Congress into passing the bill.

Addressed to the Senate judiciary committee, the telegram said: 34 6-3-48

"Don't be suckers for the left hook of Henry Wallace and his Communist collaborators who seem to be trying to provoke you and the Senate into passing the Mundt-Nixon subversive activities control bill. 6-3-48

"Let's keep the Communist Party, and its front organizations, its stooges and dupes above ground and out of the cracks in the woodwork so that they can be dealt with by facts, reason and existing law under the constitution, including the Bill of Rights."

It was signed by Emil Mazey, acting president of the union.

Senate Hearings on Bill Are Recessed Amid a Warning Thousands Will Flock In ROBESON MUM ON HIS TIES

New York, N.Y.

Kehoe, Communications Union, Joins Him in Refusing to Say Whether He Is Communist

Tues. 6-1-48

By WILLIAM S. WHITE
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES

WASHINGTON, May 31—Senate hearings on the Mundt-Nixon Communist-controll bill were indefinitely recessed late today amid angry cries from the bill's opponents that they would bring "thousands" to Washington to demonstrate against it.

"By God," shouted their leader, Len Goldsmith, "we are coming down by the thousands on Wednesday and if they won't listen we will find other means." He promised an "orderly" march on Washington by "trainloads and planeloads." 6-1-48

Mr. Goldsmith stood in the great marble Senate office building caucus room to issue his challenge in demanding a prolongation of open sessions before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee.

Delay Might Kill Bill

Such an extension, if for much time, would make highly improbable, if not impossible, final Congressional action on the bill in the brief time remaining before adjournment, scheduled for June 19.

Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, the acting subcommittee chairman, had just announced a recess "without date," saying that in the absence of the chairman, Senator Alexander Wiley, Republican, of Wisconsin, he had no authority to do otherwise.

He acted at the end of the fourth day of public sessions, which originally had been scheduled to run only three days and which most of the time had been taken by opponents of the bill.

Mr. Goldsmith, who said he represented a New York organization called the "Committee for Democratic Rights," was on his feet at once, as were several others, some of whom wore the blue campaign button of Henry A. Wallace.

He and others began to demand "the right to be heard" and to insist upon "assurances" that these hearings would not be closed.

Senator Ferguson, after explaining that a decision for or against further sessions could not be made by him, walked from the room amid an uproar. 6-1-48

Women stood to protest that none of their sex had testified about the bill; a boy of about 18 called out that "at least one youth" must state his views.

Mr. Goldsmith confronted an assistant committee clerk, Joseph A. Davis, with a series of requests. The first was that Senator Wiley be asked to re-open the hearings. Mr. Davis went to a telephone and returned to report that Mr. Wiley had left town.

34b

Mr. Goldsmith then proposed that Senator Ferguson be called on the telephone.

Mr. Davis returned to report that Senator Ferguson had repeated that he was without authority to conduct the hearings beyond today. 6-1-48

Mr. Goldsmith then told Mr. Davis: "Please get word to Senator Wiley that we are coming down by the thousands on Wednesday. If we cannot be accommodated in the Capitol we are prepared to hire Turner's arena for the use of the Senators in a hearing. We are prepared to assure orderly Senatorial procedure."

Mr. Davis undertook to pass this along to Senator Wiley by telegraph.

All this brought a disturbed end to a harsh and clamorous day before the subcommittee.

Paul Robeson, the singer, and Joseph Kehoe, secretary-treasurer of the American Communications Association, CIO, each had refused to answer question as to whether he was a Communist.

A possible contempt citation did not arise in either case, Senator Ferguson told a reporter, because a subcommittee quorum was not present when either incident occurred. 6-1-48

While these and other witnesses came forward to denounce the bill in strong terms, some calling it a movement toward "fascism," one took the stand in its support.

The Rev. Benjamin Schultz of Yonkers, N. Y., executive director of the American Jewish League Against Communism, Inc., testified that the Communists on May 14 began a "campaign of distortion" against the measure in an effort to stir up Jewish sentiment against it.

He submitted to the subcommittee excerpts from The New York Morning Freiheit, which he called a "yiddish-language Communist organ." These, he asserted, typified Communist "propaganda that there is something dangerous to Jews in the Mundt bill." 6-1-48

In this, he added, "there is not a particle of truth."

The final witness, Ewart G. Guinier, international secretary-treasurer of the United Public Workers of America, CIO, denounced the committee in a shouting, table-pounding appearance, for not taking action on anti-lynching legislation and other parts of the civil rights program.

A Negro, he called on the subcommittee to put aside the Communist control bill and act instead against "Jim Crowism."

Mr. Wallace's supporters were obviously numerous in the hearing, both among the witnesses and the spectators. One of these was Mr. Robeson.

After he took the stand he was asked several times whether he was a Communist, and each time he replied that he would "answer that" in due course.

At length, Senator Ferguson asked again: "Are you a Communist?"

"That question," replied Mr. Robeson, "has become the very basis of the struggle for civil liberties. Nineteen men are about to go to jail for refusing to answer it. I am prepared to join them. I refuse to answer it."

Mr. Kehoe, when his time came was asked by Senator Ferguson: "Are you a member of the Communist party?"

"I am honored," replied the witness, "to associate my reaction to that question with Mr. Robeson's reaction."

"You refuse to answer?" pursued Senator Ferguson.

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Kehoe.

Like Mr. Robeson, he testified that for his own part he would not be prepared to obey the Mundt-Nixon or any similar measure, no matter if it became law.

Asked whether the American Communists would fight on the side of the United States in any war with Russia, Mr. Kehoe replied: "I don't know the answer to that question." He added that it was an inquiry that had "no relation to reality." 6-1-48

Mr. Robeson's examination on the same point was as follows:

Senator E. H. Moore, Republican, of Oklahoma: "If the United States went to war with Russia would the (American) Communists be loyal to the United States?"

"I would think," replied Mr. Robeson, "that the struggle should be for peace."

"Would you fight for the United States in a war with Russia?"

"That," the witness said, "would depend on conditions."

"If Congress declared war on Russia," asked Senator Ferguson, "would you fight for the United States?"

"I would say that's too hypothetical," answered Mr. Robeson. "That would depend on many things."

"Then you'd be the judge?" asked Senator Moore.

"No, no," said Mr. Robeson, "a lot of people would be the judges."

O. John Rogge, a former Assistant Attorney General, denounced the Mundt-Nixon bill as one that would "cause Jefferson, Holmes and Brandeis to turn over in their graves." 6-1-48

He called upon the subcommittee to ask Representatives J. Parnell Thomas, Republican, of New Jersey, "whether he joined the Ku Klux Klan in Paterson, N. J., in 1925."

Mr. Thomas heads the House Committee on un-American Activities, which drafted the Mundt-Nixon bill and carried it through to House passage.

Mundt-Nixon Bill

34b

To the Editor of The News:

During all the years that I have received and have kept up with The Congressional Record, no legislative action that I know of—with but one exception—can hold a candle to the "Subversive Activities Control Bill, 1948" (Mundt bill), passed by the House May 19 by 319 to 58 majority. What the bill provides, in order to suppress subversive activities, ostensibly on the part of Communists, would delegate to the attorney general authority making him prosecutor, judge and jury. Under this legislation "administrative law," a New Deal innovation that proved to be a bane and abomination to business and industry, would again come into its own with a vengeance. In this respect no other legislative proposal so closely resembles the Mundt bill as does the Fair Employment Practices Commission bill now being held in abeyance.

Birmingham News

"The FEPC bill should be called a bill to destroy civil rights," said Sen. Lister Hill on March 23 in an address over Mutual Broadcasting System. Further than that, he said, under the guise of preventing discrimination in employment the bill actually contains the weapons for the complete destruction of many civil rights.

Birmingham, Ala.

As I closely followed the entire debate on the Mundt bill through the medium of The Congressional Record, the fact was easily discernible that this bill would do likewise. Since voted on, the following appeared on Page 6360, Record of May 20: "Mr. Speaker, since coming to Congress in 1943, I have been opposed to the Fair Employment Practices Commission for one reason, and that is that it places in the hands of a commission the job of being prosecutor, judge and jury. I voted against the bill to outlaw communism yesterday because it does the same thing. . . ." —Rep. Fernandez, New Mexico.

My next witness has this to say: "If we sincerely believe, as we profess to, that freedom under law is incomparably better than any species of dictatorship, that the individual has rights of which the state cannot deprive him, we should not begin to betray the political ideals we honor by risking any infringement of that freedom or those rights. . . . As for attempts to change the nature of our government by other than lawful constitutional means, we already have laws enough to punish and defeat them. Will more law cure lax enforcement?" This is an excerpt from an article headed "Resisting Our Reds," published in The Wall Street Journal of May 20, 1948, in reference to the M[illegible]. 6-2-48

In The Christian Science Monitor an editorial, "A Test of Leadership," which enumerates the yet unfinished business Congress has to deal with, has this to say: "Some of the measures which await action could await it forever, in our view, to the benefit of the country. One is the Mundt-Nixon Communist control bill, which contains more threats to civil liberties than to the more dangerous kind of Communist activities. . . ."

As practically every representative from the South voted for the Mundt bill with his eyes, ears and mind shut to its implications involving the civil rights threatened by FEPC, which all are so seriously concerned about, the people themselves must, it seems to me, defend those rights.

MUNDT BILL CALLED DISASTER TO PEOPLE

Isacson, Denying He Is Red, Scores Measure—Proponents See a 'Lie' Campaign

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, May 27—Senate hearings on the Mundt-Nixon Communist control bill opened in bitterness today amid charges from Congressional and other proponents that the Communists were pressing a campaign to misrepresent the measure.

The first opponent, meantime, to appear at the initial session, Representative Leo Isacson, American Labor of New York, accused the bill's backers of seeking to bring "disaster to the American people."

The Commies---

Atlanta, Ga.

At Work and Play

Fri. 6-4-48

A Communist is, by oath, a liar, a perjurer and a traitor to the United States of America. He usually is a cry-baby oaf who is hurt because some imagined greatness in his make-up is not recognized.

The Communist indoctrination plays up to his weakness, telling him that under the Communists he will be able to display his true worth and talents.

The Communist leaders are shrewd. But obvious.

Methods They work by formulas. They try, with great hypocrisy, to get on the side of the people. They embrace any opportunity which allows them to fight for "rights." The fact that no human rights exist in Soviet Russia—that no person may criticize any single act of the Government or its administrators—is ignored.

One of the maddening facts about them is that they demand the protection of our civil rights and our laws while carrying out acts which are aimed at destroying those rights.

Mundt Bill Now come Paul Robeson, who sent his son to school in Russia, and who almost certainly is a Communist and disloyal to this country; Henry Wallace, whose campaign is directed by Communists, a fact most recently testified to by Norman Thomas, the distinguished Socialist candidate; William Z. Foster, the Communist Party head in this country, and others of equally unsavory associations, arguing against passage of the Mundt-Dixon Bill, which, among other things, would require Communists to register as enemy agents. Fri. 6-4-48

Henry Wallace, Robeson and others, to whom this country has been very good, and who are allowed freedom of movement, speech and publication they would not be allowed in the Russia they so greatly admire, are following the Communist line as laid down for this problem. They want to discredit non-Communists who oppose it and they earnestly want to see the bill become law.

Maneuver They thereby contribute to a frame of mind which would not merely accept the Mundt Bill, but which would make it even more stringent than it seeks to be.

This is unfortunate.

Along with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, and Sen. Robert Taft, of Ohio, to name but a few, we think the Mundt Bill is unwise.

The Constitution

As Gov. Dewey and Sen. Taft have pointed out, there already are in existence 27 laws on sedition and treason. These apply to acts. Not thoughts.

The Mundt Bill attempts to deal with thoughts.

We have, for example, laws against murder.

But we cannot act with them until murder is committed. Nor can we arrest people for thinking about murder.

Results Wallace, Foster, Robeson and others who are Communists or associates of Communists have said they would not obey the law. The net result would be to put a few leaders in jail—if the law is held to be constitutional, which we doubt it to be. The membership would deny membership and we would have then created a fully established underground movement. Robeson, who has been given the opportunity to become a wealthy man and who enjoys luxuries and position, already has caused Sen. Moore, of the committee, to say, "A year in jail would do him good."

Atlanta, Ga.

It is important to recall that every Communist now in power in Europe, from Joe Stalin on down, has spent a good many months or years in jail. Jail is not an answer.

Policy The facts are that the Communists want the Mundt Bill to become law. Fri. 6-4-48

Their agents in Birmingham, Atlanta, Jacksonville and New Orleans have revealed to persons who have their confidence that they are under orders to do all in their power to create public opinion in favor of the Bill.

That is why, here in the South, the Communists are seeking to get publicity with ads and statements against the Mundt Bill. It is part of a typically shrewd maneuver.

They know if the Communists and the Wallace campaign fight the Bill, the inevitable reaction of Americans will be to pass the Bill in a hurry.

The Communists want the law so as to create martyrs; so as to put them in the light of fighting for personal liberty, and so they will have a constant sounding board of court tests out of which will come long pages of Communist propaganda in the form of official court testimony.

The Mundt Bill is unwise for that reason also.

We have got 27 laws—all we need.

Let's just keep these vermin out in the open and dust them with the DDT of exposure and truth.

Art Against War

EVERY great movement of the people attracts its artists, its poets, painters and singers.

New York, N.Y.

Tyrants have never wanted poets to sing of liberty.

Our war-makers are enemies of American writers, poets, singers and artists who refuse to be goose-stepped into an atomic war against the rest of the world.

Thurs. 6-3-48

That is why Paul Robeson, great singer and spokesman for the Negro people, faced a hostile Senate committee the other day in the Mundt bill hearings. Certain Senators don't like the message which this noble and courageous man brings—in his art as well as his activities as a citizen—to the country.

ROBESON

That's why some of America's best writers face a cowardly blacklist in Hollywood—their talents helped win the war and are now in the service of peace. The small-minded Thomas Committee gave its orders—and the moneymen in Hollywood are quick to obey. The commodity wanted from writers is war propaganda, not peace propaganda. 6-3-48

But America's artists and writers will not be so easily forced into the mold of a Rankin-Thomas Committee. They will not so easily be deformed into Mundt bill intellectuals, fearful of truth, and intent only on servile accommodation to the needs of the war-makers of Big Business. This, after all, is the America which had its Freneau, its Emerson and Thoreau, its Whitman and Dreiser.

The Worker

Robeson will bring from Washington tonight the message of the great anti-Mundt bill struggle as it appeared to an artist, John Howard Lawson, honored victim of the petty imitators of Hitlerism, will bring the message of America's writers to the same public gathering tonight at Manhattan Center. This meeting will speak for the conscience of our country's intellectuals. It will embody the spirit of the American Resistance to the new Gestapo-like terrorism of the mind. We urge our readers to demonstrate their defiance of the thought-controllers along with Robeson, Lawson, Howard Fast and others. It will be a meeting in the great tradition of freedom.

The Un-Americans and the Negro

(To the attention of Congressman Karl Mundt)

By Lance Jeffers

They dream of flaming faces to erupt in our ghettoes of men to come storming down to the ghettoes with guns in their arms and hatred spilling from their mouths.

The Worker

They envision
men in automobiles with rope and club driving through the streets of every town eyes alert for the black face and the quarry cornered, shouting laughter at his fear and his animal-scream when the toe finds the groin.

New York, N.Y.

They smile
at the thought of the blank-faced police standing, rocking on their heels,
idly watching the fun, as they did in Detroit;
of priests sorrowfully pressing palms together, counselling disturbed onlookers:
"Let us pray."
Of "liberal" politicians, confronted in pine-panelled offices,
averting eyes, muttering:
". . . . the imperfections of democracy."

And they glow at the image of ghettoes from which year around no
Negro would dare venture, from which we would be transported to the "protective custody" of concentration camps, to the protective custody of death,
and a numb American conscience to watch with protest.

Karl Mundt and his masters dream of these things, dream of growing the evil wheat of fascism,
of watering the poisoned weed so that it may stifle the land.

But they will learn a new knowing,
learn that from our mother-flesh we have taken the blood of struggle, learn that there will be no "protective custody" for us,

that they will not march over our bodies to war.

learn that the old corroded chains we are slashing away
we will never permit them to fashion again!

Objections to the Mundt Bill

Atlanta, Ga. Wed. 6-2-48

WASHINGTON—The best argument against the Mundt-Nixon "Anti-Communist" Bill may be found in the attitude of some of its supporters in their arguments for it before the Senate Judiciary Committee. The measure, recently passed by the House, is designed purportedly to curb Communism, but it actually goes far beyond that to strike at basic rights of all citizens.

An insidious and seductive approach taken by some of its advocates is that anyone who is against the measure is, by that fact, either a Communist or the dupe or stooge of Communists. These dupes and stooges are perhaps "intelligent" persons, "well-informed," "well-intentioned" and "patriotic." They may be fine people but, alas, they are just blindly following the Communists! That's the technique, a familiar one, recalling a similarly familiar one of the shame-on-you,-you-poor-fool type back in the Roosevelt days when anyone in favor of some of the economic and social reforms of that time was often dubbed a "softie" or a "do-gooder."

It was said here recently that the danger of the Mundt-Nixon Bill is that its effect would go far beyond Communism and Communists to frighten and squelch sincere and loyal citizens interested in measures to improve our society and in speaking and writing and carrying on organized activity for them.

The Constitution

This seems now to be amply demonstrated by some of the measure's supporters who attempt to scare people from opposing this bill by saying that such persons are Communists or dupes and stooges of Communists. These champions of the measure obviously are disturbed that so many reputable individuals and organizations are raising their voices against it. And, in their condemnation of such free expression of opinion, there is the insinuation that this ought to be stopped somehow. You can almost hear the summons to the secret police.

And now, we dicover, it is following Communist technique to say that this measure could hurt innocent persons, or so at any rate we are told by Paul Griffiths, former National Commander of the American Legion. He said in his testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee that minorities and labor groups and some well-meaning "but not too sophisticated" Liberals already have allowed themselves "to be panicked by the sly Communist scare tactics.: 'It's not the Communists but you that they are really after'."

Atlanta, Ga.

Sen. Alexander Wiley, Republican, Wisconsin, who holds the responsible position of Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, also made his contribution. He said the Committee already had evidence of the Communist campaign to defeat the bill in "thousands" of telegrams pouring in each day in opposition to it. Maybe the Senator has examined all those telegrams, in spite of the press of business on every member of Congress these days, and knows what he is talking about. But the inference from such a statement might be that anyone who has sent a wire, or might send one later, is a Communist or inspired by Communists. Undoubtedly Communists have been drumming up wires busily, just as all sorts of groups do about this and that issue, but that hardly seems reason to criticize the traditional right of petition on this issue.

Another contribution came from Edgar C. Corry, Jr., National Commander of AMVETS, a veterans' organization, who was aroused over a wire from a group of House members opposing the bill, urging his organization to wire the Senate Committee stating its determination to be heard. Mr. Corry answered them all right saying among other things:

Wed.

"Your position, knowingly or unknowingly gives aid and comfort to the Communist cause and deserves utmost condemnation from American people. Your position clearly indicates that you are stooges, knowingly or unknowingly, for minority groups that speak chiefly for the various Red fronts in this country."

Both Mr. Griffiths and Mr. Corry harp on "minority groups." How embracing is this vague definition and the "Red fronts" used by Mr. Corry, and how embracing will they be next week or next month if this sort of thing continues?

Some people seem to be getting very confused about what Mr. Corry calls "American freedom" which he says he wants to preserve. All this confusion must be very pleasing to the Communists, since confusion is their aim, and they must be very flattered, too, at the imitation of their methods in so much that goes on here now.

Real Americanism

THAT was a great demonstration of Americanism down in Washington—the kind of real Americanism that the Un-American Committee and the red-baiters could never understand.

The 5,000 who marched in front of the White House urging that President Truman follow up with deeds his promises on Negro civil rights were acting in the tradition of Abe Lincoln's Americanism—the kind that the "white supremacy" ignoramus Rankin would like to wipe out with the Mundt Bill.

Daily Worker

The 3,000 other citizens who used their Constitutional right to "petition for the redress of grievances" were defending the Americanism of Tom Jefferson—the Americanism that no stooge of Big Business corporations can understand or support.

New York, N.Y.

These historic demonstrations spoke the thoughts of millions of others.

Fri. 6-4-48

THE NEWSPAPERS, as usual, tried to belittle this demonstration of traditional Americanism. They hinted "it came mainly from New York"—a crude piece of anti-Semitism, and an insinuation that only "Jews and Negroes" are opposed to the police state in the U. S. A. In the same manner did the Nazis sneer that only "Jews and Communists" were opposed to Hitlerism.

The Washington demonstrations must continue without any letup. New Paul Reveres are needed to alarm the nation to its dangers, new Minute Men, as Eugene Dennis, General Secretary of the Communist Party, recently said, to carry the fight to save democracy into every city, town, and village.

The thousands who wanted to testify against the Mundt conspiracy should be granted the right to be heard. Hearings should be extended. All Senators should be visited by back home delegations. This is not a narrow, partisan fight; it involves the traditional liberties of the most conservative men.

Fri. 6-4-48

The great crusade for Negro rights and the fight to halt the police state merge like two great rivers into a mighty Mississippi. The people can yet win. But they must speak out!

Ferguson Gets Protest to Anti-Red Bill

34b

Detroit Free Press

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—A Michigan delegation told Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.,) in a stormy interview that 60 University of Michigan faculty members and 1,500 students opposed the Mundt-Nixon Bill to outlaw the Communist Party.

Fri. 6-4-48

Ferguson is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee considering the bill. He has said he favors "some such bill."

FRED BATES, U of M student veteran, said Prof. John L. Brumm, head of the U of M journalism department, headed a delegation of 25 persons representing Michigan organizations which came here to protest the threat to civil liberties in the bill.

Brumm conferred with Arthur H. Vandenberg, Jr., executive assistant to Senator Vandenberg.

Bates said Ferguson was interested in the argument that Negro welfare organizations would be called subversive and silenced if the bill should become law.

Ferguson took an aggressive attitude, Bates said, demanding to know who sent the delegates. Bates said Ferguson appeared surprised that others than Communists would oppose the bill.

He went around the room asking each person:

"Have you a Communist card?" Bates said.

None had.

Among those who interviewed Ferguson were Zigmund Poplawski and Regina Martin of the Polonia Society.

Truth Is a Casualty Of the Cold War

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y.

By Abner W. Berry

AMONG THE 58 Representatives who voted against the Mundt Bill last Wednesday were several whose names are seldom found in the column supporting a progressive cause. In the case of Republicans a nay ballot meant not only defiance of the anti-Communist hysteria induced by the Un-American Committee, but opposition to the GOP leadership, in the person of Majority Leader Charles Halleck. Such a step could not have been taken lightly. It must have been based on conviction coming after prolonged inner struggle.

The reasoning by which these gentlemen reached their conclusion—to vote against the Mundt bill—is of keen interest to the student of political science, and of special importance to those who are seeking to persuade Senators to cast their ballots for the defeat of the measure.

In the case of a few who took the floor in the debate, we have their own testimony as to the compelling reasons which guided them. Daily Worker

Take, for example, the remarks of Rep. William J. Miller (R-Conn). Miller voted for the Taft-Hartley Act last year and for many other anti-labor measures during his tenure in the House since 1940. Recently he took the floor to endorse Senator Ferguson's demand for the prosecution of the national committee of the Communist Party.

"If this bill were limited only to dealing with the Communist Party as such," said Miller during debate, "I might swallow the doubts I have and go along with it. . . . The bill as now written very definitely denies American citizens some of their constitutional rights." New York, N.Y.

"I am not a lawyer," said Miller, "but I do know from reading the langue of this bill that the Attorney General is given power to do great damage to many loyal American citizens and that damage will be done long before that citizen ever gets into court."

AN EQUALLY conservative member of the House is John W. Heselton (R-Mass), a graduate of the Harvard Law School and a banker. Heselton suggested that the sections of the Mundt bill dealing with "Communist front organizations" were so vague and indefinite as to make the measure unconstitutional.

Another conservative Republican who voted against the bill was Dr. Frederick C. Smith of Marion, Ohio. "Doc" Smith, as he is known, pointed out that the Communist Manifesto of Karl Marx endorsed many policies now generally accepted, such as progressive taxation, which was adopted by the U. S. in 1913. The Mundt bill does not touch the real cause of Communism, he said, which "has its roots in a diseased economy, excessive taxation, political corruption of money and class legislation." He said the bill was merely "designed to garner votes." Daily Worker

REPRESENTATIVE Jacob Javits, (R-NY) was one of the most effective opponents of the bill to take the floor. Javits is prone to make gratuitous attacks on the Soviet Union and the Communist Party. He supported the Marshall Plan and is supported by the Liberal Party. But his voting record on labor issues in general is excellent. He reveal that the reason he so vigorously opposed the bill was the fact that it would absolutely outlaw the Communist Party.

Citing the language of section three, four and eight, Javits said: "Therefore, as soon as such an organization registers, it admits officers and members are guilty of a felony. If that does not mean outlawing the Communist Party, I do not know what would. And that of course is considered inimical to our very efforts to fight communism by some of the most distinguished Americans in public life." New York, N.Y.

Javits said the bill makes "certain sweeping findings of fact against individuals and movements without proof of individual guilt." He said the legislation "defines a new kind of treason" and deprives those convicted of citizenship and nationality. He maintained that the Smith, Voorhis and McCormack Acts already on the books were sufficient. "You cannot substitute for the enforcement of laws new laws," he said. Tues. 5-25-48

Representative John Carroll (D-Colo), expressed agreement with Javits that any organizations which registered under the Mundt bill would in effect be pleading guilty to a crime. "In short," said Carroll, "they are being compelled to give evidence against themselves in a matter involving possible criminal prosecution which is clearly unconstitutional." Daily Worker Tues. • 5-25-48

IF ONE were to summarize the reasons of these members, then, they appear to constitute two general arguments. First, under the vague language of the bill and the broad powers that it gives the Attorney General, not only Communists but progressive non-Communists would be victimized. Second: despite denials of the Un-American committee, the bill would outlaw a political party, an unconstitutional objective, and employs unconstitutional methods to reach that end. New York, N.Y.

Undoubtedly these arguments will carry weight with some, even extremely conservative, Senators.

ANTI-COMMUNIST BILL OPPOSED BY THOMAS

The Times

In an address on "The Rights of Man" from Radio Station WNBC, Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, yesterday defined his position on six issues of the national campaign.

He opposed the Mundt Subversive Activities Control Bill as dangerous and unnecessary legislation. While not attacking loyalty tests in general, he criticized the activities of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. He called for legislation to remove racial discrimination by both public and private agencies and to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act, asked for compensation for Japanese-Americans evacuated from the West Coast during the war and opposed all forms of peacetime conscription. New York, N.Y.

Mr. Thomas attacked all forms of totalitarianism, both fascist and communist, as well as private capitalism. Mon. 5-24-48

"In America, we Socialists have fought for human freedom and racial equality in innumerable struggles in which we have had no allies from the National Association of Manufacturers," he said. "The Socialist ideal is not a society equivalent to a herd of 'contented cows' still milked by a master."

Saying that the Communist party in America was not engaged in overt acts of subversion at this moment, he declared that, if we are to give reality to the American idea that ballots can be an effective substitute for bullets, we must lean over backward to protect the rights of the most radical parties

Mundt Admits He Based His Bill on 'Hunch'

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y.
Tues. 5-25-48

By Rob F. Hall

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Rep. Karl Mundt (R-SD), one of the authors of the Mundt-Nixon Bill, will probably be painfully embarrassed when he reads this. For the gentleman from South Dakota made an admission in the course of debate on the House floor which somehow escaped the attentive ears of his fellow Congressmen. He said that after 10 years of "Investigating" by the House Un-American Committee, and 10 years of accusing the Communists of being foreign agents, all he has to go on is a "hunch."

You will find it on page 5996 of the Congressional Record for May 14. Daily Worker

Mundt's statement reads:

"We of the Committee on Un-American Activities believe that a diligent alert Department of Justice will be able to demonstrate in a court of law that some of the leaders of the Communist Party of America are today trying to deliver this country, lock, stock and barrel, to the men of the Kremlin, trying to establish here a totalitarian government subject to the control and domination of Soviet Russia, and if our hunch can be established as a matter of fact in a court of law by legitimate judicial procedures, these men will go to jail for 10 years and perhaps pay a fine of $10,000. New York, N.Y.

The numerous printed reports issued by the Un-American Committee purporting to "prove" that the Communist Party is part of a world-wide "conspiracy," and that its members advocate overthrow of the government by force and violence, is thus reduced to nothing more than a "hunch." The Mundt-Nixon Bill, Mundt confesses, is a complicated and expensive legislative device to establish whether or not the "hunch" of the Un-Americans can be proved in court.

But to confirm Mundt's "hunch," the Constitution mut be outraged, the Bill of Rights raped, and millions of people drawn into a dragnet of intimidation and persecution. Tues. 5-25-48

Bill to Control Communists Passed by House, 319 to 58

Whether It Outlaws Party Is Contested as It Goes to Senate With Fate in Doubt—14 From New York Vote No

By JOHN D. MORRIS

Special to The N

WASHINGTON, May 19—The House passed the Mundt-Nixon Communist-Control Bill today, 319 to 58.

The measure, providing stiff jail sentence and fines for subversive activities as well as exposure and regulation of Communist organizations, now goes to the Senate, where leaders have indicated that the session-end pressure of business would prevent its consideration. The Times

Winding up three days of intensive and sometimes harsh debate, sponsors predicted nevertheless that an aroused public opinion would prompt the Senate to act.

The people will insist on it, the House was told by the bill's co-author, Representative Karl E. Mundt, Republican, of South Dakota. New York, N.Y.

If members of the Senate represent the people, "they will act upon this issue," asserted the other co-author, Representative Richard M. Nixon, Republican, of California.

Amid cries of "Vote! Vote!" by members of a word-weary House, the debate ended late in the afternoon with opposing sides still in disagreement over whether the bill would outlaw the Communist party of the United States.

Sponsors maintained that it would outlaw only the party's subversive activities while opponents, led by Representative Vito Marcantonio, American Labor, of New York, insisted that it would wipe out the party itself.

The House Committee on Un-American Activities, Mr. Marcantonio contended, devised the bill for the purpose of outlawing the party and thus "attempted to do by indirection what the Constitution prevented them from doing directly." 5-20-48

On passage, 104 Democrats joined 215 Republicans in voting for the bill. Against it were forty-eight Democrats, eight Republicans and the two American Labor party Representatives. Fourteen of the negative votes were cast by Representatives from New York City.

The opposition was largely among left-wingers and members having constituencies comprised heavily of labor union membership. The Congress of Industrial Organizations has directed a campaign against the bill on behalf of labor's rights. The Times

Disposal of Armaments

Passage followed the rejection of all amandements not approved by the Un-American Activities Committee. The committee itself, however, proposed several revisions designed to insure against possible injustices or to perfect the bill's language, and they were adopted. New York, N.Y.

In the form that it was sent to the Senate, the measure would make it a crime, punishable by ten years' imprisonment, a $10,000 fine and loss of citizenship, "to attempt in any manner to establish in the United States a totalitarian dictatorship, the direction and control of which is to be vested in or exercised by or under the domination or control of any foreign government, foreign organization or foreign individual." Thurs.

Any attempt to aid in accomplishing such an aim, active participation in the direction of any movement having such an objective and conspiracy to accomplish these ends would be similarly punishable. 5-21-48

Whether membership in the Communist party of the United States would subject a person to the penalties is not spelled out in the bill, and sponsors prefer to leave the question to the courts.

However, the bill does state, as a Congressional finding, that a world Communist movement is attempting to establish in all countries totalitarian dictatorships controlled and directed by "the Communist dictatorship of a foreign country." In doing so, this Communist dictatorship utilizes political organizations in various countries, it is added.

Defining Those to Register

The bill would also require Communist political organization and Communist-front groups to register with the Attorney General.

A Communist political organization is defined as one having specified characteristics which would make it "reasonable to conclude" that it is under foreign Communist control. 5-20-48

A Communist-front organization is defined as one having specified characteristics which would make it reasonable to conclude:

"1. That it is under the control of a Communist political organization, or The Times

"2. That it is primarily operated for the purpose of giving aid and support to a Communist political organization, a Communist foreign government or the world Communist movement * * * or

"3. That its views and policies are in general adopted and advanced because such views or policies are those of a Communist political organization, a Communist foreign government or such world Communist movement."

The organizations would have to register as such, file annual financial reports with lists of contributors, receipts and expenditures and name their leaders. Communist political organizations, but not Communist-front groups, would also have to give the names and addresses of members.

Procedure by Attorney General

The Attorney General would name the organizations required to register. Objecting organizations would have a hearing, with the right of cross-examination and presentation of witnesses. The Attorney General's final determination as to facts would then be subject to court reversal if the organization's case were supported by "a preponderance of the evidence." New York, N.Y.

Organizations which did not register after a final determination that they were Communist would be subject to $2,000-$5,000 fines for each day of failure. Officers would be subject to the same fines plus two-to-five-year jail sentences for each day of failure.

Members remaining in non-registered organizations for more than 120 days after the final determination would be subject to the same penalties. Thurs.

Registered groups would be required to label their publicity as emanating from "a Communist organizations." 5-21-48

Passports and Federal employment would be denied to members of Communist political organization."

Contributions to Communist political organizations and Communist-front groups would be prohibited from receiving income-tax deductions for charitable gifts.

Mundt Bill Foes and Civil Rights Advocates Hold Rally at Washington Monument

MOST ARE FROM NEW YORK

Names of Truman, Vandenberg and Taft Booed—Crowd of 3,500 Causes No Disorders

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, June 2—Thousands marched on Washington today in orderly demonstrations demanding defeat of the Mundt-Nixon Communist Control Bill and the enactment before Congress adjourns of the so-called civil rights program. The Times

For an hour they threw a line of mass pickets, five and six abreast, across the entrance to the White House, although President Truman himself has long demanded passage of the civil rights measures. New York, N.Y.

They moved upon Congress in many groups numbering hundreds each, seeking directly to influence the Senators from their states.

Finally, at a rally tonight on the green solpes below the Washington Monument, their speakers urged them to continue the "fire" of telegrams, delegations and protests toward Congress. Thurs.

Most of the demonstrants were from New York and other Eastern cities and all their manifestations were in the general charge of the forces of Henry A. Wallace, the third-party Presidential candidate.

Wallace Leaders in Action

At the Washington Monument rally the chairman was former Representative Jerry J. O'Connell, the Washington State Wallace leader. The Wallace campaign manager, C. B. Baldwin, moved about in the background. 6-3-48

Thirty-five hundred persons, by the estimates of police on the scene, appeared in the outdoor theatre at the Monument. Mr. O'Connell estimated that more than 5,000 had come to Washington.

Two of tonight's scheduled speakers, Senator Glen Taylor, the Wallace candidate for the Vice Presidency, and Senator William Langer, Republican, of North Dakota, did not appear.

It was announced that Mr. Taylor's plane had been delayed and that Senator Langer had been detained in a night session of the Senate.

Other speakers, however, talked over the amplifying system for nearly two hours, denouncing the Mundt-Nixon Bill as "fascism" and proclaiming that all who did not work for the civil rights program would be held responsible.

The immediate tactic indicated by the anti-Mundt bill forces was an effort, as recommended by Mr. O'Connell, to compel Democratic members of the Senate Judiciary Committee to insist upon prolonged further hearings on the measure. "Thousands" of witnesses, said Mr. O'Connell, must yet be heard on the bill. The Times New York, N.Y.

Like other speakers, he urged the crowd not to be discouraged by the "run-around" which he asserted the demonstrants had received in attempting to confer with Senators about the measure. Thurs. 6-3-48

Representative Vito Marcantonio, American Labor, New York, shouted across the slopes of the monument grounds that it was the two leading Senate Republicans, Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, and Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, who must be blamed for the lack of civil rights legislation.

He accused them also of having given "the go-ahead signal" for the Mundt-Nixon Bill.

The names of Senators Taft and Vandenberg raised a chorus of boos and hisses. President Truman's name also brought similar but less vigorous manifestations.

Messrs. Taft and Vandenberg, Mr. Marcantonio shouted, "will have to answer to the 14,000,000 Negro people of the United States."

There was violent applause at this, from an audience about half of which was white and half Negro. The Times

The final speaker of the demonstration was Paul Robeson, the Negro baritone. Mr. Robeson, after first singing three militantly political songs, cried out to the crowd: New York, N.Y.

"If we can't get our liberties one way we will build a new structure to get those liberties." He asserted that because of racial segregation in Washington his people had been subjected here today to "terrorism," and added: Thurs

"The struggle for peace and the kind of America we want has reached another level; we have taken the offensive against fascism! Thurs. 6-3-48

"We will take the power from their hands and through our representatives we will direct the future destiny of our nation."

Communist Trap Asserted

Just what would be done in the Senate Judiciary Committee about the Mundt-Nizon Bill remained in great doubt. The committee is scheduled to meet Friday, when some definitive decision may be made.

Meanwhile, Leon Henderson, chairman of American for Democratic Action, one of the groups opposing the bill, issued a statement asserting that the Communists were seeking actually to bring about the enactment of the bill as an opportunity for "martyrdom."

"Threats to violate the law, intemperate attacks on the bill, marches on Washington, are all traditional communists tactics that can only help to achieve this end," he said. Thurs.

"The Communists are banking on the hope that the Senate can be stampeded into passing the bill. We urge the Senate to avoid their trap." 6-3-48

The demonstrators, the bulk of them coming from New York in three special trains, arrived in good order and maintained order throughout the day.

At the outset they were in two distinct groups—the "committee to defeat the Mundt bill" on the one hand and on the other hand "The National Non-partisan delegation to Washington for Passage of Civil Rights Legislation."

The quickly coalesced for practical purposes, however, and by the time they moved forward to mass picketing of the White House, at about 3 P. M., the banners they carried were mixed between those demanding defeat of the Communist control bill and those demanding enactment of the so-called civil rights program.

The rights delegation held a rally at the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church, in which Mr. Robeson was a leader.

There, just after 12:30 P. M., the crowd voted by acclamation to furnish pickets to the activities of the anti-Mundt bill organization and to participate unanimously in the White House demonstration.

This was decided after a speaker, who was identified by other delegates as Raymond Tillman of New Orleans, a member of the national executive board of the Transport Workers Union (CIO), had declared that "the White House" had "refused" to see representatives of the group. Thurs.

"Picket the White House!"

"Picket the White House! Picket the White House!" This cry swept the church as Mr. Tillman shouted that President Truman had given "only lip service to civil rights."

There was some immediate lack of clarity as to just what sort of refusal had been made at the White House concerning the demonstrators, although it appeared that what they were objecting to was their inability to see the President himself.

A group of about ten of their number was admitted into the office of David K. Niles, an administrative assistant to the President, and protested the Mundt bill. Mr. Niles heard them in silence. This was while picketing was still in progress. 6-3-48

By 3 P. M. the Capitol itself, the principal declared objective of the marchers, was alive with their movement and several thousand were in its vast, stony areas and those of the Senate Office Building.

The office building police put on the customary rule that no more than five might enter a Senator's offices at one time, unless he himself invited more.

The police were everywhere, although unobtrusively so, and the galleries of the Senate and House were at one time permitted to become very heavily populated.

The Senate, the point to which the marchers were attempting to went through a typical, unhurried legislative day. 6-3-48

Mundt Bill Stalled

The Senate Judiciary Committee took no action at a meeting Monday on the House-approved Mundt-Nixon Bill to require registration of Communists.

Chairman Wiley (R., Wis.) said the Committee still had not received opinions on the constitutionality of the measure. It has asked for opinions from Attorney General Tom Clark and a number of private attorneys. 6-8-48

DISCRIMINATION IN WOMEN'S ARMED SERVICES FOUGHT BY NAACP

Washington, D.C., Feb. 18--"The WACS, WAVES and the women Marine Corps must commission officers and accept enlistments without discrimination or segregation," stated Leslie Perry of the NAACP's Washington Bureau, speaking before the House Armed Services Subcommittee on Organization and Mobilization on a bill to establish, for the first time, these units as permanent parts of the Regular Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

The proposed law, which passed the Senate last year without a non-discriminatory provision, would allow women enlistees and commissioned officers to make up two percent of the armed services. The Army would be empowered to commission 51,00 women officers, and ten percent of the women personnel in the Navy could hold officer rank. The NAACP is seeking to have a non-discriminatory amendment introduced to this bill, S. 1641.

The Army and Navy Departments have uniformly opposed anti-discrimination amendments to legislation affecting the armed services. This was evident last year when they blocked attempts to amend the Permanent Army and Navy Nurse Corps Act so as to prohibit discrimination in the selection of nurses. The Army has quietly opposed all attempts to secure a non-discriminatory amendment to the Universal Military Training Bill. The Department of the Army, of course, still has a policy against mixed units of Negroes and whites.

Feb. 22, 48

RICHMOND, Va.—Five bills to outlaw segregation and Jim Crow on public transportation, public assemblies and theatres were introduced in the Virginia General Assembly this week by W. H. C. Murray, delegate from Richmond.

Mr. Murray, member of the Virginia House of Delegates, who is also president of the Richmond Central Labor Union (AFL), was elected to the Assembly last fall by the Negro, labor and progressives in the Richmond area. The Negro people, who have been extremely active in qualifying themselves to vote, gave Murray an overwhelming vote. In this same election Attorney Oliver W. Hill, Negro, narrowly mised election in the Democratic Primary by only 190 votes. Sun. 2-22-48

The Bills introduced by Mr. Murray would repeal various sections of the Virginia statute which segregate and Jimcrow the Negro people. The five bills H. B. No. 262 to No. 266 have been referred to the House Committee on Courts of Justice which will meet this week to determine the outcome of these measures. 2-22-48

The main need, it is seen by observers, is to get a public hearing on these bills where opponents to these vicious un-democratic, degrading laws can mobilize support.

RANKIN BOASTS OF HIS SUPPORT OF SEGREGATED VETERANS' HOSPITAL

NAACP New York

Washington, D.C., February 19 - Congressman John E. Rankin of Mississippi takes credit for passage in the House of Representatives of the bill to establish a segregated veterans' hospital at the birthplace of Booker T. Washington in Franklin County, Virginia. This was revealed when the Mississippi congressman testified in bitter opposition to the anti-lynching bill before the House Judiciary subcommittee on February 4.

Fri 2-20-48

Describing his support of the Jim-Crow veterans' hospital bill, Rankin said: "The Booker T. Washington Negroes.....were in my office just the other day asking for an all-Negro veterans' hospital in Virginia. They are entitled to it.....I helped get the bill amended to provide the required amount, got it passed through the Committee and passed through the House." Lashing out at the NAACP for opposing the segregated hospital plan, Rankin angrily charged, "this so-called Association for the Advancement of Colored People..... (does) not represent the real Negroes. The secretary of that outfit is a man named Walter White who is as white as I am, almost, or looks like it.....The head of that association is a Jew named Spingarn in New York. What interest do you suppose he has in a Negro?"

Perry Howard, Negro Republican Committeeman from Mississippi and an outstanding advocate of segregation, is also supporting the Jim-Crow hospital bill, which is now before the Labor and Public Welfare Committee of the Senate. Lined up in opposition to the bill along with the NAACP are the Negro Newspaper Publishers Association, the National Medical Association, the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches in America, Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, the National Council of Negro Women and the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses.

Colored Candidates For Public Office Start With Three Strikes Against Them

By LUTHER P. JACKSON

Feb. 28-48

A LEADING activity in the realm of politics today is the effort which a number of Negroes are making to win public office by the votes of the people. In recent weeks here in the upper South they have been announcing themselves as candidates for city offices leading to the primaries in April or May, or for the general election in June. In most of the larger cities of Virginia and North Carolina one or more are running for seats on city councils, for membership on school boards, for justice of the peace, and other offices. Later in the year similar elections will take place in Kentucky and Tennessee.

In this part of the country Negroes have been running for office for the past ten or fifteen years. During this time one hundred or more have thrown their hats in the ring in the two states of Virginia and North Carolina for every elective office from the state legislature down to justice of the peace. So many have tried to gain office in these years in these states that the act of a colored man running no longer makes special news for the press. The phase of the subject which does make front page news is winning after running. When one of the office seekers actually wins, nation wide publicity comes to him. This is because of the one hundred or more who have attempted, only two have landed in office. These two are the Rev. Kenneth Williams, alderman, in Winston-Salem, N. C., and William Lawrence; member of the board of supervisors of Nansemond County, Va.

* * * *

THE FACT THAT one hundred or more have tried and only two have won, raises the question of why didn't they win in particular cases. One answer of course is that too few Negroes supported them at the polls. Increase the number of voters by one or two hundred per cent, we would say, and the job is done. All of this reasoning is correct, as I have shown in this column on numerous occasions before. But on this occasion I wish to give a different kind of explanation.

Feb. 28-48

It is safe to say that in all of these elections not all of the qualified Negro voters turned out to support a member of their race. On the other hand white voters have been known to give support to Negro candidates, and, in at least one instance, the Negro candidate received more votes from white people than he did from his own people.

One reason for the failure of nearly all of the candidates is a personal one whereby the voter held some grievance against the candidate and made that more important than the benefits which might flow to the entire race because of his successful race. Such remarks as the following confront all of the candidates who are running now as well as those who have run in the past: "Mr. X is a highly educated man and a successful person, but I am not going to vote for him because he doesn't speak to people." Or "Mr. Y is capable and would make a creditable member of the city council but he is "uppity' so that he will never get my vote. I am going to cast my ballot for the white candidate."

Feb. 28-48

SUCH REMARKS OVERLOOK the fact that no person is perfect. To expect a man to be a good mixer, to know everybody, to speak to everybody, and at the same time to be highly educated, active in the church, own property, and to be efficient on his job after he gets into office is an impossibility.

The Negro candidates for office in Virginia and North Carolina have failed again and again because they have had three strikes against them to begin with. They have been able to rally the support of not more than five per cent of the white voters, they have depended upon Negro voters whose number is always small, and of this small number a considerable proportion have refused to support given candidates because this one or that one does not know everybody, and mix with everybody.

Of far greater importance to Negroes than the lack of some personal quality is the ability of the man to get for members of his race all or some of the many benefits which all members of his race now lack. If he can get larger appropriations for the health and safety of the Negro district, can block any anti-Negro legislation, and do many other things for the general welfare of all people, he is the man for Negroes to cast their votes for some personal deficiency of the man to the contrary notwithstanding.

Negro Chairman

BY AN ODD TWIST of fate, the committee which the Republican Congress built up for the purpose of meat-axing the Truman administration, will now be chairmaned by a Negro—Congr. William Dawson of Chicago.

Not only is this the first time in history that a Negro has sat as chairman of a congressional committee, but he will sit at the helm of the House expenditures committee, one of the most powerful in Congress.

Office holding

This committee can investigate almost anything under the sun—from European expenditures under the Marshall plan to how the president spends his private allowance. There is almost no part of the executive branch of the government that this committee cannot probe.

On it, because of its power, the Republicans placed their most disagreeable and tenacious meat-axers—Michigan's Clare Hoffman, Pennsylvania's Robert Rich, Oklahoma's Ross Rizley, and Clarence Brown of Ohio, Taft's campaign manager.

After Jan. 3, these gentlemen not only are shorn of power, but will be called to order by a quiet-spoken, modest Negro who is well-liked even by his Southern colleagues.

However, perhaps because the role of a colored congressman is not easy on Capitol Hill, the self-effacing Dawson has attended only two meetings of the expenditures committee, and only a score or so of rollcalls on the House floor in the last two years. Most of the time he has spent in his own office or in Chicago.

Tues. 12-7-48

Result is that Dawson may be tragically unprepared to handle this highly important committee. Second in command, however, is California's Chet Holifield, a shrewd, tough Democrat who knows committee operations from A to Z. Without race prejudice. Holifield will sit at Dawson's right next January as he pounds the gavel at the first historic meeting of the expenditures committee.

FOUR NEGROES TO MISSOURI LEGISLATURE

(By R. C. Fisher)

Black Dispatch

ST. LOUIS — (ANP) — Last Tuesday the Negro vote here went heavily to a president who has battled vigorously for his civil rights program, sweeping along the entire local Democratic ticket into office.

Oklahoma City, Okla.

Four Negroes will go to the state legislature next January, the most at one time in the history of Missouri as a result of last Tuesday's Democratic landslide. All of the elected legislators are Democrats; three from St. Louis and one from Kansas City. They are, St. Louis: William A. Cole, lawyer; John A. Green, war veteran and erstwhile athlete of St. Louis; Walter Lay, Stowe college student and James M. McKee of Kansas City.

A Real Surprise

In local voting, most conclusive evidence of the landslide was shown in the Sixth ward, Republican stronghold of Committeeman "Billy" Morant and Alderman J. C. Caston. The sixth ward is where the bulk of St. Louis Negroes live. It was the only ward in the city to remain in the Republican column in the Roosevelt victory in 1936 and which had been steadfast Republican for more than 24 years, under the militant and shrewd leadership of the "Big Four," Crittenden E. Clark, Langston Harrison, "Billie" Morant and Robert Walker. The sixth ward, last Tuesday gave Truman 6,199 votes against Dewey's 2,854. This pattern was followed in all of the St. Louis heavily Negro populated wards.

Margaret Wilson, a candidate for congress on the Progressive ticket and Josiah C. Thomas, grand chancellor of Missouri Knight of Pythias, GOP candidate for reelection as state legislator, failed in the election. Mrs. Wilson, however, made one of the most spectacular campaigns of any of the Progressive party's candidates, in her bid for a seat in the U. S. Congress.

CHICAGO ELECTS TWO NEGRO JUDGES

CHICAGO — (ANP) — Chicago swept two Negro judges into office and re-elected Rep. William L. Dawson to his fourth term in congress in the Democratic landslide here last week.

Wed. 11-10-48

Judge Wendell E. Green, rated by attorneys here as the city's best judge, received 1,018,266 votes to start his second term as a municipal court judge.

Former all-American football star at Iowa and pro with the Chicago Cardinals, Fred "Duke" Slater was the second colored municipal court justice elected with more than 966,000 votes. His present office is that of assistant corporation council.

Wed. 11-10-48

Dawson received more votes than his two opponents, Republican William E. King and Progressive Earl B. Dickerson, combined to return to office from the first district.

In the poll for seats in the Illinois General assembly, three more Negro Democrats came through. Corneal A. Davis will represent the first district; Chas. M. Skyles, the fifth, and Fred J. Smith, the third.

Named along with Dawson, who will control jobs from the Chicago River south, including Chicago's powerful loop, are Joe M. Gill, city clerk, northside, and Albert A. Horan, chief bailiff, westside. Dawson's area is the largest and contains many lush jobs.

Suggests Negro As Treasury Register

Colored Officeholders Of Bygone Days Should Inspire Today's Candidates

34c

By LUTHER P. JACKSON

Journal & Guide

AT THIS season of the year when quite a number of Negroes are running for local public office in a number of states of the South, it is well for them and the public to know that their attempt is by no means the first of its kind in the history of their particular locality.

To the contrary, during the generation following emancipation Negroes ran for nearly every public office within the gift of the city, county, or state. They frequently won the election contests because there were two parties in the field and because the colored man felt that he had much more at stake to cause him to vote then than he has now.

I can not give all of the names of the predecessors of the present group of candidates for every state in the South, but I can give many names for the State of Virginia and about all for the city of Petersburg. Currently we have running in this city for the office of councilman Raymond J. Valentine, lawyer and successful business man. To him I dedicate this article in a recital of the career of the officeholders of this city during the twenty-five year period 1870-95.

Norfolk, Va.

OFFICEHOLDING by Negroes in Petersburg was at its height during the early years of the 1870 decade. At this time there was a total of 10 members of the city council, five overseers of the poor, two gaugers, one commissioner of streets, two clerks of the city market, two bailiffs, four constables, and 12 police.

In these years the Republican Party was in power in this city and since there were more registered Negro Republicans in Petersburg than there were white Democrats (or Conservatives), they found it not especially difficult to land persons of their race in office and on certain jobs.. Raymond J. Valentine faces no such fruitful situation as this today since the white qualified voters outnumber the Negro about four to one. But the very fact that there were many in office then, and none at all at present, should serve as a challenge for him to get one Petersburg office now.

During the twenty-five year period extending to 1890, there was a total of nineteen who served on the city council to which Valentine is aspiring. Among them were seven storekeepers (chiefly grocery stores, three carpenters, two contractors, one fish and oyster dealer, one barber, one letter carrier, one butcher, one lawyer, and one minister. None of these persons was as highly educated as Valentine but most of them measured up to the educational requirements of their day. They were like him, however, in the ownership of property. He owns property, and so did they. One of them, J. York Harris, held eight pieces in this town.

TO CALL THE names of some of these councilmen is to call the honor roll of some of the best families of the city. In some instances one or more descendants still live here. Among them were James Carter, John T. Chissell, George Fayerman, John Henry Hill, James E. Hill, J. M. B. Holmes, William H. Jordan, Peter G. Morgan, James M. Smith, John K. Shore, Christopher B. Stevens, Erasmus Thweatt, and the Rev. Henry Williams. Possessed of good trades, professions, or lines of business; holding membership in churches; and believing thoroughly in education, these officeholders were the forerunners of the same type of families in Petersburg today including that of Raymond Valentine.

Officeholding by Negroes as well as voting itself came to an end in Virginia and the South around 1900. Officeholding came to an end not because the incumbents were failures as legislators, but because as time moved on the Republican Party of the North gradually lost control of the South and the white Democrats once more came into their own. Their return to majority control spelled the doom of the black Republicans.

Valentine and the other candidates have a tremendous responsibility resting upon them in the direction of actually winning the offices they now seek. By winning they will give the colored people greater interest in politics, the kind of interest possessed by their forbears during the generation following emancipation.

Colored Americans Rate Cabinet Post

office holding

By LOUIS LAUTIER
For the NNPA News Service

THE PRIME factors in the election of President Truman, insofar as bloc votes go, were the labor, farm and colored votes. None of these blocs in itself would have been sufficient to elect Mr. Truman. But without anyone of them he would not have been elected. Governor Thomas E. Dewey might not have been elected, but he would have, at least, received enough electoral votes to have kept Mr. Truman from getting a majority and the election of a President would have been thrown into the House of Representatives. There the Dixiecrats would have been in position to use their strength for bargaining purposes.

MR. LAUTIER

In the make-up of President Truman's Cabinet, which was under consideration at Key West, where the President vacationed, both labor and the farm interests will have representation. But insofar as is known, no Cabinet representation will be given to colored Democrats. As a matter of fact, no colored person has ever held a Cabinet post, and not since the administration of the late William Taft has a colored man been in the "Little Cabinet." The last and only colored man to hold such a position was William H. Lewis, eminent lawyer, of Boston, who served as an Assistant Attorney General during the administration of President Taft.

There are nine Cabinet positions—Secretary of State, Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of Defense, Attorney General, Postmaster General, Secretary of the Interior, Secretary of Agriculture, Secretary of Commerce and Secretary of Labor. If Mr. Truman is unwilling to elevate a colored person to a Cabinet post, it appears that equity would dictate that one or more be elevated to a "Little Cabinet" post.

* * * *

THE ARGUMENT that there are no qualified colored persons for such posts will not hold water. Since the days when Lewis was an Assistant Attorney General, the colored lawyer has grown in stature and has proved his ability in the courts of the land.

A number of them have judicial experiences. Governor William H. Hastie of the Virgin Islands has had both judicial and administrative experience. Two now are members of the federal judiciary—Judge Irvin C. Mollison of the United States Customs Court and Judge Herman E. Moore of the United States District Court for the Virgin Islands.

A number of them, like Charles H. Houston, who is engaged in the private practice of law, and Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, have matched their intellectual powers and legal ability with some of the best white lawyers in the country and have carried off the honors.

* * * *

IN OTHER FIELDS there are also colored men of unquestioned ability. For instance, Ralph J. Bunche, United Nations Mediator for Palestine, has proved his skill in international diplomacy in a difficult situation. The State Department has two Under Secretaries and six Assistant Secretaries. Certainly Mr. Bunche can fill one of these eight positions creditably and, at the same time, help the United States to square in the eyes of the world its practices with its professions.

References here to specific persons and positions, are not to be interpreted as excluding other persons and other positions. There is today a large number of colored persons, who, by character, education and experience, are well qualified to fill any position in the gift of their country.

Recognition of the part played by colored people in electing President Truman for a full term in the White House should be given by appointment of colored persons of unquestioned ability and integrity to positions of Cabinet and "Little Cabinet" rank.

Georgia's 150,000 colored voters gave Truman a two to one plurality over both Thurmond and Dewey. . . . One Dixiecrat elector, Malcolm Hill of Sparta, Tenn., has already announced he will cast his vote for Truman. . . . BALDWIN, Mich.—Percy J. Langster, who was elected county prosecutor for Lake County, Mich., in the recent election, will take the oath of office on January 1.

When Mr. Langster takes over the duties of the prosecutor's office, he will be charged with the responsibility of prosecuting all the criminal and civil cases in the county.

The 58-year-old bespectacled attorney, who ran on the Republican ticket, is a native of Brownsville, Pa., and lived most of his early life in Pittsburgh, which he calls home.

Duquesne U. Graduate

He was educated in Pittsburgh and received his bachelor of arts degree from Duquesne University and a law degree from Duquesne in 1932. He has practiced law in Michigan for 17 years, the last three in Baldwin, the county seat of Lake County.

Sat-12-4-48

Mr. Langster is married but has no children. His wife is Mrs. Marie L. Langster, the former Miss Marie J. Williams, daughter of Charles and Nellie Williams of McKeesport, Pa., her hometown. She is a graduate of the Emerson College of Oratory of Boston, and married Mr. Langster on Dec. 31, 1919.

Serves Idlewild

As county attorney, Mr. Langster will serve the 16 townships which make up Lake County, with a population of approximately 48,000, about 40 per cent of which is colored. Baldwin, the county seat, is located about three miles from Idlewild, the famed summed resort, which is among the 16 townships of the county.

The victory in the election marked the first time in the history of Michigan and the United States that a colored man has been elected to serve as county prosecutor. It was also the first time Mr. Langster had run for a political office, and he was thrilled over his election.

However, he modestly says "I am ready to serve this small county to the best of my ability."

Was Civilian Instructor

Mr. Langster defeated the three-term incumbent, Dic I. Cooper, for the honor of representing his district in lake-dotted Western Michigan.

He formerly served as educational advisor to the Civilian Conservation Corps, and during the war period quit law temporarily to serve as an engine and propeller instructor at Chanute Field, Ill., a position he held until an ulcerated stomach sent him to the hospital for treatment. In 1946, he came to Baldwin to practice law.

The Old Time Members Of The Richmond City Council And Their Relation To Oliver W. Hill

Sat. 7-10-48 Va.

IF ANYONE WANTS to know how many years it has been since a Negro of Richmond has held membership in the Richmond City Council, he can hardly get an answer to this question from the newspaper accounts which have been recently published on this subject. The papers have issued statements like the following: "Oliver Hill is the first Negro to be elected since Reconstruction," or "he is the first in 75 years."

Fortunately this problem of the time an individual Negro held this or that office is not a difficult one to solve, since the historical records on the subject are plentiful and the places where they are kept are open to all investigators. A visit to the Richmond City Hall and to the State Library with their collections of city directories, and old newspapers is sufficient to establish the facts concerning when particular colored persons were officeholders.

THE LAST NEGRO IN THE RICHMOND City Council in bye-gone days was Henry J. Moore and the date was 1898. In the light of this fact it has been exactly fifty years since the exit of Mr. Moore and the entrance of Mr. Hill. Mr. Moore was elected to the Board of Alderman of the City Council in 1894 under a four-year term. For two years of this time there were four colored men in the Common Council of the City Council and one other on the Board of Aldermen along with him, but each lost his seat in the fatal election of 1896. Mr. Moore was continued simply because his term had not expired.

At that time there were six wards in Richmond, including Jackson Ward with its majority Negro population. In every election from about 1870 to 1896 the Negro voters of this ward did not fail to elect several members of their race to represent this ward and also one or more white Republicans.

* * * *

BEGINNING IN 1870 AND ENDING in 1898 there was a total of about thirty Negroes who held seats in one of the two bodies of the city council. Most of them were property holders, nearly all had received some schooling, and each followed a gainful occupation. Several of them held from three to ten pieces of real estate, four were highly educated, and at least one-third pursued trades and professions or held jobs which lifted them above the level of their fellow citizens.

There were 2 lawyers—Edward A. Randolph, and James H. Hayes; 1 physician—Robert E. Jones; 3 postal clerks—Andrew J. Brown, Edward R. Carter, and Josiah Crump; 1 newspaper editor—John Mitchell; 3 contractors — John H. Adams, Joseph E. Farrar, and Henry J. Moore: 1 carpenter; 2 shoemakers; 1 caterer; 3 barbers; 1 wheelwright; 1 plasterer; 1 dairy farmer; 1 huckster; 2 grocers, and 3 laborers.

As lawyers, Edward A. Randolph was graduated from the Yale law school and James H. Hayes from the Howard University law school. As a physician, Robert E. Jones finished the University of Michigan medical school, and as a contractor, John H. Adams finished Lincoln University.

* * * *

THE LEADER IN REPUBLICAN Party politics in Richmond was John Mitchell. He is a man who suffers in the eyesight of the older generation of Virginians because of his reversals in later life, but in his early life he captured the attention of the nation for his pioneer labors in stamping out lynching and in publishing one of the most widely circulated Negro papers of his day, the "Richmond Planet."

The man who served the longest period of time in the city council was Josiah Crump who began about 1879 and ended his career by death in 1890. He was highly respected both by white Democrats of the body as well as by the Negro Republicans.

THE NEGROES LOST OUT in officeholding not because they were inefficient but because the white Democrats in every southern state were determined that the race as a whole should no longer vote and hold office. Among the factors which brought a final collapse were the Walton law of 1894, division within Negro ranks by running two Republican tickets in 1896, the "gerrymandering of Jackson Ward, and finally, almost complete disfranchisement by the Constitution of 1902.

These council members are the spiritual ancestors of Oliver W. Hill and the group from which he may draw inspiration. He must remember that two lawyers have preceded him and that one of them, James H. Hayes, was rated as one of the most brilliant of his day and generation.

Two Negroes now in Cal legislature

The Tribune

With the election Tuesday of Byron Rumford, Berkeley pharmacist, to the Assembly from the 17th district, and the re-election of Los Angeles' 62nd district representative, Augustus Hawkins, Los Angeles had two Negroes in the legislature today.

Rumford, a Democrat, received more than 13,000 votes to double that given his opponent, the incumbent, George Miller, Jr.

Hawkins was returned to the Assembly for the [illegible] time, making a total of 32 years the seat has been held by a Negro. He succeeded Frederick Roberts, Republican standard bearer in 1934 and has been re-elected every year since then.

Defeated for Congress from the Northern California's 7th district was a liberal white, Dr. Buel Gallagher, pastor of an interracial church in Berkeley, and former president of Alabama's Talladega College, a Negro school.

Gallagher, author of "Color and Conscience," ran for Congress from a congressional district enclosing the 17th assembly district, said to have a Negro population close to 75,000. However, although the district's Negro vote went to him, he was unable to overtake the Republican standard bearer.

Illinois Legislator Gets 4th Term in House; Is One of 'Topflights' to Aid Truman

~~[illegible]~~

Chicago (NNPA)—The smashing upset victory of President Truman, sweeping into office a Democratic Congress with him, was intrepeted last Thursday by Representative William L. Dawson, Democrat, of Illinois, as a mandate for "a new era of democracy."

Reelected to a fourth term in the House, he is in line to head the important House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

As organizer and director of the National Citizens Committee for the Reelection of President Truman, Mr. Dawson was one of the few topflight politicians who aided Mr. Truman in his almost single-handed fight for election for a full term in the White House.

With the Democratic till almost bare Mr. Dawson did the unheard of thing in politics of raising funds among colored people to help finance the campaign among colored voters.

Sees Approval

In the election of Mr. Truman Mr. Dawson sees approval of the President's civil rights program by the American people. The text of his statement follows:

"The American people have spoken! Their powerful mandate ushers in a new era of democracy.

"President Harry S. Truman stands today as the supreme champion of all American citizens, regardless of color. The American people have given their irrefutable answer to those who doomed him to defeat because of his courageous and history-making stand on civil rights.

"This is the first dawn of a better tomorrow—a brighter future for ourselves, our children, and for all mankind.

an ressional ittee, but he will sit at the helm of the House Expenditure Committee, one of the most powerful in Congress."

And he says further: "This committee can investigate almost anything under the sun—from European expenditures under the Marshall Plan to how the President spends his private allowance. There is almost no part of the executive branch of the government that this committee cannot probe."

Mr. Pearson feels, however, that Congressman Dawson "may be tragically unprepared to handle this highly important committee," but states that he will have at his elbow, when he takes over the gavel next January, "California's Chet Holifield, a shrewd tough Democrat who knows committee operations from A to Z." We differ with Mr. Pearson on his opinion of Congressman Dawson's capabilities in handling affairs in committees. He is a veteran at that game. He has demonstrated his expertness in committee handling throughout his entire political career. True, he may have to learn the mechanics of this new office, but once at the helm, and with a little seasoning, we predict that Congressman Dawson will teach Chet Holifield a few pointers about committee manipulations as the months grow on. As a race, we are highly pleased with this selection, and fear no disappointment.

MR. Pearson is off on another point in his comment on the Dawson elevation. He says that this is the "first time in history that a Negro has sat as chairman of a congressional committee." He is entirely wrong. Had he said that this is the first time a Negro has served as chairman of such an IMPORTANT committee as this, he would have been correct. This, however, is a common mistake committed by most white writers when they come across exceptional honors conferred on Negroes during these times. Knowing little, if anything, of Negro history they refer to such events as the first time.

Sat 12-18-48

Sat 12-18-48

The honor of being the first Negro to sit as chairman of a congressional committee goes to Senator Blanche K. Bruce who represented Mississippi in the Forty-fifth Congress in 1876. He was made chairman of a very select committee on Mississippi River Levees. This was, indeed, an honor, as there were so many other Mississippi Valley members who would have been especially suitable. Serving under him on the committee were such notable senators as Blaine, Conover, Cockrell and Harris. No doubt, this was an interesting experience, as well as a rather queer one, for the two Southern Democrats, Cockrell and Harris. Mississippi River levee problems were of great importance in those days, and to have a Negro serving as chairman of a congressional committee handling them was something almost out of the question. Bruce, according to the record, did a splendid job. During his term of office—from March 4, 1875 to March 3, 1881—his assignments to senate committees included those on Manufactures, Pensions, Education and Labor. He also enjoyed the distinction of being the first and only Negro thus far to preside over the United States Senate.

AND even Bruce was not the first Negro to serve on a congressional committee. This distinction goes to Hiram Rhodes Revels, the first Negro to occupy a seat in the U. S. Senate. He came from Mississippi, and was elected by a joint session in that state to fill the unexpired term of Jefferson Davis, the Rebel, January 20, 1870. After lengthy debate, he was seated by a vote of 48 to 8, and on February 24, 1870, he was appointed to the committee on Education and Labor. Although not a chairman, he made several reports to the senate from that committee.

The first Negro to receive appointment of committee assignments in the national House of Representatives was James Hayne Rainey, Congressman from South Carolina, who was also the first Negro to be elected to that office in 1869. He served nine years in Congress. In the Forty-third Congress he was appointed to the Indian Affairs and Freedman's Affairs Committees, and to the special committee to attend Sen. Charles Sumner's funeral, being the only Negro on the program. Later he served on the Special Centennial Committee, and two regular committees: Invalid Pensions and Freedman's Bank. Before his term expired he was on the Militia Committee, and Education and Labor.

IN the Forty-fourth, 1875-77, Rainey received a special honor which no contemporary of his race enjoyed. While the Indian Affairs Bill was under discussion, Rainey's knowledge of the subject in point was so keen and brilliant that he was called to the chair to preside over the House of Representatives. Although this was a common practice, yet this unusual occupant of the role of Henry Clay caused bold headlines in the New York Herald of that day: "A Liberated Slave in the Speaker's Chair."

So when we saw "The First," we should always be careful to thumb some old dust-ladened books in the library for the sake of keeping the record in order, that goes for Mr. Drew Pearson as well as for the "Oracle of the Barber Shop" who usually knows everything.

Dawson Thinks Republicans Will Duck FEPC

34c(2) Fed. (Ill.)

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Rep. Wiliam L. Dawson of Illinois declared last week in an exclusive interview that it is "extremely unlikely" that the Republican dominated congress will enact a Fair Employment Practice act unless more pressure is mobilized by minorities.

He pointed out that big business may seek to undermine FEPC legislation, if the NAACP, the Negro Newspaper Publishers association and other groups relax their vigilance.

Dawson said, however, that both the anti-lynching bill and the anti-poll tax bill would very likely become law during this session of congress. "But," he declared, "we not only need these two laws on the statute books, but we also need FEPC and a balanced civil rights program."

The congressman expressed complete confidence in the assurance that Atty. Gen. Tom Clark will see that these laws are executed, once they are enacted. "Clark," he said, "has been one of the finest and fairest attorney generals that this nation has had."

When asked what he thought of the reactionary editorial in the "liberal" Washington Post which said in effect that an anti-lynching law is not needed now, Dawson shook his head and said, "I am disappointed—greatly disappointed."

Tues, 3-9-48

Dawson, a native of Georgia, has consistently fought for an anti-lynching law and the other component parts of civil rights. Last year, he introduced his own anti-lynch bill.

Rep. William L. Dawson, Chicago's Negro congressman, is the prospective chairman of the powerful house committee on expenditures, and as such would take over the investigation, if any, of the Capone gang paroles, the retiring chairman, Rep. Hoffman (R., Mich.), said yesterday.

Rep. Dawson

Chicago Ill.

Dawson's right to the chairmanship of the committee which can investigate expenditures of federal executive departments, may create an outright race issue when the new congress convenes, according to an Associated Press story from Washington.

Would Check On U.S. Spending

President Truman and southern members of the present congress have battled politically over issues pertaining to the Negro race and Truman's victory last Tuesday is believed to be a guarantee that Dawson will not be sidetracked from the chairmanship.

If selected, Dawson will be the first present day Negro congressman to head an important regular committee of the house. As chairman he would name all subcommittee chairmen and direct all activities of the 25 members assigned to the task of scrutinizing government spending, and, actually, the operations of most government departments, bureaus and agencies.

Dawson is now the third ranking Democratic member of the committee. The top man, Carter Manasco of Alabama, was defeated for renomination, and the second, John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, is slated to return to his former job as majority floor leader. The floor leader, it was explained, customarily does not have any committee assignments and never has held a chairmanship.

Dawson 61; Born In Georgia

To become chairman, Dawson will have to be selected by the Democratic members of the ways and means committee of the new house. This group's recommendations for committee assignments are submitted to a caucus of all party members, then to the entire house. The ways and means committee's recommendations usually are approved by the caucus, and accepted.

Sat 11-6-48

Dawson is 61 and a lawyer, who was born in Georgia. He was educated in the south, and at the Kent College of Law and the Northwestern university here. He was for years a Republican precinct captain in the 14th ward of Chicago.

Since 1928 Dawson has been a frequent candidate for office. He tried twice as a Republican to be elected congressman, and sought to be Republican ward committeeman of the 2d ward. Republicans nominated him as nonpartisan alderman of this ward, and when defeated he became a Democrat. Former Mayor Kelly appointed him Democratic ward committeeman and helped him to the Democratic nomination which sent him to congress for the first time in [illegible].

Negro Due to Head Major House Group

Wash Post

By The Associated Press

An outright race issue confronts the new Democratic majority of the House—a Negro is in line to head a major committee of Congress.

Dawson

He is Representative William L. Dawson of Illinois, Georgia-born Chicago attorney who was reelected Tuesday to his fourth term.

Dawson actually is only the second ranking Democrat on the Executive Expenditures Committee. But the No. 1 man—Representative John W. McCormick of Massachusetts—is slated to return to his job of majority floor leader. And the majority leader customarily does not have any committee assignments; he never has carried the burden of a major chairmanship.

Democratic committee assignments in the House are arranged by the party's members of the Ways and Means Committee. This group's recommendations are submitted to caucus of all House Democrats, then to the entire House.

Wash D.C.

The Ways and Means members' recommendations usually are approved by the caucus, since they are worked out with the party's leaders and committee chairmen. Acceptance by the House is just a formality.

Almost without exception, chairmanships are decided on committee seniority; that is, on how long a man has been on the committee, rather than how long he has been in Congress.

If tradition is followed in his case, Dawson will be the first modern-day Negro Congressman to head an important regular committee. The only other present Negro House member is Representative Adam C. Powell, jr., of New York who won reelection to his third term on the Democratic and American Labor Party tickets. He ranks fifth on the Labor Committee.

Last Headed by Hoffman

The Expenditures Committee has broad authority to look into all the executive departments of the Government. Its jurisdiction covers any activity involving the spending of Federal money.

Under the chairmanship of Republican Clare E. Hoffman of Michigan, this committee during the past two years has probed the State, Commerce, Justice, and Agriculture departments, as well as the Federal Communications Commission and housing agencies.

Among the nine hold-over Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee, with six to be added in line with the party's new majority status, four represent Southern States where President Truman's anti-discrimination civil rights program provoked a storm of protest.

Wash D.C.

Four Backed Civil Rights

They are Representatives Robert L. Doughton (N. C.), Jere Cooper (Tenn.), Wilbur D. Mills (Ark.), and A. Sidney Camp (Ga.), all from States Mr. Truman carried easily despite the States' Rights uprising. A fifth member is Representative Noble J. Gregory of border-State Kentucky, which also landed safely in the Truman column.

The other four Democratic members of the committee actively supported Mr. Truman's Civil Rights program. They are Representatives John D. Dingell (Mich.), Walter A. Lynch (N. Y.), Aime J. Forand (R. I.), and Herman P. Eberharter (Pa.).

Rankin Democrat

34c(2)

The advance dope had forecast dire tidings for Rep. John E. Rankin, the fiery rabble rouser from the hill country of Northeastern Mississippi. To the United Press, his effort to win Democratic renomination for a fifteenth term appeared likely to be "his stiffest test." To The New York Times, he was facing "one of the toughest political battles" in his 66 years, in which "most observers are tagging him to run second."

Newsweek

Nwk 9-6-48

That Rankin was losing his touch was provable statistically. His usual victory margins of 2-1 or 3-1 or even 4-1 had slipped in 1946 to almost nothing when he polled 14,027 votes to 10,499 for Claude F. Clayton, youthful ex-circuit judge, and 1,671 for an also-ran. In 1947, seeking promotion to Theodore G. Bilbo's old Senate seat, he ran a bad fifth out of five, not even carrying his own home district.

Why Rankin was slipping was easily explainable. Even his poor-white constituents were apparently fed up with his out-Bilboing Bilbo, his demagoguery, his "Dear Dago" and "Nigra Lover" and "Kike Communist" epithets, and his fisticuffs on the House floor. Seemingly they had forgotten his vote-getting achievements in co-sponsoring the TVA, fighting for veterans' benefits and rural electrification, giving GI's pay raises from $21 to $50 monthly, and getting the House Committee on Un-American Activities put on a permanent basis.

Nwk 9-6-48

Two political events this year saved Rankin's weatherbeaten skin: President Truman's civil-rights program, and the Un-American Activities Committee's "spy" probe.

Bigger Than Ever: During the August primary campaign, Rankin plainly knew he was fighting for political survival. As in 1946, he was challenged by Judge Clayton, 38, an avid joiner who had fought in Europe as an Army officer. This time Rankin was opposed also by Circuit Judge Raymond T. Jarvis, 45, amiable backslapper who like Rankin and Clayton was a University of Mississippi law graduate.

Trying to disarm Rankin, both of his opponents came out as strongly against the civil-rights program as Rankin himself, and both joined him in endorsing Dixiecrat Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for President. Pointedly, Clayton said he would "work to gain the respect of the other members of Congress. I cannot get their help by abusing them or making their every honest difference of opinion with me a personal matter." 34c(2)

But Rankin made a boll-weevil campaign. He attended picnics and barbecues. He spoke in town squares and on courthouse steps. He catered to Southern pride in having a congressman with as much seniority as Rankin. With no basic differences on issues existing between the three candidates, Rankin appealed to emotion rather than to reason. He resorted to his usual arm-waving, leather-lunged tirades against "New York Jews" and "Damyankee interference." His defeat, he said, "would be the best news that Joe Stalin ever heard." The Communist spy hearings and the Kasenkina case clinched matters.

The result: On primary day Aug. 24 Rankin was triumphantly renominated. Confounding the advance dope, he amassed 14,566 votes, his record high in fifteen Congressional contests, against only 5,522 for Jarvis and 4,534 for Clayton, and thereby broke all Mississippi records for Congressional tenure. Even Rankin chirped: "I didn't expect the margin to be quite so large." As the voters themselves wagged their heads in surprise, Clayton mourned: "I took a hell of a licking."

Congressman A. Clayton Powell (D-ALP-NY) in an interview with the Daily Worker Saturday, hinted that he might not run to succeed himself this year. Rep. Powell, the first Negro to represent New York in Congress, said he was "against Truman" and for a third party in 1952 "if the Democratic and Republican parties let the people down this year."

We interviewed him in the office of the Abyssinia Baptist Church, in Harlem, of which the Congressman is pastor. Written questions were submitted by this reporter Rep. Powell answered in his own handwriting. The questions and answers follow: Daily Worker

Q. Are you definitely breaking with the Democratic Party?

A. I am against Truman UNLESS the Republican candidate is worse.

Q. Will you run for Congress in 1948? New York, N.Y.

A. I will run if there is a likelihood of a political hack being forced on the people by either party. (The Congressman did not enlarge on this, but it seemed implicit that he would retire in favor of a progressive candidate.) Tues. 1-13 48

Q. As a candidate, would you split endorsements as between the Presidential candidate and local candidates endorsed by independents?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you support state and Congressional candidates endorsed by Wallace followers?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Would you accept third party support in view of your Jan. 4 speech? (On Jan. 4. Rep. Powell had called Wallace's candidacy "unwise" and announced his support of Eisenhower as the Republican candidate.) Daily Worker

A. Gladly, as in the past.

Q. What possibility has Eisenhower of securing the GOP nomination? New York, N.Y.

A. I don't know. Tues. 1-13 48

Q. Would you support the GOP ticket from top to bottom if Eisenhower won nomination?

A. No. Only progressives.

Q. What differences do you have with the Amsterdam News and the Consumers Protective League? (The Congressman had criticized both groups in his Jan. 4 speech.)

A. No comment.

Q. Are you opposed to a third party in principle?

A. No. Tues. 1-13-48

Q. In your opinion, under what conditions could a third party successfully be developed? New York, N.Y.

A. If the Republican and Democrat parties let the people down this year, then build a third party for '52. Daily Worker

FT. LAUDERDALE, Fla, (ANP) —The first Negro to enter candidacy for election to public office in this county, Dr. Von D. Mizell, medical director of Provident hospital and publisher of the Floriad Spur, qualified for school board post, second district, subject to the Democratic primary election in May. Dr. Mizell's candidacy has been endorsed by civic, professional and business groups throughout the county, including the Broward County Democratic committee.

Chicago Ill

Commenting upon his qualifying, Dr. Mizell said, "It is very evident that the school board needs some advice from this side of the tracks.

"It is very seldom that they get both sides of the educational picture and I know that a Negro would be an asset to the administration."

He said that he had two reasons for running for the school board: First, such a move will inspire Negros to register and participate in county elections. Second, he is especially interested in obtaining school buses for Negro children and seeing that the school board gives the Negroes at least one accredited high school in the county.

Congressmen William L. In Senator Robert A. Taft's home State of Ohio, Republicans felt the brunt of Democratic opposition, with State Senator Harry E. Davis and State Representatives Francis E. Young and William B. Saunders, all Republicans of Cleveland, being swept out of office, removing every Negro representative from Cuyahoga County from the Ohio Legislature.

Two other aspirants for the Ohio Legislature were also defeated. They were Republican Atty. Joseph Fulton and Democrat Madison Perkins, both of Cincinnati.

By personal block-by-block canvassing, they built up a nucleus of 6,500 registered voters in Richmond, a record in a state that has an accumulative $1.50 poll tax. WILMINGON, Del.—The election upset that swept thousands of Republicans out of office did not prevent GOP William J. Winchester of this city from winning a seat in the General Assembly of the State of Delaware, the first Negro ever to hold such a position in that body.

Winchester, who is 62 years old, will represent a district largely composed of foreign extraction.

Highly capable after 16 years in the city council and six years as chairman of the Second Ward Republican committee, Winchester has an interesting background.

He was born in Barclay, Md., the son of the late Robert and Angelina Winchester and after a very meager formal education left home and came to this city where he settled with two uncles, James M. and Frederick Winchester.

He became the first Negro selected for grand jury service in New Castle county among many other distinctions. As superintendent of sanitation today, he has under him more than 100 city employees.

For 10 years Winchester was a trustee of Morgan college, Baltimore, and for 40 years has been a trustee of Mount Joy M.E. church.

BUT FOR THIS AND THAT

The Advertiser

Senator Lister Hill is to be pardoned if he has been inwardly reflecting that, but for this and that fact of the Deep South rebellion, he would probably become Democratic majority leader of the United States Senate in January, one of the most powerful posts in the government.

Fri 11-5-48

Majority Leader Alben Barkley will resign the post to preside over the Senate as Vice President. The Democrats will elect a majority leader whose duty it is to serve as marshal for the President's legislative program.

34c(2) Ala.

Hill was majority whip and thus second in command to Majority Leader Barkley, but he resigned the whipship when the Republicans won a majority in 1946.

Senator Hill, like Senator Sparkman, stuck it out with President Truman as long as he could, but finally the oven blasts of Alabama resentment over the Civil Disturbance program forced both to abandon Truman. In the end Senator Sparkman called upon Truman to renounce the nomination to keep the party from being "cut to ribbons." Sparkman was a foremost Eisenhower generator.

Montgomery, Ala.

Even after Senator Hill repudiated Truman in the most blunt terms, he was charged with covert friendliness to Truman. Finally at an Alabama caucus at the Philadelphia convention, Hill, in a climate of inflamed accusation, said that no man in America was more "unalterably" opposed to Truman than he—that if nobody else would, he himself would nominate Senator Dick Russell of Georgia in opposition to Truman.

Despite all of that, the friendship between Majority Leader Barkley and Hill remained warm. Barkley has been something of a patron and mentor of Hill's for years and there is a strong bond between them.

The night that Barkley walked into the Philadelphia convention hall to be nominated for Vice President, the handsome widower, accompanied by one of the most stunning brunets this editor ever saw, stopped and chatted with Senator Hill as though no such thing as an Alabama walkout had occurred a few hours before.

Thus, had it not been for the rebellion and Hill's participation in it (Alabama, through Hill, yielded to Georgia to nominate Russell) and had it not been for his resignation as majority whip, he undoubtedly would become Barkley's successor as majority leader.

Fri 11-5-48

But even if Barkley prevailed on Truman to forget Hill's shotgun desertion, it is all but inconceivable that Hill would or could accept the post. For one of the things the Administration will demand Democratic action on will be a brace of the Truman civil rights proposals.

Talmadge and the Future

34a(2)

Acting Governor M. E. Thompson, in conceding defeat by Herman Eugene Talmadge in the Georgia Democratic Primary of Wednesday, paraphrased Job, sitting in the wreckage and ruin of his plans and possessions, saying:

"The people giveth and the people taketh away, blessed be the name of the people."

At home the dwellers in ivory towers, wistfully gazing toward always distant horizons upon which, one fine day, will appear a shining knight in armor who will slay all the mean and wicked dragons and bring us a political utopia in which all men are handsome and true, utter jeremiads of warning and prepare for the worst.

Fri 9-10-48

In distant States, the observers see in the Talmadge victory a thwarting of the will of the people; the enthronement of ignorance, the Ku Klux Klan, and all the warty kin of that stupid organization. They speak of it as the coming of night and a pall of gloom.

All of this is understandable.

None of it is true.

Job, having been righteous, could not understand why he was punished by the Lord. M. E. Thompson, having done a job he believed to be good and honest, as it was until the Rivers-Arnall management began to use road contracts in a reprehensible manner and forced him to replace a loyal friend as Revenue Commissioner, could not understand why the people could turn him down.

Atlanta Ga

But they did. The Talmadge victory was won with votes, not with fraud or violence. The Ku Klux Klan was not a factor. It and its morons burned a few crosses here and there in their customary mockery of the Cross of Christ. They were a bloodsucking tick on the body of the victory. But no more.

The inescapable fact is that a majority of Georgians wanted Herman E. Talmadge for Governor.

It is from that point that we must begin, and no amount of maidenly yearnings for a fair knight, and no sounding of wild alarm will solve anything.

Georgia is not going to be destroyed. Nor will the State live under a pall. Industry will continue to come to our State. Farmers will go ahead with soil conservation and improvement of methods. A way will be found to spend more money on health and education.

Herman Talmadge is a young man. He may be assumed to have political ambitions. He can achieve them only by making a good Governor. If he fails he will fail not merely himself but his organization. He must have an affection for his State. He will hardly willfully do it harm. He must have political plans for the future. Therefore, while he may, and probably will, withhold the State from the Truman column, he will hardly take it off after the Dixiecrats who have bolted the Party.

It is perfectly true that the Truman policy, as well as the Republican, on civil rights aided his campaign. This did not elect him. It did crystallize his support and set it to work with a zeal it otherwise would not have had. It is on the racial program that he is most vulnerable in that his victory will give to the Kluxers and their vermin breed the idea they have a license for violence. This may trouble him. But he cannot give support to them and if violence comes he cannot ignore it.

Fri 9-10-48

So, we go back to the inevitable premise. He is the man the people wanted. He wants more of the people. He is a young man. He is a product of our schooling and our university. He served well, in combat territory, during the war. He attracted young voters. He got the veterans' support.

How ridiculous it then is to be crying like Jeremiah or lamenting like Job. He is a product of the people. Therefore, let the people give him every support and every good wish and good promise. It is no time for the people of good will and good intent to hold back. Let us all pledge to him that we will support him in every good endeavor and let him know of our opposition to those we believe wrong. He is to be our Governor. Let us participate in our government.

To that we pledge ourselves.

Poll-Observing Role To Continue-CEKLOR

34(a)(2) Atlanta Ga

Ga. Fri 9-10-48

By BILL BORING.

Having turned the spotlight of publicity on state-wide voting irregularities in the Democratic Primary, CEKLOR, an organization of civic clubs promoting clean and honest elections, yesterday announced it would continue its role as observer at the polls in the General Election of Nov. 2.

"We shall continue to evolve a program directed at cleaner and better managed elections in the State," a spokesman for the organization said. "We are not attempting to dig up skeletons. We are trying to throw light on voting irregularities for the purpose of acquainting the voters with what they are legally entitled to at the polls. We'd like to get every citizen into a working program for better election practices."

The spokesman commended the newspapers for the part they took in the "cleaner elections" drive, adding that the publicizing of irregularities is one of the most effective means of combatting them.

The CEKLOR (Civitan, Exchange, Kiwanis, Lions, Optimist and Rotary Clubs) and the Junior Chamber of Commerce observes uncovered what they termed gross irregularities at the polls.

Among the irregularities were the counting of votes before the polls closed, the inadequancy of private voting booths and scattered cases of racial discrimination.

Fri 9-10-48

Meanwhile, Sol. Gen. Paul Webb, of Fulton County, who was nominated for re-election in Wednesday's primary, commended the civic clubs for their zeal in campaigning against malpractices at the polls.

The Constitution

"At the same time," he said, "I want to commend the election managers in Fulton County for the splendid job they did in the primary. I placed so much trust in their honesty that I sent but one observer to the polls and that one only at the insistence of one of the citizens."

Atlanta Ga.

Sol. Gen. Roy Leathers, of DeKalb County, who also was in Wednesday's race, likewise commended the poll officials of DeKalb County (CEKLOR charged a number of DeKalb precinct stations with malpractice). "As far as I know there is not a single dishonest election official in DeKalb County," he said. "The people who work at the polls should be congratulated and not criticized."

9-10-48

THE GEORGIA ELECTION

34a(2)

The Times

Whatever may be the result for Georgia of the gubernatorial primary which Herman Talmadge has won, the cause of racial understanding in the South has suffered a bad defeat. Mr. Talmadge made his whole campaign on the issue of white supremacy and the question of civil rights, which was not really at issue since Governor M. E. Thompson had not supported the Truman program. The Ku Klux Klan and other bigoted groups have thus been encouraged to use the same tactics elsewhere, appealing to the emotions and fears of the white voters instead of to their minds.

Fri 9-10-48

Although Mr. Thompson apparently has made a good interim Governor, it is quite possible that Mr. Talmadge could have won without making the racial issue paramount. The Talmadge name is still apparently magic in the rural areas of Georgia, where his late father always won his elections through the Georgia county unit method of voting, which gives sparsely settled rural counties a disproportionately larger unit vote than is given counties containing the larger cities. There may have been some Georgians also who felt he had some merit on his claim to the governorship last year when his father died before he could be inaugurated. We should like to think, at least, that there were other issues than the racial one that gave him his victory. The popular vote, incidentally, was not a landslide—only a majority of 30,000 in over 500,000 votes cast.

New York N.Y.

Fri 9-10-48

Under the liberal governorship of Ellis Arnall, Georgia had made real progress. It is one of four Southern states that has abolished the poll tax. Some 142,000 Negroes were registered to vote in the primary. It is disheartening to see Georgia take a step backward in nominating Herman Talmadge. The only comfort is that he will hold office for only two years and, under Georgia law, cannot succeed himself.

Editor Constitution. After reading an article in the paper just the other day telling of the plans being made to put a life-size statue of the late Eugene Talmadge on the lawn of the Capitol, I have been wondering if the people of Georgia have lost all the sense they have. I thought a memorial of that sort was supposed to be in honor of some worthy person who had done good and great things for humanity. If anyone can show where a Talmadge has ever done anything for the State of Georgia other than disgrace it I would like to know what it was.

If all the people who gave so generously of their time and money to make this memorial possible, had given to some charitable organization or even thrown it away, would have done the State of Georgia a favor. Atlanta, Ga

The Constitution

Editor Constitution: I too want to say something in regards to L. S. Braselton's letter concerning Gene Talmadge. If he was such a disgrace to the people of Georgia why did the people elect him for the fourth term? I think it is an honor and I for one am in favor of a statue on the State Capitol of Gene. It will remind the good people what Gene did for Georgia. And remember, good people, there is Herman now and I hope in later years Herman's son.

Atlanta, Ga. 6-12-48

Decatur. C. S. BAKER.

Herman Talmadge, thirty-five years old, who won Georgia's Governorship in Tuesday's primary . . . he campaigned on the "white supremacy" issue, urging race segregation and opposing the President's civil rights program . . . his father, the late Eugene Talmadge, used the same issue and was elected governor four times . . . "Hummon" affects the same red galluses as did "Old Gene" and the same lock of hair dangling over the right side of his forehead; and his voice over the radio sounds to his "wool-hat" followers just like his father's screech . . . a year ago last January Herman claimed the governorship after his father died; so did Lieutenant Governor M. E. Thompson for two months Georgia had two governors and utter confusion until the state supreme court threw Herman out . . . in last week's primary Thompson was his chief rival . . . serving in the Navy, Herman saw action at Guadalcanal and Okinawa . . . he was divorced from his first wife, a professional model, because—according to her mother—she and her family were temperance people and the Talmadges definitely were not . . . remarried in 1941, he has two sons.

Young Hummon and the Imperial Wizard

ATLANTA.

With fear, or with gleeful anticipation, or with a kind of wary hopefulness, Georgians are waiting to see what a new Talmadge regime will be like. No one really knows what face the next Governor, Herman Talmadge, known as "Young Hummon," will show to the world. If outward appearances count for anything, Young Hummon should provide a sharp contrast to his father, "Ol' Gene" Talmadge. But a good many shrewd observers here who have watched the younger man in action fear that outward appearances count for very little.

New York, N.Y.

Certainly there is a surface contrast. Ol' Gene's loud bellowings, his single red gallus, his thick "woolhat" diction, have all been discarded. Instead, Young Hummon goes in for neat blue suits, flowered ties, a suave manner, and grammar, even on the hustings.

At one point during the recent campaign, Young Hummon's advisers, worried by the comparative paleness of his platform manner, urged him to stop using grammar and three-syllable words, and to belch forth fire and brimstone, like Ol' Gene. Young Hummon refused. And although he made it clear that one of his first acts as Governor would be to find some way largely to disfranchise the Negroes, he did so without his father's customary rancor.

Man to Be Reckoned with

The results were surprising. Young Hummon not only held the traditionally pro-Talmadge rural counties, but won some of the urban "streetcar counties" as well, which his father had never done. And in the Georgia back country, the verdict was unanimous: "Young Hummon's even smarter than Ol' Gene."

This may very well be true. Young Hummon, with his small, shrewd eyes, his jet-black hair, straight as an Indian's, and his softly courteous manner ("Mighty nice of you to stop by, now you be sure to come again") is a man to be reckoned with, according to those who should know. He is a thoroughly intelligent man, tough, determined and ambitious. And there is no doubt that his ambitions extend beyond the confines of the state of Georgia.

His ambitions explain why he has infuriated the Dixiecrat leaders and given Truman a chance in Georgia by failing to embrace the Dixiecrat cause, for he undoubtedly remembers the fate of other Georgia politicians who have bolted the regular Democratic organization. His ambitions also explain the conscious contrast he is making to his father. Unlike Ol' Gene, Young Hummon, nattily dressed and soft-spoken, is storming such citadels of respectability as the civic and business clubs, making earnest, intelligent speeches on good business or education or soil conservation.

Mon. 10-18-48

His father also entertained wider ambitions, and Herman Talmadge certainly remembers why Ol' Gene never got to the Senate. The powers that be in Georgia decided that Talmadgism was all very well for home consumption, but not for export.

Yet astute Georgians are asking themselves just how far this conversion to moderation and respectability will go. One highly significant index will be the future relationship between Young Hummon and one of his most ardent supporters, Doc Green, imperial wizard of the Ku-Klux Klan.

In his way, of course, the doctor is eminently respectable. His new red brick suburban house has a determined air of respectability. So does his dentist's office, with its aging magazines, its faded copy of Hippocrates Oath, and its vintage red leather dentist's chair. The imperial wizard (he promoted himself from a mere grand dragon) is a dusty, gray, sad-looking, angry, small man. Just as Harry Truman looks like that mythical figure "the average man" in person, so Doc Green, with his long, off-center face, his watery eyes and his small, timid mustache, looks like an unfriendly caricature of the average man.

34c(2)

Important Political Symbol

The imperial wizard will never himself be an important political figure. Yet he is an important political symbol. For the moment, although it is growing, his Ku-Klux Klan is more silly than anything else, with its mumbo-jumbo and its soiled bedsheets. But it could again become an important political factor in the South, and not only in the South, because it stands for violent measures to prevent social change.

Two recent typical resolutions in Klan Klaverns are evidence enough, if more evidence is needed. One called for a fight to the finish with the "Jew-loving, Catholic-loving, nigger-loving C. I. O." Another called for the sending of a letter of appreciation to an Atlanta policeman variously known as "Itchey Trigger Finger" and "Slappin' Sue" for having shot a large number of Negroes.

Despite the newly acquired air of sweet reasonableness, Herman Talmadge and those around him are also, of course, bitter enemies of social change. Therefore the future relationship between the young Governor and the elderly doctor should be a fairly accurate measure of the pressure for social change in the South, and the resistance against it. The betting seems to be that Young Hummon and the imperial wizard will remain on distant but not unfriendly terms.

Mon. 10-18-48

It must be said for the record that the men of good will here (and there are many) are almost unanimously convinced that a change is on the way, but that the proposed attempt to impose change from Washington has played directly into the hands of the imperial wizard and his friends. Whether they are right or wrong, there is a tension in the air here, a smell of violence to come.

Darkness In Georgia

Wash. Post

Herman Talmadge has come back, as he promised he would do, to the Georgia governship which he held illegally for 67 days early in 1947 after his father died just a month prior to assuming the office. In Wednesday's Democratic Party primary the equivalent of an election under Georgia's one-party system, Talmadge defeated Gov. M. E. Thompson not only under the county unit system which had made his victory a foregone conclusion anyway, but even in terms of popular votes. He won as an extreme advocate of "white supremacy," of opposition to President Truman's civil rights program and of all the know-nothing bigotry and demagoguery of which his father was one of the South's leading exemplars. The Talmadge triumph is likely to turn back the clock and hold it still in Georgia for a long time to come.

Sat. 9-11-48 Wash. D.C.

In the September issue of Harper's Magazine, a Georgia journalist, Calvin Kytle, analyzes the social, political and economic circumstances accounting for the primary's outcome. His peculiarly timely article, A Long, Dark Night for Georgia? explains that the Democratic primary, like the State Legislature, is rigged through the county-unit system to give absolute control to the rural areas of the State. "The half million residents of Atlanta's Fulton County, for instance, carry no more weight at the polls than the 45,000 people of Troup County . . . Only about 80 of the 159 counties have adopted a secret ballot . . . Votes often are sold for a dollar and a slug of stump rum; the dead and insane are voted; returns frequently are not counted at all, but concocted."

The future does not look very bright for Georgia. Because he did not scruple to use force when he temporarily seized the governorship in 1947, it is widely expected that Talmadge, once armed with the legal powers of office, will employ force ruthlessly to keep his clique in control. He has made no bones about his intention to disfranchise Negroes completely, no matter what the Supreme Court may say about it. The Ku Klux Klan made itself evident in the campaign for his nomination and is likely to flourish under his protection.

Mr. Kytle sees hope only in the formation of a new liberal party—not Henry Wallace's—seeking support among organized labor, among the one million Negroes and among the white middle class of the cities. But labor is weak in Georgia, the Negroes are helpless, and there is serious doubt that the mass of white-collar Georgians would enter into alliance with either of them. "At best," concludes Mr. Kytle, "their task would have to be reckoned in years. At worst, it might be smothered almost immediately under a Talmadge reign of terror, which could make Georgia liberals just as helpless as those of Louisiana under Huey Long."

Herman Eugene Talmadge may make one of our best Governors—a possibility which seems to amaze some of our citizens.

I can understand opposition to him. There is reason for some of it. There are about a quarter of a million Georgians who voted against him. There are almost a half million who stayed away from the polls because, presumably, they didn't care enough about the candidates to go out and vote.

Mon 9-13-48

But it is ridiculous, and not good sense, to assume from the start that he will give the State a bad administration.

He is an intelligent young man. He has great political ambitions. He is elected. There is no reason for sulking in tents. It seems to me that even his worst opponents must be good enough Georgians to hope he will make the very best of Governors.

No one knows his full capabilities. He may or may not be a good administrator. All we can know is that he is intelligent; that he knows the workings of politics, and that he wants to make politics a career.

Atlanta Ga.

So he may make us a good, even a superior, Governor.

If he doesn't there will be time to say so and to oppose him.

Now, it seems to me, a patriotic Georgian can do nothing else save hope and work for the best.

Future He has not said so, but it is obvious he has in mind the Senate in 1950. Sen. Walter F. George has not said so, but there are indications he may not again be a candidate. There are many who wish him to retire to head up the Mercer Law School and conserve his strength after years of strenuous service in Washington.

There is every reason to believe that 1950 will see Herman Eugene Talmadge a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate.

That being the case, he would hardly fail to give every talent he has to making a good Governor.

Problem He will seek the Democratic nomination. The man his faction selects to campaign for Governor will run as a Democrat.

The Talmadge faction now faces a decision about the party. At Philadelphia they properly refused to bolt the party and nominated Sen. Richard B. Russell.

The Dixiecrats cannot exist long as a party.

The Democratic party of the South cannot exist as political street walkers, independent of any party, walking the streets ready to bestow their electoral vote favors upon which ever national party promises the most. No Southerner can have a national political career on that sort of "tribute" basis.

The two-party system is the backbone of our national way of life and of our government.

Decision Therefore, this is a time for decision.

We have already made the error of considering the problem in terms of the man, Harry Truman; the man, Tom Dewey, and the man, Henry Wallace.

They will all three be gone and forgotten in a few years, but political parties go on. Sometimes they absorb others. But they go on.

The Southern Democrats don't want to vote for Truman.

They would like to find a way to remain "regular" and still not vote for Truman.

Mon 9-13-48

A few will say, "We have shown you that we detest Truman and his works, but we are not going to bolt the party. It is going to be defeated anyhow, so we will stay in it and try to change what we think to be wrong."

A few others will withhold their electoral votes.

The really thoughtless will bolt into the fourth party called the Dixiecrats.

Choice It is a difficult choice. It looks as if the Democratic party has a chance to hold a slight margin in the U. S. Senate. At the worst it will have a sizable bloc of votes there. Sen. Russell, of Georgia, showed last year what a minority can do in getting concessions from the majority.

If the party is going to be defeated nationally, as it is, it may be well to consider staying in it with the fighting chance to win concessions.

That will mean some changes at home. Local Democratic organizations in Southern counties and cities already are competing for Negro votes. There are many decisions to be made.

Meanwhile, it seems to me to be common sense and State patriotism to give every support to Herman Talmadge's every act which would establish him as a good Governor. We all get hurt if he fails.

Talmadge Win Won't Wreck Georgia, Atlanta Editor Says

Editor of the Atlanta Constitution

Washington D.C

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 9.—Herman Eugene Talmadge's smashing unit vote victory, and comfortable popular vote margin in Georgia's Democratic primary of Wednesday, is being taken right in stride by a State used to politics of a fire-and-brimstone variety.

The more timorous are at the topmost peak of their ivory towers writing wistful editorials about the white knight in shining armor who, free of all wicked political connections, will come one day to rescue the maiden fair. Others are crying havoc and all of us are sitting back waiting for the editorial comment from our neighbors north of the line which will see in the Talmadge victory a smashing triumph for the Ku Klux Klan and its associated stupidities.

Fri 9-10-48 Wash D.C

The truth of it is that nothing unusual will happen. The Thompson campaign, which gave the State an exhibition of corrupt use of whisky money and road contract shakedowns not seen since the years before the war, had been clad with the white robes of virtue simply because it was against Talmadge. Actually, with former Gov. E. D. Rivers associated with it, not even the onetime "peerless leader" could give the Thompson camp a clean bill of health.

Fri 9-10-48

Thompson himself was never appealing, a good, honest schoolteacher, he had done an acceptable job, but he attracted no support. Very few persons were for Thompson. A great many were against Talmadge. Georgia has been divided roughly into Talmadge and anti-Talmadge camps for a quarter century. This time, with the greatest registration in history, well over one million, only about half the voters were interested enough in what they considered a bad choice, to come out and vote. Even the Negroes, intimidated only here and there, were not enthusiastic. In Atlanta, for example, where there was no intimidation or hint of it, only half the registered Negro voters came to the polls. They reflected white opinion, namely that Thompson was a political accident who was being manipulated by the shopworn political forces and for them it was no great issue. There is great mourning among the anti-Talmadge group, but everyone is up and doing, expecting no heavens to fall.

34C(2)

Fri 9-10-48

Klan Influence Slight

The Ku Klux Klan at best has about 15,000 members and was not a factor. Old Doc Greene, the wistful grand dragon, hung around the Talmadge headquarters. Three times an effort was made to get the dragon to depart, on the theory that he was not a good ad, but the Doc stuck it out. Even so, not even the Talmadge people, while they had taken his votes, were making a pal of him.

Southern politics, in the one-party States, has always been a politics of protest and in that pattern Georgia has long been a leader. Tom Watson sparked the Populist revolt of the eighties and nineties which almost smashed the Democratic Party in the State. Georgia, like the other Southern States, is going through the retreat from cotton and what amounts to an agricultural revolution. Industry is coming ahead and unions have more strength. But, industry's workers come from the farms, and reflect the farm psychology. Hence, the CIO, which hates Talmadge, sat back in impotence while all the CIO automobile unions and a good 30 per cent of the textile union members whooped it up for Herman as they had for Old Gene.

Civil Rights "Threat"

Georgia, along with the South is in a state of transition. That goes for politics, too. The Truman Civil Rights proposals were very effective in solidifying the Talmadge ranks and putting them to work. The threat of an FEPC put most of the industrial workers and owners behind him. Thompson was crying "me, too" and trying to prove that no one hated the civil rights proposals more than he, but the presence of Ellis Arnall, who had seconded Henry Wallace's nomination at Chicago in 1944, made the Thompson camp vulnerable. It may be noted in passing that the platforms of both candidates were so alike they could well have been written by the same man and on no single pertinent issue did they differ at all, another reason why Thompson didn't get any "for" votes but only the negative ones. Henry Wallace's entry into neighboring Southern States also had an effect. The average Southerner is in something of the mood of the bull at the bullfight after the picadors and the banderillos have finished with him. The civil rights proposals and Henry Wallace's bumbling parades have aroused a lot of them to furious defense of their worst politicians.

Fri 9-10-48

Even the State's liberals, while they wanted Thompson to win, privately admit it probably is better for the State he didn't. Had he won he would have been a schoolteacher lost in the political woods. Young Talmadge is just 35. He is far shrewder than his father. He speaks grmmatically and uses big words with ease. He is politically ambitious. He plans to run for the United States Senate two years from now when the present term will end. That will be against Senator Walter F. George if he chooses to run. But the Talmadge people hope his age will cause him to retire. The Talmadge organization will then have to choose for the 1950 governorship between Robert Elliott, national committeeman from Columbus, Ga., and Lieut. Gov. Marvin Griffin, nominated with Talmadge and who ran far stronger than even Talmadge. Griffin carried even Fulton County of which Atlanta is the county seat, which Talmadge lost by more than 10,000 votes and Griffin was even more anticivil rights than Talmadge.

No Feeling of Despair

Eo, one and all hope that young Talmadge, with that ambition before him, will try to make a really outstanding Governor and will adopt a policy of conciliation. He has said he wants the qualified Negro to vote and have full rights so long as eegregation is maintained. His position is that of the dominant majority and it is also that of a majority of the Negroes, although their voice is not heard. MRost of Georgia's Negroes, like those of the South, are rural Negroes. It is noteworthy the Atlanta Daily World, a militant Negro publication, was critical of the Ray Springle articles as harmful rather than helpful.

Fri 9-10-48

8, while a lot of Georgians are unhappy about the Talmadge victory, there is no despair and there is no feeling that slavery is at hand. The Talmadge organization looks good for about six years, but they feel nt will be a betterbrand ofTalmadgeism than that of the late' Gene Talmadge and the State got along under six years of his administration. The anti-Talmadge forces rmain strong and full of fight and there will be no lying down and giving up. The fight will go on. The klan will try to derive all the benefit it can out of the racial situation, and it will be helped by antilabor unions. But there is no chance at all the klan will have any great influence in State government.

hisinofthe Yffl ,.: mm mm mm

Meanwhile, the Republicans likely .will run a man for Fovernor. He will get a good vote, uut has no chance to win. That will be a start toward the gretaly desired two-party problemubical party system. But until the racial problem is made less acute by emigration and more jobs, and until the State is less of a have-not State, our politics will continue to be explosive and based on protests rather than issues. The liberal is gloomy—but not buried.

Hummon And The Wizard

ATLANTA—With fear, or with gleeful anticipation, or with a kind of wary hopefulness, Georgians are waiting to see what a new Talmadge regime will be like. Appeal To All Voters Puts Michigan Coroner in Office

● By ISAAC JONES

Baltimore, Md.

ANOTHER PAGE on the democracy side was added to the history of Wayne County, in last Tuesday's election, when voters of both races marched to the polls and elected Dr. Samuel B. Milton coroner of River Rouge, Mich.

It marks the first time in history that other than a white physician has been elected to the coroner's office by the votes of the people of Wayne County.

Pays $9,000

Running on the Democratic ticket, with the slogan — "Don't Be Half Safe — Vote Straight Democratic," Dr. Milton, polled 462,912 votes, while his Republican running mate, Dr. Albert A. Hughes, received 475,185.

The coroner's position carries a salary of $9,000 per year, plus allowances for expenses.

Dr. Milton has proven that he is a man of keen ability; his medical skill, understanding of human relations between classes and races has made him an outstanding leader in the community.

Founded Hospital

The three-story, Sidney A. Sumby Memorial Hospital, located at Visger Rd. and Palmerston, in River Rouge, Mich., which is owned and operated by Dr. Milton stands as a monument to his great work.

The hospital has an interracial staff of 12 physicians, five white and seven colored.

It is equipped with all the modern equipment necessary to handle the most delicate operations and treatments of patients.

Any one in River Rouge will tell you that Dr. Samuel B. Milton has always been a fighter for justice in that community.

It was through his efforts that River Rouge has become a better place for colored people to live in. Discrimination bars in theatres and eating establishments have almost disappeared.

On School Board

He has been a member of [illegible] River Rouge school board since 1945. Dr. Milton is also a member of the Board of Directors of the Beechwood Community Center and the down river Council of Social Agencies. He is an active member of Union Baptist Church of River Rouge.

Sat 11-20-48

During World War II, Dr. Milton was medical examiner for Selective Service and also held a health officer post in the city of Ecorse, Mich. for two years.

The Elks. Masons and Knights of Pythias have his membership

Seated in his spacious office at his hospital Thursday, Dr. Milton told me that the success of his campaign for Wayne County Coroner was due to the fact that he carried his message to all the people—including all classes and races.

"I spoke to religious, civic, educational, business and other groups—and I even went into the beer taverns and carried my message to the people there," said Dr. Milton.

Dr. Samuel Byron Milton was born March 8, 1902 in Washington, D.C. He is a graduate of Brown University and received his medical training at Northwestern University.

Sat 11-20-48

He did interne work at City Hospital in St. Louis, Mo. and general surgical practice in Kalamazoo, Mich. for one year and in the Detroit area for 19 years.

Has Two Children

Dr. Milton and his wife, Mrs. Isaure Eva Milton have been married 20 years. They have two children, Suane, 14 and Samuel Milton Jr., 17, who is a military student at Willston Academy, East Hampton, Mass.

Dr. Milton believes that a man can climb as high in life as his ability—and will power will lift him—and it is not always the color of the skin that defeats his ambition.

He made it plain that he will do everything in his power to serve the people of Wayne County as they have never been served before. He will succeed—because Dr. Samuel B. Milton has what it takes.

Rankin keeps cool on 'nigra' question on air

Tribune Los Angeles, Calif.
Sat. 3-20-48

Limiting himself to a brief, and respectful, mention of "nigras," Congressman John Rankin, of Mississippi, tore into fair employment practices legislation in a debate with Rep. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, Wednesday night over KHJ-Mutual.

34c(2)

Baited by Marcantonio with the old story about the Mississippi Negro asked by the late Senator Bilbo to speak a word over a nationwide hookup who yelled, "Help", Rankin insisted that "Nigras down home—the colored people, are not going to call on the people from New York to solve their problems.

"Nigras and whites in the South get along better than any similar number of nigras and whites any place else in the country," Rankin went on.

Declaring that FEPC "simply violates every principle on which this government is founded," Rankin cited what he regarded as defects in the New York law as typical weaknesses in the national bill.

He lamblasted the law for denying employers the "right to make inquiry into the original name, birthplace, or citizenship of applicants."

Sat.

Had FEPC been law when the United States entered the last world war, it would have been possible for enemy nations to have had espionage agents in vital defense industries, Rankin said.

Under the New York state law, employers may not require applicants to show naturalization papers, to tell when they acquired citizenship, or to tell where they were during the first World War, Rankin went on, declaring that such proscriptions are hazardous to national defense.

"Everytime you mention progress, he stops and says 'Communist,'", Marcantonio said of Rankin. Relative to charges of Communism, the New York representative recalled that the Republican platform of 1944 contained a plank favoring FEPC.

"I know the Republican didn't mean it, but it was there," Marcantonio said.

Sat.

"Only the Wallace party" really wants FEPC or democracy, Marcantonio went on.

Rankin Goes Back

Birmingham, Ala.

The voters of Rep. John Rankin's district in Northern Mississippi sent him back to begin his 29th year of service in Congress by a handsome margin. In the Democratic primaries held Tuesday he defeated his two opponents handily. The election in November is a mere formality.

34c(2)

Mr. Rankin, 66 years old, has made himself conspicuous in the House by his frequent bad manners and his bitter opposition to what he conceives as anti-Americanism. Many of his critics do not concede that his conception of Americanism is correct. His belief in white supremacy is carried to extremes of poor taste. He has been known to impugn citizens because their names indicate family origin in foreign countries. As ranking Democratic member of the House un-American affairs committee, he has often sponsored methods which many opponents think infringe upon the Bill of Rights. In many respects he has made himself unpopular with his fellow House members.

Thurs. 8-26-48

On the credit side, however, one must note Mr. Rankin's firm support of the TVA.

Mr. Rankin was renominated by a small minority of the people living in his district. Fewer than 25,000 votes were cast in the primary for congressional candidates, and Rankin was nominated by receiving approximately 14,000 of them. The fact to be emphasized is that thousands of Mississippi's citizens of voting age either do not or cannot vote. No one can say, of course, that if more of the people in his district were qualified to vote he would have been defeated. But one can point out that his long tenure in office, giving him importance in Congress by the antiquated rule of seniority in service, has been assured by a minority.

Truman Again Snubs Powell; No Bid To Annual Reception

34c(2)

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — President Truman again snubbed Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., by failing to invite him to attend the annual state reception given at the White House Tuesday night.

The traditional reception given for members of the senate and house turned out to be somewhat of a flop, as far as numbers were concerned. Only about one-half of the invited guests turned up, making this the smallest official reception held at the White House this winter.

Rep. William L. Dawson was also conspicuously absent. He attributed his absence to the fact that a recent death in his wife's family had prevented them from accepting any social invitations lately.

It is said that not enough Republicans showed up to make a quorum and that the Democrats stayed away en masse.

Disapprove Stand

Because of the recent controversy within the ranks of the Democratic party, it is believed that the Democrats stayed away from the White House reception to show their disapproval of the stand taken by the administration on civil rights.

Because the reception was held during Lincoln week, it is alleged that many Republicans were out of town making Lincoln-day addresses.

Sun 2-22-48

Whatever the reason, neither of the Negro congressmen attended the reception either this year or last year. Congressman Powell was not invited either this year or last. It was the general opinion last year that the Harlem congressman was intentionally left off of the guest list because of an old grudge which the President held against him. This dislike is said to have arisen because of a remark made by the New York congressman in regard to Mrs. Truman's stand on the segregated policy practiced by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

When Mrs. Truman was asked to boycott a recital given at Constitution hall because the DAR had previously denied the congressman's distinguished wife, Hazel Scott Powell, the right to appear in a concert there because of her race, the First Lady replied in effect that she saw no reason why she should not attend the recital.

While in Baltimore she was a weekly contributor to the AFRO, and active in civic groups including the NAACP, Girl Reserves, Girl Scouts, and the Urban League. Brooklyn Elects Its First Negro to Office

N.Y.

Sends Bertram L. Baker to Assembly From 17th District

Brooklyn voters elected a Negro to public office in Tuesday's election for the first time. The precedent was established in the Assembly race in the 17th District, with Bertram L. Baker, Democratic-American Labor party candidate, defeating Maude B. Richardson, candidate of the Republican and Liberal parties, who is also a Negro.

Mr. Baker polled 21,086 votes, of which 5,392 werre on the A. L. P. line. Mrs. Richardson's total was 11,628, including 2,777 Liberal ballots.

There are four other Negro Assemblymen from New York City—all Democrats from the Harlem area. They are Thomas Dickens, 11th District; Elijah Crump, 12th; Harold A. Stevens, 13th, and Hulan E. Jack, 14th.

Mr. Baker, fifty, was born in Nevis, British West Indies. He migrated to this country in 1915, and has been a resident of the Bedford-Stuyvesant area since 1923. He has two married daughters. His home is at 399 Jefferson Avenue.

He was formerly a deputy collector of internal revenue assigned to the income tax audit section of the Brooklyn Bureau of Internal Revenue. WASHINGTON

Rep. William L. Dawson (Dem., Ill.), and Rep. Adam C. Powell Jr., (Dem., N. Y.), were re-elected for their ~~fourth~~ and third terms, respectively, in Congress in the national election on Tuesday.

Magistrate Joseph H. Rainey of Philadelphia lost his fight to become the first colored Congressman from Pennsylvania when the Progressive Party's ticket on which he ran was swamped over by the Democratic victory in that city.

Magistrate Hobson R. Reynolds, Republican, also lost in his bid to become the first State senator in Pennsylvania who is not white despite the endorsement of the GOP in Philadelphia.

Six candidates in Philadelphia, five Democrats and one Republican, were elected to the Pennsylvania State Legislature, one being Mrs. Susan Monroe, a beautician from the 23rd District, the second colored woman to be so elected.

The others were: Lewis Mintess, Sixth District, only one of five GOP legislative incumbents to keep his seat; Granville Jones, Seventh District, who defeated William A. Upshur, 30th Ward GOP leader, for an upset;

Samuel Floyd, 13th District; the Rev. D. W. Hoggard, 18th District; J. Thompson Pettigrew, 21st District;

34c(2)

In Baltimore, Dr. John E. T. Camper, 4th Congressional District, running on the Progressive Party ticket, placed third in his bid for a seat in Congress, polling 6,552 votes. Rep. George H. Fallon won by 38,480 votes.

Led by Congressman Dawson, who piled up an early lead of more than 40,000 votes over his Republican opponent, William E. King, the Democratic landslide in Chicago also carried two judges and three legislators into office.

Dawson Lauds Truman

With regard to his victory, Congressman Dawson said:

"The American people have spoken. Their powerful mandate ushers in a new era of democracy. President Harry S. Truman stands today as the supreme champion of all American citizens, regardless of color.

Sat 11-13-48

"The American people have given their irrefutable answer to those who doomed him to defeat because of his courageous and history-making stand on civil rights.

"This is the first dawn of a better tomorrow, a brighter future for ourselves, our children and for all mankind.

"The huge Truman vote which the group cast should stand as a glistening, two-edged sword, to warn all who hold posts of responsibility that the colored citizen will fight to the last ditch in his cause."

Democrats Sweep Ohio

The Democratic sweep in Ohio ousted from office three colored Republican members of the State Legislature, Attorneys Harry E. Davis from the Senate and William B. Sanders and Francis E. Young from the House of Representatives.

Two State Democratic candidates, Frank C. Shearer, of Columbus, and Madison H. Perkins of Cleveland, failed to get enough Democratic support to win seats in the House.

James Christian, Youngstown, Ohio, Republican, also failed in his bid for the House. Colored voters in Ohio cast their ballots approximately three to one for Mr. Truman.

5 Elected in N.Y.

Bertram L. Baker, 50, a public accountant for the past 26 years, on Tuesday, became the first colored man to be elected to a public office from Brooklyn when he defeated Mrs. Maude B. Richardson in the 17th Assembly District race for the New York State Assembly by a plurality of 9,588 votes.

In New York four colored Democrats were sent to the New York State Assembly. They were Tom Dickens, attorney of the 11th District, Elijah Crump of the 12th District and Julian Jack of the 14th District and Harold Stevens of the 13th District, the latter two were re-elected.

In the Wayne County (Mich.) Democratic landslide, Dr. Samuel B. Milton, River Rouge physician, was elected coroner to become the second colored Democrat to hold the post in Wayne County. He received 186,278 votes from 700 precincts out of 1672.

His associate, also a Democrat, former coroner, Dr. Albert Hughes, received 191,752 votes.

Edgar Currie, labor leader and Democratic candidate for the State House, is almost assured a seat in the State body. Robert L. Ward and Leroy G. White, Republican candidates for the State senate from Wayne County, were defeated.

Sat 11-12-48

In Atlantic City, N.J., Freeholder John Henry Hester, Republican, was elected coroner with a plurality of over 13,000 votes. He is also pastor of Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church in Pleasantville, N.J.

In California, Byron Rumford was elected to the State Legislature from Berkeley. He and Augustus Hawkins are the only two colored members of the State Legislature in that State.

In Norfolk, Va., Jerry O. Gilliam, retired railway mail clerk, who ran for election to the House of Representatives on the Progressive ticket, polled only 1804 votes out of 40,000 cast in the district.

One colored candidate won in Missouri. J. McKinley Neal, a druggist, was re-elected on the Democratic ticket to the Missouri General Assembly from the Fourth District, for his second term. He defeated Republican Joseph N. Moore, an attorney, by a count of 11,384 to 5,223.

34c(2)

Only other colored person on the ballot was Julius B. L. Jones, Progressive candidate for Lieutenant Governor. He polled 431 votes in Jackson County.

Man Who Came From Detroit With $4 in Pockets Elected 'Mayor' of Harlem

Baltimore Md

~~NEW YORK~~—(NNPA) — Harlem ~~had~~ a new colored "mayor" last week and the man responsible for his election was already mapping plans to elect a "governor" of the State of New York.

The new "mayor" is Sherman Hibbitt, 39-year-old native of Glasgow, Ky., and owner of a chain of barbecue spots in Harlem, who was elected on March 17 and inaugurated before 1000 at the Savoy Ballroom by Hugo E. Rogers, president of the Borough of Manhattan, last Tuesday.

Hibbitt, who came from Detroit with $4 in his ~~pocket in~~ 1941, polled 14,946 votes in a heated race which saw Harlem cast more than 30,000 votes.

His nearest competitor was Mrs. Madeline McCoy, a member of the State Board of Cosmetology, and owner of a Harlem beauty salon, who polled 10,313 votes to lead "Creole" Pete Robertson, Harlem restaurant owner, who received 5,418.

To Clean Up Harlem Streets

A mild mannered businessman and a conservative dresser, Mr. Hibbitt, campaigned on a platform which called for a cleanup of Harlem streets and last Wednesday he was busily engaged in mapping out what part of his work he would begin first.

His mother, Mrs. Mollie Hibbitt, and his sister, Mrs. Emily D. France, came from Glasgow to see him sworn in. Two other sister,Mrs. Lizzie Stark of Cleveland and Mrs. Sannell Thomas of Detroit, also came here for the affair.

Married to Mrs. Marie Hibbitt, the new "mayor," who has no children, said he has no particular hobbies and is not interested in politics. He says that he is a Jackie Robinson fan and that he and Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis are close friends.

~~His chief adviser.~~ Reuben J. Patton, is all set to make the "mayor" a State-wide figure and a possible "governor" of New York. Last Wednesday he displayed a certificate of incorporation of the Negro Locality Mayor's Committee of New York, authorizing such a project.

Sat 4-3-48

The articles of incorporation passed by the State Supreme Court Nov. 15, permit annual elections in all colored localities of Greater New York and authorize the corporation to promote, foster, develop and maintain interest in civic, social and commercial affairs in the above mentioned localities.

The Supreme Court also gave it the right to purchase, lease or otherwise secure and sell or mortgage property, borrow money, execute and issue bonds and promissory notes.

Sat 4-3-48

Candidates for "mayor" must be at least 30-years-old, a business or professional man and must have resided in Harlem for at least three years. To stage the campaign, Patton divided Harlem into 37 divisions between 110th and 165th Streets.

2 Negroes Announce for Columbia Council

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 7—(AP) Two Columbia Negroes announced Friday they would be candidates for two open places on City Council in a general election here next Tuesday. 34a(1)

They are I. S. Leevy, an undertaker, and the Rev. L. C. Jenkins, pastor of Union Baptist Church.

They said they would run on a Republican ticket in opposition to Democratic candidates Colin S. Monteith Jr., and Lester L. Bates, chosen in previous Democratic primaries.

The Candidacy Of A. J. Clement

The Lighthouse & Informer

A. J. Clement, Jr.., executive secretary of Progressive Democrats, former county chairman for Charleston, a young successful businessman and long identified with civic and business projects for the elevation of the people of South Carolina, has offered in a special primary at Charleston, in which seven nominations for offices in the newly authorized county governmental council for the county, will be made.

Columbia 34c(2) S.C.

Wholly on his own, and like the 19 or 20 other candidates, Mr. Clement has paid his $100.00 entrance fee, offering, he said, so that his people may have honest representation in the county government..

Sun 10-3-48

This marks the first time ever that a citizen of his race has offered in a primary of any sort in South Carolina, and significantly, he does so in a county where the influential political sources, Rep. Rivers, Senator Maybank, The news and Courier, have, perhaps more than anywhere else in the State, fanned hot the passions of hatred and intolerance.

On the other hand, Mr. Clement lives in the county which leads the State in political action among his people, both in registration for the general election and enrolment for primaries, and also in the casting of ballots. It is estimated that more than 10,000 Negroes have registered in the county, a sizable and effective number in an election of the sort in which he will be a candidate.

Sun 10-3-48

"Arthur" Clement is not a seeker of political prestige; nor has he political ambitions. A well-trained, capable and proved businessman, he offers so that his people may be assured of at least sympathy and more than "token" allocations by their county government.

Perhaps the colored voters in Charleston will want to turn out on October 9 and give him a good vote. He can be elected. Oliver C. Hill was elected to city council in Richmond this year. The Rev. Kenneth Williams was elected to city council in Winston-Salem a year or two ago. South Carolina can elect a colored citizen-a qualified and honorable one-if it so chooses.

We suspect that the old loyalty of Charleston's citizens will be very much in evidence on October 9. The Dixiecrats of course will not like it.

Richmond Negro Elected to Seat On City Council

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

34a(2)

Thurs

Richmond, Va., June 9 (AP)—Citizens of Richmond elected a 41-year-old Negro attorney to a seat on their new nine-member City Council today. 6-10-48

Oliver W. Hill, World War II veteran, is the only independent candidate to break the ranks of the Richmond Citizens Association, which elected eight of its nine candidates. Hill edged out T. D. du Cuennois, ninth member of the association's slate, by an unofficial count of 9,095 to 8,834. Du Cuennois is area director of the C.I.O. for the eastern part of Virginia.

The Negro attorney's election marks the first time that a member of his race has been named to the City's governing body in many years.

Viewing The Election Results

Journal + Guide

THE ELECTION last week in Norfolk, especially when viewed in conjunction with the history-making result in Richmond, points inexorably to one imperative requirement: we must close ranks.

34a(2)

In Richmond the voters elected OLIVER W. HILL to the new nine-man City Council which will replace the old and cumbersome 32-man council. In winning, MR. HILL defeated 21 other candidates, including one of the otherwise victorious slate of nine aspirants running under the auspices of the potent Citizens Association and having, in addition, the not insignificant backing of the CIO and its energetic political affiliates.

Sat 6-19-48

VA

MR. HILL, a young and able lawyer, demonstrated his political potency last summer when he failed of election to the Virginia General Assembly by only 190 votes. Among the candidates who defeated him in the state capital were thirteen who were members of the existing council.

Norfolk Va.

In Norfolk, against terrific odds, VICTOR J. ASHE polled 2,707 votes—roughly one-fourth of the total—in his second try for the City Council and his third for public office. He polled over 2,900 votes to finish seventh in a nine man field in 1946. Last summer he polled 2,733 votes in his first try for election to the lower house of the General Assembly.

Through an unfortunate set of circumstances surrounding last week's election, MR. ASHE was one of three candidates, the other two being white, whose names were not printed on the official ballots. His votes were garnered entirely by a write-in and rubber-stamping technique in last week's councilmanic race. He suffered from a campaign of fear generated during the last days of the campaign, a beware-of-a-writein-that-will-elect-ASHE tactic taken by the opposing camps. This actually became a bigger factor than the normally heavy obstacle presented by the writein necessity.

But when everything is considered, the prime obstacle to minority political representation in Norfolk has been the failure to close ranks. We simply have not got together on our fundamental needs, we have succumbed to the division of factions, cliques, and personality differences. It should be axiomatic that only if we are united can we succeed. No one candidate will exactly meet the personal requirements and likes of each voter. In the effort of a minority and disadvantaged group to achieve a voice in policy-making and legislative bodies, these preferences must be subordinated to the overriding necessity to establish the principle of representation.

As it is now, we have approximately 5,000 registered voters among our group which are being wasted when compared to their real potential. MR. ASHE's totals in his three tries have been, respectively, 3,001, 2,733, and 2,707. In each election he has polled some votes in every precinct, so obviously he has polled many white votes. Equally obviously, he has polled hardly half of the available vote most reasonably expected to go to him. That way lies defeat for any effort to bring about direct minority representation in City Council.

Whether we close ranks or not, it is imperative that those agencies which seek to have our citizens pay their poll taxes and register must continue those efforts with renewed and persistent energy. This drive must be frequent and unwavering. From now on we must unite for action, for successful action; we must forget the past, we must overlook personalities. Defeats must not discourage us. In the long run they are unimportant. The vital thing is to learn from them. Military men know that battles can be lost but the campaign of which they are a part can be won.

MR. HILL and those voters who finally elected him in Richmond were not discouraged by his earlier defeat. Less than a year later they closed ranks. His election is without doubt the most significant political development in the South since the last century. Therein lies the important lesson for all who would try to make democracy a reality.

MR. ASHE made a remarkable showing. His intelligent and broad-gauged platforms, public utterances, and general campaign demeanor have won the respect, if not the balloting support, of the majority group. Part of the battle has thereby been won. The rightness, the obligation, for minority representation, is more generally acknowledged as a result. Whether he consents or not to stand again for elective office, his contribution to our political advancement is beyond dispute and will weigh heavily in all future developments.

THERE is considerable dissatisfaction in all quarters of the city with the present administration of city affairs. The feeling is, with a good deal of justification, that the present City Council is too narrowly a business men's council and that it is more sensitive to the interest of industry, business, commerce, and big financial interests than to the overall desires and needs of the community as a whole.

One of the prime needs too long ignored is better housing, better streets, improved street lighting, and sounder city planning and zoning. One of the great obstacles to Negroes helping themselves to obtain better living conditions is the lack of residential land on which to build. It is next to impossible to acquire lots in desirable places for Negro homes. It is not the lack of either money or credit to acquire such land, but a harsh restriction on the land which is in fact purchaseable.

The present City Council has overmagnified the myth of the taxpayers' burden. Many of the so-called big taxpayers who cry for relief actually only transmit to the public coffers monies collected from others in indirect taxes. The burden is actually on the little people.

Hill Takes Office In Richmond Council

Memphis Tenn.

By ALVIN E. WHITE

RICHMOND — (ANP) — Oliver Hill, recently elected councilman, took office with eight associates also elected in the last elections, here last Tuesday. Fri. 9-24-48

Although the group was elected in the spring, the change from the old form of government to the new city manager-council form was not effected until this month.

Mr. Hill says the group has met from time to time to transact business necessary for the conduct of the new form of government, selecting a city manager from the mass of applications received for the post and aligning a new policy making body.

NO COMMITTEE

Under present plans, there will be no committees, Mr. Hill said, the entire group acting on issues arising, with all but executive sessions being open to the public.

Accepting Mr. Hill as an elected official, other members of the council have been cooperative, he said, and helpful.

He has no specific program to present the council for Negroes, standing, he says, for progress of Richmond's citizens. Cognizant of the city needs, however, he feels that his very presence in the council will focus attention on the things colored Richmond needs.

FOUR WARDS

The city, divided into four wards named after favored sons of the south, Lee, Clay, Jefferson and Madison, once boasted a colored ward, Jackson, from which Negro officials were formerly elected.

Memphis Tenn

In making this change in the form of government, Mr. Hill remarked that this is the first change since 1918, although there have been seven or eight changed in the type of government since the city was founded in 1789. Fri. 9-24-48

As related at the time of his election, Mr. Hill, a Howard law school graduate and a member of the firm of Hill, Martin and Robinson, is the first Negro elected to office in Richmond in half a century. Present to witness the inauguration of the new government were his wife and other friends and a host of Negroes. Mr. Hill's term expires in 1950, having been elected for two years. He speaks of his election, not as a miracle, but as a tangible expression of what Negroes can do with the ballot when they are informed and exercise the privilege of voting. His election, he believes, is a forerunner of similar elections in the south, where Negroes are beginning to realize the importance of the ballot.

Election In Virginia

34 a

New York Age

The election last Tuesday of Attorney Oliver W. Hill as a member of the Richmond, Va., City Council proves that democracy is not dead in the South. Mr. Hill was elected to his $1,200-a-year municipal post on a city-wide basis by white and Negro voters. He is the first Negro to win such an honor since 1895, when a Negro was a member of the old Common Council; he is a highly respected citizen who defeated the white Area Director of the CIO.

Sat. 6-19-48

This newspaper has no intention of using the election of Mr. Hill to a seat on the City Council at Richmond as a generalization to prove that the South has suddenly undergone a change of heart and is now ready to grant full recognition to the Negro and his citizenship rights. But Mr. Hill's election is most significant in that it marks progress for the Negro at the hands of Southern white citizens themselves. The rest of the country should not be indifferent to what goes on in other sections, whether good or bad, but it should also be recognized that reforms freely proposed by the people of a community are certain to be more broadly and permanently based, and assured of being put into practical operation with less friction and opposition than those which have come about as a result of outside pressure.

Amsterdam News

The local view—and it is a good one—of the election of Mr. Hill is given by the Richmond Times Dispatch, one of the South's greatest newspapers, edited by Virginius Dabney, which said in an editorial:

"Something of a milestone in Richmond's modern political history was set with the election of Oliver W. Hill, Negro attorney to the Council. No colored citizen has been chosen to public office here since the late 19th century, and some white Richmonders may be inclined to view the novel phenomenon with alarm. Actually, however, there is no real basis for such a feeling. Mr. Hill is a valuable citizen who is well qualified by education and background to sit on the Council.

"Since the population of Richmond in nearly one-third colored, it is altogether natural and proper that this large segment of the city's life should be represented on the new Council by a man of Mr. Hill's character and capacity. His presence on the law-making body should give our Negro citizens a sense of participation in Municipal affairs here that they have not had during this century, and should promote better inter-racial relations. While the propriety of 'single-shotting' by the Negroes may be questioned by some, it is obvious that several thousand whites also voted for Hill."

Richmond and its citizens may well be proud of their record in electing Mr. Hill to the City Council. It is a good beginning not only for Richmond but for other sections of the country, North, South, East and West, where full citizenship rights and equal opportunities for participation in the life, work and government of the United States are denied to citizens because of race, color, creed or national origin.

ELECTON LAUDED

Commenting on Mr. Hill's election the Richmond Times Dispatch morning daily edited by Virginius Dabney, said:

"Something of a milestone in Richmond's modern political history was set with the selection of Oliver W. Hill, Negro attorney, to the council. No colored citizen has been chosen to public office here since the late 19th. century and some white Richmonders may be inclined to view the novel phenomenon with alarm. 34c(2)

"Actually, however, there is no real basis for such a feeling. Mr. Hil is a valuable citizen who is well qualified by education and background to sit on the council. Trained in law, he is highly regarded by the Negro community and competent to pass upon the issues which will come before him on the municipal legislative body.

"Since the population of Rich--mond is nearly one-third colored, it is altogether natural and proper that this large segment of the city's life should be represented on the new council by a man of Mr. Hill's character and capacity. His presence on the law making body should give our Negro citizens a sense of participation in municipal affairs here that they have not had during this century and should promote better interracial relations. While the propriety of 'single-shooting' by Negroes may be questioned by some, it is obvious that several thousand whites also voted for Hill."

RICHMOND'S NEW COUNCILMAN

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

The election of Oliver W. Hill, 41-year-old attorney, to the City Council of Richmond, Va., last week teaches a political lesson. 34c(2)

An analysis of the voting shows that of the 9,097 votes which the victorious candidate received, more than 3,000 of them were cast by white citizens. They enabled him to defeat his nearest white rival by 263 votes. Sat. 6-19-48

Mr. Hill thus becomes Richmond's first colored city councilman since Reconstruction days. He will serve with eight white members of the city's first unicameral council.

As a representative of 30 per cent of the city's population, Mr. Hill received a large number of "solid-shot" votes in precincts heavily populated by members of his own race, but without the votes from progressive white fellow citizens, he would have been an also-ran. 6-19-48 Sat.

This is an important political lesson and one which should be learned in every community if we are to continue our political progress. And another thing which must be kept in mind is that there probably are some whites already at work trying to devise ways and means to gerrymander the district so as to prevent political lightning from striking again.

Richmond's citizens, therefore, while justified in rejoicing, should be ever mindful of this. We must guard our gains jealously.

What has just happened in Richmond and what has been happening for years in cities farther North should inspire other communities to renew their efforts for political representation.

We salute Richmond's new councilman and those who worked hard for his success. It CAN happen here!

Progressivism in South Gets Lift From Election of Negro Councilman

34c(2)

RICHMOND, Va. — The growing campaign for the election of Negro candidates to office in Virginia chalked up its second and most signficant victory last week with the election of Mr. Oliver W. Hill prominent Negro attorney, to the Richmond City Council. The first such victory came last fall with the election of Mr. William Lawrence to the Suffolk County Board of Supervisors. Thus, within nine months, two Negro candidates have been elected to important public office in Virginia—the first time any Negro has been elected to such posts in more than fifty years.

These two victories mark a new step forward in the national liberation movement of the Negro people, and contain many vital lessons for progressives. 34c(2)

In both victories the winning Negro candidates have run as independents. These victories give the lie to those socal democrats and confused liberals who are trying to short-circuit the growing third party movement by claiming that because Virginia is a so-called "one-party" State, only chance of success lies in influencing and working within the Democratic Party. The success of Negro candidates in running as independents should go far to clear up doubts created by the social-democrats and should give a real stimulus to third party activity.

In Richmond, Mr. Hill was the only one of twenty independent candidates in running as independents should go far to clear up doubts created by the social-democrats and should give a real stimulus to third party activity.

In Richmond, Mr. Hill was the only one of twenty independent candidates successful in bucking the "lily-white" slate of the Richmond Citizen's Association, a "good government" group apparently dominated by middle class "reform" elements and local property owners.

MR. HILL'S ELECTION gives new proof also of the growing support among white voters for the demands of the Negro people for representation in local governments. While Mr. Lawrence won election in Suffolk County, where the Negro people are in the majority, Mr. Hill's election came in Richmond, where the Negro people are a minority of the population.

With only approximately 6,000 registered Negro voters in the city, Mr. Hill received 9,097 votes, more than one-third of his total vote, from white Richmonders. This was true despite the refusal of the powerful citizen's Association to include Mr. Hill on its slate, the failure of the "liberal" Richmond newspapers to support his candidacy, and the failure of the labor movement to endorse or work for Mr. Hill's election.

Mr. Hill's election demonstrated also the unity and political maturity of the Negro community, for although there were two Negro candidates making the race, the Negro people, and their white allies, gave completely united support to Mr. Hill. Mr. Hill received 9,097 votes while the other Negro candidate, running apparently for personal reasons, and perhaps at the instigation of the Democratic machine, received only 618 votes.

This unity was marked also by the effective use of the "single-shot" vote by thousands of voters, a spontaneous movement rather than an official part of Mr. Hill's campaign strategy. In four precints Mr. Hill received 2,206 votes while the total vote of his four nearest opponents in these precincts came to only 117.

THERE ARE ALSO important lessons, and serious danger signals, for the labor movement in the Richmond election. Last year the labor movement and the Negro community worked together in an effort to elect a labor candidate and a Negro candidate to the Virginia House of Delegates. This joint campaign resulted in the election of the labor candidate, but the Negro candidate lost out by 190 votes, largely due to the failure of the labor movement to actively campaign and get out the white vote for the Negro candidate.

In the recent City Council elections labor unofficially but very obviously rejected a policy of unity with the Negro people when its leadership failed to fight for the inclusion of a Negro candidate on the slate of the Citizen's Association, but then permitted Mr. T. D. du Cuenoins, area director of the CIO, to accept a position on the "lily-white" slate that resulted. The city CIO then failed to endorse Mr. Hill who had been forced to run as an independent, but permitted duCuennois to be publicized as the "labor" candidate although not officially endorsing him.

This chauvinist and stupid policy on the part of the leaders of the Richmond labor movement led to du Cuennois' defeat. The Negro candidate, Mr. Hill, was the ninth man out of nine to be elected and Mr. du Cuennois came in tenth, 263 votes behind Mr. Hill.

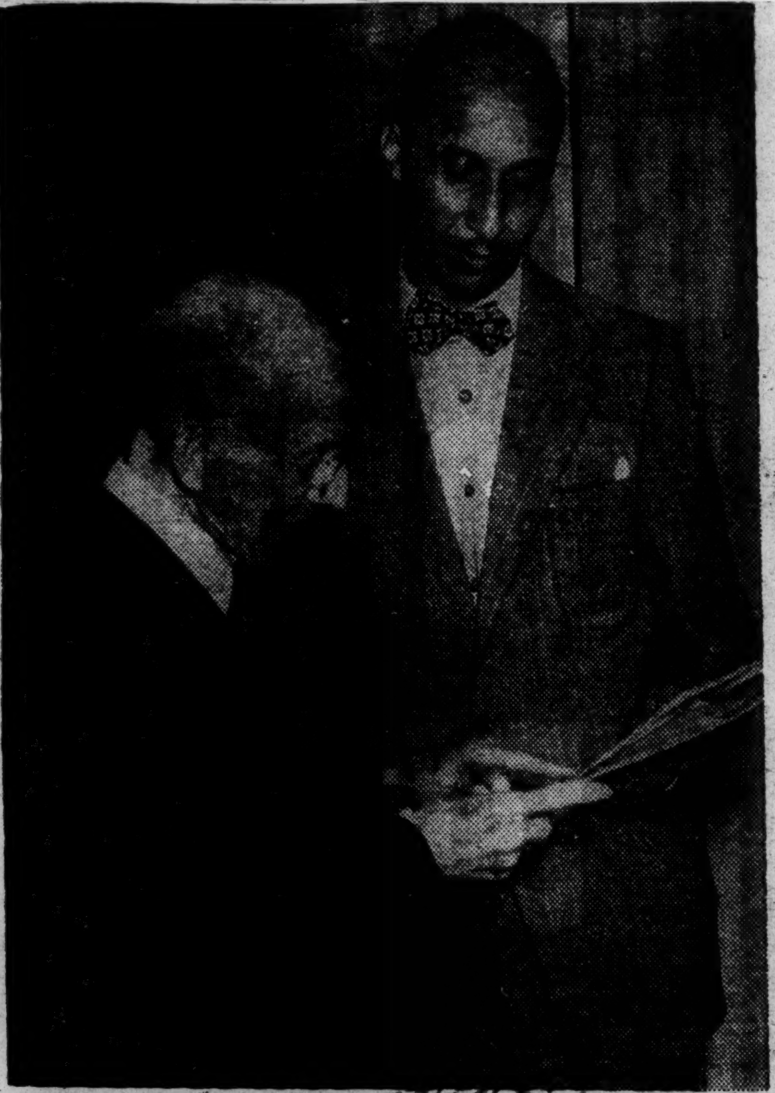
THE ELECTION of Mr. Hill to

Richmond's City Council will certainly give a powerful new push to the campaign for the election of Negroes to office in all parts of the State and proves the tremendous possibilities for important new progressive victories. But such victories will only come if labor and all white progressives actively fight for a policy of Negro-white unity, and give full support to the demands of the Negro people for representation in all public offices by including Negro candidates on all progressive slates and fully backing independent Negro candidates.

Those Negro candidates who have won election also can win wider support among the Negro people and their white allies by conducting a real fight in the interests of all the common people.



HALF A CENTURY APART—Edward R. Carter (left), only Negro now living who has served in the Richmond City Council, and Councilman-elect Oliver W. Hill look over a book listing the names of Negroes who held public office in Virginia during the latter part of the 1880's. Mr. Hill's election means he will be the first Negro member of the Council for more than half a century.

Hill Given Support by Wealthier Whites

By NAT TURNER

Oliver W. Hill, 41-year-old attorney elected to the Richmond City Council last week, holds his position as the result of "solid shot" voting by colored citizens and the righteous indignation of angered white citizens of the City of Richmond.

An analysis (precinct by precinct) of the 28,343 ballots cast in the councilmanic election last week, the city's first city-wide non-partisan contest, indicates that Mr. Hill received a total of 4,095 votes from precincts in which upwards of 96 per cent of the voters are white. 6-19-48

Money Determining Factor

Another fact driven home by the tabulation was that economic status and not education determines largely the amount of racial prejudice a white person has toward colored people. Ninety-five per cent of whites who voted for Mr. Hill live in the more wealthy sections of the city.

Certain precincts in Lee and Clay Wards, which include the West End, Westhampton and the North Side, accounted for nearly all the white votes polled by Mr. Hill. Church Hill, South Side and the southern section of the downtown district gave only a smattering of support.

Typical Precincts Cited

Typical of these polling places where practically all of the voters are white were Precinct 40, 315 Maple Ave. (Westhampton), which gave him 388 votes; No. 51, 3400 Park Ave., 267; No. 39, at 5007 Groove Ave., 237, and No. 55, Chamberlayne and Claremont Aves., 281.

The effect of the solid shot voting for Hill was to give him an early lead when the first precinct reported, an advantage which he held over the other 29 candidates up through the 28th precinct to report. The others then began to catch up and trim his lead until he hit ninth place.

At 11:15 p.m. he still was in ninth place, with T. D. DuCuennois, labor candidate, tenth, his lead over Mr. DuCuennois being 414 votes. He had a total of 8,540. while Mr. DcCuennois had 8,134. "It looks like the entire slate has won," said the RCA leaders via radio.

Afro-American

"Big 40" Fails the Boys

One of the two precincts yet to report was the "big" No. 40 in Westhampton and, obviously, judging by the comments, association leaders felt that the heavy vote from this lily-white precinct would pull Mr. DuCuennois out of the hole. Baltimore, Md.

But when returns from the two tardy precincts were reported, the boys lost for a time their power of speech and didn't fully recover it before the election program went off the air. No. 40 had given Mr. Hill 388 votes, while it gave Mr. DuCuennois 474. 6-19-48

This and the other precinct that had not reported gave Hill a total of 9,097, leaving him still in ninth place with a lead of 263 over DuCennois's total of 8,834. Thus was elected the first colored councilman in Richmond since Reconstruction days.

Richmond Elects a Negro

The Courier

The election last week of Atty. Oliver W. Hill to the City Council of Richmond, Va., is a landmark in the gradual return of Virginia Negroes to political power.

6-19-48

Last year Attorney Hill failed by only 190 votes to win the Democratic nomination to the Virginia House of Delegates, but this time he succeeded in gaining 9,097 votes to win a seat on the Richmond governing body of nine members.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Thus, Attorney Hill becomes the second Virginia Negro within the year to win a seat on a local governing body, the other successful candidate having been elected to the County Board of Supervisors of Nansemond County.

While his election is a tribute to the enterprise and loyalty of the qualified colored voters of his district, it is obvious that a whole lot of white people also voted for him, which is even more significant.

This is another indication of a new day dawning in the South, and an augury of what is sure to happen more frequently in the future in many parts of the South.

The charge of ignorance, incompetence and unreadiness leveled against Negro candidates in the period of Reconstruction and afterward cannot be made today because these young Negroes running for high office now are well trained, politically alert and capable of measuring up to the highest standards of public service.

Men like Attorney Hill are not simply a credit to their race but also to their communities and to the country.

The people of Richmond, colored and white, are to be commended for making such an excellent choice.

RICHMOND, Va. — Oliver W. Hill, prominent local attorney, was installed along with eight other members of Richmond's new City Council, in simple ceremonies on the steps of the City Hall Tuesday morning.

MR. HILL

Mr. Hill, who was elected to the post in last June's Councilmanic race, became the first member of his race to officially take a seat in the City Council of Richmond in about 60 years.

In the June elections Mr. Hill, running as an independent, polled 5,407 votes to win seventh place in the nine-man race for the Council. He defeated T. D. duCuenois, ninth candidate on the Citizens Association nine man slate.

ELECTED FOR TWO YEARS

Under the system effective Tuesday, Mr. Hill will be a part of a council of nine, elected for two years to run the city of Richmond. The councilmen receive $100 a year for their services to the city.

The inaugural ceremonies, arranged by a citizen's committee, consisted of brief speech-making and introduction of the new Council members.

Many of the local radio stations carried the ceremonies as

WALLACE'S POLICY ATTACKED BY ADA

The Times

New York, N.Y.

Offshoot of Old National PAC Says Candidate Adheres to Communist 'Line'

Tues.

4-27-48

34D

By CLAYTON KNOWLES

WASHINGTON, April 26—Americans for Democratic Action, an anti-Communist offshoot of the old National Citizens Political Action Committee, today attacked Henry Wallace's adherence to the Communist "line" in a thirty-four-page analysis of the first three months of his campaign for the Presidency.

In underscoring what it terms "the shifts and fallacies" of Mr. Wallace's record to date, the ADA statement takes into account his statements on Czechoslovakia, Great Britain, defense, civil liberties, labor and other subjects. Assailing this record, the ADA again crossed swords with the Progressive Citizens of America, the other derivative of the old National Citizens PAC, which is sponsor of the third party organization.

Noting that Mr. Wallace already has made more than twenty-six major speeches in nine states to audiences in excess of 75,000 persons, the ADA said that the analysis it made was necessary at this time because the candidate "will have conducted the equivalent of nearly two full Presidential campaigns by the time the major parties and the third party hold their conventions." 4-27-48

The ADA stated that, under these circumstances, it was "quite natural that only Wallace's major pronouncements will be widely reported," then added that another serious difficulty "relates to the increased unpredictability of the Wallace position as his campaign gears itself more and more closely to the fluctuations of Soviet policy."

"Wallace makes 'tough' statements which are apparently prepared for him by the well-disciplined operatives around him," the ADA'S analysis continued. "After the statements have been reported in the press and elsewhere, Wallace is apt to qualify, evade or 'explain' them in such a way as to make it virtually impossible to determine which position is really his own."

Duclos Put in Picture

The Times

The very foundation of the third party the ADA stated, dates back to the statement of Jacques Duclos, the French Communist leader, on the role of the Communist party in the United States. It pointed out that M. Duclos, in undermining Earl Browder, quoted "generously and perhaps significantly" from Mr. Wallace himself.

The analysis recalled that Mr. Wallace, in his first analysis of the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia, indicated that Russia was retaliating against United States imperialism. After being chided in the Daily Worker for this statement, it observed that Mr. Wallace accused Laurence A. Steinhardt, the United States Ambassador, of having precipitated the revolt by supporting an abortive "rightist coup."

Further, the ADA's analysis accused Mr. Wallace of making a "spectacular about-face" in his view of British foreign policy on his visit to England in 1947. It said he first charged Britain with pursuing an imperialistic cause which it would be folly for this country to follow, only to switch and charge that the United States was fathering "dollar imperialism." New York, N.Y.

In the matter of defense, the ADA asserted that Mr. Wallace refused to support either universal training or the draft, yet suggested an Army of 1,000,000 men.

The whole third party strategy, the ADA contihued, was to "blackmail progressives into supporting Soviet foreign policy" or to "punish at the polls those progressive candidates who do not come to terms with the Wallace forces."

Noting that Mr. Wallace had devoted many words to the subject of civil liberties, the ADA quoted the official organ of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People as saying that: "Under his secretaryship the Department of Commerce was more than ordinarily ridden with humiliating separation of workers because of color and limitation of promotion for the same reason." The same publication said that Mr. Wallace "dodged speaking before conventions of the NAACP." Tues. 4-27-48

Communist Record in South Is Old and Honorable One

By Sam Hall

Chairman, Communist Party of Alabama

The Worker

A DESPERATE mother in Chattanooga, Tenn., some 15 years ago turned wildly for help. Her son—really just a child—along with eight other lads, had been given what passed for a trial and sentenced to death in Scottsboro, Ala. This mother went to her employer, a white man. He couldn't help. But he told her, "I don't want to have anything to do with them, but if I were in your shoes, I'd ask the Communists to help me."

June 11-21-48

Thus 15 years ago the Communists in the South had established, even before Scottsboro, a reputation for fighting for full justice for the Negro people and for the working class, Negro and white.

What happened when the Communists took a leading role in fighting against the frame-up of the nine young Negro boys at Scottsboro was heard around the world. The lives of all nine were saved.

New York N.Y.

THIS UNDERLINES one aspect of what it means to the South when the Justice Department indicts and brings to trial the 12 national leaders of the Communist Party on a frame-up. These are the men that Tom Clark accuses of organizing a Party that advocates the use of force and violence to overthrow our government. These political tools of the big business crowd are trying to outlaw the Communist Party.

This means to the South, the party that, over the years since it was organized, has fought for full democratic rights not only for the Negro people but for all of the working people of the South. This attempt at outlawing the Communist Party is an attempt to smash the fight for ending the oppression of the Negro people in the South and overcoming the semi-colonial status that the Wall Street crowd has imposed on all the people of the South.

THAT BRINGS US around to another aspect of this frame-up. Every worker knows that the Communists played a major and heroic role in organizing the big industries in the South during the thirties. Communists braved some of the toughest company-dominated towns in the South to make a breakthrough for the CIO organizing drive.

Even before that, Communists rallied the unemployed masses in the South to fight for relief and for unemployed insurance. It was the Communists who gave leadership to these starving unemployed workers, Negro and white, in the great demonstrations in such cities as Houston and Atlanta and Birmingham in the early thirties.

If the big business crowd can outlaw the Communist Party they can smash the trade union movement and they can move toward shifting all the burden of the coming depression (or economic crisis) upon the backs of the working people. This time they want the unemployed to be without fighting leaders.

Or take the fight for the right to vote for all southern working people. The Communists were the first to raise the demand for the repeal of the polltax and for fair registration laws and practices. The Wall Street crowd and their junior partners, the plantation landlords, want to stop cold the growing fight for full voting democracy in the South. They aim at the Communists as the first major step in this fight.

THE ATTEMPT to outlaw the Communist Party in the coming trial of the 12 national leaders of the Communist Party is not just aimed at this political party, as undemocratic as that is. Just as Hitler in Germany outlawed the Communists as the FIRST STEP in his drive against all the rights of the German people; so too the attempt to outlaw the Communist Party of the United States is a first step in taking away the rights of labor, the Negro people and all others who oppose Wall Street's plans for profiteering, world plunder and World War III.

What gall these big business stooges have! They accuse the Communist Party of advocating force and violence, when day in and day out the Communists in the South are struggling against the force and violence used against the Negro people and against the workers generally.

WHEN IN A PERIOD of six weeks nine Negroes were shot and killed by members of Commissioner "Bull" Connor's police force in Birmingham, it was the Communists who spoke out against this brutality along with wide groups of citizens. Connor chose to honor the Communist Party by saying that the fight against the police shootings of Negro citizens was a Communist plot. Is this the kind of plots for which the United States Steel bosses of Birmingham (and the Federal Government) are moving against the Communist Party?

Two of the 12 indicted leaders of our Party are from the South. Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., a fighting young Negro attorney of Atlanta, Ga., joined the Communist Party during the Scottsboro and Angelo Herndon civil liberties fights. Today he is a member of the city council of New York City, elected twice on the Communist ticket. Henry Winston, a Negro born in Mississippi, who came up through the youth movement's fight for the people's needs, is today the national organizational secretary of our Party.

All of this together is why the people of the South must write and wire President Truman, demanding that this frame-up against the Communists be dropped!

Walter White

The Defender

A very vigorous campaign is being waged to prevent the deportation to the West Indies of Claudia Jones and Ferdinand Smith, alleged to be members of the Communist Party. Action of the Department of Justice in deportating them is unquestionably stupid. Miss Jones has lived in the United States 23 or her 31 years.

Ferdinand Smith, Secretary of the National Maritime Union, has also lived the greater part of his life in New York. There is no other crime against them except that they are aliens and have been active in the communist Party. At least, to date, it is no crime to belong to the Communist Party.

COUNSEL OF WISER

For a variety of reasons, I hope that the counsel of wiser heads will be listened to by Congress to the end that the Communist Party will not be outlawed. If the purpose of the party is to overthrow the American Government, there are ample laws already on the statute books to arrest, try and punish persons for such treasonable action.

Chicago Ill

Arresting and deporting Miss Jones and Mr. Smith is downright silly unless the Department of Justice has evidence to demonstrate that either, as individuals or as alleged members of the Communists Party, is guilty of crimes against United States Government.

But equally silly is the position of individuals like Miss Jones and Mr. Smith for not taking out citizenship papers if, as has been evidenced by the length and permanence of their residence in the United States, they intended to make their homes here. They knew, or certainly should have known, the risks and penalties involved in joining and working in radical movements. They, themselves are responsible for being vulnerable.

As citizens, they would never have been in their present precarious plight. But apparently they and some of the other Communists, or alleged Communists, who have been arrested and deported are well read and informed enough to know that they were laying themselves open to such action as long as they were classified legally and actually as aliens.

LITTLE LATE FOR DEFENSE

It's a little late for their defenders to assert as they do in a leaflet which is before me as I write, that the deportation proceedings are a "fascist drive" and that "Claudia Jones and the other victims of hysteria and persecution" must be defended.

The man or woman who goes out to do battle against intrenched power must be above reproach like Caesar's wife. He must guard against the kind of Achilles' heel, which failure to secure citizenship in a country where one works to change the system of society, that has brought arrest and threatened deportation to Claudia Jones and Ferdinand Smith.

Attorney General Issues New List Of Red, Fascist Subversive Groups In U.S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25—(AP)—Eighty-two organizations were classified as "Communist" Saturday by Attorney Gen. Clark.

He also listed 15 organizations as "Fascist," 22 as "totalitarian" and six as "subversive."

Four groups, he said, have "adopted a policy of advocating or approving the commission of acts of force and violence to deny others their rights under the constitution," and five "seek to alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means."

THE LIST, a reclassification of organizations previously named by the attorney general under a presidential order, was furnished to the loyalty review board for the guidance of all government departments and agencies in the continuing check-up on federal employes' loyalty.

Several of the organizations appeared on more than one list. The Communist Party, Communist Political Association, Socialist Workers Party, Workers Party and Young Communist League were listed on three: As "Communist," "subversive" and as seeking to alter the form of government by unconstitutional means. The German-American Bund appeared on both the "Fascists" and "subversive" lists.

Eliminating duplications, 123 organizations were named.

In ordering the attorney general last November to furnish the lists of such organizations, the president said:

"Membership in an organization is simply one piece of evidence which may or may not be helpful in arriving at a conclusion as to the action which is to be taken in a particular case."

75 Negro Leaders Urge High Court Hear Dennis

Daily Worker

New York New York

Seventy-five Negro leaders from 32 states have called upon the U. S. Supreme Court to "uphold the 14th Amendment and enforce the suffrage right of Negro Americans" by agreeing to hear the appeal of Eugene Dennis from the recent decision of Judge Bennett Champ Clark, Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

In a statement addressed to Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson and all eight Associate Justices, the Negro leaders criticized Judge Clark for calling "fantastic" and sheer nonsense" the contention by Eugene Dennis that "the House Committee on Un-American Activities is illegally constituted because one of its members, John Rankin of Mississippi, sits in Congress in violation of the 14th amendment.

Tues. 11-23-48

Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the Communist Party, was convicted of "contempt" of the Un-American Activities Committee because he refused to appear before the committee when summoned. His defense was based partly upon the contention that Rep. Rankin, a committee member, was "elected" through the disfranchisement of Negro voters in Mississippi and in violation of the 14th amendment to the Constitution.

Pointing out that this case affords the Supreme Court an opportunity to act upon the long-neglected Part Two of the 14th amendment, the Negro leaders assert,

"We submit that the imprisonment of Mr. Dennis for upholding the rights of the Negro people is a travesty of justice, the more bitter at a time when the murderers of Isiah Nixon, who tried to vote in Georgia, go free."

Protests Win Release of Detroit Negro Communist

Daily Worker

Fri 11-12-48

DETROIT, Nov. 11.—Following a visit of 105 Communist Party members to central police headquarters here last night, demanding the release of Negro Communist leader, James E. Jackson, arrested on a trumped charge, Detroit police released Jackson this morning. Since 6:30 a.m. yesterday, when Jackson was arrested on his way to distribute leaflets against speedup at the Ford Rouge plant, hundreds of telephone calls poured into police headquarters demanding his release. From 9 p.m. last night till daylight this morning telegrams poured into the home of Detroit's mayor Eugene van Antwerp.

When Judge John V. Brennan yesterday refused to grant a writ of release or bail, but ordered police to hold Jackson till 10 a.m. Friday, the state committee of the Michigan Communist Party called for a protest delegation of Communists to meet within two hours to visit police headquarters.

A total of 105 Communists marched to police headquarters, went to the fourth floor and demanded Jackson's release. The delegation was led by Nat Ganley, editor of the Michigan Worker; Chris Alston, Negro Communist leader in the UAW, and Jack Gore, party youth organizer. A nervous police inspector sought to placate the crowds, ending up with advising them to send more delegations today. Then Ganley demanded and won the right to send a committee to see Jackson and tell him about the 105 party members downstairs demanding his release.

Today as 10 delegations from different groups prepared to begin an every-hour visit to police commissioner Harry Toy, Jackson was released at 11 a.m.

Jackson will speak at a testimonial banquet this Saturday at 9 p.m. in his honor at Yemans Hall, 3014 Yemans Street.

THE JUNE 2nd delegation to Washington was the greatest single people's action in the nation's capital in modern political history. It registered politically and all over the country.

The insulting letter which Sen. Alexander Wiley, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, sent to the Daily Worker, was not only a vain attempt to browbeat the Daily Worker and to threaten freedom of the press. It was evidence of the fact that government officials in Washington are still smarting under the impact of the June 2 mass action.

Two magnificent peoples lobbies converged upon Washington, one under the leadership of the National Non-Partisan Delegation for the passage of civil rights legislation, and the other under the leadership of the Committee for Democratic Rights against the Mundt-Nixon-Rankin bill. One objective was to let the President and Congress know what the people did not want done; the other was to inform these gentlemen what the people wanted done, and in a hurry. One purpose was negative: to defeat the fascist Mundt bill. The other purpose was positive: to secure passage of the anti-poll tax, anti-lynch and FEPC bills and to eliminate Jim-crow and segregation in the armed forces.

New Yo. Post

The common goal of both was to defend and extend the civil liberties of the American people. The battle was centered upon the Senate Judiciary Committee which is attempting to steamroller through the Mundt bill, although it could not even mobilize a quorum for consideration of the anti-lynch bill. The Mundt bill was in its possession for about a week; while anti-lynch bills have been before the Senate for 71 years without passage, and under successive Democratic and Republican-controlled Administrations.

The Worker

Sun. 6-13-48

WHILE the delegations were separate in their sponsorship and business, they merged in their activities and determination. The National Non-Partisan Delegation was the voice of the Negro people organized by about 100 Negro leaders of all political persuasions and from all walks of life. The Committee for Democratic Rights consisted of all those against the Mundt bill—irrespective of race, color, creed or nationality.

Standing together for civil liberties were Republican and Communist, Democrat and Wallace-Taylor New Party adherents, ALP and Townsendites, labor and middle class professionals, Catholic and Protestant, Jew and Gentile, native-born and foreign-born, Negro and white. The unity of this delegation was the living refutation of the base slander that the Communist and other progressive preach hatred, strife and disunity between races, creeds, colors and nationalities. Who preaches such Hitlerism is quite clear.

The action was a double-edged sword. It put the peoples pressure on the Washington bureaucrats to do the will of the majority of American citizens. At the same time, it further exposed the rotten and contemptuous attitude which the President, the Senators and other Washington officials—Republicans and Democrats—have toward the American people.

AMERICA's peace and democracy are on fire, the flames being fed by the coals of fascism and warmongering helped by both Republicans and Democrats. Support for either one of these Wall-Street controlled parties is like pouring gasoline on the flames. The only immediate hope of extinguishing this menacing conflagration is the building of the Wallace-Taylor New Party which will show in plenty millions of votes next November. Such is the experience of 8,000 Americans who were insulted and pushed around by the peanut politicians of both major parties in Washington last June 2.

Just as slavery in 1860 became the issue which saved American democracy, so in 1948 the issue of Negro rights is the dynamic power which can deal shattering blows to Wall Street imperialism and its iniquitous plans. How can a U. S. Senate, which rushes to pass the universally despised Mundt bill, explain its failure to pass the anti-lynch bill for which Negroes and their supporters have been clamoring for 71 years?

The follow-up is of supreme importance. The Independent Non-Partisan Committee, the continuation of the non-partisan delegation is headed by Paul Robeson and Percy Greene of Mississippi, co-chairmen, Estelle Massey Osborne, secretary, and Capt. Hugh Mulzac, treasurer. The battle goes on for the passage of civil rights legislation at this session of Congress, nationally and in the state and localities. Merged with this will be the continuing battle against the Mundt bill or any variation thereof.

June 2nd was the beginning. But the militant, bold and disciplined fighting qualities of the people in Washington—multiplied a thousand-fold—show that the battle can be won.

4 Ex-Reds Call Stevens Party Boss

Four former Communists testified yesterday that Alexander Stevens, now facing deportation to Hungary as an alien ~~Communist~~, was known to them as "J. Peters," key figure in the American Communist Party during the 1930s.

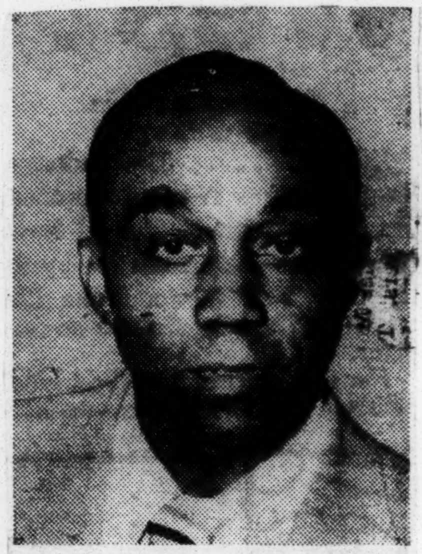
New York, N.Y.

Testifying at a deportation hearing at 70 Columbus Ave., they confirmed in general the testimony given Monday by Whittaker Chambers that Stevens was head of the Communist underground in this country.

One witness, Maurice Malkin, identified Stevens as "the big boss" who organized "action committees" designed to take over the country in time of war or economic crisis.

Denies Party Pays Him

Stevens told newsmen later he had never heard of "these action committees." He also said he was unemployed and denied he was a paid Communist Party official. On advice of his counsel, Carol King, Stevens has refused to participate in the deportation hearing, contending that it is illegal.



George Hewitt
Testifies in spy probe

A second witness, George Hewitt, testified that he heard Stevens teach that the U. S. Government "must be destroyed." Hewitt is a former member of the national committee of the Communist Party. He testified that he renounced communism in 1944.

Andrew Smith, who said he had left the Communist Party in 1935 after 16 years of membership, described Stevens as "the most active man working for the revolution in America."

Wed 9-1-48

The fourth witness, Charles H. White, identified Stevens as representative of the U. S. Communist Party at the Comintern in Moscow.

Three of the witnesses said they had seen Stevens in Moscow in the early 1930s when they were students at the Lenin School.

The hearing continues today.

3 Hunger Strikers Win New Round in Deportation Fight

A new victory was chalked up by three of the five Ellis Island hunger strikers in their fight against deportation when the Department of Justice granted bail for them, it was revealed yesterday by the American Committee for the Protection of the Foreign Born.

This follows the earlier victory of the hunger strikers who won court bail after their heroic hunger strike which aroused nationwide protests.

The three men are Irving Potash, John Williamson and Ferdinand Smith. The other two "strikers," Gerhart Eisler and Charles Doyle, have been denied bail by the Justice Department, but are out on court bail. Applications for Justice Department bail for them will be heard this morning in the District Court, Foley Square.

The Committee released yesterday a letter, dated Oct. 29, to its attorney Carol King from the New York District of the Department's Immigration and Naturalization Service, which stated that Potash, Williamson and Smith were under $3,500 bond each. No reason was offered by W. G. Watkins, Department official, for the denial of bail to the other two.

WON RELEASE

Back in February, all five were detained at Ellis Island without bail, but a five and a half day hunger strike and mass opposition to the policy of Attorney General Tom Clark to hold the men without bail forced their release.

In August, the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals held that the Federal District Court must hear argument on Clerk's arbitrary denial of bail. The case of the five was scheduled to be heard tomorrow morning. The Justice Department's last minute action in granting bail to three, leaves only the Doyle and Eisler cases to be heard.

At a press conference yesterday at the Committee's headquarters, 23 W. 26 St., Abner Green, executive secretary, said, "The granting of bail to Potash, Smith and Williamson is a victory for the American people, who protested and demonstrated against the Justice Department's unconstitutional denial of bail. The Justice Department, however, is trying to cheat the American people of this victory and is still trying to set the undemocratc legal and political basis on which it can hold non-citizens indefinitely without bail pending disposition of deportation proceedings in their cases."

MENACES DEMOCRATIC RIGHTS

Denial of bail to Eisler and Doyle, he said, menaces the democratic rights of all Americans.

Present at the press conference were Miss King, Doyle, Eisler, Williamson and Smith. Potash was ill with the grippe.

Doyle interpreted denial of bail for himself as a "petty and vindictive" attitude on Clark's part. The action places in question all the government's documents in his case, he asserted, and shows that the deportation is "nothing short of a frame-up."

Eisler pointed to the "contradictory facts" in his case where the courts have granted him bail but the Justice Department refuses. He is presently under $23,500 bail

Williamson, labor secretary of the Communist Party, pointed out that as long as Eisler and Doyle are held without bail "we three are not free."

Smith stressed the lack of legal or humanitarian logic that guided the Department in denying bail to Doyle, a father of four small children.

The Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born yesterday appealed for a mass turnout this morning at 10 a. m. in front of the U. S. District Court, Foley Square, where applications for bail for Doyle and Eisler will be heard before Judge Simon H. Rifkind.

Blames Action On Her Fight For Democracy

BY CLAUDIA JONES FOR ANP

For close to 25 years, I have been a legal resident of the United States. I came to this country as a child of eight years of age from Trinidad, British West Indies. For almost 12 of these years, my activity in the Communist movement of the United States has been a matter of record. I have never denied my political beliefs. Yet nine months ago, on Jan 19, I was arrested, charged as an alien believing in force and violence and told that I had suddenly become a "danger" to American democracy.

I consider it important that the American people know why, if I was such a "dangerous alien" 25 years ago, a the tender age of eight, or 12 years ago, or any period therein, I was not apprehended.

CALLED DANGEROUS

I have become "dangerous" to the Truman administration, because, as a Negro woman, I have dared to challenge the civil rights lip-service cry of this reactionary administration which is yet to lift a finger to prosecute the lynchers, the KKK or the anti-Semites.

During the very month of my arrest, a Negro woman student was denied entry into a southern jim-crow college because of the color of her skin. An imprisoned Georgia Negro mother of 14 children, forced to kill because of assault against her dignity, life and property by a southern poll tax minded landlord, was jeopardized by KKK mobs and threats.

Meanwhile the grand kleagle of the KKK bobly marched unmasked through the streets of Georgia, boasting that enforcement of Truman's civil rights proposals would mean that blood would flow on the streets. In over a dozen major northern industrial cities, during this same month, violence and indignities against the persons of Negro citizens were widespread. To all of these and other examples of force and violence against 14 million Negro Americans, the Truman administration uttered not one word of protest or took action to protect civil rights.

As these facts show, it is not I, Claudia Jones, who represent a "danger" to American democracy, but the reactionary Truman administration which is doing everything to ready the American people for war, while it tramples on the civil rights of all Americans using spy scares, frame-ups and deportation arrests, to frighten the American people into silence and non-resistance to its reactionary foreign and domestic policies.

SPURS DIXIECRATS

Even worse, such do-nothing civil rights declarations are serving as the provocation for the Dixiecrats to blatantly trample on the right of franchise of the Negro and white working people of the south. Only yesterday a Negro father of six children was slain for voting in the Georgia primary. It is not accidental that the Dixiecrat presidential candidate recently boasted that the FEPC, which the Truman administration killed "serves the interests of the Communists" and not the millions who suffer job discrimination in private and public industry due to lack of enforcement of the 14th amendment of the constitution.

But American history is rich in example of courageous Negro and white fighters for freedom who treated with contempt those "house" Negroes who betrayed this cause of freedom which resulted in the overthrow of chattel slavery. These miserable renegades to the cause of Negro freedom and democracy will go the same road as will others of their kind who landed in the junkheap of history.

It was in American public and high schools, where in my junior high school graduation year, I received the Theodore Roosevelt Award for Good Citizenship, that I first studied American history and learned the principles of American democracy, and not in any other land. But as do many Negro children who are native Americans, I early learned the second-class citizenship distinctions which American democracy reserves for Negro citizens.

LEARNED TO FIGHT

That I have learned through my Communists beliefs how to fight for these principles, for my own people and for the rights of all working people against reaction, fascism and war, is the crime against me. It is a crime which usually outrages those who believe in the myth that the oppressed revere their oppressors.

That I am not a citizen is no fault of my own. I tried to become a citizen at the age of twenty-three I was prevented from becoming a citizen despite efforts on my part over a period of years. My whole life in the United States, particularly the period of my participation in the Communist movement is one, which through lecturing, writing and fighting in various progressive causes, I met thousands and thousands of Communists and non-Communists who heard me and read my writings. Let them judge rather than this biased hearing my devotion to the democratic principle of American democracy and my right to citizenhip. During the war years I edited a youth magazine which contributed to the morale of our soldiers, including those who served in jim-crow foxholes. To the best of my abilities therefore, I have tried to serve the American people, my own people, and the cause of democracy.

The issue of deportation for political beliefs is not only a serious matter to me but to the American people, because it is an attack on the constitution and the bill of rights. This is the real danger which these persecutions against me and other Communist, labor, and national group leaders seek to obscure.

Face to Face

The Worker

IF THIS COLUMN didn't appear last week, blame the FBI. We were preparing it that fateful Tuesday afternoon when we were rudely interrupted by the American Gestapo. By the time the six of us had been put through the vicious indignities of finger-printing, mugging and what-have-you, including listening to the court clerks read those fantastic indictments, the deadline of the Sunday Worker had passed.

Aug. 8-1-48

We were writing some necessary self-criticism concerning a previous column, which will be carried in an early issue. The criticism was occasioned by letters from readers, and that is heartening because it is incontrovertible proof that the column has readers.

It seems that the Truman Administration and its Gestapo are allergic to self-criticism by Communists. It bases its indictments, for example, on the date that the Communist Party re-established itself in 1945 from the CPA. That, of course, was the most important period of self-criticism in the history of the American Communist movement.

New York, N.Y.

The Truman Administration objected so strenuously to our self-critical correction at the 1945 emergency Communist convention that it reprimanded nine members of the National Board of the Party with arrests. Truman preferred that we should have kept the CPA as Earl Browder wished.

Such is the dramatic proof that self-criticism is one of the strongest and most unique weapons of the Communist Party. When we learn its mastery in true Marxist-Leninist fashion ,it will be even more devastating.

OTHER matters which would have been included in the column were some comments on the two-party system, on how the Republicans and Democratic mountains labored in Philadelphia and brought forth a couple of mice, mainly Dewey and Truman. We confess that a few intended barbs of exposure on Truman were not very complimentary to the gentleman. So maybe J. Edgar Hoover and his bloodhounds would have been unhappy anyway.

But it is just as well. What Truman did in framing up Foster, Dennis, Winston and the rest of us exposed him much more than anything we could have said. We always had our suspicions about the nature of the animal which personifies the Democratic Party: it is not a donkey, it's a jackass (with apologies to the latter).

The big monopolies, which control both major parties, desired these absurd frame-ups of the Communist leadership as a part of Wall Street's drive toward World War III and toward domestic fascism. Although the dollar imperialists seek to dominate the world, they cannot dominate America, neither its workers nor its stubborn democratic population. As we write, the defiant resistance of the movement of labor and the American people at the New Party convention is ringing in our ears, against monopoly, against war and fascism.

Aim Is To Socialize U.S. Says Ben Davis

Amsterdam News

New York N.Y. Sat. 7-31-48

Declaring that the immediate objective of the Communist Party in the United States is the improvement of conditions of the people now and within the framework of our present system, with socialism as its ultimate goal, Benjamin J. Davis, New York City Councilman branded as a 'vicious lie' the charge that he and eleven others indicted in Federal Court here last week have 'conspired to overthrow the United States Government by force and violence.

Davis and Henry Winston, and 10 were indicted last week and held in $5000 bond, after arraignment in Federal Court where all pleaded not guilty. All are members of the high command of the Communist Party. Davis said any member of the Communist Party who advocated the overthrow of the Government by force and violence would be acting in violation of the Communist Party Constitution and would be expelled from the Party.

What Will Happen

The Councilman was asked what would happen of the Communist Party should win an election: if there would be a President and a Congress and a judiciary functioning as the three branches of the Government today are functioning.

He said there was little prospect of the Communists winning an election, but said the first thing it would do if it were to win would be something most revolutionary. The Party would carry out its pledges and promises , something neither the Republican nor the Democratic has ever done.

Davis was equally emphatic in saying that the Communist Party of the United States "does not take its orders from Moscow." He said as a member of the National Council of the Party here, he takes his orders from the membership. The councilman did not say how the Government would acquire the property of private ownership in its program of socializing the economy. He did not say whether the owners would be paid for their holdings or whether properties would be seized through confiscation.

BENJ. DAVIS

Worried Ben Davis Gives Press View On 'Plot' Charges

Amsterdam News

Sat. 7-31-48

It was a solemn and concerned Benjamin J. Davis, who "met the press" last Thursday morning in his uptown office at 200 West 135th Street. Much of the dash and daring which have characterized his previous press conferences were missing. He appeared worried about the two indictments handed down in Federal Court against him and eleven others last week. They face 10 years in prison and fines of $10,000.

Flanked by Attorney William L. Patterson, national secretary of the Civil Rights Congress and Henry Winston, general administrative secretary of the Communist Party, City Councilman Davis opened the conference by ripping into President Truman, who he said, had dealt a "major blow against the rights of Negro people." He branded the action against him and his associates as a frame-up, and said, "It exposes all the Truman demogogy about civil rights. It reveals the Truman demogogy as a smokescreen, concealing a mailed-fist against Negroes and white fighting for the rights of all people."

The councilman said ever since Truman came out for Civil Rights he and other Negroes have begun to lose their rights. He said he and Winston are concrete examples of this development.

Assails Tom Clark

The indictments against Davis, Winston, and the others charged that they had conspired to overthrow the United States government by force and violence. Speaking of the charges, Davis said,, "As far force and violence is concerned, it is a cock-and-bull story, well known to Truman and others in his administration, especially his attorney general, Tom Clark.

"It is a tragic-comedy," he said, "that Clark, who comes from Texas where Negroes are lynched, disfranchised, and made victims of other bigoted action, should talk of force and violence." 7-31-48

Davis said he planned to support Henry A. Wallace in the November elections, pointing out that the "Truman frame-up and the silent support of Dewey leave him no choice but to support Wallace since Wallace has spoke out against the action against the Communist dozen.

Davis said that what happened last week to him and Winston can happen to any person regardless of race, creed, color, political affiliation or national origin. He said West Indians were being subjected to similar abuses and pressure.

Warns of Red-Baiting

Davis said he doesn't consider it accidental that he was arrested at a time when he was directing a campaign against police brutality, and charged that the FBI action was an attempt to intimidate him. He said he expected some action to be taken [illegible] him from the city council.

"It is clear," he declared, "that certain reactionary Democrats and Republicans will seize upon the federal grand jury action to get me out of the city council under the guise of red-baiting.

"It is not a personal question," he continued, "but an attempt to remove the only Negro from the city council of New York." He said he is confident the Negro people will come to his rescue in the effort to block his removal.

Winston concurred with Davis that the indictments are aimed at curbing the militancy of the various groups fighting for the civil rights of the people.

Mobilize Public Opinion

Patterson said he had come here from Chicago to help in the legal fight on behalf of the defendants. He said the fight would not only be waged on legal lines, but steps would be taken to mobilize public opinion against the "terrorism." He said he believes the Negro people will respond as they never had before.

Amsterdam News

Davis made three main points in the interview:

1. If this frame-up can happen to a Negro in the North, it is easy to understand what suffering a Negro must endure in the South.
2. Winston, Patterson and I, far from being intimidated, now are engaged in working to compel the Special Session of Congress to pass Civil Rights legislation to protect minorities, and
3. This frame-up is designed to warn against the advocacy for socialism in America which our Party does. Negroes realize how rotten capitalism is. He said the Communist Party is in business to stay

Ben Davis and Other Communists Deny They Plan To Overthrow United States Government

The Call Kansas City, Mo.
Fri. 7-30-48

NEW YORK, — (NNPA). — Their indictment by a federal grand jury with other topflight Communist party leadership on charges of conspiring to overthrow the United States government, was branded last Thursday by Benjamin J. Davis Jr., city councilman, and Henry Winston, member of the Communist National board, as "examples of the way Negroes are losing their civil rights."

The 12 high-ranking Communists, among whom were Davis and Winston, were charged in an indictment returned on July 20, with "conspiracy to organize as the Communist party of the United States of America, a society . . . of persons who teach and advocate the overthrow and destruction of the government of the United States by force and violence, and knowingly and willfully . . . advocate and teach the duty and necessity of overthrowing and destroying the government of the United States by force and violence . . ." 7-30-48

At a press conference Thursday in Davis' office, Davis declared that he and the other Communist party leaders "have been framed by Truman with the silent support of Governor Dewey."

Asked whether he and Winston take orders "from Moscow," Davis replied "That's a flat lie. As Communists, Winston and I take orders from the membership of our party, and I, as a city councilman, take my orders from the people who elected me."

Asked what the Communist party would do if it ever came into power in this country, Davis asserted that "The most" revolutionary thing we could do would be to keep our promises." He added, "We would fight for peace and for the immediate improvement of the conditions of the working class."

Winston, a veteran of World War II and national organizational secretary of the Communist party, denounced hinted attempts to force Davis' resignation from the city council. "Any such move," Winston predicted, "would be a return to the aldermanic system where the Negro people had no representation."

The Call

Davis said his treatment was "an insult to the dignity of the city council." He expressed appreciation that "most of the councilman are attempting to follow a policy that I am innocent until proven guilty."

Kansas City

"This is an attempt," Davis said, "to prevent any discussion of socialism in America, for the Negro people more than any other section, knows the rottenness of the system they suffer under."

Both Davis and Winston denied the allegation of the indictment. Davis read the section of the Communist party constitution that condemns force and violence, and provides for the expulsion of anyone who advocates them.

Michael J. Quill, ALP member of the Bronx, who recently has been warring with Communists, said that the indictment and arrest of 12 Communist Party leaders "to my mind is a serious mistake. It makes a frontal attack on American civil liberties. It apes the Palmer raids of 1920. It creates in New York the first step in a region of terror similar only to Hitler's Reichstag fire scare. As far as Communist Party leaders are concerned, this action serves only to make martyrs out of harmless crackpots."

New York, N.Y.

Other comments on the arrests follow:

Thurs. 7-22-48

¶ Henry A. Wallace, leader of the Third Party, said yesterday that indictment of the 12 Communist leaders was an attempt to "create fear" among the American people and are "another in a series of diversions created for Americans who are complaining about mounting inflation, the stupid bungling in Berlin, and other problems."

¶ Wallace's campaign manager, C. M. Baldwin, told reporters in Philadelphia that it was a "remarkable coincidence" that the government should make the arrests just as the New Party prepared to open its convention Friday.

Held 'Dangerous'

Thurs.

¶ Arthur Schutzer, executive secretary of the American Labor Party, said the arrests form "a dangerous first step in a plan to destroy civil liberties . . . We recall that the Nazis first smashed the civil rights of Communists as a necessary prelude to the destruction of trade unions, church groups and finally all dissenting groups in Germany."

¶ The CIO Joint Board, Fur Dressers and Dyers Union condemned the arrest as "the most dangerous step taken by the fascist-minded forces in our country to drive us into Fascism and war."

¶ The New York Labor Committee for Wallace and Taylor urged President Truman to intervene and secure withdrawal of the action against the Communist leaders.

Councilmen Assail Davis

The arrest of Benjamin Davis, Communist councilman, on charges of plotting to overthrow the government, drew indignant protest yesterday from a Republican colleague, Councilman Stanley Isaacs of Manhattan.

"I know Ben Davis too well," Isaacs said, "to believe it possible that he would engage in any conspiracy to overthrow his government by force or violence. I was shocked to read of his arrest."

New York, N.Y.

Respects His Sincerity

"I differ from him radically on many important issues, but I do respect his sincerity, and I have faith in his loyalty."

Thurs.

Another Republican councilman, Edward Rager, also of Manhattan, said that Davis "impresses me as a person who sincerely believes communism is the answer to all man's ills. Although I disagree with this, he has a right to his own views, and surely no man should be indicted for that."

Rager said that Davis in the Council had always denied advocating violence, and added that in his opinion, nothing Davis had said on the floor of Council was worthy of his being indicted. He added that "Davis's views usually are diametrically opposed to mine, but I am disturbed about his arrest, without knowing, of course, what evidence the grand jury may have against him."

Councilman Walter G. McGahan, Queens Republican, said he was "considering" whether the Council should exclude Davis from participation while the charges are pending. Other councilmen, who would not be quoted, scoffed at the suggestion and said any such attempt would be blocked at the first move.

Offered 24-Cent Increase on a Take or Leave It Basis, He Tells Rival Union

By WILLIAM R. CONKLIN

Mayor O'Dwyer named four leaders of the Transport Workers Union, CIO, yesterday as principals in a Communist-directed scheme to strike the city's transit lines in preference to accepting pay increases offered by the city.

The Mayor listed Austin Hogan, president of Local 100, Transport Workers Union; Douglas L. MacMahon, international secretary-treasurer of the TWU; John Santo, international director of organization, and Harry Sacher, TWU counsel, as leading figures in the scheme.

Fri. 5-21-48

The Mayor, informed that the plan was under way while he was vacationing in California, rushed back to the city last month and took personal charge in the transit crisis. He said yesterday that that action had balked the plan, which was all set to go through in his absence.

Mr. O'Dwyer's denunciation came during a conference with thirteen leaders of the Civil Service Forum, a rival union on the transit lines. The Forum spokesmen complained that they had not received equal treatment with the TWU on the New York City Transit System and asked the Mayor to adjust their grievances. Charges that the TWU practiced "coercion and intimidation," and maintained a "reign of terror" on the city lines circulated freely during the City Hall conference.

Benjamin Davis, Jr City Councilman Arrested In Red Drive

Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., Communist New York City Councilman, and Henry Winston, educational director in the party, were among the five top party leaders who were indicted here on Tuesday morning and later arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Arrested with the Negro leaders by the FBI were William Z. Foster, national chairman of the party, Eugene Dennis, general secretary, and Jack Stachel, a member of the party's national executive board.

The indictments were handed down earlier in the morning by a special grand jury to Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell, who immediately had ordered the indictments sealed at the request of U. S. Attorney John F. X. McGohey, and that bench warrants be issued for the accused.

It was reported that the men are charged with violating the Smith Act, which was enacted in 1940, and provides penalties up to 10 years' imprisonment, a $10,000 fine, or both.

The Act make it unlawful for any person to "knowingly or wilfully advocate, abet, advise, or teach the duty, necessity, desirability or propriety of overthrowing or destroying any government in the United States by force or violence or by the assassination of any officer of any such government."

New York Age

For the past 11 months the special grand jury has been conducting an investigation in the Communist Party and its leaders here in this country, and after a recess of several weeks, convened here at ten o'clock in the morning.

New York, N.Y.

About ninety minutes later, the jury appeared into the Judge's courtroom, and the U. S. Attorney then announced that certain indictments had been returned and asked that they be sealed and warrants issued.

In the courtroom as well as in the grand jury room were T. Vincent Quinn, of the criminal division of the U. S. Attorney General's office and Thomas J. Donegan, a special assistant to the Attorney General.

ONCE MOSCOW DELEGATE

Native of Hungary Here 25 Years Says He Is Lawyer and Will Fight Deportation

By EDWARD RANZAL

Alexander Stevens, alias J. Peters, was identified yesterday by former party functionaries as the one-time representative of the American Communist party to the Comintern in Moscow.

At a deportation hearing for the alleged Communist underground leader at the Immigration and Naturalization Service, 70 Columbus Avenue, a witness also declared that the 54-year-old alien was the "big boss" of the action committee set up to organize Communists to overthrow the United States Government in time of war or economic crisis.

Mr. Stevens is charged with illegal entry into the United States and being a member of a group advocating the overthrow of the Government by force and violence.

Came Here 25 Years Ago

The Times

Born in Hungary, he came to this country from Czechoslovakia twenty-five years ago. He said he received a law degree from a university in Hungary.

On Monday he was threatened with Congressional contempt proceedings when he refused to answer questions before the House Committee on Un-American Activities. At that hearing he was described by Whittaker Chambers, former Communist party courier and now a senior editor of Time magazine, as a master of international Communist intrigue.

As head of the action committee, Stevens was in charge of disciplinary action against recalcitrant party members. In one intance, a witness yesterday said, he acted as judge and prosecutor at a hearing that resulted in the witness' expulsion from the party.

Maurice Malkin, 47-year-old machinist, who was expelled from the party twice, told Presiding Inspector Ralph Farb that in 1934 he knew Peters as the "big boss" of the action committee, which in time of war or economic crisis would "take the lead in taking over the Government," and that officials, such as Governors and Senator, who resisted would be liquidated.

New York, N.Y.

Mr. Malkin testified that he joined the party in 1919 and was expelled in 1928 after he had been convicted of felonious assault during a Communist-led fur strike. He said he was an organizer and member of the district control commission and first met "Peters" in 1924 when he was assistant manager of The Daily Worker.

He rejoined in 1931, after serving time in prison, and became a field organizer for the International Labor Defense, which he described as a Communist organization. He was also an official of the Trade Union Unity Council, which he said was or[illegible]zed by the Communists to com[illegible] with the American Federation of [illegible]bor.

He said he was expelled in 1937 for holding Trotskyite views after a hearing in which Mr. Stevens acted as judge and prosecutor. He explained that no one leaves the Communist party but is always expelled, and that his expulsion was due to "heretic ideology and counter-revolutionary ideas." 9-1-48

Other Ex-Communists Heard

Three other former party members who testified yesterday said they had attended the Lenin School in Moscow and had met Mr. Stevens there. He held the title, they said, of the party's American representative to the Commintern.

One of these witnesses, Andrew Smith, 64, who came here from Hungary in 1912 as a "radical," described Mr. Stevens as "the most active man in the party working for revolution in America." Mr. Smith said he joined the party in 1919 and left it in 1936, when "I threw my party card across to Russia." 9-1-48 Wed.

The witness declared that he was transferred to Russia in 1932 after he paid the party's executive committee $2,500. He added that he saw Mr. Stevens at the Comintern as the representative of the United States Communist party and that the official signed two letters in connection with the transfer. The texts of the letters were maae public Monday by the House committee.

The last witness of the day was Charles H. White, a Negro, who joined the party in 1930 when he was 17. A year later, with all expenses paid, he was sent to the Lenin School. He said he remained a year and received a stipend of approximately $35 a month. He said he was told to hide his identity while in Russia, so he changed his name to Karl Schumach.

While attendin gthe school, he reported, there was a "revolt" and split in the Anglo-American student body over Moscow's policy on the Negro problem in the United States. Mr. Smith said Mr. Stevens, as United States party representative, called a meeting of the fifty students and threatened disciplinary action and expulsion.

"Peters was the most important person there from the United States and was responsible for anything that went wrong with the student body," he declared.

On the day of his return from Russia in 1932, Mr. Smith recalled, he went to the party's national headquarters in Twelfth Street and was told to see "Peters," who immediately assigned him to lecture before party members in Poughkeepsie.

Wed 9-1-48

In 1933, the party designated Mr. Smith to run for Councilman in Newark, and a year later he was told he was the Communist party candidate for Congress from Harlem. He was defeated each time. He said he quit the party in 1935 by "just walking out and disappearing."

Hewitt Finishes Testimony

George Hewitt, a self-styled Communist for eighteen years until 194, completed yesterday his testimony against Mr. Stevens, which he began on Monday. He identified twenty-two pamphlets as Communist-written and said they preached the violent overthrow of the Government. He charged that Mr. Stevens had written one of the pamphlets, "Manual of Organization."

Mrs. Carol King, Mr. Stevens' attorney,, refused to cross-examine the witnesses on the grounds that the "hearin gwas not properly constituted" and that her client did not wish to participate in any way "in this illegal proceeding."

During a recess the short, florid defendant insisted that his name was Alexander Stevens and that the witnesses were "all confused." Asked to account for the witnesses confusing him with "Peters," he replied, "Ask them."

Mr. Stevens declared that he would fight deoprtation "to the very end," explaining that he had been here twenty-five years. When asked whether he wantd to stay here because he "loves" the country or because he wanted to overthrow its government, he replied: "They have false ideas about me and my work." He would not describe his work.

At the close of the session, in reply to a question, Mr. Stevens said, "I never heard of those action committees. I don't take that story seriously."

He denied emphatically that he was a paid official of the Communist party, said he was unemployed and refused to say for how long he had not worked. He added that he had worked in factories. In explaining how he managed to live, Mr. Stevens pointed out that his wife, whose name he would not disclose, worked. He complained that since his arrest last October he had found it difficult to get a job.

The hearing will continue today.

Red Leader's Deportation Proceeding Is Suspended on Government Motion

Tues. 9-14-48

A deportation proceeding against Mrs. Claudia Vera Scholnick, known as Claudia Jones, was suspended unexpectedly yesterday by the disappearance of one of the Immigration and Naturalization Service's key witnesses who was under subpoena.

The action against Mrs. Scholnick, at the Immigration Service offices, 70 Columbus Avenue, is part of the government's effort to deport subversive aliens. Mrs. Scholnick, thirty-three, was born in the British West Indies. She is a member of the National Committee of the Communist party and freely admits that she is a Communist.

At the outset of the hearing before William Wyrsch, presiding inspector, Mrs. Carol King, attorney for Mrs. Scholnick, asked for an adjournment on two grounds: that she had inadequate notice of the hearing and that it violated the administrative procedure act.

Edward P. Emanuel, examining inspector, opposed Mrs. King's application, and it was denied. Mr. Emanuel then produced a number of witnesses, all employees of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, who testified as to the authenticity of records purporting to show that Mrs. Scholnick was an alien and a Communist.

After the luncheon recess Mr. Emanuel suddenly announced his concurrence in Mrs. King's earlier request for an adjournment! He refused to tell newspaper men why he had changed his tactics. Later W. F. Watkins, district director of the service, told reporters that a "key witness" under subpoena, had failed to appear. He refused to identify the man, but said Federal officers would try to locate him.

Says Declaration Nearly Finished; Activity Urged

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Fri. 8-6-48

NEW YORK -(NNPA)- Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, speaking at a meeting of the Harlem branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the Human Rights Commission of the United Nations had nearly finished a declaration on human rights and a covenant on the subject of being drafted.

34d

Without such a covenant, she declared, the United Nations functions merely as a world forum and any petition dealing with human rights can have no result beyond discussion.

Justice Jane M. Bolin of the Domestic Relations Court also spoke at the meeting.

Mrs. Roosevelt praised the work of Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, research director for the NAACP who earlier has accused the organization of abandoning the world plight of colored people to engage in partisan political activity, in presenting a petition to the United Nations on the rights of colored people in the United States.

She said, however, that at present with no charter of human rights any United Nations petition could be only a gesture.

She urged colored people, as a means of improving their status to take part in civic affairs in ther communities and counseled them not to accept communism as a solution of their problem.

Half-way through her address, made after the capacity audience of 2,500 had responded indifferently to appeals of NAACP officials for contributions, she reminded the gathering that the "NAACP is a good organization but it is only as good as you make it."

Pointing out that the organization needed funds to provide education and enlightment to its members, she said "if we expect things to be done for us in a democracy they will never be done; we must do them ourselves."

Warning against the evils of communism, Mrs Roosevelt said communism might be all right as long as a benevolent dictator was ruling, but the people cannot be sure they will always have a benevolent dictator who will give them their just share of things.

"We must think carefully when people tell us of the advantage of communism," she said., "When people know what they want, feel it in their hearts and are willing to work for it, they will find a way to get it," she added.

Mrs. Roosevelt advised her audience that "If you want to hold power in your hands, if you want to control, you must be an active citizen in your democracy, for that is the only way you can control."

Fri. 8-6-48

She saw hope for the develop ment of Liberia in the plans of E. R. Company for the development of Stettinius, Jr., chairman of the board of the Liberia the natural resources of the West African republic, and contrasted his program with the "negligence of this nation when it first set up Liberia and then left the former slaves to manage on their own." She charged that the United States at that time shirked its responsibility.

Justice Bolin traced the history of the NAACP from its organization in 1909 and said the colored man's knowledge that such an organization would defend him makes him "less amenable" to racial discrimination.

"All of us have a responsibility to interest ourselves in injustices and do something more than talk about them," she declared.

8-6-48

Attorney Jawn Sandfifer, president of the local branch of the NAACP, presided. Justice Bolin introduced Mrs Roosevelt. Charles A. Levy, executive secretary of the local branch, spoke briefly on police brutality in New York.

7 Communist Heads Out on $35,000 Bail

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

Thurs (34D) 7-22-48

By Harry Raymond

Attorney General Tom Clark's hippodromized crack-down on the Communist Party and the civil rights of the American people reached the kleig-lighted stage of a Hollywood premiere yesterday as seven of the 12 indicted Communist leaders were paraded past a battery of eight movie news cameras and thirty newspaper photographers in U. S. Courthouse, Foley Square, to post a total of $35,000 bail. The ceremony took exactly two hours. The Communist leaders went through its fighting every inch of the way. Communist Party chairman William Z. Foster, party secretary Eugene Dennis, City Councilman Benjamin J. Davis, party leaders Henry Winston, John Williamson and Jacob Stached, charged with attempt to "overthrow the U.S. government by force and violence," appeared in Judge Vincent L. Leibell's air conditioned courtroom promptly at 10:30 a.m.

NOT GUILTY

The six defendants, arrested Tuesday afternoon at Communist Party offices, 35 E. 12th St., had pleaded not guilty during arraignment Tuesday night and were released in custody of their attorneys until bonds could be posted yesterday morning.

When Judge Liebell called the court to order, Abraham Unger, attorney for the Communist Party, arose and announced quietly: "My clients are here and the bail is here."

District Attorney John F. X. McGohey reminded the court the bail was $5,000 for each defendant.

Robert W. Dunn, tall, lean political economist and treasurer of the Civil Rights Congress Bail Bond Fund, 205 E. 42nd St., carried with him a large envelope containing $30,000 in U.S. Treasury Bonds. The defendants, the attorney and Dunn were then hustled from office to ofice where the bonds were checked and the bail was finally signed and sealed at 12:30 p.m.

During a one-hour interim the Communist leaders faced the movie cameras, the press photographers and reporters, part of the time under the red hot blazing lights.

Meanwhile, John Gates, 34, editor of the Daily Worker, who learned a warrant had been issued for his arrest as a member of the Communist Party's national board, surrendered voluntarily to David Sweeny, clerk of the U. S. district court. Like his six colleagues who appeared in court before him, Gates denounced the indictment and arrest as "outrageous." He said the indictment was an "obvious maneuver of the Truman administration to salvage its bankrupt policies and make the Communist Party the goat."

GATES RELEASED

Daily Worker

Gates pleaded not guilty during an arraignment before Judge Liebell. He was released on $5,000 bail at 2:40 p. m. after facing the movie camera batteries, the news photographers and the reporters.

Thurs.

Foster, Dennis, Winston, Davis, Williamson and Stachel faced the cameramen and reporters for a full hour in the small broiling hot courthouse pressroom. They sat behind a big table under the strong white movie lights and denounced the frame-up in a fighting mood.

7-22-48

"This frame-up attack on the Communist Party is an attack on the trade unions, the new party and every democratic movement in the United States," declared Foster as the movie cameras ground. "It is one more of the steps being taken by the government and Wall St. to force us into fascism as part of a program of war."

New York N.Y.

RAPS WAR-MAKERS

The lights brightened again and the room got hotter as Dennis faced the movietone cameras and declared:

"If the administration is indicting advocates of force and violence it would have to indict itself; i; would indict, the war makers, advocates of use of the atom bomb and lynching. Our party is the party of American workers fighting in the interest of our country, for peace and against war."

A reporter asked Foster: "Is the Communist Party of the U. S. Moscow controlled?"

"Of course not," Foster replied.

"Do you care to extend that?" the reporter shot back.

"There is nothing to extend," Foster replied with a broad smile. "It's just plain no."

Daily Worker New York N.Y.

The newsmen crowded around Councilman Davis to inquire into his feelings about his arrest. Earlier when Davis arrived at the courthouse an elevator man mistook him for Paul Robeson. The false rumor soon spread through the corridors of the big court building that "Robeson is in court with the Communists."

Thurs. 7-22-48

"My arrest as one of the elected public officials of New York City is an attempt to silence the only voice of the Negro people in the City Council of the largest city in the world," Davis declared.

"My arrest also proves that the Truman talk of civil rights is pure demagogy and that ever since Truman began his-so-called civil rights program I and other Negroes have been losing civil rights in America," Davis continued.

"My record in the City Council is a dramatic proof of the policy and activities of the Communist Party for extension of democracy in our city and our nation. I've introduced into the Council measures requesting the Truman administration to take action against the lynchers of my people. But these measures have been killed in the City Council by a coalition of reactionary Republicans and Democrats.

"I am condent that the people of New York City whom I have the honor to represent will oppose with all their vigor this attempt to disfranchise one of the voices of democracy in our city."

FATHER DIES

David Freedman, one of the attorneys for the Communist leaders, could not appear in court yesterday because he had to attend the funeral of his father, Israel Freedman, 78. The report of the death of his father reached Freedman Tuesday night while he was debating with District Attorney John F. X. McGohey over the indictment and the bail issue.

Daily Worker editor Gates said he had left his office a few minutes before the FBI agents arrived with the warrants for his arrest. He said he stayed at the home of a friend Tuesday night and as soon as he learned of the warrant made arrangements with his attorney to appear in court.

Gates stated the charge that Communists advocated force and violence was based on false information.

Aid Of Civil Rights Congress Pledged Twelve Defendants

Sat. 7-31-48

NEW YORK—(NNPA)—Their indictment by a federal grand jury with other topflight Communist party leadership on charges of conspiring to overthrow the United States Government, was branded last Thursday by Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., City Councilman, and Henry Winston, member of the Communist National Board, as "examples of the way Negroes are losing their civil rights."

The twelve high-ranking Communists, among whom were Davis and Winston, were charged in an indictment returned on July 20 with conspiracy to organize as the Communist party of the United States of America, a society, of persons who teach and advocate the overthrow and destruction of the Government of the United States by force and violence, and knowingly and willfully advocate and teach the duty and necessity of overthrowing and destroying the Government of the United States by force and violence."

PRESS CONFERENCE

At a press conference last Thursday in Mr. Davis' office, Mr. Davis declared that he and the other Communist party leaders "have been framed by Truman with the silent support of Governor Dewey."

Asked whether he and Winston take orders "From Moscow," Davis replied, "That's a flat lie. As Communists, Winston and I take orders from the people who elected me."

Asked what the Communist party would do if it ever came into power in this country, Mr. Davis asserted that "The most revolutionary thing we would do would be to keep our promises." He added, "we would fight for peace and for the immediate improvement of the conditions of the working class."

Sat.

Winston, a veteran of World War II and national organizational secretary of the Communist party, denounced hinted attempts to force Mr. Davis' resignation from the City Council. "Any such move," Winston predicted "would be a return to the aldermanic system where the Negro people had no representation."

Mr. Davis said his treatment was "an insult to the dignity of the City Council." He expressed appreciation that "most of the Councilmen are attempting to follow a policy that I am innocent until proven guilty.

"This is an attempt," Davis said, "to prevent any discussion of socialism in America, for the Negro people more than any other section, knows the rottenness of the system they suffer under."

DENY ALLEGATION

Both Davis and Winston denied the allegation of the indictment. Davis read the section of the Comuist party constitution that condemns force and violence and provides for the expulsion of anyone who advocates them.

"Negroes should understand who advocates force and violence in this country when lynch terror and forced segregation go unchallenged by the Truman Administration or the Dewey-led Republicans.

William L. Patterson, executive secretary of the Civil Rights Congress, who was present at the press conference, said it was "significant" that the arrests of the Communist leaders came on the eve of the third party convention in Philadelphia and "just before the Klanvocation of the Ku Klux Klan at Stone Mountain, Ga.

The Civil Rights Congress will defend the Communist leaders and has posted bond for them.

NATIVE OF ATLANTA

Mr. Davis is the son of the late Benjamin Jefferson Davis, of Atlanta, who was prominent in the affairs of the Grand United Order of Odd Fellows. He was educated at Morehouse College, Amherst, and Harvard Law School. After defending Angelo Herndon in Atlanta on a charge of attempting to incite insurrection, in violation of a slave statute, Davis left Atlanta and settled in New York City.

He was elected to the City Council in 1943 and reelected in 1945. In 1946 he was Communist candidate for Attorney General of New York State. Last February he testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee that Communists of the United States did not advocate force and violence to bring about political change and they would not register as agents of a foreign power.

Released On Bond After Not Guilty Plea

Thurs.
7-22-48

NEW YORK — (SNS) — Twelve high-ranking members of the Communist party, including New York Councilman Ben Davis, Jr., and another Negro, were arrested late Tuesday in indictments returned by a special federal grand jury which has investigated Communist activity for more than a year.

Six of them, including Councilman Davis, a native of Atlanta, were released to their attorney under promise of bond Wednesday on charges of conspiring to overthrow the United States Government.

The other Negro arrested was Henry Winston, member of the national Communist board.

Others placed under arrest were: Carl Winters, chairman of the Community party in Michigan; William Z. Foster, party chairman and several times Communist candidate for President of the United States; John Williamson, member of the Communist national board; Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the Communist party; Jack Stachel, member of the nationa board; Robert Thompson, member of the national board and chairman of the New York State Communist party; John Gates, editor of the Communist Daily Worker since 1947; Irving Potash, manager of the Furriers' Joint council of the New York CIO and member of the Communist national board; Gilbert Green, of Chicago, district chairman; Gus Hall, chairman of the Communist party in Ohio.

OVERTHROW ACCUSATION

The general indictment accuses the defendants of conspiring to organize the Communist party of the United States of America "a society of persons to teach and advocate the destruction and overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence; and the defendants knowingly and wilfully conspired to teach and advocate the duty and necessity of overthrowing the Government of the United States by force."

Daily World

Councilman Davis was arrested in his home. The other New Yorkers were arrested at Communist headquarters, discussing afternoon newspaper stories about the indictments.

Atlanta, Ga.

The six arraigned in New York pleaded not guilty to the charges and were promised "an American trial" by Judge Leibell.

Forum Denies TWU Contention

After a general discussion of union conditions on the city lines with the Forum representatives, the Mayor called City Hall reporters into the conference. Robert Diana of the Forum complained that the TWU contended that it had been solely responsible for winning a 24-cent-an-hour increase for transit workers.

"You complain, and I think justly, that the TWU was given full credit for the raise," the Mayor said. "The truth is that the Civil Service Forum, or any other union, has the absolute right to be heard by the Board of Transportation. In this instance the Forum members were heard, and they contributed just as much as any other union. It is regrettable that anything should happen to deprive the Civil Service Forum of due credit for its contribution to the 24-cent-an-hour increase."

When Mr. Diana complained against the union dues check-off maintained by the TWU, the Mayor said:

The Times

"The check-off is legal and proper, on a voluntary basis. If the union wants it, it must pay for it. The Corporation Counsel says it is legal, and that was stated as a matter of policy a year and a half ago."

New York, N.Y.

The Mayor agreed that the Forum should have the same rights to billboard space in the yards and shops that the TWU gets, and added that it should be made a serious offense for one union to tear down another's billboards. When the Forum members complained of instances of physical volence at the hands of opposing unionists, the Mayor said:

"You give me one case of assault on the subways, with a sworn complaint and witnesses, and I will have it prosecuted just as any other complaint is prosecuted. There should be just as much law on the subway as on the street."

Reverting to the complaints of unequal treatment for Forum members, he added:

5-21-48

"There can be no preference for any union in any part of our employe group. Under Civil Service Law there is no such thing as a sole collective bargaining power, or even collective bargaining as it is generally understood in private enterprise. As long as I am here, that will be enforced."

Plans to Reappoint Sullivan

Whe na Forum leader mentioned a current rumor that Frank X. Sullivan, member of the Board of Transportation, would be replaced by Councilman Michael J. Quill when Mr. Sullivan's term expires next month, the Mayor said:

"This is as good a place as any to announce that I want to reappoint Commissioner Sullivan. Frank desn't know it yet, but that it what I would like to do."

Before the conference broke up about 6 o'clock, the Mayor had asked William Reid, chairman of the Board of Transportation, to obtain an itemized list of grievances from the Forum and make whatever adjustments were needed to achieve their equality with the TWU. After a general handshaking all around, the Forum leaders departed.

The group was led by Robert E. Brady, president of the Forum, and Robert Kirkpatrick, chairman of the Forum's transit committee. The spokesmen said they represented 6,400 transit workers.

Davis Assails Quill

Earlier, the transit issue had provoked a heaated exchange of remarks in the City Council between Councilman Benjamin Davis Jr., Harlem Communist, and Mr. Quill, Bronx American Labor party member who is international president of the TWU. Mr. Quill recently resigned from the left-wing Greater New York Council and the American Labor party, of which he was a founder, on the issue of Communist control.

"Mike is without a party," Mr. Davis gibed. "His own party repudiated him. He's a traitor to the working class and to the progressive movement in this country when he supports a higher subway fare. I say to Mayor O'Dwyer and to the Democratic party, you can have him, we don't want him."

The Times

"Davis always gets very sore at me when I make very truthful statements about the Communist party," Mr. Quill retorted. "He does not hurt my character or veracity, for I know this screwball and all the others who speak for the Communist party. They don't represent anybody."

New York, N.Y.

After the exchange the Council voted 13 to 3 to adopt the 1948-49 expense budget of $1,160,538,857.15, as approved by the Board of Estimate on April 27. After certification by Controller Lazarus Joseph, Mayor O'Dwyer and City Clerk Murray W. Stand, the budget will go into effect on July 1.

Members who voted against the majority report included Mr. Davis, Eugene P. Connolly, Manhattan Laborite, and Edward Rager, Manhattan Republican. Louis P. Goldberg, Brooklyn Liberal, refrained from voting. Councilman Charles E. Keegan, Bronx Democrat, submitted the majority report as chairman of the Council's finance committee.

From Wife Dispatches.

New York, July 20.—Twelve U. S. Communist Party leaders and members were indicted today on charges of advocating the overthrow of the United States Government.

Among them were William Z. Foster, head of the Communist Party of America.

Seven of the group, including General Secretary Eugene V. Dennis, were arrested and arraigned on the charges.

The others, named along with the first seven in secret indictments returned by a special federal grand jury investigating alleged subversive activities, were being sought.

A State Department official said yesterday he thought every representative of a Russian satellite country in the United States was here to spread propaganda. Story is on Page 5.

Party Charges 'Frame-up.'

A formal statement by the Communist Party, released a few minutes before the seven were arraigned, denied the charges and characterized them as a "monstrous frame-up."

The men were arrested on bench warrants under sealed indictments returned by a special grand jury. Several of the defendants are facing deportation proceedings.

Arrested besides Foster and Dennis were:

The five being sought were identified as:

7-21-48

Irving Potash, manager of the C.I.O.-Furriers Joint Council of New York City; John Gates, editor since July, 1947, of the Daily Worker, official organ of the Communist Party in the United States; Robert G. Thompson, chairman of the New York State Communist Party; Gilbert Green, district chairman for the Communist Party at Chicago, and Gus Hall, Cleveland, chairman of the Ohio Communist Party.

Of the six arrested here, all but Councilman Davis were arrested by F.B.I. agents as they sat at Communist headquarters discussing afternoon newspaper stories about the indictments. Davis was arrested later in his home.

The Courier-Journal

Six F.B.I. men walked quietly into the discussion on the ninth floor of Communist headquarters, showed their badges, and merely said, "You are under arrest." Foster an dhis companions did not seem astonished. They got up from their chairs, walked to the elevators with the agents, and at the curb entered two automobiles which took them direct to the Federal Building.

Those arrested in New York were arraigned before Federal Judge Vincent Leibell, who set bail at $5,000 for each.

Amount of the bail was protested vigorously by attorneys for the group. Judge Leibell then granted a request by one of the lawyers for a 30-day period in which to file motions.

Louisville, Ky.

Charges Political Trick

Judge Leibell set August 23 as the deadline for this action and ordered the men held in jail until bail is posted.

Wed.

Shortly before 9 p.m. the six defendants in New York were paroled overnight in the custody of counsel after Leibell had been told it was impossible to post bonds because of the lateness of the hour.

Leibell ordered the men to be in court tomorrow morning to post bail.

7-21-48

Shortly before the men were arraigned, a statement from the Communist Party was made public. It protested the arrest of the men on what the party described as a "monstrous frame-up charge." The statement said the protest has been authorized by Foster and Dennis "a few moments before their arrest."

The statement added:

"The American people can now see to what desperate provocations (President) Truman is driven in an effort to win the election, by hook or crook. As The New York Sun flatly stated, the reported indictment of the Communists is neatly timed to embarrass the new people's party now holding its founding convention in Philadelphia."

That was a reference to Henry Wallace's New Party.

In Philadelphia, C. B. Baldwin, campaign manager for Wallace, said:

"We aren't making any statement on this because it doesn't nvolve the New Party. My only nswer would be 'no comment.'

Conspiracy Is Charged

Wed.

All the defendants immediately ntered pleas of innocent.

Those arrested in New York vere named in one indictment harging them with violating the mith Act by "unlawfully conpiring, together with other perons unknown to the grand jury, to organize as the Communist Party of the United States a society or group to teach and advocate the overthrow of the United States by force and violence."

Six additional indictments, to which the defendants also pleaded innocent, charged the men with holding membership in the Communist Party.

Winters, in Detroit, stood mute at his arraignment on charges of violating the Smith Act.

One defense attorney, Abraham Unger, asking the court to parole the men in their own custody, said the "outrageous character of these indictments should be clear to the court."

"This is actually an outrage perpetrated upon the court," he said. "The data on which these indictments were found should be conclusive to even a layman that no crime is concerned, but rather the political activities of citizens."

At another point, he said:

"It is clear that this case will be fought relentlessly and determinedly by the defendants to vindicate themselves and guard against the sort of thing that is taking place tonight.

Councilmen Hit Davis' Arrest; GOP'er Hints Ouster Move

Daily Worker

New York, N.Y. Thurs 7-22-48

By Michael Singer

The news of Manhattan Communist Councilman Benjamin J. Davis' indictment evoked considerable protest at City Hall yesterday, with rumors afoot that certain reactionary members of the Council were considering moves to oust him from that body.

Manhattan Republican Stanley M. Isaacs, however, emphatically rebuffed such a conspiracy, declaring that he was "shocked" to read of the news. Isaac said that though he differed with Davis "radically on many important issues" there was no question of Davis' loyalty and sincerity.

"I know Ben Davis too well to believe it possible that he would engage in any conspiracy to overthrow his government by force or violence. I differ with him radically on many important issues, but I do respect his sincerity and I have faith in his loyalty," Isaacs declared.

7-22-48 Thurs.

Councilman Eugene P. Connolly, Manhattan Laborite, assailed the arrests as "the most flagrant step yet taken in the direction of fascism in this country." His statement read:

7-22-48 Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

"The shocking arrest of the leaders of the Communist Party indicates clearly how the trumped-up hysteria of the Democratic Republican coalition leads inevitably to the destruction of basic principles of our democracy." 7-22-48

Majority Leader Joseph T. Sharkey expressed the view that Davis was elected as a Communist, is openly known as a Communist and that there was nothing the Council could do at this moment to unseat him. "At least there is nothing we can do until after the federal government has acted," Sharkey asserted. "If the government declares that it is a crime to be a Communist, then we can go to work on him, but until the jury finds him guilty, he is innocent." Daily Worker

When Sharkey added that the Council could remove him if the court found him guilty, a reporter asked whether such a move was being contemplated.

"Why that's silly. The people have spoken. They elected him as a Communist," Sharkey replied. New York, N.Y.

SEEKS OUSTER

The one councilman reached who indicated that he was considering measures to remove Davis was Queens Republican Walter McGahan. Thurs.

The Queens Republican said that he would favor any law or provision which would bar Davis from Council sessions until his case was disposed of. Thurs.

Manhattan Republican Edward Rager strongly upheld Davis' right to speak as a Communist and expressed a personal sense of distaste over the indictment. Calling Davis "my colleague," the usual red-baiting Councilman said that "I do not like to see him indicted."

Rager declared that "Davis has always denied advocating violence. He has impressed me as a person who sincerely believes that communism is the answer to all of man's evils. Although I disagree with him, he has a right to his views." 7-22-48

Rager said that he would "individually protest if he (Davis) is indicted for anything he has said on the floor of the Council. That would be clearly an infringement of freedom of speech. However, I don't know what they have indicted him for."

QUILL RED-BAITS

The repudiated Labor Party Councilman and 10-cent fare spokesman Michael J. Quill called the indictment "a serious mistake." He said that it makes "a frontal attack on American civil liberties" and "apes the Palmer raids of 1920." But Quill could not forego an attack of his own on the Communist leaders. Daily Worker

"As far as the Communist Party leaders are concerned," he said "this action serves only to make martyrs of harmless crackpots."

Ira J. Palestin, Bronx Liberal, issued the following statement:

"I would consider the invoilability of our Constitutional system, providing due process of law, more important than the apparent attractiveness of suspending his membership at this time." This was taken by reporters to mean that while Palestin was purporting to defend Davis' right to his Council seat, he would consider any "legal" action to bar him "attractive."

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Thurs.

The only other Councilman reached was Bronx Democrat Edward Cunningham, who had no comment to make. Most of the other Councilmen were out of town or on vacation. 7-22-48

Benjamin Davis, Jr. City Councilman, Arrested In Red Drive

The Sun

34d

New York, N.Y.

Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., Communist New York City Councilman, and Henry Winston, educational director in the party, were among the five top party leaders who were indicted here on Tuesday morning and later arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Arrested with the Negro leaders by the FBI were William Z. Foster, national chairman of the party; Eugene Dennis, general secretary; and Jack Stachel, a member of the party's national executive board.

The indictments were handed down earlier in the morning by a special grand jury to Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell, who immediately had ordered the indictments sealed at the request of U. S. Attorney John F. X. McGohey, and that bench warrants be issued for the accused. Sat.

It was reported that the men are charged with violating the Smith Act, which was enacted in 1940, and provides penalties up to 10 years' imprisonment, a $10,000 fine, or both. 7-24-48

The Act make it unlawful for any person to "knowingly or willfully advocate, abet, advise, or teach the duty, necessity, desirability or propriety of overthrowing or destroying any government in the United States by force of violence or by the assassination of any officer of any such government."

For the past 11 months the special grand jury has been conducting an investigation in the Communist Party and its leaders here in this country, and after a recess of several weeks, convened here at ten o'clock in the morning.

About ninety minutes later, the jury appeared into the Judge's courtroom, and the U. S. Attorney then announced that certain indictments had been returned and asked that they be sealed and warrants issued.

In the courtroom as well as in the grand jury room were T. Vincent Quinn, of the criminal division of the U. S. Attorney General's office and Thomas J. Donegan, a special assistant to the Attorney General.

Listed among the many national leaders in addition to those already arrested by the FBI and said to be on the "wanted list" of the Government are: John Williamson, administrative secretary and labor director; now battling deportation rulings) Robert Thompson, head of the New York State division; Irving Potash, vice-president of the CIO Fur and Leather Workers, Joint Council also battling deportation proceedings; Gil Green of Illinois; Gus Hall, Ohio; Carl Winter, Michigan; John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker; Alexander Bittleman, and Alexander Trachtenberg. 7-24-48

Right-Wing Slate Swept Into Office by 2 to 1; Expulsions Forecast

Mon. 7-26-48

By Robert A. Bedolis

Communists and Leftists have been voted completely out of controlling positions in the National Maritime Union, losing the powerful waterfront organization as a stronghold for the first time since it was organized in 1926, it was announced Saturday.

As the Honest Ballot Association reported a sweeping victory for Joseph Curran, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations affiliate, and his supporters, a statement conceding defeat was issued by his rivals. They included three of the union's highest officers, who were voted out.

Mr. Curran made it clear that trials and expulsion from the union face those of the N. M. U.'s former office-holders and other members, including "Communist party officials," who have committed "crimes against the membership." He named no one Saturday.

Mr. Curran, who split with the N. M. U.'s Left-wing faction more than two years ago and has been fighting it ever since, was re-elected by a 3 to 1 margin, the Honest Ballot Association announced. Herald Tribune

He and his supporters won every post on the thirty-two-man N. M. U. policy-making National Council, which has previously been controlled 2 to 1 by the Left-wing forces. Victors for N. M. U. secretary, treasurer and three vice-presidencies, all members of the council, are Curran supporters.

Sweeping Curran Victory

George J. Abrams, executive secretary of the Honest Ballot Association's committee on labor elections, said virtually every one of the 131 elective positions in the N. M. U. which was contested was won by members of what has been known as "the Curran rank-and-file caucus." The vote was generally 2 to 1, Mr. Abrams said.

He explained that while some ballots remain to be counted the thorough Right-wing victory is mathematically certain, even if challenged votes are considered void. New York, N.Y.

Mr. Abrams said the official vote count will not be released until a N. M. U. meeting tonight at Manhattan Center, 311 West Thirty-fourth Street, at which officers will be installed. The Honest Ballot Association conducts N. M. U. elections by a stipulation in the union's constitution. Mon.

Mr. Curran indicated he would not bring charges against any former N. M. U. officer or other members until after the installation meeting. He also made it clear that the N. M. U. will withdraw from the Greater New York C. I. O. Council. 7-26-48

Curran Defeats Myers

Mr. Curran, president of the N. M. U. since its founding, defeated Frederick (Blackie) Myers, also one of the union's founders and a vice-president until two years ago. Ferdinand C. Smith, secretary, and another of the union's founders, was defeated by Neil Hanley. Mr. Smith, an alien, is facing deportation on charges of being a Communist and therefore "undesirable." A third of out was Howard McKenzie, a vice-president, defeated by H. B. Warner. Chester Young, a vice-president, was defeated by Adrian Duffy, a Curran man. Jack Lawrenson, an incumbent vice-president, and Hedley Stone, incumbent treasurer, both Curran supporters, were re-elected. Curran supporters wrested control of the key Port of New York N. M. U. offices from Leftist hands.

Although his opponents controlled the National Council, Mr. Curran, with the aid of Mr. Lawrenson and Mr. Stone, had much power, with the fight resulting in many instances in a stalemate which spelled marking time or regression for the N. M. U.

In a victory statement Mr. Curran said: "It will be possible, now that those officials who gave their first allegiance to outside forces instead of the membership have been defeated, for the union to do a real job in giving the membership service on their economic welfare and also for our union to take its place as a militant section of the national C. I. O." "The running fight of the past three years to return our union to the membership has been won."

Referring to the Taft-Hartley

Mon.

law injunction now delaying an N. M. U. strike, he said the union is in a position now to "struggle in unity to retain the gains made by the seamen and to improve their conditions, and will do this."

In a statement in the N. M. U. publication, "The Pilot," defeated officers, including Mr. Smith, Mr. McKenzie and Mr. Young, said they accept the mandate of the membership and "will register on the shipping list and go back to sea." 7-26-48

They pledged their "full support" to the newly elected officers of the union "who carry out in deeds the fight against the shipowners," and to continue "to carry out . . . the democratic and militant traditions of the union."

TOM CLARK'S LIST

Communism did not prove to be a very successful campaign issue for Harold Stassen in Oregon, but Harry Truman apparently still has hopes that it will help revive his failing popularity. Attorney General Tom Clark's new ruling that the Communist Party advocates the overthrow of the government, and the publication of a new list of "subversive" organizations, are the two latest Administration moves to keep the Red scare raging.

New Republic

The Communist Party has never before been judicially held to advocate the "overthrow of the government by violence." It is the business of the courts to determine this basic question, and in his unnecessary decision, the Attorney General is, in effect, usurping a judicial function. In arbitrarily listing 32 more organizations as "subversive," Clark is announcing the Administration's intention to continue its "guilt by association" policy.

President Truman took some of the edge off the announcement of the original list of 90 subversive groups last December by stating that the presence of an organization's name on the Attorney General's list was not conclusive evidence that its members were "disloyal" to the government. Attorney General Clark, by his new ruling, has now made membership in the Communist Party cause for dismissal from federal employment. Tues. 6-7-4

Until the Attorney General's ruling, President Truman's Loyalty Review Board had been, according to its chairman Seth Richardson, "like a ship without an anchor." It had no yardstick or standard for determining the degree of "disloyalty" in questionable cases. But. "since it is clearly shown that the Communist Party is prohibited under the Hatch Act," Richardson says in interpreting Clark's decision, "then any person who is a member of the Communist Party or an organization which assists, aids, or abets the Communist Party is now subject to discharge." Now that the matter of who is and who isn't subversive has been settled, to the satisfaction of the Loyalty Review Board, its members say they "can move more easily."

The second list of "subversive" organizations follows the pattern of the original list almost exactly. The blacklist experts have steered clear of naming any of the left-wing political groups or unions which have been repeatedly labeled "un-American" by the Thomas committee. But the Attorney General has made it clear that he has many more names to add to his list.

Meanwhile, with this urging from the Attorney General, the Loyalty Board can be expected to speed up its procedure, to show much less hesitation in moving for the dismissal of government employees whose loyalty is questioned. It is reasonable to assume that the ratio of one to 1,800 government employees found to be disloyal (FBI figures) will soon rise considerably.

Clark's ruling on the Communist Party will make it more difficult but more necessary than ever to test the constitutionality of the whole Loyalty Board procedure through the courts. The only case now pending to determine the power of the Attorney General to designate groups as subversive, an action brought by the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee against the Attorney General, is in great danger of being dismissed on a motion of the government. New cases will have to be started on the Clark ruling as soon as government employees are fired on the strength of it. 6-7-48

The lawyers who have worked hardest in challenging the "loyalty" system are glad to have this whole question out in the open. The legal fight, they know, will be long-drawn-out and expensive, but the combined efforts of many groups will be solidly behind the contests, and they have no doubt that the Supreme Court, in time, will make it clear that Truman's "loyalty" program is more politics than law.

THE COMMUNIST INDICTMENTS

The Times

The general indictment brought by a federal grand jury against twelve principal Communists is in effect an indictment of the Communist party itself as an allegedly illegal organization. The indictment charges that "from on or about April 1, 1945, and continuously thereafter" these top leaders of the party "unlawfully, willfully and knowingly did conspire with each other, and with divers other persons to the Grand Jurors unknown, to organize as the Communist party of the United States a society, group and assembly of persons who teach and advocate the overthrow and destruction of the Government of the United States by force and violence, and knowingly and willfully to advocate and teach the duty and necessity of overthrowing and destroying the Government of the United States by force and violence." New York, N.Y.

Such activities, if established, would violate the Smith Act of 1940, which made it a criminal offense to advocate the overthrow or destruction of any government (federal, state or local) in the United States by force or violence. The conference report on the enactment of this statute was adopted in the House of Representatives by a vote of 382 to 4 and in the Senate without a roll-call. The measure received the formal approval of President Roosevelt's signature on June 28, 1940.

Since the case is now in court, and since the evidence on which the indictments rest has not been revealed, any comment on the merits of the charges would be not only uninformed but improper. It may be said, however, that there is no excuse for the excited allegation by the National Committee of the Communist party that this is "an American version of the Reichstag fire." It is, on the contrary, a proper procedure under existing law. A statute defining certain illegal acts has been in effect since 1940. A federal grand jury, considering evidence submitted to it from time to time over a period of more than a year, believes that this evidence demonstrates a violation of the law in question. It is both proper and essential that the merits of this evidence should be submitted to the courts. The defendants are assured not only of a fair trial but of an opportunity, if they choose to make use of it, to test the constitutionality of the law itself. 7-22-48

Davis Asks Council To Demand Senate OK Civil Rights Bill

Daily Worker

Wed. 6-9-48

New York

The City Council yesterday referred to its State Legislation Committee a resolution by Manhattan Communist Benjamin J. Davis urging the Council to call on the Senate "to act upon anti-polltax, anti-lynch and FEPC legislation before this session adjourns." Davis said the legislation was vital "to guarantee the basic civil rights of American democracy to all people." His proposal that the resolution be acted upon immediately was denied by Majority Leader Joseph P. Sharkey.

Another important resolution which was denied immediate consideration was one by Manhattan Laborite Eugene P. Connolly calling for a boycott of purchases of all British goods and equipment by the city administration. The resolution also urged the Council to appeal to the people "likewise to boycott British goods."

Connolly's resolution denounces British aid to the Arab nations and proposed a permanent boycott until the British ceased all "active and passive support" to the aggressors against Israel. 6-9-48

The Council defeated a motion by Manhattan Republican Stanley M. Isaacs which would have referred the proposed pinball legislation back to the Welfare Committee for clarification. The legislation which bans pinball machines was held over for another week.

The Council also delayed a vote on the double business tax legislation which was approved by the Finance Committee and sent to the Council floor for action. However, because of minor technicalities in the language of the bill, it was held over for a vote next week.

Manhattan Republican Councilman Edward Rager introduced a resolution urging the Council to censure Andrew G. Clauson and William Jansen, President of the Board of Education and Superintendent of Schools respectively, for their attack on his resolution of June 1 which calls for an investigation of the schools and a special commission by O'Dwyer to probe the loyalty of school teachers. The resolution was referred to the City Affairs Committee.

New York, July 21 (UP)—A conscience-stricken beautiful blond leader of an intricate spy ring gave the F.B.I. three years ago the tip that resulted in the indictment of 12 Communist leaders. The New York World-Telegram reported today. Thurs.

The espionage ring included top Government officials, the newspaper said in a coyprigh story. 7-22-48

The woman and her associates gave the Soviet Union the first plans of the B-29, complete data on the plastic explosive R-D-X, almost daily figures on plane production, and statistics on other war materials, The World-Telegram reported.

Implicates 50 U. S. Employees.

The woman was not identified, but was described as an attractive New Englander, the graduate of a select New England college. She told the F.B.I. she had been a member of the Communist Party for years and had served in wartime as an official of a purported relief organization, the newspaper said. She was said to be employed now as a clerk in New York City.

She told the F.B.I., The World-Telegram said, that more than 50 Government employees, one a personal adviser to President Roosevelt, supplied information to her for the Soviet Union. All were Communist Party members and were not paid for their espionage, the newspaper said.

The 12 Communist leaders indicted yesterday were not charged with espionage, but with violation of the Smith Act, which prohibits activities aimed at the overthrow of the Government by force. 7-22-48

Claims Employees Were Fired.

United States Attorney John F. X. McGohey told a press conference today the indictments of the 12 had "nothing to do with a blonde."

"I don't know anything about a blonde, nor any other woman," he said. The Courier-Journal

He said the indictments handed up here had nothing to do with a top-secret investigation being conducted by two special assistant attorneys general from Washington.

"It is believed that the F.B.I. does not have enough proof to indict (members of the spy ring), but it is known that the bureau is remaining relentlessly on the track," The World-Telegram story said. It added that nearly all the Government officials involved had been dismissed because of F.B.I. pressure.

Six of the 12 men indicted were released in Federal Court today after providing bail supplied by the Civil Rights Congress. They all pleaded innocent when indicted and Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell set August 23 for the hearing.

Six of twelve high-ranking Communists named in indictments handed up before noon yesterday by a special Federal grand jury that has investigated Communist activity for more than a year were held here in $5,000 bail each last night on charges of conspiring to overthrow the United States Government. The others, some of them from other cities, were sought by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

After the six men had been detained about two and one-half hours they were released at 10 P. M. in the custody of Abraham Unger, one of their lawyers. He pleaded with Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell that the men had made every honest effort to raise the required bond, but could not produce it until morning. The court agreed that full effort had been made, and ordered Mr. Unger to be back in court this morning at 10:30 o'clock with the bonds.

The Associated Press reported that Carl Winters was arrested in Detroit, at about the same time that the six were taken in New York. His bail was set at $10,000 and hearing was fixed for two weeks from yesterday.

The six taken in New York included William Z. Foster, party chairman and several times Communist candidate for President of the United States; Benjamin Davis, New York City Councilman; several members of the Communist National Board and the editor of The Daily Worker. Each of the six was held on two indictments. Hearing date was set for Aug. 23. The six taken here were detained in the Federal Court House in Foley Square, pending arrival of bond.

Wed.

Carl Winter, Detroit, chairman of the Michigan State unit of the Communist party.

Gus Hall, chairman of the Communist party in Ohio.

Several of these men are aliens, among them Williamson, Stachel and Potash.

The indictments, which had been sealed when they were handed up before noon, in Judge Vincent L. Leibell's court, were opened at the arraignment here. A blanket indictment accused all twelve of the men named of conspriacy to violate the so-called Smith Act, a wartime measure passed in June, 1940. Each of the men was indicted individually for specific violation of the act.

Indictment Charges Conspiracy

The general indictment set forth:

"The defendants from on or about April 1, 1945, up to the present day conspired to organize [illegible] Communist party of the United States of America a society of persons to teach and advocate the destruction and overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence; and that the defendants knewingly and wilfully conspired to teach and advocate the duty and necessity of overthrowing and destroying the Government of the United States by force and violence."

The language of the individual indictments was much the same. It accused all twelve of the men named of teaching and encouraging others "to be, become, a member of, or affiliate with any such [Communist] society, group, or assembly of persons, knowihg the purpose thereof."

United States Attorney John F. X. McGohey had withheld the nature of the charges, and the names of the indicted, until the six arrested in New York were brought before Judge Leibell for arraignment at 7:45 P. M. Of the six arrested here, all but Councilman Davis were arrested by FBI agents as they sat at Communist headquarters, 35 East Twelfth Street, discussing afternoon newspaper stories about the indictments. Councilman Davis was arrested later in his home.

Six FBI men walked quietly into the discussion on the ninth floor of Communist headquarters, showed their badges and merely said, "You are under arrest." Gray-faced Foster and his companions did not seem particularly astonished. They got up from their chairs, walked to the elevators with the Federal agents, and at the curb entered two automobiles that took them directly to the Federal Building.

Communists Denounce Truman

The Times

The arrest was anticipated. Hardly had the five party leaders started for the door with the FBI men before the press relations office of the National Committee of the Communist party handed out a two-page statement. This denounced the indictments as a "Truman effort to win the election, by hook or crook," described them as "this American version of the Reichstag Fire" and caalled it "the domestic counterpart of the criminal bipartisan attempts to turn the war in Berlin from cold to hot."

"Terrified of the growing support for the Wallace-Taylor ticket" the statement saaid, "the Democratic high command is seeking to brand the new party as 'criminal' because among the opponents of Wall Street's two old parties and their candidates are the Communists, who also join with all other progressives in supporting the new peeople's anti-war party."

The indictments were declared to be "neatly timed to embarrass" the New party, which is holding its convention in Philadelphia Friday and Saturday.

Another part of the statement said:

New York, N.Y.

"All that is known of the history of the blue ribbon grand jury which reportedly returned these indictments confirms our charge. For a full year the Justice Department has apparently been planting in the ultra-reactionary press tales about its alleged investigation of a 'gigantic spy plot.'

"Clearly the purpose of these inspired newspaper accounts was to bring pressure on the grand jury, while at the same time whipping up an atmosphere of public hysteria.

Wed.

"In the Congress, the courts, and above all before the bar of public opinion we Communists will press our case against the pro-Fascists and war mongers in the GOP and in the Truman Administration."

7-21-48

All six arraigned here pleaded not guilty to the charges. Abraham Unger, counsel for the group, asked the court to "recognize the extraordinary nature of these proceedings" and to deny Mr. McGohey's request for $5,000 bail in each case. He pleaded that none of the men would leave the jurisdiction.

Judge Leibell assured Mr. Unger that the men would "have an American trial," but pointed out that the charges against them were grave.

"Yes," he said, "They shall have an American trial."

"I hope so, your Honor," the lawyer said.

"Don't worry about that; they will."

The court held that if Mr. McGohey had asked that bail be set at $50,000, there might be reason to argue against it. He thought $5,000 a nominal amount, and after a half-hour's discussion it was fixed at that. The court would not consider a motion by Mr. Unger that the six be paroled in their own custody. Throughout these procedings, as through the reading of the indictment, the defendants were silent and grim-lipped.

The special grand jury, which has sat intermittently since mid-June, 1947, handed up the indictments before noon to Judge Vincent L. Leibell.

No presentment was offered in open court. United States Attorney John F. X. McGohey asked at once that the indictments—there appeared to be between ten to fifteen, in as many envelopes—be sealed, and they were, by District Court Clerk David Sweeney.

Mr. McGohey then asked the court for bench warrants for the persons named in the true bills. Judge Leibell ordered the warrants drawn. They were turned over to agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Before the arrests, Mr. McGohey would not disclose the charges in the true bills. He would not tell how individuals were named in them, nor the total number of indictments. None of these details, he insisted, could come out until the persons named stand to the bar for arraignment.

The prosecutor's tight-lipped attitude stirred considerable speculation as to the nature of the charges. The most general belief seemed to be that the persons named might be accused of violation of the Smith Alien Registration Act, a wartime measure passed in June, 1940. It applies to persons who:

Wed.

"Knowingly or wilfully advocate, abet, advise, or teach the duty, necessity, desirability, or propriety of overthrowing or destroying any government in the United States by force or violence . . ."

The special grand jury's foreman is Edmund L. Cocks of Scarsdale in Westchester County. The jury was made up of twenty-three members, two of them women. The nature of its investigation was guarded with extraordinary caution. At no time up to last night did Attorney General Tom Clark or Mr. McGohey so much as hint, officially, what it sought.

17 Jurors in Court Room

The jury last met about a month ago. At 10:30 A. M. yesterday seventeen of its members—a quorum—convened in the jury's fourteenth-floor rooms in the Federal Building in Foley Square. A littel more than an hour later the seventeen went into Judge Leibell's court.

In the court room were Mr. McGohey, his assistant, Edward P. Rigney, and T. Vincent Quinn and Thomas J. Donegan, special assistants to the Attorney General, who it was unofficially reported, have appeared before the grand jury many times. Mr. Quinn is a former United States attorney for the Eastern District of New York. Mr. Donegan, now chief of the criminal division of the Department of Justice, was agent in charge of the FBI office in New York. Both have an extensive knowledge of Red operations.

When Judge Leibell mounted to the bench, Mr. McGohey said: "Your Honor, the grand jury has some indictments to hand up to you. I ask that these indictments be sealed, and that bench warrants be issued."

The Times New York N.Y.

"It is so ordered," the Court responded.

Mr. Cocks passed a large manila envelope to the court clerk. Within this were a number of smaller envelopes, each containing a true bill. The clerk sealed them.

"Has this jury completed its work?" Judge Leibell asked.

"No, Your Honor," said Mr. McGohey, and I ask at this time that this jury be allowed to recess, subject to call."

7-21-48

The Court consented.

Leaving the chamber, the grand jurors all stopped to shake hands with Mr. Donegan and with Mr. Quinn. It was assumed from this that the true bills were probably based on evidence submitted by Mr. Donegan and Mr. Quinn, but Mr. McGohey, in a subsequent interview, disclosed that the indictments were based on evidence submitted by him.

Wed.

There were rumors to the effect that the Donegan and Quinn evidence had to do with espionage, but that the jury has not completed its inquiry into that phase of its work. Mr. Quinn, incidentally, intends to resign from Government work next month to enter private practice.

Justice Officials Silent

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, July 20—Officials of the Department of Justice either professed ignorance of the contents of the indictments handed down by a Federal grand jury in New York, or declined to discuss them, today.

Wed.

The special grand jury was created about a year ago by order of Attorney General Tom C. Clark, and presumably some of its material was initiated by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. However, the committee experts said they did not know what the scope of the inquiry had been or who might be concerned in the sealed indictments.

It was said here that the investigating body would not be compelled to confine its inquiry to events occurring in the vicinity of New York, but, on the other hand, could look into alleged espionage ramifying into various parts of the nation.

While officials disclosed nothing about the grand jury proceedings, it seems established that they have been in touch with the inquiry as it proceeded.

One of Mr. McGohey's assistants told reporters after arraignment, that conviction for violation of the Smith Act carries a maximum penalty of ten years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine, on each count.

A Story the Detroit Press Didn't Headline

Daily Worker

By William Allan New York, N. Y. Wed. 5-5-48

DETROIT, May 4.—There were no roaring headlines in the Detroit press today about Nelson Davis, Negro Ford local leader and prominent Communist, because Nelson was standing in front of Gate 4 at Ford River Rouge plant getting hundreds of workers to sign petitions to put the Wallace for President Progressive Party on the ballot.

A week before at the same time, Davis was also getting signatures on the Wallace petitions when he was arrested purportedly in connection with the shooting of UAW leader Walter Reuther, and taken to police headquarters and held for 48 hours. He was released two days later after a judge told Prosecutor James McNally that he could no longer allow Davis to be held without bail because McNally had failed to produce evidence that the Ford leader was involved in any conspiracy to shoot Reuther.

SIGN PETITIONS

Hundreds of workers came to Davis today at Gate 4, signed the petition despite the watchful eyes of plant police, then shook hands with Davis and went into work.

The danger of frameups of progressive unionists by law enforcement agencies here is emphasized by evidence that has come to your correspondent that a specially assigned Detroit News reporter has been participating with County Prosecutor James McNally in grilling unionists brought in by the police department.

Out on Bail, She Signs 57 New CP Members

By Arnold Sroog

Claudia Jones, out on bail on a deportation charge, personally signed up 57 new Communist Party members in her month's tour of the West Coast, Miss Jones told the Daily Worker yesterday. This figure, she stressed, does not include those brought into the Party at her meetings by other people.

On her tour, which coincided with the powerful campaign against the Mundt police state bill, Miss Jones found "deep alarm among all sections of the people and a desire to fight against infringements of civil liberties."

New York, N.Y.,

One of the most heartening aspects of the tour, she added, was that "you could literally feel the democratic upsurge of the people."

"People were not afraid—they came right up to the front of the hall and signed up for the Party," she said. Fri. 6-4-48

Her tour took her to Seattle and Tacoma, Wash.; Portland, Ore.; San Francisco, Oakland, Contra Costa, Los Angeles and San Diego, Calif.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Salt Lake City, Utah, and Denver, Colo. She spoke to more than 7,500 people at public meetings in these cities.

In Portland, Miss Jones spoke to a meeting of 300 at Norse Hall, the day after Republican hopeful Harold Stassen called for outlawing the Party. As a result of Stassen's incitements, a rock was thrown through a window of the hall while the meeting was in progress.

At the conclusion of the meeting a middle-aged, stout Negro woman came up to the platform and presented Miss Jones with a souvenir—the rock. Daily Worker

"This is a souvenir from Oregon," she said, "but it is not how the people really feel. Do you know what stopped the rock? It was the American flag." New York, N.Y.

The rock now rests in an honored place on the mantle of Miss Jones' home. Fri. 6-4-48

In Phoenix, an unprecedented meeting of 1,000 people jammed her rally, the climax of a long campaign which recently won an FEPC ordinance for the state. The greatest applause at this meeting, as at all the others, came when Miss Jones declared that the Communist Party would never register if the Mundt Bill was passed, and that it would continue its struggle to free America from Wall Street.

NEGRO SENTIMENT

Daily Worker

The main current moving among the Negro people, she found, was a desire to smash Jimcrow in the Army and to win real civil rights legislation. Around these two issues, she found, was a deep desire for unity among all groups of the Negro people.

New York, N.Y.

A new feature in politics in the southwest was the emergence of the Mexican people as an active force. In Los Angeles the Mexican community was deeply stirred by a recent fight by progressives which forced the arrest of a trigger-happy cop in Salcida, Calif. Fri. 6-4-48

Side by side with the upsurge of the people, however, Miss Jones found that the oppression of the Negro people is increasing, with Ingram cases prevalent in almost every community she visited. In Tacoma, for example, where Jimcrow is totally alien to all tradition, a move was started recently to initiate segregated transportation.

But the big thing that came through on the tour was the people's courage in the face of the unprecedented attacks on their rights and living standards. This will to fight back, Miss Jones emphasized, is the thing that will smash the plans of reaction to shackle the American people. Fri. 6-4-48

U. S. Indicts Communists

Herald Tribune

Five top American Communists were sitting in their inner sanctum on the ninth floor of their New York City headquarters, 35 East Twelfth Street, at 5:30 o'clock last Tuesday afternoon. They were discussing a story in the afternoon newspapers to the effect that a special Federal Grand Jury, which had been studying Communism in the United States, had returned some sealed indictments. At that point six men from the Federal Bureau of Investigation walked in quietly and arrested all five Communist leaders.

New York, N.Y.

Seven more top Communists, who were not in the room at the time, also were indicted. It was the most drastic Communist round-up ever conducted in the United States, for it made a clean sweep of the national board that dictates Communist party policy. Among the first to be apprehended were William Z. Foster, national chairman; Eugene Dennis, general secretary, and Benjamin J. Davis jr., member of the New York City Council. Others indicted included John Gates, editor of "The Daily Worker"; Gus Hall, Ohio chairman of the Communist party; Gilbert Green, Chicago leader, and Carl Winter, Michigan chairman.

The grand jury indictment accused the Communists of having "conspired to organize as the Communist party of the United States of America a society of persons to teach and advocate the destruction and overthrow of the government of the United States by force and violence." Such activity was prohibited by the Smith act of 1940, which prescribed a maximum penalty of $10,000 fine and ten years in jail. Sun

The Smith law never before had been used against Communists, although it had been used in 1942 against eighteen members of the Socialist Workers party, known as Trotskyites. The indictment of Communists raised two basic questions which have never been decided by the Supreme Court. First: Is the Smith law constitutional? And, second: Does the Communist party advocate the violent overthrow of the government? The Communists say they do not. The twelve indicted Communists planned to carry the case to the Supreme Court. If the court answers the two basic questions in the affirmative, all active members of the Communist party in the United States would be under hazard of imprisonment. In short, the legal process begun last week was a frontal attack on American Communism.

Herald Tribune

The Communists, of course, seized upon the situation to make propaganda; they looked upon themselves as martyrs in the struggle for civil liberties. Their arrest was "an American version of the Nazi Reichstag fire." Their fourteenth national convention, to be held in New York City Aug. 2, will be turned into a "gigantic protest against the frame-up." A fund-raising drive was started with a goal of $250,000; plans were made for 500 simultaneous street meetings throughout the city Tuesday; and 2,000,0000 protest leaflets were in preparation.

Blonde's Tip Rip Red Spy Grip

Constitution, Atlanta Ga.

Thu. 7-22-48

NEW YORK, July 21—(AP)—The World-Telegram said today in a copyrighted article that a beautiful blonde's tip to the FBI on a large Russian spy ring led to the Federal Grand Jury investigation culminating in indictments of 12 top Communist officials.

Meanwhile, four of the Communist Party heads indicted on charges of conspiracy to overthrow the U. S. Government still were sought by FBI agents.

The other eight, including Party Chairman William Z. Foster, were accounted for here and in Detroit. 7-22-48

The seven men taken into custody here all were released on $5,000 bail today.

A special Federal Grand Jury indicted the 12 top members of the Communist hierarchy yesterday, charging them with a plot to topple the American Government by violence.

U. S. Atty. John F. X. McGohey commenting on the World-Telegram story, said no woman gave testimony before the Grand Jury.

The World-Telegram reported the following:

The unnamed woman, New England-born, suffered pangs of conscience and decided she could no longer sabotage her native country. Her fantastic story, incredible to FBI agents at first, turned out to be completely true.

She told the FBI that 50 Government employees of all ranks were members of the ring. The FBI still does not have enough evidence to indict but is remaining relentlessly on the trail of ring members. Sat.

The woman, graduate of a noted women's college and an official of a purported relief organization during the war, had been a minor Communist Party member for years. Gradually she was taken into Communist confidence and in the midst of the war, when her immediate superior died, found herself in control of the spy ring.

She was given information by some 50 men and women Government employees, all Communists, ranging from clerks to one man of near cabinet authority. Nearly all, due to FBI pressure, no longer are on the Government payrolls. Constitution

WASHINGTON, July 21—(AP) Secretary of State Marshall threw cold water today on a story—told by members of his own Department — of Communist agents hacking away at U. S. security under a shield of United Nations immunity. Marshall told a news conference he doesn't know of a single case in which a foreigner has come to this country for the United Nations and has threatened American security in any way.

Among the secrets the woman and her agents turned over to the Russians were the first plans of the B-29, still under wraps, and complete data on R-D-X, a plastic explosive.

Working for the woman was a man high in the councils of the Office of Strategic Services who would meet the woman on a Washington street corner and turn over secret information to her.

Others working for her included a personal adviser of President Roosevelt, a high Army Air Force officer, an official of the War Production Board, members of the Office of War Information and persons informed of policy from other strategic Government agencies.

None received money for their activities. Once, with FBI agents watching, she met a high official from the Soviet Embassy in Washington. She received an envelope containing several thousand dollars from him. The official came to New York to press the money on her because he believed she was weakening.

The four men still sought are Irving Potash, manager of the CIO Furriers' Joint Council in New York; Robert G. The seven freed on bail here were Foster, Eugene V. Dennis, General Secretary of the Party; John B. Williamson, Trade Union Secretary for the Party; Henry Winston, Party Organizational Secretary; Benjamin Davis, Negro, former Atlanta lawyer and now New York City Councilman; Jacob Stachel, Educational Secretary for the Party, and John Gates, Editor of the Daily Worker, Party newspaper. All but Gates were arrested last night and allowed by Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell to go free overnight on a promise to return this morning to arrange bail. Gates surrendered today.

WILLIAM Z. FOSTER, national Communist Party chairman, and the party's general secretary, Eugene Dennis, also indicted, defended themselves at a news conference.

Latest of the Communist leaders to appear here was John Gates, editor of The Daily Worker, the official party organ. He walked into the federal courthouse yesterday, and said, "I'm surrendering myself. I have a clear conscience."

He said he had read in morning newspapers about the indictment, handed down Tuesday by a federal Grand Jury after a year-long investigation into alleged subversive activities. Birmingham

Others released here on bail were John Williamson, party trade union secretary; Henry Winston, party organizational secretary; Benjamin Davis, city councilman and Jacob Stachel, party educational secretary. Ala.

MEANWHILE, several sources protested the government's assault on communism. Wed.

Norman Thomas, Socialist presidential candidate, said the arrest of the party officials is likely "to impair America's standing as the land of liberty." 7-21-48

The American Civil Liberties Union charged that the indictment against the 12 "on its face, in our judgment, violates every principle of freedom of speech and press."

In Philadelphia, a Henry A. Wallace statement said the arrests were an attempt to "create fear" among the people.

The new party presidential candidate said the move was calculated to divert attention from "mounting inflation, the stupid bungling in Berlin and other problems."

MICHAEL J. QUILL, national president of the CIO transport workers union, said the arrests were "the first step in a reign of terror." 7-21-48

Defense for one of the indicted men, Councilman Davis, a Negro, came from some fellow members of the New York City Council.

Republican Councilman Stanley Isaacs said "I know Ben Davis too well to believe it possible that he would engage in any conspiracy to overthrow his government by force or violence . . . I have faith in his loyalty." Wed

"The people elected Davis as a Communist," said Democratic Council Majority Leader Joseph T. Sharkey. "Until the jury finds him guilty, he is innocent."

The Communist officials were indicted for alleged activities extending over the past three years in violation of the Smith act, a 1940 defense measure aimed at those who advocate or teach overthrow of the government by force.

The maximum penalty is 10 years imprisonment and $10,000 fine on each count.

The New Party Made History On The Draft Fight in Congress

The Worker New York, N.Y.

By Benjamin J. Davis

GLEN TAYLOR in the Senate, together with Vito Marcantonio and Adam Powell in the House, led an historic battle against the draft—a prime cog in the imperialist plans of Wall Street for Jimcrow world war III and for a Jimcrow army. Theirs was the voice of labor and the people — Negro and white — against domestic fascism.

The Negro people, in particular, will greet this as the most magnificent struggle in Congress in modern times against the barbarous Jimcrow system in the armed forces. They will note too that it was led primarily by the New Party stalwarts, thus demonstrating in life the powerful, fighting mettle of this rising political giant. This battle, in addition to several others waged by the New Party, amply justifies its existence, its necessity to the people at this fateful moment in world affairs.

Taylor's action in the Senate, plus his dramatic and earnest defiance of the Jimcrow system in Birmingham, bring him forward as one of the outstanding people's leaders of the country. The irrepressible, resourceful and courageous Marcantonio bids fair to become one of the greatest legislators in all American history. But it is not merely these men as individuals, although their personal abilities are enormous factors. As champions of the New Party, as tribunes of the new, healthy and fundamental political current developing among the people, they are a thousand times effective.

THE Negro people and their white progressive supporters nationally will welcome the militant role of Adam Powell on this and other issues in Congress recently, considering certain of his serious disappointments. When Powell put up his fine stand against army discrimination, it was not Republicans and members of his own Democratic party who unflinchingly supported him, it was Taylor and Marcantonio, the New Party-ALP forces. If Powell is to achieve his maximum potentialities of political independence of the machines, of conscientious service and leadership to the Negro people in this crisis, he should abandon all hesitations and doubts and resolutely identify himself with the Wallace-Taylor movement. This is the overwhelming desire and expressed mandate of the Negro people in Harlem, and nationally.

If the Committee against Jimcrow in Military Service and Training—headed by A. Phillip Randolph and Grant Reynolds—had been sincere in its publicly proclaimed objective, it would have hastened to congratulate and support Marcantonio, Taylor and Powell. On the contrary, Reynolds, in the name of the Committee, issued a disgusting statement denouncing Marcantonio and Powell for "following the Communist Party line" and for interfering with the "carefully laid plans" of Randolph and Reynolds, the two self-appointed master-minds. They told the two Congressmen to keep their hands off the draft bill, which is the same thing Rankin told them. But Marcantonio and Powell — thank heaven!—refused to take their advice.

WHAT mysterious "carefully laid plans" are they talking about? It is indeed good that the plans of Randolph and Reynolds were interfered with; for obviously they were "carefully laid plans" to sell out the Negro people without putting up one wisp of fight against the Jimcrow draft.

6-27-48

Not a single word of criticism appeared in Reynold's statement against the Republican - Democratic defeat of the anti-Jimcrow amendments to the draft. But the statement obviously defends the war-mongering Marshall plan, which is a noose around the neck of Africa, of American Negroes and whites, and of colonial peoples the world over. Reynolds, as Dewey's hand-picked boy, and Randolph, Dubinsky's willing prisoner, have revealed themselves as a couple of rabid and brave war inciters. Thus has their so-called Committee against Jimcrow in the Armed Services politically degenerated. Reynold's red-baiting statement is plainly a confession of bankruptcy, of the lack of any constructive, fighting program, of capitulation to the Jimcrow war-mongers.

Although Negroes instinctively had well-founded questions about the civil disobedience proposal, they looked upon it, in part, as a distorted reflection of their deep anger and indignation. But the civil disobedience proposal for these two travesties upon the late Gandhi, has turned out to be a smokescreen from behind which they are attacking, not the fascist white supremacists, but the anti-fascist Communists; from behind which they are whooping, not peace, but war; from behind which they are fighting, not army Jimcrow, but the Wallace movement and all others who do battle against Jimcrow.

The only fighting against army Jimcrow that these two rip-snorters have engaged in has been in the newspapers, where Reynolds hoped that he could be headlined into Congress next November.

The Daily Worker warned at the outset that the civil disobedience proposal could not be directed against Jimcrow as long as its two so-called authors accepted the war party-line of Wall Street. Now Reynolds' statement confirms this by betraying the whole struggle against army Jimcrow and by attacking those who conduct such a struggle.

Such a struggle to be effective must be directed against the bipartisan war plans of Washington, as demonstrated by the New Party, again by the June 2 mass capital lobby, and by all anti-wa anti-fascist Americans, of who the Communist Party is a p ticipating and indispensable tion.

Ever Meet a Communist? Here's What They Are

WHAT is a Communist?

He believes that all men and women who work for a living should enjoy a life of security, free of hunger, free of fear.

He believes that no child should go hungry and that one workingman's baby is more valuable than all the gold under Fort Knox. For he believes with Abe Lincoln that "labor is prior to capital," and that the working classes are the true treasure of all nations.

He believes that the Bill of Rights is sacred and that anybody who denies it or undermines it is the enemy of our people.

He believes that any man who hates another for the color of his skin or for the church in which he worships is an enemy of our people.

He is an American who loves his nation, his people and wants them to live in peace and friendship in a peaceful world.

He believes, therefore, that Lincoln was right again when he said: "The strongest bond of human sympathy, outside of the family relation, should be one uniting all working people of al nations and tongues and kindreds.".

He believes that the government s been captured by the enemies of labor, of the people; that men of the counting-houses, of the Big Corporations, are those enemies whether they sit in the top councils of the Republican Party or the Democratic Party.

He believes that these enemies are plotting atomic war and the horrors of fascism to cow our people into silence.

HE believes that the times demand a great coalition of all the honest, all the decent, all the common men to further a political program that will defeat the plot of our people's enemies

He believes that the Progressive Party can be built into that coalition; its program calls for enforcement of the agreements arrived at by Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Soviet Union, based upon a policy of cooperation with our wartime ally. For American-Soviet friendship is the key to making the United Nations an instrument for peace.

He believes that all democratic Americans should back the Progressive Party's demands for full restoration of labor's rights and the establishment of curbs on the atrocious rise in the costs of living. For he has always fought the Taft-Hartley Act and strike-breaking injunctions because they are weapons against the people's resistance to monopoly's plots

For these reasons he believes that the program of the Progressive Party is the course history demands at this moment.

But he believes that the common man's dream of peace, liberty and the pursuit of happiness can only be finally guaranteed when organized greed—the profit system—is changed by the majority of the people.

He believes that socialism is that way of life: socialism, which means that the country should be governed by the common man headed by the working class that produces the wealth of this nation. He believes that that wealth—our treasures of iron, coal, transportation, all the basic resources of the country, should be owned by the people and not by a few billionaire families.

HE has come to these conclusions through struggle and study—study of the works of the greatest social scientists, like Karl Marx, who prove that capitalism breeds wars, depressions, fascism, and that socialism alone can finally guarantee the brotherhood of man.

He believes in these truths with all his heart and mind and he practices what he believes. For these reasons he has struggled in the forefront of all progressive movements, promoting all mass action that will win peace; that will secure the rights of trade unions; that will achieve a better standard of life; that will eliminate Jimcrow and all racism; that will make the Bill of Rights truly the law of our land. In this struggle for progress, he is ready to face anything—slander, prison, death itself—to better the lot of the working people, of his nation.

That's why the people's enemies hate him—and fear him.

Eager University of Pennsylvania students crowd around Henry Winston, one of the 12 indicted Communist leaders, as he continues answering questions after a debate in Bennett Hall, Tuesday, on the "Pros and Cons of C.P. Line on Foreign Policy" with Dr. Donald Harter, Professor of Political Science. The debate, under the auspices of the U. of P. Women's Student Union, was chaired by Miss Gill Mizzi. The 350 students who crowded the club room gave Winston a warm response, with their applause evenly divided between the debaters. Winston is national organizational secretary of the Communist Party.

THE OUTCOME OF THE delegate race—another move to take Alabama from the regular Democratic ranks—was still uncertain.

Of the first eight leaders in this tussle, five were aligned with the McCorvey-led walkout movement, with the state chairman among this quintet. The other three were emphatically against a convention walkout, even if any part of Truman's "civil rights" program is written into the platform.

CHAIRMAN McCORVEY said the early returns clearly indicted that "all 11 Alabama electors will be in our camp." Wed.

"So, regardless of how the race for delegate goes," said McCorvey, "the 11 men who do the actual voting (in Electoral College) will be pledged to vote for someone other than Truman."

McCorvey, as state committee chairman, spearheaded the movement to pledge delegate candidates to walkout. 5-5-48

"Naturally I feel deeply gratified that our people have backed the program outlined by our State Democratic Executive Committee," said McCorvey.

McCORVEY EXPLAINED

Editor, The Advertiser:

A sitter on the sidelines enjoys analyzing the score of the game, whether it be football, baseball, or a political pastime. The editorial in a recent issue of The Birmingham Age-Herald over the headline "What Happened to McCorvey?" and the comments of some commentators and political writers relevant to this same inquiry cause me to attempt to give an analytical answer.

The correct answer is that the vote given to Chairman McCorvey was a remarkable tribute to his character, personality, and leadership. It is, doubtless, true that he lost a substantial number of votes because of his criticism of Senator Hill. Senator Hill has a strong political and personal following in Alabama, including a large number of officeholders who have their holdings under his patronage. However, the real causes of Chairman McCorvey's position in the race being fifth instead of first were primarily the following: Advertiser

1. In the field of seven candidates, Bonner, Riddle, Stapp, and McCorvey represented the position of Alabama Democrats who do not propose to follow blindly a national leadership contrary to democratic principles and the best interests of the white and Negro races; opposed in principle were only three candidates, Carmichael, Money, and Folsom. It was, therefore, necessary, in order to have their votes counted, for the supporters of the three to select at least one candidate out of the group of four. The slates of the CIO, the labor unions, the last line supporters of Governor Folsom, the Negro Shores, and others, all eliminated McCorvey as the leader in the contest. It, therefore, followed that of the minimum of substantially 80,000 votes cast for Folsom and of the substantially 96,000 cast for Money, substantially none were cast for McCorvey and the remainder were divided between the other candidates. This accounted for approximately 30,000 votes, which added to the 111,000 votes cast for McCorvey would have easily caused him to lead the ticket, notwithstanding the negative votes of many of Senator Hill's closest friends and admirers.

2. Atty Gen. Carmichael has a strong following in his own right. Not only has he many personal friends, an honorable position as attorney general of the state, to which office he has been twice elected by the people, but the name "Carmichael" in itself attracts many supporters. His father, of Geneva, was one of the leading lawyers and most beloved citizens of the Wiregrass. His uncle, A. H. Carmichael, of Tuscumbia, was probably the best beloved statesman in the Tennessee Valley. His uncle Malcolm Carmichael for many years held legislative and judicial office, and his grandfather was one of the strongest political personages who ever lived in the State of Alabama. For these reasons it is not surprising that in a race where the principles involved had been settled by the overwhelming election of electors pledged to the anti-Truman Civil Rights program, Atty. Gen. Carmichael received a large personal vote far in advance of the other two who were in the race on his side of the question. It needs only an anlysis of the votes of the various counties of the state where reside the labor unions, the Folsomites, those influenced by the perpetual pounding of piffling newspaper editorials of some of our papers, the Negro vote (for illustration, in Box 1 of Precint 9, of Jefferson County, where there are only 12 eligible white voters, (the vote was Folsom 114, Money 114, Carmichael 116, McCorvey 6, Bonner 24, Riddle 16, and Stapp—who was selected as the fourth candidate in this instance by the opposition—107) and the personal Carmichael following (the Wiregrass and the Tennessee Valley) to demonstrate the correctness of the above analysis. Wed 6-16-48

3. Chairman McCorvey was also confronted with the fact that certain papers and some others in the state in issue after issue placed upon McCorvey the burden of carrying the leadership assisted in concentrating the vote of the opposition to McCorvey's leadership against McCorvey personally.

Under these circumstances, WHAT HAPPENED TO McCORVEY? The vote of over 111,000 for McCorvey was a magnificent tribute to him as a leader of the Democratic Party in Alabama and an upright, outstanding, and courageous citizen.

BORDEN BURR

McCorvey And Freedom

To the Editor of The News:

"Alabama has today given notice to the national Democratic organization that our people are free and independent and from now on out we are going to be heard from whenever an effort is made to trample under foot our traditions." This statement by Democratic Party Leader Gessner T. McCorvey is well worth considering in all its implications.

You, I and my neighbor next door call ourselves free, independent and not-to-be-dominated Americans. When our property is stolen we telephone the police. When fire gets beyond our control we call the Fire Department. Our children are educated at public expense. When disaster strikes we expect the Red Cross to help us out. Skullduggery and trickery of our public servants we yell about in public meetings, over the radio and in "Voice of the People." When we have the facts no jail doors invite us in. 6-9-48

We are free and independent, Mr. McCorvery, only by reason of a federal constitution won by seven years' war and the continued determination of thinking citizens that all races, creeds and colors shall have justice. Individuals alone cannot have freedom or independence. Only in cooperation with others, accepting majority rule, is there freedom and independence for anyone. Wed 6-9-48

Alabama is just one of the 48 states in our federal union. Northerners, Yankees, are not all skinflints or fools. The majority know the Southern states cannot be reformed from without. Like Christianity, reform action must come from within or it is meaningless.

When an Alabama presidential elector refuses to vote for the nominee of the Democratic convention, such an elector is not a good Democrat, American, or even a good Christian. Birmingham News

Dixie bolters should think about the implications of Mr. McCorvey's published statement in The Birmingham News.

VIOLENCE PLANNED

The Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

There are a few communists in Alabama. The card holding members of that party here are so few that perhaps the fingers of two hands would suffice to count them. Therefore, it is usually reasoned, there is little point in bothering about such a feeble force for disruption. Sat. 4-17-48

But few as are the actual card holding communists in Alabama, the influence they wield is perceptibly significant.

The communist party of the United States is a dangerous organization. Even though it seem insignificant in Alabama, it should disturb Alabamians because of its national threat.

Today the communist party has enrolled approximately a hundred times as many members as were goose-stepping members of the German-American Bunds of pre-war notoriety. What is even more disturbing is that the communist have been able to insinuate themselves into positions of power in labor unions and in some other organizations. They have been able to acquire positions of authority chiefly because of the laziness of their opposition, a laziness belatedly transformed into energy now that the labor defamed Taft-Hartley law has given tools to that labor leadership which would purge its ranks of communist influences.

Even with the effects of the purge considered, there is still at large in the United States a significant force of sabotage in event of a showdown conflict with our only possible opponent in another world conflict. Despite the heated denials from the communists, it is clearly evident that their first allegiance is to Russia instead of the country of their birth or adoption. It is further evident that their plans do include the forcible overthrow of existing governments unless the armed legions of the Politburo get there first.

That last point has been argued several times through the courts, and each time the final authority, the Supreme Court, has decided that the case was not proved. But whether or not it has ever been proved to the satisfaction of the Supreme Court, plain common sense dictates a clear decision.

As evidence for a common sense appraisal of the communist aim in the United States, communist Milton Howard wrote recently in the "Daily Worker" about the difference between Western style democracy and that which exists in Czechoslovakia, a recently acquired Russian satellite. In arguing that democracy does not exist in the United States but does in Russia, Mr. Howard says:

> "But there is no case in history where the propertied class has democratically permitted the nation to vote establishment of new property relations which turned the industries over to the nation as a whole, taking them out of the hands of the private owners."

Mr. Howard's obvious lie, common to all communists, is disregard of the present British experiment in state socialism.

But more important, Mr. Howard by lying about the actual state of affairs in the world succeeds most graphically in underlining the communist aim—that of forcable overthrow of all existing governments which do not conform to the communist point of view. It is an obvious deduction from his article that, since he does not believe a communist state will ever be voluntarily voted, it must be imposed by force. Mr. Howard further emphasized this point by saying:

The Advertiser

> "It would be highly desirable, of course, if such a transformation to a higher social order could take place in this peaceful manner. And Marxists have always, even from the days of Karl Marx himself, tried to achieve the 'easiest' transition to socialism. Even during the Russian revolution Lenin noted a certain moment where there could be a peaceful transition to socialism, provided the kicked out industrialists and landlords were willing to accept the democratic verdict of the nation. It was possible but events showed it to be highly improbable."

The typical lie in the foregoing is the statement that there has been a "democratic verdict" from the Russian people that the industrialists and landlords be "kicked out." Nothing could be further from the truth. The communists seized power from the only effort ever made in Russia to set up a democraracy, the Kerensky government. The present dictatorship of Russia never had a mandate to do anything. It merely seized power and has acted like any dictatorship since that time.

A most important thing is Mr. Howard's emphasis on the impossibility of securing a peaceful transition to the type of state desired by all communists. In their reasoning, it is obvious therefore that violent overthrow of the government is the only solution.

Montgomery, Ala.

In the same article there was the usual patting on the back of Henry Wallace. Mr. Howard said, apparently with regret, that Wallace was not a true communist but that he was the next best thing. At least, according to communist Howard, Mr. Wallace approved of all the things which would make the United States weak and Russia strong. That makes Wallace, in communist Howard's eyes, a fine candidate for president.

Sat. 4-17-48

This brings us back to Alabama with an incidental note. Wallace is obviously playing the communist game without actually wearing the badge. There are Alabamians who are also playing the same game with the same lack of identification. In the confusion which attends our taking a strong stand against Truman's civil disturbance program, some odd characters have slipped into a commanding position for the driver's seat. About a third of them are mugwumps and oldtime bolters and another third are Wallaceites. Both are equally repugnant to reasonable men.

The Advertiser

Typical or the Alabama Wallaceites is their leader, Folsom. He mouths the "party-line" just like he read it from Henry or the "Daily Worker." Yesterday he tried to escape the Wallace onus by denouncing as infamous the "pig killing," sponsored by Wallace in early New Deal days.

But on foreign policy, on UMT, on security for our country through strength, Folsom and Wallace think as one. They are against it.

It's Legal To Scratch Your Ballot

By GEOFFREY BIRT
Staff Writer, The Alabama Journal

ANY Alabama Democrat can "scratch" his ballot in the November general election if he desires.

A man "scratches" his ballot if he "splits the ticket" and gives some votes to Democratic candidates and some to Republican nominees, and the remainder to Wallaceites or independent candidates.

Sun. 6-6-48

The Democratic rooster con go "scratching" at the polls next November to his heart's content, and there is no law to stop him.

But the Democrat who has voted in a Democratic primary, such as was held May 4 and June 1, is under a moral obligation to support the Democratic nominees in the November general election. He is not under any legal constraint to do so and, in any event, the ballot is supposed to be secret so that no one can know.

When the votes are counted after the election, voting papers with a split vote recorded on them, are perfectly legal and will be counted in the final totals.

But the recent history of Alabama gives pause to would-be scratchers. To be precise, it is the memory of what happened to Tom Heflin and Judge Hugh Locke in 1928 and 1930.

Heflin crusaded against Al Smith's bid for presidency in 1928. Heflin threatened a lot of hard, and sometimes picturesque things, against Catholics and waged war on all Democrats who supported Smith, the Democratic nominee.

Montgomery Advertiser

THIS demagogue was accused of actually voting Republican, for Herbert Hoover, on the issue. But he denied he did what he urged others to do; that ruined him.

Sun. 6-6-48

In 1930 the State Democratic Executive Committee refused to qualify Heflin because of his 1928 actions and statements. Accordingly, Heflin ran for the Senate as an independent and was soundly thrashed by the late John Bankhead.

Now Heflin is an old man, (79), forgotten, and in retirement. Only two weeks ago, one of Gov. Folsom's "inner circle" could not say, when asked, if Tom Heflin was alive or dead.

Hugh Locke formed an independent party and ran for governor in that same year of 1930. He had with him, running for lieutenant governor, Dempsey M. Powell, of Greenville, Ala.

Locke was beaten on this same issue by B. M. Miller and Powell was defeated by Hugh D. Merrill.

History shows that the score on these two races was: Miller 155,034, and Locke, 95,742; Merrill, 154,562, and Powell 92,570.

In the governor's race, Locke carried only the counties of Chambers, Chilton, Clay, DeKalb, Escambia, Henry, St. Clair and Winston, and then, except in the case of Winston County, only by a handful of votes.

Montgomery Advertiser

LOCKE has been a figure only in the background of Alabama politics since then, though he emerges into the half-light occasionally, as he did a few weeks ago. He then advertised himself as chairman of a committee to encourage the election of some candidates for delegate to walk-out of the National Convention in Philadelphia.

Sun. 6-6-48

Former Gov. Chauncey Sparks and others immediately roused the old cry of pollywog"—a term originated in the 1928 and 1930 hue and cry.

There is one last thing which "scratching," or even "bolting" roosters should bear in mind.

Taking the attitude of the State Committee towards Tom Heflin as their example, the State Executive Committee might, in certain circumstances, be equally harsh on would-be political candidates in 1950, if any of them become known as not having voted the party "ticket."

The difference this year is that the State Committee itself is bolting the national party.

And in conclusion, the writer wishes it to be known—he ain't no pollywog, mugwump or such-like. He has just been trying to dig up, rather than scratch up, a few facts, and study them slightly in the present day light—for, the editor says, a lot of people want to know if they can vote for a Republican presidential nominee for senator and Board of Revenue.

Alabama CP Asks Protests In Mensh Case

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y.

Wed. 4-7-48

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 6.—The Alabama Communist Party today issued a call for protests to be made to Mayor C. N. Gilley, of Fairfield, Ala., against the sentence of 180 days at hard labor imposed on Harry Mensh for distributing a pamphlet.

Mensh, who is southern educational organizer for the CP, was also fined $100. The pamphlet he was distributing was William Z. Foster's Twenty-three Questions and Answers About the Communist Party.

"In announcing his decision," the Alabama CP stated, "Mayor Gilley insisted that distributing Communist literature of any kind is disorderly conduct. 4-7-48

"He fully exposed the political nature of the charges against Mensh when he offered a 30-day suspended sentence if he would agree to respect the steel curtain and stay out of Fairfield. Mensh refused to be a party to this attack on basic constitutional rights. Mayor Gilley then slammed down the maximum sentence. An appeal was taken immediately and bail arranged. The case will be fought through to the finish."

'Too-Patriotic' Women Not Too Popular With Top Communists

The Afro American Sat 9-11-48 Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK (NNPA) — Colored women are not popular in top Communistic circles because they are too patriotic and nationalistic to grasp the world wide aims of the Communist program, a former high ranking member of the Communist Party declared here last Thursday.

Manning Johnson, one time member of the Communist National Commission and also a member of its powerful Political Bureau, made this statement in an exclusive interview directly following an all day appearance on the witness stand where he appeared as a key Government witness in the deportation proceedings of Ferdinand Smith, British West Indian Secretary of the National Maritime Union.

Johnson said the Party has tried, but has finally decided that it "just can't do anything with colored women because they will only go so far for any cause against their country."

Too Balker

He said not only colored Communist women been known to balk at strategic moments in a well planned Communist move, but they have also been found guilty by the party of influencing their men to balk also.

Sat 9-11-48

This, Johnson says, is one reason why the Communist "put a white woman next to a colored man as soon as he gains any weight in the Party."

But, he added, thats not the main reason. He said the Communists put a white woman "next to" their colored leaders so they can keep their fingers on them.

According to Johnson, these women, whether they marry the men or not, keep the party informed as to where their man goes, how he lives and whom he associates with. This information is relayed to the National Control Commission, Johnson said, which is the American counterpart of the Russian Secret Service. In this way, he swears, Communist leaders in Russia are able to chart every move of their American henchmen.

Sat 9-11-48

It may sound a bit fantastic but apparently the United States Government holds Johnson's opinions in high regard. He walks in and out of the Justice Department headquarters as if he owns the building—and even hard working reporters are only admitted by card.

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — "Communist infiltration" among Negroes is slated for a hearing by the house un-American activities committee, according to Chairman Thomas (R., N. J.). The committee chairman said that Communists are seeking to win over large Negro groups. His committee, he declared, has been studying these efforts for seven months and "is ready to publicly expose the whole program."

The investigation among Negroes is one phase of a five-point program which will include inquiries regarding labor groups in the Panama Canal zone, and attempts to steal atom-bomb information. Hearings on Communist influences in Hollywood will be resumed also.

Deportation Proceedings Suspended

Mrs. Claudia Jones, Admitted Communist, Under Gov't Fire

Atlanta, Ga.

NEW YORK — (NNPA) — Deportation proceedings against Mrs. Claudia Jones were unexpectedly suspended Monday afternoon, September 13, by the disappearance of one of the Immigration and Naturalization Service's key witnesses who was under subpoena.

Edward P. Emanuel, examining inspector, asked for the adjournment following the noon recess. He had earlier in the day opposed an adjournment requested by Mrs. Carol King, attorney for Mrs. Jones. Mrs. King asked for the adjournment on the grounds that she had had inadequate notice of the hearing and that it violated the administrative procedure act.

After Mrs. King's request for adjournment was denied, Mrs. Jones declined to take the stand. She said the hearing was illegal and she would defend herself at the proper time.

Fri 9-17-48

The action against Mrs. Jones at the offices of the Immigration and Naturalization Service is a part of the Federal Government's effort to deport subversive aliens.

BRITISH WEST INDIAN

Mrs. Jones, 33, was born in the British West Indies. She is a member of the National Committee of the Communist party and freely admits she is a Communist.

Before the noon recess, a number of witnesses, all employees of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, testified as to the authenticity of records purporting to show that Mrs. Jones, who also known as Mrs. Claudie Vera Scholnick, was an alien and a Communist.

After the noon recess, Mr. Emanuel suddenly announced his concurrence in Mrs. King's earlier request for an adjournment. He refused to tell newspaper men why he had changed his tactics. Later, W. F. Watkins, district director of the service, told reporters that a "key witness" under subpoena, had failed to appear. He refused to identify the witness but said Federal officers would try to locate him.

NMU Secretary Still Detained

Feb 2-28-48

Baltimore Md

NEW YORK — Ferdinand C. Smith, internationally known militant secretary of the National Maritime Union which he helped to organize, was still detained at Ellis Island for possible deportation as protests on his behalf mounted throughout the country last week.

He was arrested by FBI agents on Feb. 15 as he left his home at 270 Convent Ave., and charged with being a member of an organization (Communist) which seeks to overthrow the United States Government by force, and with having entered the country illegally as an alien.

His detention is being vigorously protested by Michael Quail, president, Greater New York CIO Council; Abner Green, executive secretary, Committee for the Protection of the Foreign Born, which gives special legal aid to foreigners arrested here; and other labor and civil rights agencies.

FBI's Dragnet Widens

His arrest followed by less than a week that of John Wililamson labor secretary of the Communist Party.

Others recently caught in the FBI's dragnet to rid the country of known and suspected alien Communist leaders and agents who have established illegal residences here were Claudia Jones, 32-year-old Communist youth leader, a native of Jamaica, B.W.I.; and Gerhart Eisler, an alleged Communist agent.

Civil Liberty—Going Fast

But, if the civil rights of one man are wiped out it won't be long before the rest of us will be in the same boat. (Gen)

Here are the stark facts:

For the first time in American peacetime history the Department of Justice has seized a citizen of this land to be held without bail for an indefinite period. The charges are so flimsy that even Attorney General Tom Clark admits that they couldn't stand up in court.

John Williamson, Communist Party leader, has been denied the right to be released on bail from Ellis Island. He is charged with "believing in force and violence." It may take years before these absurd charges are tried.

He must remain at Ellis Island, away from his family, all that time. Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

With the denial of bail to citizens like Williamson, and to non-citizens like Gerhart Eisler and Ferdinand Smith, also held at Ellis Island, the road is now open for the FBI to seize anyone they choose for an indefinite imprisonment without bail, before any trial has been set.

They can put any man in jail under this tactic, without having to pay any attention to the Constitution of the United States. Wed. 2-18-48

SIMILARLY, the Supreme Court's refusal yesterday by a vote of 6-3, to give any opinion on the legality of the House Un-American Committee's probe into "loyalty" now means that Leon Josephson, who refused to answer "loyalty" questions as defined by the Rankin-Thomas committee, must now go to jail for one year.

It also means that all other progressive Americans, whether they be Eugene Dennis, Communist Party secretary, or the Hollywood notables, or the anti-Franco Americans who helped the Spanish Republic, also face jail sentences. Daily Worker

It means that the FBI, the Un-American Committee and the Attorney General can seize, question and jail any American whose opinions they don't like on grounds of "contempt of Congress." New York, N.Y.

The fact that three Supreme Court judges, Douglas, Rutledge, and Murphy, and Justice Clark of the lower Court believed that a grave constitutional issue was at stake has not made any difference to the Truman Administration. Wed 2-18-48

Armed with these arrogated powers, the Truman Administration is seizing pro-Wallace union leaders like Ferdinand Smith of the NMU and Negro women leaders like Claudia Jones. It is barring from re-entry into the U.S.A. such CIO unionists as Charles A. Doyle of the coke workers on the eve of a wage negotiation—after Doyle lived here for 24 years. It has seized John Santo, war veteran, and official in the CIO transport union in New York. There are others, too.

The fight for the minimum decency of ordinary bail for Williamson, Smith and Eisler on Ellis Island is the fight in which no American can safely remain on the sidelines. It is YOUR right to bail which is at stake, YOUR elementary legal protections against false prosecutions, YOUR right to think as you please.

The right of decent citizens to refuse to surrender the meaning of "loyalty" to any self-appointed group of reactionaries is at stake in the Dennis-Josephson cases. Woman Communist Leader Is Arrested for Deportation

34d The Times

New York, N.Y. Wed. 1-21-48

The arrest of a second top Communist leader for deportation was disclosed yesterday. The new prisoner is Miss Claudia Jones. Like Alexander Bittelman, who was arrested last week, she is a member of the national committee of the Communist party of the United States.

Miss Jones was arrested Monday evening at her home, 504 West 143d Street, on a deportation warrant, W. F. Watkins, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, announced. The warrant charged that she was an alien in this country illegally in that she advocated and taught the overthrow of the Government by force, the same charge lodged against Bittelman.

In a statement protesting Miss Jones' arrest, the national board of the Communist party, headed by William Z. Foster, chairman, described her as "not only an outstanding Communist, but also a leader of the Negro people and secretary of the National Women's Commission of the Communist party." The Times

"We call on all Americans who love peace and freedom to stop [Attorney General] Tom Clark's arrogant police-state blitz, to demand his removal from office, and to demand the dismissal of charges against Claudia Jones, as well as against Alexander Bittelman," the statement said. New York, N.Y.

Miss Jones was born in Trinidad in the British West Indies in 1915 and came here in 1924, according to Mr. Watkins. Her name was apparently Claudia Vera Cumberbatch, and she has also been known as Claudia Vera Scholnick, he said. Wed. 1-21-48

She was first active in the Young Communist League of New York and later became the organization's educational secretary. Then she became national educational director of the league, and in 1940 chairman of the youth section of the Communist party.

When the league was merged into American Youth for Democracy, Miss Jones became a leader of the latter organization and she was active also in the World Youth Congress. Mr. Watkins said that she was a frequent contributor to The Daily Worker and other Communist publications under the pen name Claudia Jones, and that she was a frequent speaker at Communist meetings.

Miss Jones was taken to Ellis Island but was released late yesterday afternoon, on posting a $1,000 bond. The American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born, which proivded counsel for Bittelman, assigned an attorney to defend Miss Jones.

A rally protesting the arrest of Bittelman will be held tomorrow evening at Webster Hall, 119 East Eleventh Street, Ben Gold, president of the Fur and Leather Workers Union, CIO, and of the Morning Freiheit Association, announced. The Times

Mr. Gold, who is also a member of the Communist party's national committee, issued a statement urging that letters, resolutions and telegrams be sent to the immigration service, demanding that the charges against Bittelman be dropped immediately. The service is seeking to deport the Communist leader to the Soviet Union, of which he is a native. 1-21-48

Mounted Police Break Up Night Demonstration That Ties Up Times Square Traffic

3-7-48

By AUSTIN STEVENS

The four alleged Communist aliens who have been on a hunger strike on Ellis Island for six days were released late yesterday on bail of $3,500 each.

Federal Judge William Bondy set bail for the four men, whom the Government seeks to deport, pending argument on their appeal of his dismissal of writs of habeas corpus. Sun 3-7-48

Bail was set on the condition that all four would appear in United States Circuit Court tomorrow at 10:30 A. M.

A few minutes after Judge Bondy signed the bonds at 4:05 P. M. the men were placed aboard the last boat leaving Ellis Island for the day for South Ferry.

They Quickly End Fast

The Times

Despite their hurried departure, the hunger strikers found a few minutes for their first food since Sunday night, when they decided to limit themselves to water as a protest against Attorney General Tom Clark's refusal to grant bail for them while deportation proceedings were pending.

Bowls of soup and glasses of orange juice were served to them on Ellis Island. New York, N.Y.

The four, all of whom are alleged to be deportable as aliens advocating the overthrow of the United States Government, are Gerhart Eisler, often described as the "brains" of the Communist party in the United States; John Williamson, labor secretary of the Communist party; Ferdinand C. Smith, secretary of the National Maritime Union, CIO, and Charles A. Doyle, vice president of the United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers, CIO. 3-7-48

Group Impedes Times Sq. Traffic

Mounted police broke up a demonstration of Communist sympathizers in Times Square at 8:30 o'clock last night when a group chanting "Deport Jim Crow," concentrated before the Paramount Theatre at Forty-third Street, tied up traffic in the area.

The police cleared the area in front of the theatre. There were several scuffles. The marchers carried banners calling for the release of Eisler, Williamson, Doyle, Potash and Smith. They held the paper banners overhead as they marched in a circle.

The police were prepared for the demonstration and had twenty mounted men, forty uniformed patrolmen and officers and twenty-five detectives, including members of the Alien Squad in reserve.

Prominently stationed at corners were many vendors of The Daily Worker, official Communist party publication. The Times

Several hundred demonstrators took part, almost all carrying the placards. They mixed in with the crowds on the east and west sides of the Square between Forty-third and Forty-seventh Streets. Only when traffic was disrupted did the mounted police maneuver their horses on to the sidewalk and start to force demonstrators and theatregoers down the side streets.

No permit had been issued for a demonstration. New York, N.Y.

Judge Bondy's decision in the cases of the four men, who have been in custody on Ellis Island for periods of up to thirty-two days, was in line with a ruling made Friday when he granted bail to Irving Potash, manager of the Furriers Joint Council. Potash, who was picked up last Monday, also for deportation hearings, and who joined the hunger strike for two days, was released on $5,000 bail pending an appeal of his writ. Potash is also scheduled to appear in Circuit Court tomorrow. 3-7-48

Only Smith's case differed from the others. His counsel had earlier appealed the dismissal of his writ of habeas corpus but no bail had been set. His appeal had already been set for tomorrow as well. Sun

A group of seventy-five persons had gathered at the ferry slip to greet the four men. Most of them had come from the Seaman's Church Institute, 25 South Street, presumably to greet the maritime union leader, Smith. There was a light cheer as the four men appeared outside the ferry house.

Among the group were four of their counsel — Mrs. Carol King, Abraham Unger, Isidore Englander and David M. Freedman. After reporters had talked to the men briefly and photographers had finished taking pictures, the men went in automobiles to the office of Dr. Jack Nelson, 535 Park Avenue, for a physical check-up.

Dr. Nelson said last night, after completing his examination of the four men, that all appeared to be in "reasonably good condition." He said he had given them dietary instructions and ordered them to rest for a few days. 34 Comm.

Williamson called his release the results of "the fight of the American people to defend the Constitution." He said that Attorney General Clark had acted like a "would-be Hitler in trying to institute a concentration camp in the United States." The Times

Eisler announced: "I'm glad to be out and I'm going home."

Doyle echoed Williamson's sentiments about the Attorney General and called the release of the group "a victory for the progressive movement of this country."

Asked if he intended to eat, Smith said: "I can't eat. I'm not concerned with food. I'm more concerned with freedom."

Judge Bondy handed down his decision at 3 P. M. after reviewing the arguments on the Attorney General's use—or misuse—of discretion in denying bail for the group. New York, N.Y.

He first set the bail at $5,000, United States Attorney General John F. X. McGohey concurring. Mrs. King, however, pressed for a reduction, reminding Judge Bondy that he had set $5,000 for Potash in consideration of his previous criminal record.

None of the group, with the exception of Eisler, she said, had a criminal record. Mrs. King said Eisler was free on $20,000 bail in another case. Sun

Finally, after considerable discussion, Mrs. King said "Let's settle for $3,500," and Judge Bondy agreed. 3-7-48

Mr. McGohey, who has contended that the Attorney General had not misused his discretion in denying bail, showed little interest in the argument about what figure bail should be set. (Deportation)

"I do not think there should be granting of bail at all," he said. "But I am too tired." The Times

When the attorneys produced government bonds to cover the bail Mr. McGohey remarked:

"You see, judge, what difference does the amount make? They were ready unless they needed the rest for others." New York, N.Y.

Ferdinand Smith

Daily Worker

By Gerald Cook

"I'm feeling swell, come on in," Ferdinand Smith said heartily as he threw open the door of his apartment to your apologetic reported. The tall Negro trade union leader, recuperating in his quiet apartment at 270 Convent Ave., showed little effect of his six-day hunger strike on Ellis Island. New York, N.Y.

Smith dismissed the hunger strike with a quip. "You can't kill an old man," he grinned. "Besides, I lost my little bay window in the process, and that's good."

Released on bail Saturday evening with his three fellow hunger strikers, Smith said he felt like "taking on a T-bone steak." But all heavy food having been ruled out by his doctor, the National Maritime Union secretary, who lost 23 pounds during the six-day fast, is "breathing in" gradually. Fruit juice, broth, thin soup and a small piece of boiled chicken has made up his diet since he was freed. Tues 3-9-48

HAPPY OVER VICTORY

The 54-year-old union leader, imprisoned on Ellis Island for 20 days, talked enthusiastically of the victory over the Truman administration's attempt to hold the hunger strikers without bail.

"The American people," Smith said, "have demonstrated that they will not allow Attorney General Clark to impose a night-rider brand of justice upon the United States."

He was particularly proud of the part the NMU membership took in the fight for the freedom.

Smith attributed their release to the pressure of the people, "particularly organized labor, the Negro people and other minority groups." He is especially proud of the part the NMU membership took in the fight.

"TRUE TO TRADITION"

A rank-and-file sailor for 19 years and an official of the union since 1936, Smith said the NMU membership acted "true to the tradition of the sea." Daily Worker

"The sailors demonstrated that which is commonplace to every sailor," Smith said, "not to desert an injured shipmate in a storm."

Discussing NMU president Joseph Curran's statement repudiating him, Smith pointed out that the arrests were part of a drive against all opponents of the Truman administration's foreign policy and supporters of the third party. Curran has declared his support of the Marshall Plan and opposition to the Wallace movement. New York, N.Y.

WON'T HOLD UP

Curran's alibi that the desertion of his fellow official was a matter of national CIO policy won't hold up before the NMU membership, Smith said. He pointed out that CIO president Philip Murray, John Green, Shipyard Workers leader and State CIO head Louis Hollander had denounced Attorney General Clark's refusal to grant bail in the case.

His arrest on the morning of a scheduled special NMU national council meeting, "was no coincidence," Smith declared. Tues 3-9-48

Referring to the hearings still pending, Smith said:

"I'll be back at work in a couple of days. None of us can relax now. We have won a skirmish but not the war."

Deportations Hit by Lawyers' Unit

WASHINGTON

In a letter last week to Attorney General Tom Clark, the National Lawyers Guild opposed the new wave of deportations instituted by his office.

Robert J. Silberstein, the guild's executive secretary, forwarded with the letter a copy of a resolution on deportations adopted by the national convention of the guild in Chicago last Feb. 22.

Arrests Growing

The resolution points out that during the last 18 months, "The Department of Justice has arrested for deportation at least 29 people for alleged membership in an organization allegedly believing in and advocating the overthrow of this government by force and violence."

It added that "over 60 more arrests have been forecast by the attorney general."

Cleveland Negro Women Respond to Defense Appeal

By Elizabeth Gurley Flynn

Daily Worker, N.Y., N.Y.

LAST WEDNESDAY night I spoke at a reception in defense of Claudia Jones in Cleveland, Ohio at the Cedar YMCA, a beautiful building in the heart of a Negro community. There were 25 present, predominantly Negro women from the neighborhood. They organized a Claudia Jones Defense Committee, sent wires to President Truman, Tom Clark, the Governor of Georgia and the trial judge down there, on Mrs. Ingram and her boys.

They planned to contact immediately all [illegible] organizations in a most efficient manner. We are not sufficiently aware of the high degree of organizational experience and the broad outlook of Negro women, or we would call on them for aid and cooperation in these critical hours far more than we do. Negro women can be aroused nationwide over the attempt to deport Claudia Jones and through her case learn of the other deportation issues as well.

They can be called to vigorous action against the Jimcrow justice of Georgia, which has sentenced a Negro widow (mother of 12 children) and her her teen age sons to death for an act of self-defense. They will help save her. I saw this in Cleveland.

Mun. 3-8-48

THIS RECEPTION was dedicated "to the cause of freedom for all—the Negro people, women, labor, political minorities"—In this spirit they spoke and acted. I was particularly moved by the remarks of Comrade Mary Lindsay, who has been in our party since the struggles of the unemployed, fought for the Scottsboro boys, and knows whereof she speaks. Her voice was low and controlled, with a passion and intensity, and a brevity of words, that stirred and shook the listeners like great music.

In part she said: "You don't have to cross the Mason and Dixon line to know you are a Negro. You know it every hour. You are never allowed to forget it, not for a moment. We come away from the South. But our minds stay there. We can't forget our people in the South. We have [illegible]t for the Negroes who can[illegible] fight for themselves—in the South. It is forever and ever a place of massacre—for Negro people.

Mun. 3-8-48

"If th[illegible] had happened on any other farm or if the Negro woman and her boys had been killed there would be no trial. It would be 'self defense.' But Negroes are not allowed to defend themselves. Terror is their lot in the South. But I tell you, the young Negroes won't take what the older people did. Only, to fight personally, one by one, does no good. It must be together with our true friends of the white race. I'm glad I don't live there. But as long as there is a Negro in the South part of me is down there. Now we must act. We can't wait. By Christmas they may be dead.

"If you never fought you must make a fighter of yourself now. And when we win you are proud you fought and ready to do it again. They can't kill all of us. They can't kill the working people. Right is on our side. It always wins out. Wrong has its day. But it can't win out. We said: 'They shall not die' of the Scottsboro boys. They did not die! Let us fight to free Mrs. Ingram and her sons, not to put them away in a prison where some day they would put the boys out in a prison yard and shoot them, the say, 'They were trying to escape,' They must be free!"

WE PASSED the clippings of Harry Raymond's article from the Daily Worker around with the picture of the strong, sad-faced Negro mother and her boys made wan by hard labor. Every woman there pledged to take it up with her pastor, her organization, her friends. A pamphlet with all the information is needed. Let's hurry it at the office of the D. W. People want the facts, material to give out, the pictures, the addresses to write to—and quickly. When I repeated Harry's description of the children's plight, these women decided to send clothing at once to the Ingram Defense Fund, W. R. Burleigh, treasurer, Americus, Ga. P. O. Box 43.

They decided to write to Mrs. Rose Lee Ingram, County Jail, Albany, Ga., to tell her that they are ready to help her. These are good suggestions to adopt at other meetings.

Mun. 3-8-48

Nor did they forget Comrade Claudia, on whose behalf the meeting was originally called. But, if she were there, she would have urged them to proceed on an emergency basis to save this woman who symbolizes all Negro women in the South—Mrs. Ingram. An injury to one is the concern of all, in this struggle.

COMMUNISTS

Venerable Chestnut

One near-zero morning last week, cheerful, bespectacled John Williamson stepped briskly from his apartment in Manhattan's Washington Heights to be greeted by some absolute strangers. They made themselves known with dispatch. They were FBI agents and immigration officers, and they hustled John Williamson off to Ellis Island.

Mun. 2-23-48

Thus the Government tapped another top Communist for deportation. Williamson, 45, married and father of two sons, is the party's national labor secretary and a member of its twelve-man policymaking board. The Justice Department identified him as fourth in the U.S. party's hierarchy, called him "the most important figure" it has picked up to date (others: Gerhart Eisler,* Alexander Bittelman, Claudia Jones).

Like the others, Williamson was accused of advocating the overthrow by violence of the U.S. Government. His lawyer, Mrs. Carol King, who had defended them all, promptly sought his release on bail, set to planning his defense. Mass.

Before Williamson can be deported, however, the Justice Department will have to nail down the question of whether or not he is an alien. The Government says he was born in Scotland and came to the U.S. in 1913. Williamson's story is that he was born in San Francisco, where his birth records were destroyed in the great fire and earthquake of 1906.

Immigration men consider that yarn a venerable chestnut. Almost every Oriental picked up for illegal entry into the U.S. has tried to use it. 2-23-48

Also ticketed for deportation this week was Ferdinand Christapher Smith, national secretary of Joe Curran's C.I.O. National Maritime Union. Smith, a Negro, entered the U.S. from Jamaica in 1919. Like Williamson, he was picked up as he left his Manhattan apartment and taken to Ellis Island. He not only advocated violent overthrow of the U.S., said the warrant, but returned from a Mexican trip in 1945 without a visa. Smith's politics were no news to Curran. Only recently Joe had called him a Communist Party card-holder.

PHOENIX, Ariz., May 25.—A thousand people jammed the amphitheatre of Eastlake Park to hear Claudia Jones, Communist woman leader, who faces deportation, now on a nation-wide tour in behalf of the deportation victims.

"Only by the people's protests and unity can we stop the drive to fascism," she declared. "The history of the last decade shows that to outlaw the Communists is to outlaw democracy and our democratic institutions."

The audience showed an intense interest in the Communist Party, which has been active in fighting the issues facing the Mexicans, Indians and Negro minorities in this large state. To Miss Jones' call for "welding of the unity of the Negro people and isolating the Uncle Toms" the audience slapped their thighs. Morris Graham, chairman of the Arizona Communist Party, also spoke.

7th Stoolie Ends Smith Deportation Hearing

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.
Fri. 4-9-48

By Art Shields

The Department of Justice brought its inquisition against Ferdinand C. Smith, National Maritime Union Secretary, to a close yesterday after the seven government stool pigeons had finished speaking their pieces in the deportation hearing room at 70 Columbus Ave.

The hearing closed with a sharp denunciation by Smith's lawyer, Herman Rosenfeld, an associate of William T. Standard, NMU counsel, of "these illegal proceedings."

SMITH

Smith had refused to take any part in the hearings. They are in violation of the U. S. Administrative Procedure Act, requiring impartial tribunals, his counsel points out.

ASSAILS DAILY WORKER

The seventh stool, George Hewitt, alias Tim Holmes, interrupted his testimony yesterday to make a frenzied outcry against the Daily Worker, which had called him a stoolpigeon.

He wasn't, indeed he wasn't a stoolpigeon, the renegade kept shouting in such excited accents that Presiding Inspector Gilbert Zimmerman, who has been encouraging the fink witnesses finally cut him short.

HITS CIVIL RIGHTS

Daily Worker

"How did the Communists plan to shatter the capitalist state?" asked Examining Inspector Maurice Roberts. New York, N.Y.

"Through the fight for democratic rights," replied Hewitt.

"With every victory on that field," he continued, "they will proceed with the overthrow of the capitalist system." Fri.

Hewitt, alias Holmes, gave the usual parrot testimony of FBI stoolpigeons. This "testimony" was that Communists were trying to "overthrow" the government by "force or violence." 4-9-48

And like the other stools, he said he had seen Ferdinand Smith at "Communist" meetings.

Hewitt, alias Holmes, was getting $25 a day pay, and $6 a day expenses as an "expert" witness on Communism.

A similar stool, Manning Johnson, was in the same "expert" catagory at the same $25-and-$6 compensation.

PANDHANDLER SPY

Another $25-and-$6 FBI spy was Victory Campbell, alias "Forty Fathoms," a waterfront panhandler, who continued testifying today after an earlier appearance yesterday.

Campbell, said a statement by the Smith Defense Committee at the CIO National Maritime Union, was an "irresponsible panhandler, who had aroused the seamen's suspicion many years ago because he never had any visible means of support."

Campbell, who wrote doggerel under the "Forty Fathoms" byline, used to hang out at NMU headquarters and various progressive political organizations' offices, until the seamen decided to keep him away. Daily Worker

He bobbed up at the Smith hearings as an open Department of Justice fingerman, after several years absence.

Campbell says he is now "farming" at Cheverie, Hamps County, Nova Scotia, Canada.

All three fink "experts" identified reams of literature, from the Communist Manifesto to Lenin's State and Revolution, and later pamphlets as the "force or violence" documents of the Communist Party.

DIDN'T SEE "LIBERTY"

New York, N.Y.

The routine of much of the testimony ran like this: Fri.

Examining Inspector Maurice Roberts would slap the "Manifesto" or some other document out of the pile on his desk and ask if the witness had ever distributed this document in the name of the Party.

Hewitt, alias Holmes, Johnson or Campbell would answer that they had done so. The Party believed in the government's "overthrow," they would say. 4-9-48

Presiding Inspector Gilbert Zimmerman would then solemnly intone: "I now mark the Communist Manifesto as Exhibit" so and so. The pamphlet would then be tossed to Smith's attorney who would say that he wasn't interested in taking part in "illegal proceedings."

The Ferdinand C. Smith National Defense Committee, which was set up last February to fight the attempted deportation of Ferdinand C. Smith, National Secretary of the National Maritime Union, Wednesday announced the publication of a pamphlet entitled FOR HIS PATRIOTIC SERVICE.

This pamphlet shows that Smith had entered the country legally in 1918, that he had sailed American merchant ships for many years, that he became a father and grandfather in the country of his adoption and that the heinous crime for which he was picked up by the Department of Immigration on February 16 of this year and for which he was imprisoned on Ellis Island the Committee believes is the crime of every progressive in this country who is fighting, uncompromisingly, against the reactionaries in our midst. The pamphlet also gives a detailed account of Smith's continuous and fruitless attempts to secure his citizenship papers as well as the fact that he had registered for the draft and was ready to serve his country whenever called upon. 7-17-48

FOR HIS PATRIOTIC SERVICE is being distributed throughout the country in order that people will learn all the facts in the charges of the Department of Immigration as well as to make it posibl to defray the costs of the leg l battle which is being made.

ATTORNEY GENERAL CLARK kept to his announced anti-civil rights schedule yesterday when he slammed John Williamson onto Ellis Island and held him for deportation. Not satisfied with this flagrant violation of democratic rights, the government has even denied Williamson the elementary right of bail. 2-11-48-Wed.

Each 10 days the gates of Ellis Island must close on a Communist, according to Clark's time table. And if there is no new Communist to arrest, they slam the gates again on Gerhart Eisler, the German Communist held here against his will. New York, N.Y.

It's all part of the new technique—used to frighten the nation into support of the Administration's drive against all opposition to its reactionary foreign policy and the rule of bankers and generals at home. 2-11-48 Wed.

Tom Clark and the bankers and generals he serves—just as Hitler before them—will not stop with Communists.

Indeed, already they have whacked at trade union leaders like Michael Obermeier, Charles Doyle, John Santo, the Negro leader Claudia Jones and the Jewish fighter, Alexander Bittelman.

For 25 years, his entire adult life, Williamson was an active Communist. His worth to America is best expressed in the CIO rubber, steel and auto unions which he helped to build.

If the labor movement and the liberals allow the administration to make a concentration camp of Ellis Island—others will follow. Call a halt now to these attacks on freedom of thought and political activity.

Demand that charges against Williamson and other arrested Communists and progressives be dropped and that they be freed forthwith.

Insults For Negro Women

34d Daily Worker

IT IS a sign of the times that Negro women now are being singled out for persecution. New York, N.Y. Mon 2-2-48

The callous FBI raid on the home of Claudia Jones, woman Communist leader, and the contemptuous refusal of Oklahoma's university and supreme court to grant educational rights to the Negro woman, Mrs. Fisher, are part of the same pattern.

Truman's political police want to deport Claudia Jones for the same reasons that the KKK-minded educators of Oklahoma's university are defying the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court which granted Mrs. Fisher equal educational rights

In both cases, it is fear of the democratic demands of the Negro people. It stems from a desperate desire to defend the rotten Jimcrow system which costs the nation such a heavy price. Daily Worker

The guilt for these crimes and indignities heaped upon the Negro women of the land rests equally upon the Democratic and GOP big-money parties.

Truman's agents are behind the Claudia Jones arrest, just as his Democratic Party is behind the insolent treatment handed out to Mrs. Fisher in Oklahoma.

But what of the GOP reactionaries linked to the big corporations which control the industry of the South where they finance Jimcrow because it helps them beat down Negro and white labor alike? New York, N.Y.

What of the GOP Congress which systematically works with the Southern poll-taxers to block an anti-lynching law? What is the GOP Congress doing to give Mrs. Fisher her rights in Oklahoma?

The fight for Negro rights gave birth to a new party in the 1850's. Mon 2-2-48

The same fight today has merged with the fight for the Third Party which will challenge the Truman-GOP line-up in November.

WILL ELLIS ISLAND in New York become America's first concentration camp? 34d Sun. 2-15-48

Public opinion may well ask this question as it views the arrest of John Williamson, Communist Party leader, who has been imprisoned at Ellis Island for deportation and denied all bail.

Gerhart Eisler also is being held at this island, with all the usual bail denied.

How many others will be flung into this new kind of prison for the "crime" of having "dangerous thoughts" hostile to the warmakers and the Wall Street trusts?

This is the new tactic of the Truman Administration's political police—to seize the most courageous men and women, like Claudia Jones, for example, and to hustle them off to Ellis Island. The idea is to keep them there indefinitely, while their appeals to the courts slowly make their way.

Quick public indignation caused the release on bail of the Negro woman leader, Claudia Jones.

Similar protest should make itself heard in the case of John Williamson and the others. Sun. 2-15-48

Claudia Jones Dramatizes Communist Fight for Negroes

34d The Worker New York, N.Y.

Sun. 3-8-48

The FBI, it could be said, is an old dog that never forgets old tricks. It ran true to form when it ordered its agents, on the night of Jan. 19, to arrest Claudia Jones, Negro Communist woman leader, for deportation proceedings. W. F. Watkins, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said that Miss Jones was arrested because she is a Communist and believes in and advocates the overthrow of the U. S. government by force and violence. It is well known that the accused is a member of the Communist Party, but the more literate sections of the American citizenry could have set Mr. Watkins and the FBI straight on the force and violence issue.

The Communist constitution expressely forbids such beliefs to its members.

Indeed for two decades the Communists have busied themselves with fighting against the force and violence used against American citizens in quest of their rights—especially Negro citizens.

Miss Jones, unarmed except for her typewriter, is not known to have lynched a single person. She has not pulled an electric switch once to send a lethal current through the body of a prisoner of doubtful guilt. She has not been guilty of denying the vote to a citizen. And no one, not even the Department of Justice, could offer proof that she ever organized, or was part of a mob.

AS A NEGRO, born in a British West Indian colony, Miss Jones was identified with America's submerged tenth—the voteless, the Jimcrowed the lynched. Her party—the Communists—identified itself with Miss Jones and her strivings for democracy and equality against the disfranchisers, the frame-up artists, the manglers of men. The Worker

Miss Jones heard of the Communists when Scottsboro was a magic word, a sacred banner. Four of the nine young Negroes, marked by Alabama lynch-justice for execution, marched across the stage of the old Hippodrome Theatre and the people went mad in their victory cheers. New York, N.Y.

THE COMMUNISTS had fought the force and violence of plantation justice applied by courts of law. If Communists could do that — American Communists—then there was hope here for a bright and wide awake girl like Claudia Jones. There was hope for the Negroes of America. Sun 3-8-48

The great movement of the unemployed, organized and led by the Communists, saw plank after plank of its program placed into the official government program. "Work or Wages!"—once a slogan of marching men in the country's streets—was realized in relief checks, food baskets and WPA jobs. Government recreational programs put idle artists to work and lifted the flagging morale of the people.

The Communists were there, too, hold of monopoly on the meat and bread and homes of the men and women who produce with hand and brain. 3-8-48 Sun.

That spirit can't be deported, and it can't be jailed. New York, N.Y.

If the FBI has in mind intimidating the people through its deportation program it's missing the boat. Its tyrannical acts only convince many more that the fight must be carried out all the harder. And there will be more Communists as a result of that conviction. have been under attack the Communists have been there. On the battlefields of Europe and Asia, in the fight against the Axis, 15,000 Communists were there—many to remain. The Worker

That is the organization Claudia Jones represents. That's the spirit the FBI and the monopolists its serves would like to squelch. That is the spirit of America; the spirit of the ever widening frontier. It is the spirit of the Negro people for freedom. It is the aspiration of the workers of America and the world to break the economic strangle-America against his program while Hoover and Heast were peddling his and Mussolini's fascist wares. The same FBI which snatched Claudia Jones from her home in the middle of the night as a dangerous alien, protected Hitler's consulates from the people who hated fascism. Spain's Republican fighters for their legitimate government had their staunchest American support in the Communist Party. Sun. 3-8-48

PICKET LINES of Negro and white marched in New York, Detroit, Cleveland—the people's fair employment committee. "Jobs For Negroes!" read the picket signs. Negro girls, like Claudia Jones, took their places behind counters and cashiers' cages. Negro porters and stockmen became floorwalkers and in some places managers.

America became a better place for the Negro. He wasn't up against a united white front. White workers learned what Communists taught about all men being brothers and grabbed the Negro's hand. Many died shielding a Negro from the vicious of the hate-crazed cops. Rose Pastor Stokes, a socialist flower from New York's East Side, was one of the victims.

The lessons learned on the hunger marches, in the Scottsboro demonstrations and mass meetings weren't lost when the factory chimneys belched their smoke again. Negro and white workers at work in the factories became restless for organization. Ford's River Rouge plant in Detroit and Autolite in Toledo saw mass flights for the right to organize. Communists were there. They were at Flint, Michigan, when the sitdown strikes started the auto workers on their road to a mass militant union. Sun. 3-8-48

'Free Claudia Jones Week' Opens Today in Harlem

Daily Worker

New York, N.Y. Mon. 2-23-48

A Free Claudia Jones Week that will culminate in a big rally next Sunday in the Golden Gate Ballroom on 143 St. and Lenox Ave., begins in Harlem today. Days of picketing and street corner meetings will precede the big Golden Gate event. A delegation to Washington will aid the fight.

This program of counter-attack was decided by 121 CIO, AFL, fraternal and religious leaders at an enthusiastic Free Claudia Jones conference at Harlem's Elks Hall Saturday.

The big ballroom, where Henry Wallace spoke a week ago, is expected to be filled with angry men and women, who are protesting the arrest of Claudia Jones, Negro Communist leader; Ferdinand C. Smith, Negro Secretary of the National Maritime Union, and other workers' leaders.

MARCANTONIO TO SPEAK

Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP-NY) and Councilman Ben Davis, Negro Communist leader, will lead the attack on Tom Clark and other authors of the present deportations delirium at the meeting.

Dr. Charles Petione, Trinidad-American leader and Abner Green, secretary of the American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born, which is defending the men and women arrested on deportation warrants, will be among the other speakers. New York, N.Y.

Many workers from other parts of New York joined Harlem's angry men and women at the Claudia Jones conference. Daily Worker

Seamen, who had picketed the U. S. Courthouse, where Ferdinand Smith was denied bail, were a vital part of the Saturday meet. New York N.Y.

TRANSPORT MEN THERE

CIO Transport Workers, whose organizer, John Santo, was arrested on similar deportation charges, were active participants as well.

AFL hotel workers, whose leader, Michael Obermeier, was likewise caught in the deportations' delirium, were present also with AFL ladies garment workers, CIO furriers, Harlem church leaders, women's leaders and child nursery representatives.

Ben Davis was applauded as he warned Clark that "Wall Street's imperialists and warmongers would not succeed in keeping Negro and white workers divided by this campaign of terror."

The applause got still warmer when Davis pointed out that a new fighting Congressman, Leo Isacson, would help the freedom fight.

WILLIAMSON WIRE

A message from John Williamson, trade union secretary of the Communist Party, was roundly applauded. Daily Worker

The message was in the form of a wire from Mrs. Williamson, who had visited her husband on Ellis Island, where he is held without bail in semi-isolation. It said:

"John Williamson asked me to wire you that he is also a victim of the same Un-American attack on the civil rights of trade unionists, the Negro people, the Communist Party and all progressives. All people must be mobilized now to protest such action as denial of bail and the tearing apart of families." Mon. 2-23-48

Ferdinand C. Smith, Gerhart Eisler and Charles Doyle, vice president of the CIO Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers, are also held without bail in the same concentration camp.

Richard B. Moore, West Indian American leader, and Bertram S. Alvez, secretary, the Harlem Civil Rights Congress, were elected cochairmen of the Save Claudia Jones committee. New York, N.Y.

DOYLE DISCUSSES CASE

It was emphasized by the American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born yesterday that Charles Doyle was not picked up by the FBI. He voluntarily appeared at the U. S. Immigration offices at 70 Columbus Ave., before he was rushed to the island without bail.

Doyle had returned to the U. S., after being officially barred on the Canadian side of the Niagara Falls bridge on his way home from a visit to Canada for his union.

A statement, which Doyle released through the committee, follows: Daily Worker

"After very serious consideration, I decided to come to New York City from Niagara Falls, Ontario, Canada, to surrender to the immigration authorities. . . .

"I became convinced that the only way to achieve my day in court, and to prevent a frame-up in my case, was to enter the United States and to surrender to the immigration authorities. I have no desire to violate any laws of th United States. In my 24 years residence in the United States I have never been arrested or convicted of any crime. I fel today that I have violated no law in seeking to return to my home and to my job in the United States. . . . New York, N.Y.

Communist (Deportation)

A Political Raid

34 D

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

ANOTHER political arrest has taken place. This time it is Ferdinand Smith, one of the leaders of the National Maritime Union. He was arrested the day after he led a delegation to Harlem in support of Henry Wallace.

Smith was seized in the same way that Claudia Jones, John Williamson and Gerhart Eisler were seized. Tues 2-17-48

SMITH

He has been rushed to Ellis Island for deportation to British Jamaica. Like Williamson and Eisler, he is being held for indefinite imprisonment, without bail. The political gestapo of the Truman administration puts its political opponents in the same class as murderers to whom bail is also denied.

The government's FBI agents claim that they want a test case for the Supreme Court on whether a foreign-born member of the Communist Party can be deported for advocating the overthrow of the government by force and violence.

Does the Truman administration have to arrest one victim a week, and to herd its victims into indefinite imprisonment, to get a "test case?"

Does the administration have to flout the rulings made by the courts in the 1920s which sternly rebuked the bosses of the notorious Palmer raids, Attorney General Palmer and J. Edgar Hoover? The courts denounced the refusal to grant bail to persons arrested for deportation on the same charges now being trumped up against militant members of the labor movement.

The charge of "force and violence" is an insult to the public's intelligence. There is no evidence, and there can be no evidence, unless it is faked and forged the way the Nazis faked and forged the documents of the Reichstag fire to justify their own anti-Communist violence. On Feb. 5, Attorney General Clark admitted to the House Un-American Committee that he has no evidence that would "stand up in court" on the force and violence charge against Communists. Daily Worker

The aim of these without-bail arrests is closely linked to the war drive of the Truman administration.

Smith is the outstanding leader of the NMU who opposes the anti-labor grab-Europe Marshall Plan. He favors a relief-without-strings plan as advocated by Henry Wallace. He has been seized as a means of assisting the pro-Marshall Plan forces within the NMU.

His arrest is a deliberate administration intervention within the NMU. New York, N.Y.

Does the Bill of Rights protect the right to disagree with the Marshall Plan and the Truman war-breeding policy? This is the crucial issue facing all citizens, regardless of their beliefs. Tues 2-17-48

We urge an immediate and firm public demand for the release of Smith and Williamson on bail. The refusal to grant bail is a confession of political persecution of the most cold-blooded kind.

This outrageous use of government police power against political opponents of the Truman policies should be halted by resolute protests.

500 Pickets Rap Move to Deport NMU Secretary

Shipping was suspended in the port of New York all yesterday afternoon as seamen protested the FBI's arrest on a deportation warrant of Ferdinand C. Smith, national secretary of the National Maritime Union and member of the CIO's national executive board. Daily Worker

The arrest came 18 hours after Smith greeted Henry Wallace at the Golden Gate Ballroom meeting in Harlem and sat by the side of the third party leader during the rally. New York, N.Y.

It came one hour before Smith was to take part in a 10 a.m. meeting of the NMU's national council at which plans were to be made for the struggles that are expected when the union's wage contract expires June 15. Tues 2-17-48

It followed Smith's active fight and vote against the Marshall Plan and his attack on Greek terror at a recent CIO executive board meeting.

Tues SMITH 2-17-48

The huge NMU hiring hall at 346 W. 17th St., was deserted yesterday afternoon while more than 500 Negro and white seamen picketed the U.S. Immigration offices at 70 Columbus Ave. Daily Worker 2-17-48

Some members of the independent Marine Firemen's Union and the CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards took part in the Columbus Ave. march. New York, N.Y.

The picketing demonstration followed a stormy meeting of 1,200 NMU seamen, who shouted their denunciations of the Truman administration's strikebreaking move.

Smith, the country's best-known Negro union leader, who came to the United States more than 30 years ago, was taken to Ellis Island as a so-called alien "red."

The same charge of belonging to an organization "advocating the overthrow" of the government was made against Smith that had been made against John Santo, CIO Transport Workers organizer, and other trade union leaders.

BAIL REFUSED

Bail was refused pending a hearing for which no date has been set. Daily Worker

The hiring hall emptied like magic after the meeting as seamen rushed to the Immigration headquarters at 62nd St. and Columbus Ave., without taking time to ask the police for a permit for fee speech.

Negro and white seamen, two, three and four abreast, circled back and forth in front of the building in a double revolving line, shouting the slogan: New York, N.Y.

"We Want Smith!"

A tall seaman, meanwhile, used the hood of a parked automobile as a writing table while he wrote the same slogan on placards for the pickets to carry. Tues

A delegation led by Frederick "Blackie" Myers, veteran seamen's leader, was demanding the right to see the Immigration officials meanwhile. 2-17-48

STALL DELEGATION

The crowd began shouting, "Let Our Delegation In!" while cops kept stalling the delegation off.

After the demonstration which lasted an hour, the seamen promised to come back in still bigger numbers

The 1,200 seamen at the special membership meeting served notice that they would fight the case through. Daily Worker

"We give notice that we will fight with all our strength to resist this attack," the declared in a wire to President Truman, Attorney General Tom Clark and Mayor O'Dwyer.

"We demand," the continued, "that Ferdinand Smith be released at once and this chiseling upon our civil liberties cease.

"We want no political prisoners and no reign of terror."

"Blackie" Myers, temporary chairman of a 15-man Smith defense committee, told the meeting that the polt against Smith began developing in 1921 when he was one of the leaders of the big seamen's strike. New York, N.Y.

The plot came into the open, said Joe Stack, former vice-president, when Smith took the stump for President Roosevelt in a national tour in 1944. Tues 2-17-48

The World-Telegram then raised the cry that Smith was a foreign "red" from Jamaica. Smith resigned from the union then but was elected in a subsequent referendum after he again filed his intention to become a citizen. He had originally d in 1920.

NMU president Joseph Curran, at the time, Stack reported, accepted the fact that Smith had complied with the union's constitutional provisions.

CURRAN REFUSES AID

Stack's castigations of Curran for refusing to help a brother union official, who was arrested during the present union-busting drive, roused a vehement response from the members. Tues 2-17-48

Vice-president Howard McKenzie told how Curran had announced his refusal to aid Smith at a National Council meeting that morning.

The Council, however, set up a committee, headed by McKenzie, to fight for its brother union leader.

"The arrest of Smith is part of the drive to smash the union and bring fascism and war," said McKenzie. "This drive will be defeated." Tues. 2-17-48

McKenzie's announcement that William L. Standard, NMU attorney had offered to raise Smith's bail personally, if necessary, got a big hand. Daily Worker New York

Detroit's giant Ford Local, with 60,000 members in the CIO's United Automobile Workers, protested Smith's arrest at a meeting of the local's executive board yesterday.

The three top officers of the Wayne County (Detroit) CIO Council, also blasted the arrest. Judge Patrick O'Brien, the motor city's liberal jurist, denounced it as well. Daily Worker New York, N.Y. 2-17-48

In New York, Michael Quill, president of the CIO Transport Union, attacked the arrest as "outrageous." Similar protests were made by the Furriers Joint Council, the American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born and the New York Civil Rights Congress spokesmen.

Waterfront Boils Over Smith Arrest

Daily Worker

By Art Shields

The waterfront is hotter than I've seen it since the big 1936 strikes.

The arrest for deportation of Ferdinand C. Smith, Negro secretary of the National Maritime Union, is the reason.

This former chief steward, who has been leading his fellows' struggles, since the big strike of 1921, is the symbol of the men's victories over the shipowners and the Jimcrow system.

Men coming back in focsles from Bremerhaven, Valparaiso, Shanghai, Salonika, Marseilles or Genoa are cursing Attorney General Tom Clark as a shipowners' stooge. New York, N.Y.

Seamen in a dozen coffee houses have told me that they'd never have built their unions if it hadn't been for men like Ferdinand Smith who came here from Jamaica some 30 years ago.

Many Negro seamen, whose jobs had been saved by Smith's intervention, were among the grim crowds denouncing Tom Clark. Mon 2-23-48

The Negro and Caribbean seamen, who make up nearly half of the membership of the National Maritime Union and the Marine Cooks & Stewards, are especially hot, though the native American whites are not far behind.

MULZAC LAUDS SMITH

"Every honest American seaman has an especially warm feeling for Smith," said his friend Capt. Hugh Mulzac, famous skipper of the SS Booker T. Washington, to me. Daily Worker

Capt. Mulzac said he wasn't just thinking of Smith's part in the fight to get a Negro skipper for the ship he commanded, and other ships too.

"I'm thinking of his successful fight to establish the NMU on a policy of no racial discrimination and to hold it to that line," he said.

Oliver Boutte, another Negro seaman, added that Smith was decisive in winning the support of the Negroes for the NMU at the start. New York, N.Y.

The Negroes had been sold down the river so often by AFL bureaucrats that they had to be convinced the new union would give them equality in the hiring hall.

Smith did the convincing.

Boutte is serving as acting secretary in Smith's place, while the pioneer leader is confined in isolation on Ellis Island.

FOUGHT FINKS New York, N.Y.

Seamen respect courage.

"Jerry King, Ray Carlucci and the other private detectives never scared Smitty' with their baseball bats in 1928 when the fink Mariners' Club almost took over the union," said Jimmy Gavin, chief tanker patrolman.

"You're damned right," added a seaman, who told of seeing Smith put two thugs out of his office on the waterfront in 1938. Daily Worker

Joe Stack, able seaman, who shares the co-chairmanship of the port's Smith Defense committee, with Frederick N. "Blackie" Myers told how "King, Carlucci and other stools" had Smith put on charges in the union in 1938. Mon

"Only shipowners spies tried to frame Smith," commented Stack. 2-23-48

The same type is behind the frame-up today, added another seaman.

Another thing men remember about him was how "Smitty" managed to keep the soup pot full when he ran the "soup kitchen" on the waterfront in the big '36 winter strike.

It was a tough job. But Smith managed to get supplies through his connections in the labor movement and other progressive circles. Daily Worker

"He made the stuff taste splendid," a Negro seaman remarked.

Smith, everyone testifies, is a master cook. New York, N.Y.

"And he fed men better at sea than any chief steward ever did before on a Luckenbach ship," remarked George Burns, an old timer, who sailed with Smith in 1931. Mon 2-23-48

I picked up my ears at this. I had sailed on the hungry Luckenbach line.

"Smitty did it by fighting with the port steward till he got enough for the men to eat," explained the old sailor.

I asked Al Lannon, Communist waterfront leader, a veteran seaman, who had served on the strike strategy committee in 1936, to comment on Smith.

"Well," said Lannon, "if it hadn't been for men like Smith, Joe Curran would still be a bosun on a non-union ship—because there wouldn't be a union."

COMMUNISTS

Long Voyage Home

Benjamin J. Davis, New York's Communist councilman who thinks Communism is a science (TIME, Jan. 26), uncovered another foul capitalist plot last week. This time, said he, it was "an attempt to intimidate the powerful Negro sentiment behind the presidential candidacy of Henry Wallace."

What got Communist Davis' dander up was the arrest in Harlem one night last week of Claudia Jones, 32, nee Claudia Vera Cumberbatch, known also as Mrs. Scholnick (for her ex-husband). Miss Jones, a Negro, is secretary of the National Women's Commission of the Communist Party, a member of its national committee, long active in the late Young Communist League and a frequent contributor to the columns of the Daily Worker. Time

Like Alexander Bittelman, the Russian-born Communist intellectual picked up a fortnight ago in Miami, she is an alien. She came to the U.S. from Trinidad in 1924, and the Department of Justice would like to send her back. She spent one night on Ellis Island and then was bailed out for $1,000. Promptly the Communist apparatus of protest (which involves meetings, indignant telegrams, denunciations) meshed into gear. Mon 2-2-48

It might be, however, that considerable time will elapse before Bittelman is deported to Russia or Claudia Jones to her native Trinidad. There will, of course, be the usual lengthy appeals to the courts. But even after they are exhausted, there is one other big hurdle in the way. Their native countries may simply refuse to take them back. Chicago, Ill

Deportation Drive Hits Minorities

By Art Shields 34d

Representatives of 14 American minorities have been seized in the deportations drive of Attorney General Tom Clark and J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief, since President Truman's war drive got under way two years ago. Sun-2-29-48

All were grabbed on charges of membership or former membership in the Communist Party—a legal party. However, trade union activities were the actual reason for the arrest of many of the victims.

This attack on the foreign-born minorities began before the arrests of Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the Communist Party, and other native-born progressives on charges of contempt of the House Un-American Committee.

Negroes, Jews, hard-working immigrants from many countries of Europe, as well as Latin Americans, Communist Party leaders and militant trade unionists have been grabbed on deportation warrants since 1946.

Four of them—John Williamson, trade union secretary of the Communist Party; Gerhart Eisler, German anti-fascist; Ferdinand C. Smith, National Maritime Union secretary and Negro leader, and Charles Doyle, vice-president of the CIO's United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers—are held without bail in the Ellis Island concentration camp.

FUND DRIVE to finance the appeal to higher courts to furnish bail is now being conducted by the Committee for the Protection of Foreign-Born, from its offices at 23 W. 26th St., New York.

A list of Clark's victims by minority groups follows:

Curran Foe in Maritime Union Arrested for Deportation, Taken to Ellis Island

Tues. 2-17-48

Ferdinand C. Smith, one of the nation's top Negro labor leaders and a founder and national secretary of the militant National Maritime Union, CIO, was arrested and held for deportation yesterday as an alien Communist illegally in this country.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Immigration Service, acting on the express orders of Attorney General Tom C. Clark, picked up the 54-year-old native of the British West Indies as he left his home, 270 Convent Avenue, at 8:30 A. M. They took him to Ellis Island, where, like Gerhart Eisler and John Williamson, Communist officials, he was held without bail. Tues 2-17-48

In its warrant of arrest, issued last Friday, the Government made two specific charges against the labor leader. It alleged that Mr. Smith was a member of an organization advocating the overthrow of the United States by force and violence. It also asserted that at the time of his last entry into this country on March 6, 1946, from Mexico, he did not possess a valid immigration visa. The Times

Mr. Smith's citizenship troubles began in 1944 when it was revealed that as an alien he was ineligible to hold office under the union's constitution. At that time he was also active in the American Labor party and made a national tour advocating a fourth term for the late President Roosevelt under auspices of the National Citizens Political Action Committee. New York, N.Y.

When the news of his alien status came out, Mr. Smith resigned his NMU office. According to statements made then, he took steps to apply for citizenship. On the basis of those reports, the executive board of the union declared him eligible to run for office and early in 1945 he was returned to his office as secretary in a tight four-cornered race. 34d

Mr. Smith said that he had entered the United States legally in 1918, that he had filed his intentions of becoming a citizen two years later but that because of frequent absences at sea he had neglected to complete the necessary legal steps. Immigration officials offered a somewhat different version of the story. The Times

They said he apparently entered the country sometime in 1919 as a seaman, making a number of trips after that. He could do this without a visa as a seaman, but once he desired to take up permanent residence, a regular permit would be necessary. They also denied that he could have taken steps to become a citizen, as he said in 1944, since, not being a legal resident, he could not file papers.

New York, N.Y.

Split With Curran

Since 1936-37, when the NMU was being organized and when Mr. Smith led a large contingent of Negro workers out of the International Seamen's Union, AFL, and into the new CIO union, he has been an acknowledged spokesman for the left wing in his organization and in the national CIO, of which he is an executive board member. Until recently he was closely associated with Joseph Curran, NMU president. Tues

Since 1945, however, the two have been at odds over national and union issues. This split was highlighted at the biennial convention of the union last fall in New York when they openly attacked each other from the rostrum. In lashing out at the Communists in the NMU, Mr. Curran specifically charged Mr. Smith had held his office "fraudulently" for seven years. In turn, the secretary hit at the policies of the Truman administration and at Mr. Curran. 2-17-48

The split has been widened by the third-party candidacy of Henry A. Wallace. In a vote held last month by the CIO executive board, Mr. Smith was one of eleven favoring a resolution supporting the Wallace move. Mr. Curran joined thirty-two others in voting against it. Yesterday Mr. Curran refused comment on Mr. Smith's arrest.

Civil rights were sinking on shore.

Ferdinand C. Smith, Negro secretary of the National Maritime Union, had been arrested and held without bail on a deportation warrant.

One hundred and fifty Negro and white members of the CIO Marine Cooks & Stewards crowded into the emergency dining room of the big ship.

"Ferdinand Smith," said the resolution, which they unanimously adopted, "represents one of the most capable and powerful spokesman, not only for Negro seamen, but also for all seamen, and particularly those working in the steward's department, in which he sailed for many years.

". . . it would be more patriotic to deport the dictatorial reaction which is striking at our right to organize," the stewards declared."

Full support, with all necessary funds, was pledged by the seamen for Smith's defense. Thurs.

A meeting of the Cooks & Stewards New York port organization at 6 Stone St. concurred in the resolution, when the ship arrived in New York. 3-4-48

"Similar action is being taken by other crews."

Smith Fought for Us--We 'Fight For His Freedom', Say Seamen

Daily Worker N.Y, N.Y.

By Art Shields

"Ferdinand Smith has been fighting for me since 1921—that's why I'm fighting for him now," said an old time seaman, Charles McAlister, as he was about to set out for a demonstration for the four hunger strikers before their release on bail. "Smith wasn't afraid of anything then, and he's afraid of nothing now," McAlister continued as he joined a group of seamen across from the National Maritime Union Hall at 346 W. 17 St. Mon. 3-8-48

"Smith and I were in the old ISU (the AFL's International Seamen's Union) during the 1921 seamen's strike," said McAlister. "We had phony leaders, who sold us down the river. There was Dave Grange of the Stewards Union for instance. Grange used to thump a big gun on the table when he opened a meeting. But he didn't scare Smith. I saw Smith tell him off again and again.

"Smith is a fighting man the seamen respect."

REPLIES TO CURRAN

"I've been in seamen's unions since I joined the ISU in 1921 and I've never met a better man than Smith."

"Joe Curran nor anyone else is going to keep me from working for Smith's release from Ellis Island."

McAlister, like thousands of other seamen, is bitter at NMU President Curran's brazen statement in Wednesday's PM that "I will not defend him (Smith), and I have called on the membership to reject him completely."

Curran knows who did the biggest work in building up the union on the waterfront after the collapse of unionism in the 1920s, said the old seaman. Mon. 3-8-48

"It was built by men like 'Blackie' Myers and Smith."

A tall Negro seaman, who said he was one of the hundreds of West Indian non citizens in the union who faces the threat of deportation, was almost too angry at Curran to talk.

"That man, Curran," he finally said, "wants to send us to our doom."

"Phil Murray's official support of Smith puts Curran on the spot," said another old-timer, Tom Lewis, "black gang," who also knew Smith in the old days.

"The seamen aren't going to let men like Curran keep Smith in prison on Ellis Island."

"FIGHTING FOR US"

Lewis has vivid recollections of Smith's work for the ISU strikers in 1921.

"I had come into port on the S.S. Baltimore," he said, "and I remember how Smith was traveling from the East to the Gulf Coasts and back in support of the strike. He was a working seaman, a steward, who was giving everything he had to the struggle.

"We didn't care whether Smith came from Jamaica or anywhere else. He was fighting for us."

Lewis added that he could understand why the bosses want to keep Smith in prison without bail.

"The bosses never forgive or forget," he explained.

Many seamen kept telling why they were fighting for Smith as they got ready to demonstrate against the concentration camp keepers at Immigration headquartes at 70 Columbus Ave.

"100 PERCENT BEHIND SMITH"

"My crew is 100 percent behind Smith. . . . We had a meeting about him when the radio opperator brought us the bad news," said chief cook Maxie Harris of the S. S. American Miller, a United States Line vessel.

"No," he added, "the men don't like Joe Curran's attitude towards a brother union member, a bit."

Harris, a Negro, said Smith was respected all over the nation.

Willard Thomas, a Negro utility worker, spoke out just as strongly.

Ray Gregory, an able seaman; Richard Ellsworth, a fireman, Al Andert, a junior engineer, and others had told me that they are to fight for Smith until he is released. Mon. 3-8-48

"Don't forget," said Sol Leviton, a seaman, who helped to promote Smith's tour for President Roosevelt in October, 1944, "that the enemy first attacked him when he was fighting for FDR. That was when the WORLD TELEGRAM smeared him. And Attorney General Clark had him arrested after he sat with Henry Wallace at the Harlem rally.

The Fight Goes On

THE RELEASE ON BAIL—at least for a few days—of Irving Potash, fur workers leader, is a partial victory but by no means a final one. New York, N.Y.

Now the job is to win the immediate release of his colleagues who remain—John Williamson, Gerhart Eisler, Ferdinand Smith and Charles Doyle. All five must be granted bail.

The hunger strike continues on Ellis Island and now is in the fourth day. Have you ever gone without food for four days? Thurs 3-4-48

They are risking their health, their lives, for the elementary right of bail, a right denied up to now only to murderers. The release of Potash shatters the red-tape alibi used to hold the others.

The savage persecution by the Truman Administration of these men is something that can be defeated. Once the facts are known, public opinion will surely not stand idly by.

These men have broken no law, committed no crime. They are facing an indefinite imprisonment—a veritable burial alive—because their political views don't meet the approval of the Truman-Marshall war makers.

Let the protests mount. Demand bail for Eisler, Williamson, Smith and Doyle. Wire President Truman now.

Ellis Island '4' In Hospital; Bail Ruling Due Today

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

Fri. 3-5-48

By John Hudson Jones

The four hunger strikers on Ellis Island were moved from their cell yesterday to the Marine Hospital on the Island. Today begins their fifth grueling day without food in their protest against Attorney General Tom Clark's refusal to grant them bail.

News of the latest development galvanized additional thousands to join the nation-wide picketlines and demonstrations that are demanding they be released on bail.

The four—Ferdinand Smith, Negro maritime leader, John Williamson, Communist official, Gerhart Eisler, anti-fascist refugee, and Charles Doyle, CIO union official—were notified yesterday morning by Charles Forman, officer in charge of Ellis Island, that they were to be moved to the hospital. They are all in the same hospital room now. All are in a weakened condition.

Their defense organizations—the Civil Rights Congress and the American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born—promptly wired Forman demanding that "a representative group of citizens and the press be permitted immediately to visit the four hunger strikers now being moved to Marine Hospital on Ellis Island."

Today, as on Wednesday at the Potash hearing, McGohey confessed he had no evidence of lawbreaking against the men.

Despite their weakned condition, the men had strength to send the following wire to Irving Potash: The Worker

"We greet your release confident with you on the outside the fight against holding people without bail will be intensified."

Abner Green, of the defense organizations, said in a statement that it would be more appropriate for Attorney General Clark "to observe the Bill of Rights and immediately release these four brave men on bail" than to remove them to the hospital. New York, N.Y.

COURT ARGUMENT

But in Federal Court in New York yesterday, the attorney general's underling, U. S. Attorney John F. X. McGohey continued to obstruct every effort to free the men on bond. Nevertheless he argued bitterly before Federal Judge William Bondy, yesterday, in the latter's chambers, against joint petitions of the four political prisoners for habeas corpus and immediate bail. The petitions were presented by defense attorneys Abraham Unger, Isidore Englander and Mrs. Carol King. Fri. 3-5-48

Despite McGohey's heated resistance, Judge Bondy took the petitions under advisement.

If he signs them early today there will be argument on the writs before him at 2:30 p.m., in open court.

All McGohey could say was that the "Attorney General ought to have a reasonable length of time to do his duty." Mrs. King pointed out this might take anywhere from one month to 10 years.

As We See It

An Open Letter To Walter White

(34D)

By Abner W. Berry

William Patterson, Illinois legislative secretary of the Communist Party, answers below some wrong contentions of Walter White, NAACP leader. Patterson a veteran of the labor and Communist movement, headed the International Labor Defense at the time that organization began the long fight which saved the lives of the nine Scottsboro Boys.

Ever vigilant to dangers facing the Negroes and democratic progress, Patterson's open letter is an eloquent and well-reasoned warning to liberals and labor—Negro and white.

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y.

Mr. Walter White,
Nat'l Secretary NAACP
20 W. 40 St.,
New York, N.Y.
Dear Walter:

YOUR WEEKLY comments on the vital national and international problems with which our country is confronted are undoubtedly followed with great care by thousands of Negro as well as white Americans. We, who are Communists, give your words the most careful consideration, if for no other reason because you are a leading spokesman for the powerful National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. This fact gives far-reaching political weight to what you say. It also carried with it the gravest responsibility for balanced reasoning, deliberation and above all for unchallengeable respect for the truth. Certainly you will agree with this.

You may well imagine then our surprise when in reading the Chicago Defender Column of Jan. 24, in which you so curiously oppose the efforts of Henry A. Wallace to build a third party movement, we find you resorting to the grossest distortion of the attitude of the German Communists in the '30s to the rise of Adolf Hitler. Please explain what is gained by such a twisting of history.

THERE IS, as you say, a comparison between the situation in America today and that which existed in Germany in the early '30s. But it is a complete falsification of well known and easily verified facts to say that "the Communists decided to back the worst possible candidate—Adolf Hitler—in the belief that the people would revolt against utter reaction and elect a left-wing government. . . ." The situation was just the opposite.

The German Communists not only fought Hitler from the moment he was brought upon the political stage by finance capital, until the day of his death, but in the early '30s they opposed Von Hindenburg and called for a united front against him precisely because they recognized Hindenburg as the tool selected by monopoly to blaze the way for Hitler. The Socialists and liberals of Germany supported Von Hindenburg, rejected the Communist plea for unity against him on the basis that Hindenburg constituted the lesser evil. This was a terrible mistake. Hindenburg was elected and shortly thereafter gave power to Hitler. Hitler destroyed democracy in Germany and brought on war. American boys died all over the world trying to stop fascism.

Daily Worker

THE CANDIDACY of Henry A. Wallace does not raise the issue as to which is the lesser evil as between the Democratic and Republican Parties. Both are desperately seeking to blaze a path for American fascism. The existence of Loyalty tests, thought control laws, Un-American Committees, a gestapo-like F.B.I., increasing anti-Semitism and terror against Negroes, created, nurtured and developed nationally and in the various states under Republican or Democratic Administration or through bi-partisan action is proof of that.

Both parties have become the lynchers of democracy and the instigators of a new world war. You yourself write: "We need a third party in this country because both of the major parties are afflicted with dry rot." Where then is the leaser evil?

New York. N.Y.

IT IS ON the basis of the lessons of Germany and the facts of America that one concludes that both old parties are worse. Harry Truman or Taft, Dewey or Vandenberg would play Hindenburg tc some yet un-named American Adolf Hitler.

The American Communists are as unalterably opposed to an American Hitler as were the German Communists to the Austrian paper-hanger. The American Communists will therefore not fall for the fiction, the myth of a lesser evil where none exists. We have learned the lessons of Germany. We sincerely hope that you will not follow the tragic path of the German liberals and Social-Democrats.

Jan. 29.-48

Sincerely yours,
WILLIAM L. PATTERSON

Truman Administration Has Over-Reached Its Hand in Frame-up of Claudia Jones

(34D) Communist

By Benjamin Davis

WHEN THE TRUMAN ADMINISTRATION placed its clammy and cowardly hands upon Claudia Jones, it touched one of the brightest flowers of Negro American womanhood. This time the Republican and Democratic reactionaries in Washington, led by the decadent Missouri compromise, have bitten off more than they can chew.

Claudia Jones is a worthy daughter of the militant and enterprising Negro West Indian citizenry of the country. The attempts of the subversive polltaxer Tom Clark to deport this outstanding young Negro woman leader, one of the most beloved Communist figures in America, will be defeated and will backfire with the detonation of an atom bomb.

Sun. 1-25-48

Three days before, the Truman Administration plucked Alex Bittelman from a resort where his rest was necessary to repair permanent scars to his health sustained in the course of 40 years of battling for the betterment of the American workers and people generally—Negro and white. Bittelman is a great Jewish Community leader, symbolizing the aspirations of the Jewish people in America, in Palestine and all over the world.

The Worker

Comrades Bittelman and Jones were both framed on a technical immigration charge, which is naturally quite important in their defense, but which does not affect in the slightest the fact that they were victims of Truman's drive to silence all opposition and establish a police, thought-control state in America. It is only on the basis of opposing Wall Street's drive toward domestic fascism and imperialist war, that the hand of the jailer can be pried loose from Claudia Jones, Bittelman, Eugene Dennis, Gerhart Eisler, Leon Josephson and a host of other fighters for the people.

With the arrest of Jones and Bittelman, the Truman Administration has placed itself at the head of the persecutors of the Negro and Jewish peoples, the two largest victim minorities in America. Long ago, the outright Fascist scum of the country, with unlimited and mysterious finances, had made the Negro and Jewish peoples their chosen scapegoats. The Truman Administration, moving under the cover of legalism, has given these gangsters its unofficial blessing.

Instead of arresting the Fascist lynchers and anti-Semites, the Truman administration is arresting, hounding and framing their victims.

The Worker, New York N.Y.

NOT SINCE the slaveholders' confederate regime of outlaws during the Civil War, has an American government dared to persecute Negro women. (The Truman Administration has broken one record—for which it will receive due credit!)

Sun. 1-25-47

If the administration thinks it will intimidate Negro women, it is in for a rude awakening. Negro women are intimidation-proof. Negro women, since Harriet Tubman (in whose pattern Claudia is cut), have been the backbone of the Negro people's struggles. They, who have been the defenseless victims of the lust of white supremacists (some of whom now sit in Congress), they, who must sell themselves in domestic slavery for a pittance—these women know how to fight. Today, more than ever, they are not alone.

The dirty underhanded way in which Truman's Gestapo arrested Claudia Jones is an obscene challenge to every principle of common decency. The bloodhounds—three of them—came for her at her home in the dead of night, when, they hoped, no kind of assistance would be available to her. Their intent was to strike terror into her and her friends and neighbors. But this failed, even as 300 years of terror against the Negro people has failed.

New York N.Y.

In Harlem, alone, there are almost 100,000 Negroes either foreign-born or of West Indian ancestry. Claudia's arrest is a threat to anyone of them, not to mention the West Indian citizens in other parts of the country. It is an attempt also to divide West Indian from native-born Negro—and to intimidate both.

One other record has been broken by Truman: He is the most shameless demagogue that ever sat in the White House! While he talks of "Negro rights," his only move has been to persecute the most defenseless section of America's most oppressed people—Negro women. Yet Truman has the audacity to ask for the Negro's vote in the Presidential elections! If the President's Civil Rights Committee—including its two Negro members, Dr. Channing Tobias and Mrs. Sadie Alexander—don't act to halt this move against Jones and Bittelman, then they stand exposed before the Negro and white masses as a fig-leaf for Truman's ugly nakedness. Truman, Dewey and the other obedient tools of Wall Street will never forget the name of Claudia Jones. We will win this fight. The Negro people and their millions of labor and white progressive supporters will smash the deportation order against Claudia Jones and Alexander Bittelman.

Free Claudia Jones!

An Editorial

(34D)

ATTORNEY General Tom Clark's political police have added a new name to their fast-growing list of victims.

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

This time it is that of Claudia Jones, young Negro woman leader, whose home was invaded without warning two days ago. She is now being rushed toward deportation to the British possession of Trinidad in the West Indies.

Wed. 1-21-48

The pattern is ominously familiar.

First trade unionists like Doyle, Obermeier. Then, Jewish leaders like Alexander Bittelman. Now a Negro woman. The "charge" is copied from Hitler — "overthrowing the government."

The dragnet is widening. The Palmer days are returning. No American is safe. If J. Edgar Hoover's police can't "get" this or that progressive on one "charge" they'll trump up another. The frame-up system is steadily wiping out democracy in our land. Daily Worker 1-21-48

President Truman must hear immediate protest! He should drop the infamously false "charge" against Claudia Jones and the other Clark victims. He should drop Attorney General Clark, the new Palmer trying to outlaw the Bill of Rights. New York, N.Y.

Harlem Acts To Help Free Claudia Jones

Daily Worker, New York, N.Y.

Mon. 1-26-48

A fighting organization to save Claudia Jones, young Negro Communist leader, from an FBI deportation plot, was set up in Harlem over the week-end. The response of Harlem to the FBI attack was almost instantaneous. At short notice more than 80 representatives of Harlem organizations crowded the meeting room of the Association of Trade and Commerce at 2370 7th Ave. Friday night on the coldest night of the year and organized a Save-Claudia Jones Committee.

Councilman Benjamin J. David will play an active part in the work of the committee.

A delegation will carry the committee's protest to Washington early this week.

And a Committee of Women for Claudia Jones, proposed by Audley Moore, Harlem woman's leader, will carry the fight into the homes of the people. 1-26-48

LEADERS HIT ACTION

West Indian Negro leaders, lawyers, physicians and trade unionists and business men were among the men and women who denounced the plot to send Miss Jones back to Trinidad after 24 years' residence in New York. Mon.

Richard B. Moore, temporary chairman of the committee, is secretary of the American Committee for West Indian Federation.

Cyril Philip, a Harlem business man, who chaired the meeting, is temporary secretary-treasurer.

Dr. Charles Petione, president of the West Indian Council, is taking a leading part in the fight.

Dr. Petione, an elderly physician, who had been a guest at the wedding of Claudia's parents back in Trinidad, bristled with anger as he scored the deportation plot.

NOW COMMUNISTS BACK FIGHT

Worker New York N.Y.

He was not a Communist, he said, but he wanted the world to know that non-Communists, who loved liberty, were fully behind the fight to protect American liberties.

He added that he personally doubted whether the Trinidad government would accept this girl, who had done so much to defend her people. New York N.Y.

Dr. Petione got that opinion after discussing Miss Jones' case with a representative of the British consulate in New York.

Attorney Hope Stevens, vice president of the United Mutual Lif

Association, warned that the attack on Miss Jones was part of a move "to confuse and divide the people in preparation for war."

GETS OVATION 1-26-48

Claudia Jones herself got a most enthusiastic ovation as she rose to tell of the FBI's night raid on her apartment at 504 W. 143d St. last week.

The FBI men, who pushed their way into her home at night were a crude and rude crowd, she declared. They tried to get her to let them search the place without any search warrant.

"The attempt to deport Alexander Bittelman and myself, and other men and women is a desperate attempt to frighten the people. That attempt will fail."

The crowd cheered this.

WON'T BE INTIMIDATED

Rose Gaulden, Negro member of the Communist National Committee, said her own father had been hanged by the Ku Klux Klan in the South.

"They are foolish if they think they can intimidate our people after all we have suffered," she continued.

History of Negro People Is Richer Because of the Communist Party

The Worker New York, N.Y. Sun. 2-8-48 (348)

By Benjamin J. Davis

Member, City Council of New York

TO THE EXTENT that the most hard-bitten foes of communism are honest, they cannot deny that the Communist Party, despite all its weaknesses, has cut a big sway in American life in the struggle for the free and equal citizenship of the Negro people. In connection with this special issue of The Worker, which is a tribute to the historical achievements of the Negro people, it is appropriate to ask why this is true. The unique contributions of the Communists have not been due to their militancy and uncompromising struggle alone, although plainly these are well known hallmarks of Communist activity. At various stages of the battle for Negro rights, non-Communist trade unions and people's organizations—especially the Negro people themselves, as today — demonstrate a capacity for vigorous struggle against Jim-crow, in varying degrees.

What makes the Communist party tick on this question is its theory, its Marxist-Leninist approach to the task of liberating the Negro people from the national system of oppression. Just as theory without practice is sterile, so practice without theory is blind, and sometimes self-defeating.

MARXISM-LENINISM equips one with knowledge of the general line of march, its relationship to all other factors, and with orientation upon the ultimate objectives. When one sees the goal toward which he is striving, and understands how that goal is to be reached, he is a thousand times more effective on the day-to-day current issues—for example, in the struggle against the poll tax and the white primary, against lynch law, against all forms of Jim-crow, discrimination and segregation. The bedrock principle of the Communist Party is the unity of theory and practice. The Worker

The Communist Party views the Negro question in America as that of an oppressed people, having all the attributes of nationhood, although these attributes are not as fully developed as in much older nations. There are, in reality, in our country two American nations—the Negro people, whose heartland is in the black belt of the deep south, and the dominant white—or so-called Anglo-Saxon nation. While the Communists were the first in modern America to put forth the concept of the Negro people as a nation, this established fact today finds strong strains of support in the views of such distinguished students of Negro history as Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, Earl Conrad and others. The Negro people are themselves moving toward recognition of their nationhood. New York, N.Y.

As any other nation—indeed, as the various nations inside the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and other bi-national and multi-national states—the Negro people are entitled to self-determination or self-government in the black belt areas, where they are in the majority and where their nationhood has developed. Sun. 2-8-48

Since the fascist lynchers, Rankin poll taxers and white supremacists rule the Democratic Party in the South, with the connivance of the GOP, and since both parties are controlled by Wall Street then it is clear that the liberation of the Negro people in the deep South lies outside the beaten, cynical path of the two major parties in the direction of their political self-rule which is the best guarantee of their democratic and constitutional liberties, whether under capitalism or socialism.

IN ALL OTHER PARTS of the country, the Negro people constitute a national minority, whose Jim-crow ghetto status is fixed by the lynch oppression imposed by the imperialists and their feudal flunkies upon the Negro in the deep South.

The Negro people are exploited not only as workers in common with white workers—but they are victims of double political and social oppression as Negroes, through Jim-crow, discrimination and segregation. The Negro question is a special question because capitalism has imposed special disabilities upon the Negroes. Even the Negro upper-classman who is not exploited as a worker, is nevertheless a second-class citizen as a Negro. American imperialism, to bolster its economic domination, has constructed a super-myth of white supremacy which holds the entire Negro people in inferior status, irrespective of their class. The Worker New York, N.Y.

Thus we have two aspects of the class struggle in America, the main one, which is the struggle between the working class and monopoly capitalism or imperialism, and secondly, the struggle of an oppressed nation for equal dignity and nationhood status, likewise against American imperialism. The working-class Negro and white has the main responsibility in both, for the two struggles are a part of the same battle. The white workers can never be free of exploitation as long as their black brothers are enchained, and the Negro people cannot win their freedom except through their united, unbreakable alliance with labor. The Worker

THE COMMUNIST PARTY first dramatically brought forward this dynamic and scientific policy in the celebrated Scottsboro case, 16 years ago, where for the first time the struggle for Negro rights became the practical, conscious responsibility of the white workers and progressive forces of the dominant nation. 2-8-48

This policy is the key to the march forward of labor and the Negro people in the most recent years, before the advent of the bi-partisan Truman Administration, which set out, with cunning perception, to smash this alliance—in order to enchain labor and to kill off the militant struggles of the Negro. Such are Wall Street's preparation for imperialist war abroad and fascism at home. New York, N.Y.

Commissioner Reasserts His Desire To Have Party Outlawed; Demo Chief Chooses To Ignore 'Such A Source'

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

Communist attacks on Birmingham Public Safety Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor and the State Democratic Executive Committee Saturday drew sharp replies from Connor and Committee Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey. 2-1-48 Sun.

Both the police commissioner and the committee were assailed by Sam Hall, Alabama Communist Party chairman, in a statement denouncing "segregation and all that goes with it in Alabama."

Concerning Commissioner Connor's declaration that he wanted to outlaw Communists, contained in his announcement as a candidate for Democratic delegate-at-large, Hall said it "should surprise no one" that the public safety commissioner wanted to do this.

THE COMMUNIST head attacked the Democratic committee "for not dealing with the real problems that face the people of this state."

"I want to say again," said Connor, "that I not only want to outlaw Communists in Alabama, but outlaw Communists all over America. That's why I'm for putting such a plank in our national Democratic platform. The News

"Since when did this vicious bunch of Communists, who take orders from Moscow and who want to tear down our American form of government, become so interested in 'full democratic rights' for the people of Alabama? Birmingham

"I'm still for putting the exterminator to them." 2-1-48

AT MOBILE, State Democratic Chairman McCorvey said:

"I do not care to comment on any criticism emanating from such a source. I feel confident that the people of Alabama know that our state Democratic Executive Committee has no other motive than to do what its members consider best for the Southland.

"And I don't believe there is a member of our State Executive Committee who would pay any attention whatsoever to any of the screwball and crackpot theories of government coming out of Moscow.

The Communist chairman's statement had asserted:

"The people of Alabama have their ancient trick for dividing the asked for bread and the State Democratic Executive Committee has given them the stone of prejudice—their ancient trick for dividing the people and blocking their progress." Sun. 2-1-45

WITH REGARD to Commissioner Connor's statement made when he announced his candidacy for one of the delegate posts to be voted on from the state-at-large, Hall said:

"It is significant that the most blatant support for this program of the State Democratic Executive Committee comes from Eugene (Bull) Connor, Birmingham's police commissioner." Sun.

The statement by the Communist chairman, who said he was a former Anniston newspaper man, also assailed the Democratic committee for having "fought so hard to put over the infamous Boswell amendment as a move to prevent the Negro people from voting." 2-1-48

"Their call for segregation and all that goes with it in Alabama," continued Hall's statement, "was a call to hold all the people of our state to a lower standard of living and to less than full democratic rights."

HALL SAID "the old-line gang who control the State Democratic Party machine didn't even see fit to mention" problems in the recent state meeting which he described as "burning issues facing the people." He said these were high prices, lack of housing, the problems of raising our standard of living and lack of voting rights.

"With his contempt for democracy," Hall said, "Mr. Connor announces he wants to outlaw the Communist Party in Alabama. This should surprise no one, since he has already outlawed the Bill of Rights, the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence in Birmingham, and it is obvious that he wants no opposition political parties in the state."

34d

"However, the Alabama Communist Party will defend its legality under any and all circumstances," Hall's statement added. "We shall continue to present our position on the issues that confront the people, to build our party and to do our part in working to make Alabama the great and prosperous state that it can and will be."

The News-Age-Herald

THE 1947 LEGISLATURE enacted into law the Beck-Martin "anti-Communist" bill aimed at outlawing the Communist Party in this state. Birmingham, Ala.

This measure, sponsored by Speaker Bill Beck and Rep. W. L. (Doc) Martin, makes it unlawful for political organizations which engage in subversive activities or seek to overthrow our government.

Hall, who recently came to Birmingham and said he intended to open Communist Party headquarters here, explained he is presently dividing his time between Alabama and Tennessee in his work for communism. He listed the party's post-office box here as 1891. Sun.

The Communist chairman said he worked on an Anniston newspaper until 1939, after which he did "free lance" work until he entered the Navy, in which he served four years, having been discharged in 1945. 2-1-48

BEFORE COMING to Birmingham, Hall said he worked more than one year for the Communist Party in North and South Carolina. He formerly was chairman of the Committee for Alabama, Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Hall, whose middle initial is J, said he is not related to Rob Hall, who formerly was secretary of the Communist Party in Alabama and who now is head of the Washington bureau of the Daily Worker, Communist newspaper.

The present Communist state chairman said he and his organization planned to open headquarters offices here and to register all Communists in Alabama and Tennessee.

The Revolt of the South's Democrats May Hit the Party In the Pocketbook

34d

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Sun. 2-27-48

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—One deep dent the Southern revolt will make in the Democratic Party next fall will be in the pocketbook. The Courier-Journal

This was decided in a private meeting of Southern leaders held this week in the office of Arkansas Senator John L. McClellan.

"We may have to take this civil-rights legislation if it's shoved down our throats," said McClellan, "but we don't have to pay the piper." Louisville, Ky.

"Down through the years, the South has been the backbone and the savior of the Democratic Party," McClellan continued. "Yet we get worse treatment from the Democratic leadership than we do from the Republicans." Sun. 2-27-48

Senators John Sparkman and Lister Hill (Alabama) and Olin Johnston (South Carolina) agreed that party contributions from the South were bound to suffer. So did Governors J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Ben Laney of Arkansas, who sat in on the meeting.

Senator Sparkman, however, expressed hope that the party split could be patched up.

"It would be a serious blow to the whole country if this split becomes permanent," he said. "I still believe we can avoid it; so let's wait and see what develops before we make any rash moves."

Note—Tipoff on the South's financial boycott of the Democratic National Committee was the recent action of Arkansas Democrats, who refused to turn in the proceeds of their Jackson Day Dinner to the national treasury. As their protest against the civil-rights message, South Carolina Democrats refused to hold a dinner. 2-27-48

James Ford in Brooklyn Post

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y.

The National Committee and the Kings County Committee of the Communist Party announced yesterday the assignment of James W. Ford, Negro Communist leader, to work in the Bedford-Stuyvesant community of Brooklyn.

Ford entered the trade union movement in Chicago in 1919 and became a leader in the Chicago Federation of Labor. Since that time he has been in the front ranks of the struggles of labor and the Negro people. Mon. 2-23-48

"The Communist Party," Ford stated, "will work for the election of a Negro to public office from Bedford-Stuyvesant. To that end we will unite with all organizations of the community and support any candidate around whom unity and a real peoples program for the District can be achieved.

DOWN in Charleston, S. C., a man is knifed to death. His killer defends himself by saying that his victim was a Wallace man and a Communist.

In New Jersey, an American Legion official active in professional "investigating of subversive activties on New Jersey's shore," as the press puts it, is found dead in his hotel room. There is no proof of any crime. Doctors say he shows bruises and a skull fracture. He walked into his room, undressed, locked the door, and was later found dead. Doctors admit he could have walked around for hours after he was allegedly struck. He called no one and did not communicate with either his friends or the police.

Yet the press is eagerly beating the drums of anti-Communist hysteria, just as they did in the Reuther case in Detroit. This is wonderful for the criminals whom no one bothers to look for amid the anti-Communist noise.

The Communist movement denounces all such violence, as the newspaper liars very well know. But that doesn't prevent them from slandering Communists and covering up for the real criminals if they can start violence and panic with their falsehoods. It is the tactic used against Negroes by the lynch press in the South. Decent citizens will be on guard against such poison.

Commissioner Reasserts His Desire To Have Party Outlawed; Demo Chief Chooses To Ignore 'Such A Source'

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

Communist attacks on Birmingham Public Safety Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor and the State Democratic Executive Committee Saturday drew sharp replies from Connor and Committee Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey. 2-1-48 Sun.

Both the police commissioner and the committee were assailed by Sam Hall, Alabama Communist Party chairman, in a statement denouncing "segregation and all that goes with it in Alabama."

Concerning Commissioner Connor's declaration that he wanted to outlaw Communists, contained in his announcement as a candidate for Democratic delegate-at-large, Hall said it "should surprise no one" that the public safety commissioner wanted to do this.

THE COMMUNIST head attacked the Democratic committee "for not dealing with the real problems that face the people of this state."

"I want to say again," said Connor, "that I not only want to outlaw Communists in Alabama, but outlaw Communists all over America. That's why I'm for putting such a plank in our national Democratic platform. The News

"Since when did this vicious bunch of Communists, who take orders from Moscow and who want to tear down our American form of government, become so interested in 'full democratic rights' for the people of Alabama? Birmingham

"I'm still for putting the exterminator to them." 2-1-48

AT MOBILE, State Democratic Chairman McCorvey said:

"I do not care to comment on any criticism emanating from such a source. I feel confident that the people of Alabama know that our state Democratic Executive Committee has no other motive than to do what its members consider best for the Southland.

"And I don't believe there is a member of our State Executive Committee who would pay any attention whatsoever to any of the screwball and crackpot theories of government coming out of Moscow.

The Communist chairman's statement had asserted:

"The people of Alabama have their ancient trick for dividing the asked for bread and the State Democratic Executive Committee has given them the stone of prejudice—their ancient trick for dividing the people and blocking their progress." Sun. 2-1-48

WITH REGARD to Commissioner Connor's statement made when he announced his candidacy for one of the delegate posts to be voted on from the state-at-large, Hall said:

"It is significant that the most blatant support for this program of the State Democratic Executive Committee comes from Eugene (Bull) Connor, Birmingham's police commissioner." Sun.

The statement by the Communist chairman, who said he was a former Anniston newspaper man, also assailed the Democratic committee for having "fought so hard to put over the infamous Boswell amendment as a move to prevent the Negro people from voting." 2-1-48

"Their call for segregation and all that goes with it in Alabama," continued Hall's statement, "was a call to hold all the people of our state to a lower standard of living and to less than full democratic rights."

HALL SAID "the old-line gang who control the State Democratic Party machine didn't even see fit to mention" problems in the recent state meeting which he described as "burning issues facing the people." He said these were high prices, lack of housing, the problems of raising our standard of living and lack of voting rights.

"With his contempt for democracy," Hall said, "Mr. Connor announces he wants to outlaw the Communist Party in Alabama. This should surprise no one, since he has already outlawed the Bill of Rights, the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence in Birmingham, and it is obvious that he wants no opposition political parties in the state." 34d

"However, the Alabama Communist Party will defend its legality under any and all circumstances," Hall's statement added. "We shall continue to present our position on the issues that confront the people, to build our party and to do our part in working to make Alabama the great and prosperous state that it can and will be."

The News-Age-Herald

THE 1947 LEGISLATURE enacted into law the Beck-Martin "anti-Communist" bill aimed at outlawing the Communist Party in this state. Birmingham, Ala.

This measure, sponsored by Speaker Bill Beck and Rep. W. L. (Doc) Martin, makes it unlawful for political organizations which engage in subversive activities or seek to overthrow our government.

Hall, who recently came to Birmingham and said he intended to open Communist Party headquarters here, explained he is presently dividing his time between Alabama and Tennessee in his work for communism. He listed the party's post-office box here as 1891. Sun.

The Communist chairman said he worked on an Anniston newspaper until 1939, after which he did "free lance" work until he entered the Navy, in which he served four years, having been discharged in 1945. 2-1-48

BEFORE COMING to Birmingham, Hall said he worked more than one year for the Communist Party in North and South Carolina. He formerly was chairman of the Committee for Alabama, Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Hall, whose middle initial is J, said he is not related to Rob Hall, who formerly was secretary of the Communist Party in Alabama and who now is head of the Washington bureau of the Daily Worker, Communist newspaper.

The present Communist state chairman said he and his organization planned to open headquarters offices here and to register all Communists in Alabama and Tennessee

Pickets At White House Demand 'Civil Rights'

The Revolt of the South's Democrats May Hit the Party In the Pocketbook

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Sun. 2-27-48

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—One deep dent the Southern revolt will make in the Democratic Party next fall will be in the pocketbook. The Courier-Journal

This was decided in a private meeting of Southern leaders held this week in the office of Arkansas Senator John L. McClellan.

"We may have to take this civil-rights legislation if it's shoved down our throats," said McClellan, "but we don't have to pay the piper." Louisville, Ky.

"Down through the years, the South has been the backbone and the savior of the Democratic Party," McClellan continued. "Yet we get worse treatment from the Democratic leadership than we do from the Republicans." Sun. 2-27-48

Senators John Sparkman and Lister Hill (Alabama) and Olin Johnston (South Carolina) agreed that party contributions from the South were bound to suffer. So did Governors J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Ben Laney of Arkansas, who sat in on the meeting.

Senator Sparkman, however, expressed hope that the party split could be patched up.

"It would be a serious blow to the whole country if this split becomes permanent," he said. "I still believe we can avoid it; so let's wait and see what develops before we make any rash moves."

Controlling The Professors

John Temple Graves

The Record

In their darkness our lights are dazzling.

That must have been a fine commencement talk Mark Ethridge, of The Louisville Courier-Journal, made at Tulane last week. He always makes them like that. But he went very wrong in two places, if rightly quoted. He said we shouldn't "fire professors for what they believe." It is upon this conventional libertarian sentimentality in America that Russia is counting. If Mark would say his speech the other way around he would see how wrong he is. For it amounts to saying professors can believe anything they choose and still be professors. They can be citizens, voters, speechmakers, writers of letters to the editor, yes, but I say they can't stand in authority over the minds of young Americans with just anything they happen to believe. This won't remain a free country long if we don't snap out of that particular sentimentality about freedom.

Columbia, S.C.

Then Mark used Bishop Oxnam's fallacy. He said, in effect, that we must make democracy work at home to halt Communism abroad. Their are many reasons for making democracy work at home, but that is not one. To say so, as does Bishop Oxnam—and now Mark—is to rob ourselves of confidence and the world of faith in an America where people are infinitely better fed and more free than in any Communist area. What's more, it is to give extremists among our champions of more democracy incitement to tear us to pieces in the face of the enemy when there is no need for such radicalism and hurry.

Sat. 6-12-48

It is the constant preaching of this fallacy by so many of our old-time New Deal leaders that produces misconceptions like Paul Robeson's. When that Negro singer refused to tell the Senate whether he is a Communist or not and indicated his ardent admiration for Russia, he said that when he visited that land he "walked the earth for the first time with complete dignity." Deploring injustices which do indeed deny him and the members of his race completeness of dignity in America, the liberal Miami News points out nevertheless that if he had been in Russia as a citizen rather than as a visiting and sympathetic foreigner he would not have been able to feel so dignified, no matter what his race.

He could not walk there with dignity, says The News, "as an artist, as a creative thinker, or as a human being." If suspected of anti-government ideas he would not be asked merely to testify before a legislative committee, "but before the security police. If he refused to talk, no time would be wasted in deciding whether or not to cite him for contempt. Speedily, and without ceremony, he would be introduced to the third degree." As an artist he would be bullied and blacklisted if suspected of anti-government ideas or art.

The Record

"In Russia today, Paul Robeson would be allowed no integrity as an artist, and no dignity as a person," says The News. Not because he is a Negro but because he is an individual and the state there is everything. Yet Paul Robeson, who is a great artist but only an average thinker, has been persuaded that because democracy in America is less than perfect Russia is to be preferred over America. I say it is time to stop this stale and everlasting implication that we can't face the world with what we've got, that unless we get a great move on, people will turn to Russia, that because we are not complete in the freedom, food and dignity we provide, there is balm for any of us, white or black, in Russia.

Columbia, S.C.

I wish The Miami News' editorial could be printed in every newspaper in America. It is so specific and graphic an answer to the fallacy our Bishop Oxnams are instilling into our Paul Robesons. The driven, herded, sick people of Europe are not meticulous about whether we have dotted the last "i" and crossed the last "t" of our democratic institution. In their darkness our lights are dazzling. Sat. 6-12-48

The Commies Have a Formula

Atlanta, Ga.

Sat. 5-29-48

There is no Communist "party line."

The Communists have a set of formulas.

Thus, in this country they have made a practice to join any liberal movement in order to smear it and lessen its chances.

They have vigorously aided the radical Negro organizations in the North, which insist on breaking the segregation lines immediately. They have patiently infiltrated into key unions, especially in the communications field. They are trained at parliamentary practices and they will argue and stay late until the opposition gets disgusted and goes home.

Work They work ceaselessly among people who feel their poverty is a result of their being kicked around. They exploit poverty, bad housing and racial differences. Sat

The FBI has been able to obtain photostatic copies of many of the membership cards in their lists. The Communists in this country have stacked their files with cards containing the names of many Americans in our fields of science, literature and education. They hope to have these "discovered" and thereby cloud the name of men who might aid the government in time of war.

They have joined the Wallace Third Party movement. Even Stalin has been invoked to help out this plan to get votes for Wallace. As the campaign comes closer we may expect the Communists to denounce Wallace and withdraw, hoping thereby to cause others to vote for him. 5-29-48

The 'Line' Everywhere there is chaos and confusion the Russians try to make those two allies fight on their side.

This may be the confusion and chaos in the Middle East, in France, in Italy and India—or the confusion in this country.

Egypt is a considerable distance from the Soviet Union. Yet, I noted in 1945 and again in 1946, the large staff the Soviets maintained in Cairo. The Constitution

The "line" there will help illustrate my point.

In Egypt the Communist Party is outlawed by law. But the Communist Party operates. It doesn't talk Communism or Stalin. It stirs up demonstrations against foreign troops and the British, two old standbys of the Egyptian politicians. It also agitates about working conditions and wages, which, respectively, are bad and low. It tries in every way to make the misery and general wretchedness of the masses articulate. All of this embarrasses the government and makes for great expense. Their latest success was a strike of the Egyptian police. The Russians never bother with religion there. Indeed, the Soviet Ministry includes a practicing Moslem who goes, with great ostentation, to service each Friday. Atlanta, Ga.

Iraq I note also that in Iraq, which is very close to the Soviet Union, and where the Communist Party is outlawed, that a very shaky pro-British government is troubled by the Kurds and Armenians, who are infiltrated with Communist agents and supplied with money from the same source. Sat. 5-29-48

The "line" there is to aid the already existing opposition to the government. The Communist underground works on students, office workers, and, more intensively, on the oil and railway workers. It also is friendly with the private soldiers and the non-coms.

Iran I recall seeing the Communist demonstrations in Iran in 1945. They consisted of two small and obviously slightly scared boys, carrying a sign advertising a meeting of the "Tudeh" each week. "Tudeh" is the "Peoples Party." But it is Communist. Presence of Russian troops in Iran, along with our own and the British, was enough for the party to exist. Now it is outlawed. The "line" is to play up the existing discontent with the government; to try and win some of the army and intellectuals, and always to point out the luxury of the ruling classes, which stupidly lives in lavish luxury amid awful and unrelenting misery.

In Syria, which has just recently outlawed the party, and in Lebanon, where it still is legal, the Communists have supported the Arab position on Palestine. The Constitution

The Russians have managed to get some few persons into Palestine. The two ships which sailed from Bulgaria some months ago and which put their immigrants ashore at Cyprus, certainly contained some agents. The pattern of underground immigration has offered a chance to get in other agents and the Soviets assuredly have not failed to take the opportunity. Atlanta, Ga.

The Communist "line" for the present is to keep supplying both sides with arms and promises. If any outside nation intervenes, she will insist on taking part. Sat. 5-29-48

She will move on to agitate for "partition" in other states with dual population.

So "the line" operates.

Arrested Communist leader nattily dressed at weighing-in

Tribune Los Angeles Calif

Sat. 7-31-48

NEW YORK — The two Negro Communists who were arrested last week by the FBI in the purge of active Communists in the U. S., presented extreme contrasts in their appearance and demeanor as they were "weighed in" by the FBI.

Benjamin Davis, New York City councilman and president of the board which publishes the Daily Worker, was the most nattily dressed of the entire 12 as he posed for his official FBI rogue's gallery potograph. (The photograph, however, didn't flatter Davis. In it, he looked jowly and sullen.)

Cool, self-possessed and chatty, Davis was splendid in a double-breasted, lightweight summer suit, a magnificent silk tie with diamond pattern, and a cocoa brown straw hat. 7-31-48

Almost the opposite to Davis in actual appearance was Henry Winston, veteran organizational leader in Brooklyn. Winston photographed a bit more benignly than Davis, but unlike the successful Harlem politician, was ill-clad in unpressed pants, wrinkled shirt, and a too tight white coat. He was glum and ill at ease.

May Day Milestones

Daily Worker

In Fights for Negro Rights

New York, N.Y.

By Abner W. Berry

BETWEEN April 9, 1931, and July 24, 1937, it was a long, hard pull, but we made it. In case you have forgotten, April 9, 1931, was the day an Alabama judge sentenced eight of the nine Scottsboro boys to death; July 24, 1937, marked the end of the legal trail in the case, and outright freedom for four of the boys. All but one of them are now out of jail—and they are all alive.

The story of what has happened to them is to be told elsewhere. I want to discuss six outstanding days in their defense. There are some who say that the most dramatic moments in the case occurred in court. They might cite the day in Decatur, Ala., when Judge James E. Horton reversed his own decision. Others might prefer the day—April 1, 1935—when the U. S. Supreme Court reversed the death sentence on the ground that Negroes had been excluded from grand and petit jury panels

There were the "April days" back in 1931 when the streets of New York rang with "Stop the Legal Lynching!" "Free the Scottsboro Boys!" Then there was the day in Havana when Cuban workers threw a stone through the Embassy window wrapped in a note which read "Free the Scottsboro Negroes!" Brussels, Berlin, Prague, Dresden, Paris, Buenos Aires and little Alabama towns echoed the New York protests in those days. The State Department had to request the Scottsboro transcript in order to answer the angry protests lodged with the American embassies.

Daily Worker

ONE DAY which should not be forgotten is the first of May 1932, when Mrs. Ada Wright, mother of Roy and Andy, two of the condemned boys addressed the Berlin May Day demonstration.

Mon.

May Days were highlights in the defense of the Scottsboro boyls. They were fighting days for the Negro people. They were heartening days for the nine boys who had escaped a lynching and lived constantly in the fear of the electric chair.

New York, N.Y.

And 17 years later Mrs. Rosa Lee Ingram, a Negro widow and her two teen-age sons are faced with a life-time in jail. Their crime was self-defense aganist a landlord's attack.

Through the Scottsboro mothers and the defenders of their sons, America became more conscious of the need to wipe out the stain of a modified slavery. The Negro people were introduced to America's progressive classes as a force in the fight for a democratic America as well as for their own liberation.

SIX MAY DAYS drove this lesson home. For the Negro people this tremendous show of solidarity in struggle ended their political isolation. They turned from the nationalistic messiahs. The folk poet, Langston Hughes, celebrated the long-overdue alliance with a poem entitled "White Worker, Here's My Hand."

Daily Worker

Mon.

For the Scottsboro boys and their mothers, as stated by the great French writer, Henri Barbusse, the workingclass movement "had abolished the misery of being alone."

4-19-48

Under a tall tree growing at the corner of 126 St. and Lenox Ave. in Harlem, Negroes gathered on May Day and heard the story of freedom. And in the blocks between there and 135 St. housewives and children prepared to march that day.

New York, N.Y.

This was a different kind of a holiday. This was the day when the things you spoke about in barber shops was placed on banners and flung to the nation and the world. The muttered protest of the southern black farmhand stood many feet high on streamers. The world knows today—May Day—that the Negro was not a contented clown. He was a fighter for his freedom and for the freedom of others like himself the world over. He was a man and a force. He was as strong as the thousands marching eight abreast past the reviewing stand in Union Square.

Daily Worker

AFTER 17 YEARS we are likely to forget. But the enemy does not sleep. He is marching, too. In bedsheet and legion suit he is chasing Negroes from polls, stopping progressive meetings and burning crosses—and books. But more—the Scottsboro brand of "Justice" is being meted to Mrs. Rosa Lee Ingram and her two sons in Georgia. The enemy wasn't completely defeated in the Scottsboro case; he's back again on the attack.

New York, N.Y.

May Day demonstrations were an important factor in saving the Scottsboro boys. May Day, 1948, can help save the Ingrams and spur the fight for Negro and white unity against the system that breeds Scottsboros and Ingram cases.

Democrats Are a Mighty Flighty Lot

(34d)

Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON—For a while there, the way those Democrats were inciting each other to riot, I thought I'd never get out of Philadelphia alive. And then I thought I'd never get out of Philadelphia, period. On account of my hotel bill. But the Democrats eventually subsided in favor of H. Truman, without actual mayhem, while the hotel man who'd socked me $19.50 per day for what he laughingly called a suite on an air-shaft let me sign the bill. And I beat it for home before the Democrats changed their minds again and held another convention.

Now that I've had a cool shower and a chance to think about their wonderful, wacky session in the city of brotherly love I have decided they are flighty folks. I say this advisedly and without meaning to insult 'em. I couldn't keep up with their whirligig. I'd turn my head for a minute and a Truman-hater would turn into a rooter for Harry S.

Friday 7/16/48

There was the Hon. Jake Arvey, of Chicago, who denounced Mr. T. for weeks and then announced one hot night that he didn't mean it. The Hon. James Roosevelt, who didn't think so much of the President, either, made a final speech saying he did.

I'll never forget the Hon. Claude Pepper, either. One night he was tearing down Ike Eisenhower's pictures and setting himself up in business, with kisses, flash bulbs and handshakes, the people's friend. He said he was going to be nominated as President.

The following evening the Hon. Claude was tearing down his own photographs. He'd changed his mind. The Hon. Ben Laney, the millionaire Governor of Arkansas, did the same trick, but it cost him money because he didn't change his mind until after he bought a supply of Laney-for-President buttons.

The supporters of Mr. Justice William O. Douglas couldn't decide whether to make him President, or Vice President. They bought signs advertising him for both jobs. Then he said he'd skip both of 'em. And along came the Hon. Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, who was sure he didn't want to be nominated as President, but couldn't make up his mind until the final penultimate moment whether he'd rather be Vice President or Senator from Kentucky.

By now the fellows were snarling at each other. Some of 'em from Alabama and Mississippi got up and announced they were walking out of the joint. The Hon. Sam Rayburn, wearing the unhappiest expression I've ever seen on a bald man, told 'em to sit down. Some of the Democrats cheered. Some booed. Some hissed. The situation was as gummy as my fingers, which were sticking together in the clam chowder the Democrats chose to breathe instead of air. Outside the night was cool, but within the convention hall the superheated Democrats were cooking themselves on gas.

A Georgian in horn-rimmed eye-glasses nominated Sen. Richard B. Russell as President. Delegate Tom C. King, of Alabama, simultaneously stood in front of a television camera and threw his pretty badge away. He said he wanted no more of the Democrats.

He led a parade of Southerners who paused under the Kleig lights and consigned their jewelry to the wastebasket. This was serious. Like a girl giving back her engagement ring.

As you may already have read, Mr. Truman did get the official nod and all I can add is that the next four years ought to be joyous. No more conventions, unless the embattled Democrats change their minds again. Keep all 10 fingers crossed.

Counter-Revolt in South

Detroit Free Press - Detroit, Mich.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES

WASHINGTON—The current attempt of some elements in the South to break away from President Truman and split the Democratic party in its traditional stronghold finds the South, itself, splitting in turn into groups to set up a counter-rebellion against the self-appointed state righters.

Sat. 7-24-48

This is helpful, in its way, because it shows dramatically that the whole South cannot be herded together under the Confederate flag.

(34d)

This resistance to the anti-Truman movement springs from various motives—personal conviction, awareness that the Civil War is over, and in some cases is dictated by practical political considerations.

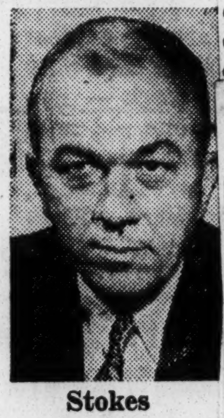
A SYMBOL IS THE South Carolina Federal judge, J. Waties Waring, of an old Charleston family who, even while the Southerners were rebelling at the Philadelphia convention against the Truman civil rights program, was declaring calmly from the bench that no subterfuges could be used by South Carolina Democratic Party officials to keep Negroes from voting in party primary elections. He announced bluntly that anybody who violated his decision would be jailed for contempt.



Stokes

To the Negro standing before him who had brought a case against discrimination, he said:

"It's a disgrace and a shame when you must come into court and ask a judge to tell you you are an American."

Those words might well become historic.

THERE ARE MANY PEOPLE all over the South who look upon extension of the franchise as a primary civil right that must be granted to make the South and its politics truly democratic. The judge was merely backing up the United States Supreme Court in its outlawry of the "white primary" and the Supreme Court was only upholding the Constitution.

Detroit, Mich.

IT IS INTERESTING THAT it happens in the state which led the way to secession in the Sixties, and the state which has provided, in Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, the presidential candidate of the new Confederate movement organized at Birmingham.

This alliance may impede Gov. Thurmond in lining up his state electors against President Truman.

Sat. 7-24-48

It bespeaks the ferment all over the South today out of which may come something not anticipated by the Birmingham revolutionaries. For other elements in the South will refuse to go along with this rump rebellion, including church groups, labor groups and independent citizens who are working quietly in behalf of extension of civil rights.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Hail And Farewell

Wash Post

ALTHOUGH this article must be written and out of my hands before the nominations are made at Philadelphia, I am assuming that the predictions are correct and that the ticket will be Truman and Barkley. If that is it, the convention will have made the best it could out of Mr. Truman's refusal to step aside.

LIPPMANN

7-15-48

It will have made it possible for Senator Barkley to become the caretaker of the party once Mr. Truman leaves the White House. For while Mr. Barkley is only the second man on the ticket, he will be the first man of the party when it becomes the opposition. Only in Congress will the Democratic Party play a responsible part in the National Government. Senator Barkley is already the Democratic leader in Congress. As the nominee of the convention for Vice President, he will have the clearest mandate to exercise his leadership which the party was able to give him.

Wash. D.C.

34d

HAD THE party expected to elect Mr. Truman, it would not have turned to an elder statesman to be his running mate. The choice of Barkley, who is older than Truman but is a highly experienced legislator and a trusted party leader, is as frank a recognition as the circumstances and the rules of the game permitted that the Democrats have written off this election, and are looking beyond it. The managers and the orators of the convention came as near to saying this as they could. They dwelt upon the record of the past, upon the achievements of Wilson and Roosevelt, passed over the Truman period in virtual silence, treating it as an interlude, and reaffirmed the big attitudes and aspirations to which a new generation of Democrats, as yet unseen and unknown, will give substance and meaning.

Wash. Post

IT HAS been said, notably by Mr. Farley, that the Democratic leaders and bosses did a disservice to the party by manifesting their opposition to Mr. Truman. They have, so runs the complaint, torn down the man whom they were bound to nominate and support. Mr. Farley is, I think, too preoccupied with the orthodox routine of party organization. The opposition to Truman did not tear down a strong and successful leader: There would not have been the wide and varied opposition if the Truman leadership had not already broken down. For the different factions to have pretended that they were happy and harmonious would have deceived no one—least of all the disaffected rank and file. It would have built up the Truman Administration.

But it would have stifled the one best thing in the Democratic Party, the very thing which will enable it to survive defeat, and to recover. That is its vitality and freedom, its enterprise and adventurousness, often undisciplined, sometimes reckless but, nevertheless, the secret of its hold upon those who look forward and want to go forward. Had the convention followed Mr. Farley's advice and shown itself to be complacent, partisan to the point of hypocrisy, the result would have been more melancholy than it is. For then, in addition to certain defeat this year, the party would have made it much more difficult for those who cannot support Truman now to remain Democrats for the future. They would have been homeless, unable to stay with the Truman Democrats, unable to go to Wallace.

The great clatter of the anti-Truman opposition was the noise of the doors being forced wide open for a new generation to enter.

Wash Post

THE NEW generation of Democrats will not be ready and available for some years to come. Nor, unless there is a national or international catastrophe, are the Democrats likely to return for at least 8 years, perhaps for 12 or 16 years. Under Dewey and Warren there is every reason to anticipate a long period of Republican rule. For Dewey is not only likely to be an extremely competent President but an astute party leader as well, quite capable of holding the conservatives while he reaches out for the progressives.

For some considerable time, therefore, the Democratic opposition will not be dealing with the Republican Party they have been used to for the past 16 years but with something much more formidable, more intelligent, more attractive—with a party which moves in the tradition of Theodore Roosevelt, of Root, of Stimson rather than of Hoover, Coolidge and Landon. The new generation of Democrats will be educated by serious competition. That is something they have lacked for 30 years, and that is one of the main reasons why, after Roosevelt, they have no great national figures today.

AS THE Democratic Party relinquishes its power, it is torn by factionalism, yet I think there are both general and specific reasons for disgreeing with those who, like Mr. Wallace, say that the party is dying. The general reason is that American parties do not die. My old friend and colleague, Herbert Croly, used to say that the two American parties were like primitive organisms which cannot easily be killed: If their heads and tentacles are cut off, they grow new ones. Experience hears him out. The Democrats, who tore themselves to pieces in 1924, won overwhelmingly in 1932; the Republicans who in 1936 looked to be as down and out as it was possible to be, would, but for the war, have been probable winners in 1940, certain winners in 1944.

Wash. D.C.

The factionalism of the Democrats today is not, it seems to me, so violent as it was after the Wilson period. There are no controversies so apparently irreconcilable as were those which raged over the Ku Klux Klan, prohibition, Al Smith and Bryan. My own notion is that any party, when it has exhausted its mandate to govern, becomes factional. But its divisions are not what cause it to lose power. It is the prospect of losing power that incites and releases the factions of which all great parties are invariably composed.

THE COUNTRY, all of it, may, therefore, say to the Democrats as they relinquish the power they have held so long and the heavy responsibilities they have borne through dangerous days: "Hail and farewell . . . we shall meet again . . ."

Williams Urges Wallace To Quit Party, Come Home

The Advertiser

FORMER NYA Administrator Aubrey Williams called on Henry Wallace Saturday to "repudiate" the Progressive party as now constituted and "come on back home."

Mon. 7-26-48

Williams, a close friend of the former vice-president, made his appeal in a front page editorial in the current issue of his paper, The Southern Farmer. The editorial added:

Montgomery Ala.

"It should be as clear as the noon-day sun by now to Henry Wallace, as it was to practically 100 per cent of all other Progressives 10 months ago, that he is being used to weaken and defeat the efforts of the U. S. to reach an understanding with Russia.

"Wallace should repudiate the whole thing and come on back home. He is the last man in America who should have gotten mixed up with that New York crowd of sharpers."

Williams said he agreed that the nation needs a Progressive party but not one built around the Communist - dominated clique which sits at the center of the Wallace movement."

Tues 7-26-48

The Southern Farmer publisher noted that "it is still the belief of some of us" that the Democratic party with all of its shortcomings, is the best means of achieving a Progressive political party in this country.

He said the party at its recent national convention at Philadelphia, showed that it still believes in the Progressive principles which the party stood for under Jefferson, Jackson, and Roosevelt.

COALITION IS VIEWED AS RIGHTS PLANK PERIL

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People expressed fear yesterday for the survival of President Truman's civil rights program in the Democratic platform in view of the coalition of anti-Truman Democrats of the North with Southern Democrats.

New York Times

Walter White, secretary of the association, noted the problem in telegrams to James Roosevelt, chairman of the California Democratic Committee; Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey of Minneapolis, Minn.; Jacob M. Arvey, Democratic leader of Chicago; Chester Bowles of Connecticut and Mayor O'Dwyer.

The five were among northern Democrats who joined last week with Southern leaders in calling a caucus at Philadelphia for Saturday to consider a candidate other than President Truman.

"Your support of civil rights legislation reported in today's papers is appreciated by Negro Americans," the telegram said. "However, these and other Americans are puzzled by your apparent coalition with such bitter opponents of civil rights as Senator [Lister] Hill of Alabama, Governors [J. Strom] Thurmond of South Carolina, [Ben T.] Laney of Arkansas and [Robert M.] Tuck of Virginia.

Tue. 7-6-48

"How do you propose to press for inclusion of civil rights plank in Democratic party platform while working hand in hand with these Southern politicians who have openly declared they would rather see the party defeated than permit inclusion of a plank upholding equality of citizenship for all Americans?"

Representative Emanuel Celler, the New York member of the convention platform committee, said yesterday he would insist upon inclusion of President Truman's civil rights program in the platform.

At The C

Convention

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.

THE Monday morning caucus of the Alabama delegation was vehement, testy and aimless.

The bloody spurs left wounds which may be festering through the 1950 election of a governor and a senator.

What happened at the caucus this morning was plainly traceable to one thing alone—frustration of Alabama in trying to find a way to assert its rebellion against efforts to reorder and reconstitute its social pattern.

Because of legal barriers, because of the absence of an inspiring and authoritative leader of the Southern people, the South is beating its wings against the iron rods of its Democratic cage.

Montgomery, Ala.

Because of this frustration and despair, members of the Alabama tribe have turned upon each other in civil strife. In the presence of a commanding leader and the hope of victory in November, Alabama's political leaders would not have been at each others throats Monday morning.

The aimlessness of the delegation's wrangling is characterized by the fact that in a bruising controversy between the walk and non-walk factions, the walkout leader couldn't even tell this morning at just what point a delegation takes its walk. And at the same time the walkers out were prevailing over their adversaries they appointed a member of the convention committee to notify President Truman of his nomination.

Tues. 7-13-48

Montgomery Advertiser

HERE in the convention hall this morning it is difficult to demonstrate that it makes any difference whether the Alabama delegation walks or remains through Truman's first ballot nomination.

The caucus this morning had considerably more bearing on Alabama political affairs than on the proceedings of the Democratic Convention. Ancient vendettas, rivalries, jockeying for position in the 1950 race for governor—those were the ingredients in the angry pot that boiled in the midday Philadelphia heat.

Handy Ellis, who was defeated by Folsom in the 1946 primary, told The Advertiser that he was again a candidate for governor. Ellis said:

"Yeah. I'm going to run."

Near Ellis as he said this were former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, who likewise desires to run, Albert Stapp, Albert Carmichael, Birmingham Commissioner "Bull" Connor.

Essentially the Alabama strife hinged on the tug between Handy Ellis and Senator Lister Hill for chairman of the delegation. In the end Ellis won out.

The Ellis walkout group had wanted to postpone the election until Lester A. Farmer of Dothan, who is a sick man, could be flown to Philadelphia. In the absence of Farmer, Alternate Delegate George Wallace, of Clayton, would have stepped in and destroyed the Ellis majority.

Tues. 7-13-48

BUT this morning it was ruled that the alternate could not be seated until the convention began. That kept Wallace, who was present and eager to participate, from coming to the aid of Hill. A vote on seating Wallace was taken and the Ellis guard prevailed.

Said Atty. Gen. Albert Carmichael:

"I denounce it as unfair and illegal in every way."

Whether Delegate Farmer was really expected to be flown here in time for the caucus this morning or whether that was a fabrication to keep Wallace from taking his place until too late, we don't know. Ellis said today that he might still be coming. But we hear otherwise that Farmer is in bed after his operation with drainage tubes in his midriff.

After the Wallace exclusion vote, the fur flew to the extent that, for example, protesting Atty. Gen. Carmichael was met with a burst of "shut up."

Former State Senator W. W. Malone of Athens, said of the whole business it was the "biggest fool thing" he ever saw, and promised to pop it to members of the Ellis faction between now and November.

Of the Ellis victory, Ellis, now sitting solidly as chairman, told the caucus with some frankness:

"We had the majority—we meant to use it ruthlessly, just as the others would have used it ruthlessly."

Such words and threats as these are not likely to be forgotten as the 1950 campaign for governor takes form and assumes motion.—G. C. H.

Harry Truman Is Named Pallbearer In Chief

Columbia Record
Columbia, S.C.

Harry S. Truman is the seventh vice president to become President through the death of an incumbent President.

He is the third vice president to be nominated to succeed himself after attaining the Presidency. Thurs. 7-15-48

Only two of the other six, both of them Republicans, were nominated to succeed themselves—Theodore Roosevelt and Calvin Coolidge.

In 1904 President Theodore Roosevelt's name was the only one put before the Republican convention and in the 1924 convention the first ballot produced 1,065 votes for President Coolidge, 34 for Senator Robert La Follette of Wisconsin and 10 for Senator Hiram Johnson of California.

As for President Tyler in 1844 and President Johnson in 1868, neither had any chance of nomination by their respective parties and Johnson even had enough of the White House. Both had broken their party ties four years before to run on the ticket of the opposition party.

Columbia Record

President Fillmore was rejected in 1852 and President Arthur in 1884 simply because the conventions found candidates they liked better. Fillmore, last the Whig Presidents, had agreed to the compromise of 1850 on slavery and had signed the fugitive slave act. That cost him the support of the anti-slavery Whigs. He led by only two votes on the first ballot at the Whig convention of 1852 and eventually lost the nomination to General Scott, the war hero, who was, of course, defeated in the election.

Columbia, S.C.

As for Arthur, he hadn't made a bad President despite the unsavory political past he brought to the vice presidency. But his effort at reform lost him the favor of many party workers and the Republicans felt that they needed New York's electoral votes to win. Arthur's bad political record had been made in New York state. Finally in James G. Blaine the party found a leader about whom the party workers could be enthusiastic. Blaine led Arthur by more than 56 votes on the first ballot and continued to gain as Arthur's strength declined. He was nominated on the fourth ballot.

The trouble with the unhappy Democrats this year is that they cannot find another candidate upon whom they could agree. General Eisenhower might have filled the bill, But Eisenhower isn't available. And so the nomination goes to Truman by default with a few bitter-enders holding out. And when the party is to be defeated and can not find a winner does it matter much who is selected to lead it into the valley of the shadow of disaster?

And last night Truman was nominated to preside over the dissolution of the Democratic party. It is the one job that he can do. He cannot win the election. That now is beyond the capacity of any candidate. Now even General Eisenhower now could weld the warring factions together in time to win the election. The wounds are too deep and there is too much emotion mixed up in the conflict. 7-15-48

Everybody is deserting the sinking ship. Every top labor leader was invited to address the convention. Everyone of them refused, except one, Whitney of the railroad brotherhoods. Labor, which has a lot to learn about politics, isn't willing to go down the line for Truman in a hopeless fight even though the Democratic platform promises the repeal of the Taft-Hartley act. The labor leaders know that they cannot control the rank and file. The left-wingers, most of them at least, are off chasing the Wallace will o' the wisp. And the South is mad enough to froth at the mouth. There has even been some frothing, as in the debate over seating the Mississippi delegation. A few of the Southern delegations—South Carolina's among them—are even set to walk out of the national party and carry their states with them. Some of the other Southern states where the Republican party has advanced beyond the rudimentary stage may vote for Dewey and Warren. The Republicans are to make an effort to capitalize upon this Southern discontent and try to channel it into Republican votes.

The great wake is over. Truman, dapper and cocky, hardheaded and courageous, has been named pallbearer in chief and the trek to the graveyard begins. Let the band strike up the "Death March."

Democrats And The Future

The Louisiana Legislature has initiated action to provide fo the names of Truman elector nominees being placed on the ballot in that state for the November presidential election, but there's an odd mix-up in the whole situatic and national Democratic officials are not pleased by the present prospect.

It is proposed to list Truman nominees if 100 voters sign a petition by Oct. 5 nominating 10 candidates. A legislative committee side-tracked a proposal to permit the National Democratic Committee to file a Truman slate. It was opposed as invading states' rights. The Truman candidates would be designated as representing the national Democratic Party, but would not appear under the rooster, the traditional symbol of the Democrats in that state.

Democratic National Chairman McGrath had wired Gov. Earl Long protesting against "any scheme" to "shunt" Truman and Barkley "off into a column other than that always accorded nominees of the Democratic Party." Sat. 9-25-48

Obviously the national party officials feel that the Truman slate would be handicapped if it did not appear under the regular symbol and are concerned as to what would be the result under those conditions. On the other hand, the "States' Right" group doubtless is confident that with its own ticket appearing under the regular symbol, it would make an impressive showing against the national party candidates.

Here again is raised the important question as to what future relations of the national Democratic organization will be with the dissenting Democrats of the South.

"States' Rights" group adherents have proclaimed their intention of striving to gain dominance in the party throughout the nation. But there are millions of Democrats in other parts of the country who will resist such efforts and it seems highly unlikely that the Southerners will gain any such ascendancy. The News

On the other hand, many factors are deepening the cleavage between these Democratic groups and developing a relationship that will make future reunion a complex and difficult task. Birmingham, Ala.

Does this mean that a more or less permanent disruption of the party is going to result? The present, in all its controversy, bitterness and complexity, does not provide a clear answer to that very important question. Sat. 9-25-48

Should We Split The Democratic Party?

To the Editor of The News:

All over the South where I travel constantly, money is being spent, speeches are being made, and letters are being written by States' Rights Democrats. You published two in your edition of Sept. 20.

The thing about all this movement that impresses me is how many things the States' Rights Democrats have evidently failed to think through. All the speeches and articles dwell upon one theme, namely, that Mr. Truman's civil rights program is anathema to the South and the Dixiecrats are opposed to it. There is no argument upon that point. Almost every Southern white man believes exactly the same thing. The whole question simply is as to what is the wisest thing to do about it. We should learn a lesson from history.

In the 1860s there need not have been a civil war in this country. Slavery was a right guaranteed by the federal constitution. The Dred Scott decision had confirmed it. Abraham Lincoln then stood for protection of slavery where it existed, but for no extension of it. Had the South met the abolition sentiment of the North with a constructive program of gradual abolition, the slave-holders being compensated either in labor or money for slaves set free, the whole question could have been settled within the national Congress and without all the tragic consequences that followed attempted secession.

Personally, I think that a state that comes into the Union may have a right to leave it, but I do not think it would be wise to do it. By the same token, I think the States' Rights Democrats have a right to split the Democratic Party, put Tom Dewey into the White House, and produce a situation where, no matter who is president, three-fourths of the country will be opposed to the South on everything, but I do not think it is a wise course to follow.

States' Rights Democrats undoubtedly can control a large part of the electoral vote of the South and thereby defeat Mr. Truman, but what will they gain by such defeat? No election is going to be thrown into the House of Representatives. The defeat of Truman means the certain election of Dewey, and that means all the recent Republican Congress stood for and worse. The Republicans killed OPA, and the next week lumber advanced $15 per 1,000 feet and all things climbed with it. Republicans have listened to the manufacturers' and real estate lobbies and done nothing to reduce the cost of living or make possible cheaper homes for poor people. They have done nothing for veterans and propose at their next session to tax the pensions of disabled veterans. They gave lip service to the Marshall plan and then proceeded to scuttle it by reducing the appropriation for it until whipped into line by public opinion. They refused to make a loan to the United Nations for permanent buildings until forced to do so by threat of moving that headquarters to Europe. They have opposed TVA, and favored exploitation of the people by private power interests. They retained the odious oleo tax upon colored margarine made mostly from Southern oils. They have opposed farm benefits vital to the Southern farmer. They favored the infamous Bulwinkle bill for railroads. At every turn they have favored the rich at the expense of the poor.

Dewey owes his nomination to this group and will listen to the voice of his masters. In fact, he does not seem to have an opinion or hold a conviction until he consults his masters. He has no national or international experience. While Stassen, Lodge, Truman and Thurmond were volunteering to risk their lives to help save their country, Dewey was hiding out, so he could run for office, if and when they did save it. Certainly, on every question except civil rights, the position and experience of Mr. Truman is vastly to be preferred by the common man to that of Mr. Dewey, and even on civil rights, I prefer a Democratic president and Congress to Republicans. In a Democratic administration which might owe its very existence to the loyalty of Southern Democrats, those Democrats would certainly control Southern patronage and exercise much more influence upon every question.

In short, since we cannot secede from the Union and have our own little country, my advice to all Southern Democrats is to remain within the party, whether we like everything or not, and work like mad to return a Democratic administration before it is too late. Even in defeat, such loyalty would exercise a strong voice in reorganization of the party, but in any defeat due solely or principally to deflection of the Southern states, Democrats from those states will remain an independent and weak party, for, however much we believe in the principle of states' rights, to support an independent states' rights ticket is to walk out of the national Democratic Party, if I can think straight.

VIRGINIA'S Democratic Party machine is accomplishing the same thing it once planned to do under the TUCK-sponsored anti-TRUMAN law passed by the last Legislature but without risking party "irregularity" —entirely for selfish reasons, since the South has made a fetish of regularity in order to retain a stranglehold on its political power.

Negroes for the past twenty years have thrown the strength of their voting support to the Democratic Party in this state, but the party now slaps them in the face on a purely anti-Negro issue. Mr. TRUMAN'S courageous if "politically inept" program is anathema to the South. The South's counterfeit claim that state's rights entitle it to handle its "domestic" affairs as it sees fit is solely the expression of its wish to restrict the benefits of democracy to those it chooses, and it does not choose to regard these benefits as inalienable rights of all citizens, despite the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights, and the Constitution. It would even proscribe the perogatives and duties of the courts to protect these rights. THURMOND, TALMADGE, and their ilk say so. And their silent and "neutral" supporters applaud them for so saying.

The Democratic Party in the state of Virginia is putting on an amazing spectacle. The top man, Senator HARRY FLOOD BYRD, is persisting in a Sphinx-like silence on the presidential campaign, but it fools nobody. He hates TRUMAN and hopes for his defeat.

His hand-picked governor, WILLIAM TUCK, plays coy too on the score of the presidential candidates when it comes to a formal announcement, but he leaves no real doubt that he is a Dixiecrat at heart. Consider his above-the-call-of-duty hospitality and cordiality to Governor STROM THURMOND of South Carolina, the presidential candidate of the Dixiecrats, when he was in the state the other day.

Sat 10-30-48

His introduction of him to a Richmond audience did everything but formally commend him to Virginia voters. Then he housed and breakfasted him at the governor's mansion, drove him to Norfolk to a football game, and told reporters it was up to the public to decide if all these excessive courtesies were to be considered endorsement of THURMOND'S candidacy. The public not a fool and knows he is endorsing THURMOND in fact.

Subsequently, the state's new attorney general, Mr. ALLMOND, came to Norfolk and made his "bats in the belfry" speech, thoroughly repudiating the TRUMAN-BARKLEY ticket but advocating the election of "regular" Democratic candidates for the Senate and House of Representatives, some of whom have announced unenthusiastic support of TRUMAN only because they felt "obligated" to remain "with the party," but who nevertheless disavowed the President's support of civil rights and the party platform's advocacy of the same.

Mr. ALLMOND is the official duty-bound to interpret and help enforce the laws, yet he takes his firm partisan stand against extending full citizenship to a great segment of the state's population. To him such proposals signify a party leadership which, in his words has "bats in the belfry and . . . skunks in the parlor."

Then to cap the climax, the state Democratic Central Committee's chairman, ALVIN MASSENBURG, author of the infamous MASSENBURG Law enacted by the State Legislature in the '20s, formally announces that he and the Democrats of the state officially are going to remain "neutral" in the presidential contest.

Sat 10-30-48

This is nothing but armed "neutrality" against the national Democratic administration and the party's ticket. When the official hierarchy of the Democratic Party of the state takes a "neutral" stand with reference to the party's presidential ticket, it effectively repudiates that ticket.

These Virginia manifestations are significant because they are so typical throughout the South.

It is just because the Democratic Party embraces such Bourbon reactionaries, plus the rotten big-city machines which only for cynical political expediency are supporting Mr. TRUMAN, that many voters are getting sick and tired of the Democratic Party

If Mr. TRUMAN has to buck such elements in his own party even to get nominated, and in his effort to get elected, he could do very little to bring his program into reality even if, by what would have to be a miracle, he should be returned to the White House.

Such a dismal prospect, such unprecedented party disunity, such inability to rally his party colleagues to his leadership, such fierce, hate-inspired resistance to real civil rights, do not face Mr. DEWEY as the prospective next occupant of the White House.

Seattle, Wash

NEW YORK, — In a telegram sent to five leading northern Democrats N A A C P secretary, Walter White expressed concern at the recent coalition of these men with such bitter opponents of civil rights legislation as Senator Lester Hill (D. Ala.) and the Governors of South Carolina, Arkansas and Virginia.

The telegram, which was sent to James Roosevelt, chairman of the Democratic Committee of California, Jacob M. Arvey, chairman of the Cook County Democratic Committee in Chicago, Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York City, Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis and Chester Bowles, expressed the appreciation of Negro Americans for the continued support given by these five leaders to civil rights legislation. In view of this support, the NAACP secretary declared himself at a loss to understand the planned coalition, recently announced in the nation's press, between these men and southern Democrats, in an attempt to prevent the renomination of President Harry Truman at the Democratic National Convention, inasmuch as the Dixie leaders had openly based their opposition on the issue of civil rights.

"Experience has taught us," wired Mr. White, "that coalition with such elements means complete sacrifice of all civil rights measures. How do you propose to press for inclusion of a civil rights plank in the Democratic party platform while working hand in hand with these southern politicians who have openly declared they would rather see the party defeated than permit inclusion of a plonk upholding equality of citizenship for all Americans? How can you as a liberal collaborate with avowed enemies of liberalism?"

Senator Barkley Runs Up

Columbia Record

Wed 9-29-48

Senator Alben W. Barkley, "Dear Alben," who has made himself a workhorse for Presidents Roosevelt and Truman, appealing for Democratic votes at Asheville, N. C., got himself a bit mixed up in his argument that only through the Democratic party can the South have a voice in national affairs.

It would be a tragic thing, Senator Barkley, candidate for vice president on the Democratic ticket, said, "if the partnership between the Democratic party and the states of the South were to be destroyed . . . It would leave the South without effective means of promoting its own high aspirations" and "without a voice in the councils of the nation."

Columbia, S.C.

The Republican party, he said, never has been friendly to the South and "is not interested in its problems . . . Whenever the Republican party has been in power the South's fortunes have declined."

Let's analyse Barkley's logic. The Republican party, it is true, has never been especially interested in the South, but why? The answer is plain: the South has never been interested in the Republican party or held out any real hope to the Republicans that they could accomplish anything in the South. The Hoovercratic movement in 1928 was not a genuine shift of Southern support from the Democrats to the Republicans. It was a movement born of bigotry and prejudice and most of the Hoovercrats were safely and a little shamefacedly back in the bag by 1932.

And it is an inaccuracy to say that the Republicans have not tried to help the South, that the South's fortunes decline every time the Republicans get into power. William Howard Taft tried to cultivate the South and won many friends in the South, if no votes. Herbert Hoover did the same thing, but the South whooped it up for F. D. R.

The South has no voice in the Republican party councils, but the choice is the South's not the Republicans'. The G. O. P. would like to make itself a truly national party by breaking into the South.

And the way to get that voice is for the South to break the bonds which have heretofore bound it in slavery to the Democratic party, to destroy, as Senator Barkley puts it, the partnership between the Democratic party and the states of the South.

What has this record of blind and slavish adherence to the Democratic party brought the South? How much attention is paid the voice of the South in the councils of the national Democratic party? How does it promote "its own high aspirations" by being in the bag, year after year and election after election? Who got most of the relief money when it was the system to spend and spend and elect and elect? Who got most of the war plants and most of the war business? Who got the silver subsidy? Who was nominated for Democratic vice presidential candidate in 1944 instead of James F. Byrnes of South Carolina?

Politics is a business of courting the doubtful voters and the doubtful states. The South has been ignored by both parties because it has not been doubtful territory, either for the Democrats who counted it in the bag, or for the Republicans who could not. The South must make itself doubtful by building up a genuine two-party system, holding out the hope to both parties that they may, if they court the South and promote its own high aspirations, win the South.

Wed 9-29-48

Barkley's warnings are logical only if they are applied to the States' Rights Democrats. And it may be that Barkley had this possibility in mind. If the South goes off into a splinter Southern party, which as Senator Barkley said has no hope of obtaining more than a fraction of votes, it will sacrifice its influence in the national Democratic party, which is little enough, without getting a voice in the Republican party as compensation for it.

But even this sacrifice may be more illusory than real. Southern Senators and Representatives will still call themselves Democrats and the national Democratic party will still need them and welcome them. Its hopes of winning control of the Senate are based upon the idea that Southern Democrats are still Democrats even when hey vote for Thurmond. The Southern bolt is a protest and like most political protests it may be futile. But it can be also a halfway point on the road to the establishment of a real two-party system, an invitation to both parties to move into the South to court the South's votes, held in escrow for this election by the States' Rights party. The only thing that could prevent this development would the politicians' attempt to make the States' Rights party instead a caretaker for the single party system and for the Democratic party—and there is evidence that some of them, too many of them, look upon it as nothing more than this.

Future Of The Democratic Party

WASHINGTON.

THE fate of the Democratic Party in the aftermath of the campaign and the election has a great many people guessing. The many-sided split within the party goes so deep that it hardly seems possible that humpty-dumpty can be put together again.

Adv 11-3-48

Determined and ambitious individuals will try to prevent the old, uneasy coalition between the agrarian South and the Northern labor from forming anew. Among them are the powerful men who have financed the Dixiecrat revolt in the South.

They are out to capture the Democratic Party and make it over to suit their own ends. If they have their way, it will become the vehicle of those who use the states rights battle cry in an incessant campaign to curb the powers of the Federal government. In this camp are the representatives of Northern interests that have gone to the South seeking freedom from the social legislation of such advanced states as Massachusetts and New York.

Montgomery, Ala.

At the same time the revolt against the Truman civil-rights program has been widespread and intense. This passionate revolt has given reaction a powerful lever throughout the South.

How the same party can contain Hubert Humphrey, of Minneapolis, who forced the extreme civil-rights plank in the Democratic platform at Philadelphia, and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, it is hard to see. They are irreconcilable opposites.

The future of the Democratic Party will be determined, in part at least, by what happens within the Republican organization, the Dewey team has its own strictly private plan for reshaping the Grand Party in such a way that four years from now it hardly will recognize itself.

IT WOULD become the party of moderate progressivism, attracting and holding a broad band of support including the moderate segment of organized labor. Outraged remnants of the Tory old guard would then be free to join the States' Rights Party and a new kind of North-South coalition would be formed.

Success along this line would assure the new style Republican Party a long term in power. The opposition would be reduced to ineffectual splinters of reaction on the one hand and an extreme leftism on the other.

But this tidy vision of the future does not take into account the plans and ambitions of a group of men who may have considerable say about how the political parties are to be aligned. William Green, of the A. F. of L. has already said that the convention of his unions in Cincinnati later this month will take up the question of labor in politics and the possibility of a new third party.

A great deal turns on the decision taken by Walter Reuther, of the United Auto Workers. Reuther, who was nearly assassinated some time ago, is the most politically conscious and knowledgeable of the leaders of labor. In his own union he licked the Communists and drove them out of office after a fierce battle.

Reports have persisted that Reuther means to have a principal part in forming a third party that would rest on the strength of organized labor. The UAW has virtually taken over the Democratic Party in Michigan.

THE political role of labor will be determined partly by the showing that organized labor makes—or fails to make—in Tuesday's election. The large industrial cities may show a heavier anti-Dewey vote than had been expected. That is what the political managers for the big trade unions have been counting on—a silent protest vote. The prospect of such a vote encouraged President Truman to take his swipe at the polls that showed Dewey far in the lead in almost all states with industrial centers.

Should labor unexpectedly deliver a pro-Truman vote that would cut down the Dewey margin, labor leaders would be encouraged to try to take over the Democratic Party in the North. Major elements of both CIO and A. F. of L. could be expected to work together in the Michigan pattern.

This would leave the Dixiecrat splinter in the balance-of-power position. Some who know the South well believe the Dixiecrat movement will be forgotten with this election. They think that inertia and indifference, if nothing else, will overwhelm the revolt. There is also the fact that the Republicans are pledged to a radical civil-rights program and if those pledges are carried out, oposition will center on the old enemy—the GOP.

Humpty-dumpty has had several bad spills in the past and has been patched up again. Perhaps the break this time is not bad as it seems.

HOLLOW NAME

EDITOR, The Advertiser: For a long time I have felt that all the country's ills could be solved if the newspaper editors and columnists, and the radio news commentators were allowed to settle them. But since listening to the Henry Wallace convention I realize that I have been wrong. His crowd know all the answers first.

Adv 8-3-48

Wallace is about 10 years ahead of the National Democratic Party. Ten years ago he was just about where the Trumanites are today. People said, 'Wallace is a good man. He is an idealist, a dreamer, a great liberal." Few would have accused him of being a Communist or a Communist sympathizer, but today it is different. Henry Wallace has "progressed." He has progressed just about as far as he can without inviting Joe Stalin to grow a long, white beard and don a striped stovepipe hat.

Where will the National Democratic Party be 10 years from now? By admission, that party launched its present program because its leaders felt such a step was necessary to hold the "independent voters." In other words, those wings and minority groups who, it was feared, would join Henry Wallace's Progressives unless appeasement came their way. Instead of opposing the Wallace Party on principles, the National Democratic Party has tried to compete with it by appeasement and promises. It has tried to out-Wallace Wallace.

Montgomery, Ala.

If there is one bitter lesson the world should have learned ere now, it is that appeasement can be very dangerous. A few years more and the National Democratic Party, at its present pace, will be standing in Shibe Park joining hands with the Wallaceites in their weird snake dances and in their wild-eyed search for Utopia. The gap now between the two is quite narrow, much more so than some of our well-meaning friends would have us believe. If the National Democratic Party is to "progress" its leaders seem to believe it can do so in only one direction—toward the left and toward Henry Wallace. I do not believe we can surrender our right to local self-government, to a centralized government in Washington, which proposes to be godfather to all its people and to chart the course of every sparrow that flies, and keep our liberty at the same time.

There certainly must be a stopping point somewhere this side of state socialism, or of Moscow, which is not far beyond. If I know the road leads over a precipice I am not going to continue on that road indefinitely, (or "progress" as the prosessionals like to call it) simply because my forebears traveled that road for a distance and found it all right.

Adv 8-3-48

For a man to boast of having voted the Democratic ticket, or the Republican ticket all his life is not, within itself, a great honor. The so-called Yellow Dog Democrat (if my party nominates a yellow dog I will vote for him) is nothing more than a rubber stamp. The worshipers of a symbol, an emblem or a name, without regard to principles, are bowing down to false gods.

If I should belong to the Society for Prevention of Forest Fires, to which my forefathers belonged, and with which I had been affiliated all my life; and then if my leaders should suddenly decide that the initials SPFF stood for Society for Promotion of Forest Fires, would it not be wiser for me to undertake to restore the original and rightful meaning to these initials than to follow, through unreasoning loyalty, my crazed leaders, in their foolish, incindiary liberalism? I think it is high time people started voting for a principle rather than for a hollow name for mere sentimental, traditional or selfish reasons.

HAUGHTY AND NAUGHTY

Editor The Advertiser:

Very aptly captioned "Homeless" there was a very interesting letter in the "Tell It To Old Grandma" feature of the good old Montgomery Advertiser—last Thursday's edition—written by my former neighbor, Dr. H. C. Fountain, Evergreen, Alabama.

Knowing that he knows the history and policies of the two major parties like he does, and knowing his ability to think logically and realistically, I am noticing with a great deal of regret that his present erroneous thinking has placed him in a real state of complete political homelessness. It is very plain that his letter was correctly captioned.

Adv 8-3-48

My good friend, Dr. Fountain, should certainly know that if enough good citizens were to follow his present way of thinking and vote "Dixiecratic," a party split would follow, weakening the party to such an extent that even filibustering couldn't prevent what we don't want.

Anyone should know that the present independent movement in the South is playing right into the hands of the Republican Party. That is the reason the Republicans are so confident of victory and are acting so haughty and so naughty at the present time.

It is not unreasonable to suppose that this independent movement will terminate as disastrously as the similarly shameful episode of 20 years ago.

It is a pity that the South acts in such a way that it brings occasional shame on itself. And the way the South is acting now, it will bring on itself exactly what it is against and does not want.

Dr. Fountain says, "The national situation concerning our present crisis is far too serious a matter to be divided on."

Now, that being the case, Mr. Editor, I notice with a great deal of regret that my good friend and a few others of our best citizens are doing all they possibly can to bring about a division. Dixiecrats —not Democrats—is a pretty good name for them, but Republicans would be more apppropriate for the simple and undeniable reason they are so greatly aiding the Republican Party.

BIGGEST FOOL THING

Editor, The Advertiser:

I am not a professional politician (thank God for that) for they are an abomination to the world. I do like politics, and have voted the Democratic ticket ever since the days of Samuel Tilden. I think the Alabama delegates walking out is about the biggest fool thing any sensible man could devise.

President Is Expanding His Strategy, Which First Seemed Based Merely On Attacking the GOP

New York, N.Y.

TRIES TO REBUILD FDR'S PARTY

By ARTHUR KROCK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25—Thus far the clamor of the Presidential campaign is a distant echo to Washington, where the largest group in the nation that will be personally affected by its outcome is concentrated.

The minds of the policy-makers and their chief assistants, especially in the National Military Establishment and the Department of State, are riveted on Paris and Moscow, tensely awaiting any clue to Soviet action that may defer, dissipate or increase the threat of war. The rank-and-file of government servants, most of them remembering they are protected by civil service tenure and by Republicans as well as Democrats in Congress, are reading with interest but considerable detachment the promises of the Republican national candidates that they will "streamline" the Federal system in the interest of economy and efficiency.

These promises have been heard in many campaigns, not only from the challengers of the White House incumbent but from Presidents themselves, and nothing much has come of it.

Sun 9-26-48

When the commission headed by former President Herbert Hoover makes its report on this subject to Congress after the election, the attitude of those protected in expendable jobs by Congressional friends may change from the present easy assurance to one of anxiety. But campaign promises will not do that; hence a large segment of the population of the capital, because it has often heard the charges and countercharges on domestic issues which the candidates are exchanging, is paying less attention to them than is probably true of citizens elsewhere.

The political community of Washington is scattered just now by the campaign and the absence of Congress, and therefore the effect of this group on the thought and conversation of the capital is temporarily absent too. But there are numerous persons here who are in office because of their political connections, who are politically-minded and who will return to private life if Gov. Thomas E. Dewey succeeds President Truman. They are carefully noting campaign developments.

Mr. Truman's Change

To these it is clear that in the current week Mr. Truman has expanded his strategy, which until then was pivoted on attacking the Republican party as the vassal of a selfish moneyed interest, basing this attack on the record of the Eightieth Congress which has a Republican majority. He has expanded it by an effort to bring back to the Democratic party two groups which were parts of it throughout the Administrations of Franklin D. Roosevelt and helped to make it the popular majority. These groups are the so-called "liberals" on the far Left who are supporting the party of Henry A. Wallace, and the mass of traditionally Democratic Southerners.

To attract those left-wing supporters of Mr. Wallace who are not Communists, Mr. Truman has used the argument of guilt by association. Accepting the overwhelming evidence that Communists "are guiding and using the third party," the President told Mr. Wallace's non-Communist supporters, whom he granted the full title of "liberals," that they are associating themselves with illiberal forces which do not believe in any American ideals. He urged them to return to the party banner under which he is seeking a four-year term in the White House. Since on this strategy depends whatever hope he has of carrying New York and California, the tactic is obvious.

Sun 9-26-48

Party Insurgency

The decision to make an open fight against party insurgency in the South was forced by the failure of a policy of conciliation. Even if the President can bring back the left-wingers in the Progressive party the prospect of Nov. 2 is that the loss of as many as 30 electoral votes in the states of the former Confederacy would defeat him or throw the Presidential election into the House, where he could not hope to be chosen. He and his political managers hoped until recently that, when the time to vote arrived, a majority of the Democratic voters in the South would return to the national party standard wherever it appeared on the ballot. Hence for a period they sought to placate the insurgent state organizations and simply make certain that ballots in the South would include the names of electoral slates pledged to Mr. Truman and Senator Barkley. At the worst, they said, they might lose Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina to the States' Rights ticket—28 electoral votes—but no Southern states would give its electors to the Republicans.

Sun 9-26-48

Total War in South

But then came the bitter disturbances among the Democrats of Texas, and the extreme action of the Louisiana machine in denying to Truman-Barkley electoral candidates any place at all on the ballot, assigning the regular Democratic place and emblem to the States' Rights nominees, Govs. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Fielding Wright of Mississippi. That was total war, not revolt. And it was accompanied by indications that Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina and Florida, where the state Democratic machines are maintaining technical regularity, may go for Mr. Dewey.

The President and his political managers then decided to cast away the soft soap of conciliation and carry the national party purge into the South with the dreaded battle-cry of "bolter." They drove hard in Texas to nominate for the Senate a stanch New Deal Representative in Congress, Lyndon Johnson, over former Governor Coke Stevenson, though both aspirants oppose with equal vehemence the "civil-rights" program. Mr. Johnson's razor-edge victory, by 87 votes, cannot be confirmed until the Senate itself settles the contest, but for the moment the pro-Truman faction scored. And by getting narrow control of the Texas state committee and the party convention the national Democracy was able to oust all non-Truman delegates, including those from the largest county, Harris, which includes the city of Houston. The Texas Democrats accordingly are split deeper and more bitterly than they were in 1928, with the consequence that Governor Thurmond or even Governor Dewey may carry the state. But the national party was forced to risk that.

Louisiana Incident

Sun 9-26-48

The same aggressive tactics were reluctantly decided on in Louisiana. Not only did Senator J. Howard McGrath, the national chairman, demand that the Legislature admit a Truman-Barkley slate to the ballot; he said it must occupy the traditional place of the national Democracy under the traditional emblem. Despite this statement, the Legislature in special session denied the second part of Mr. McGrath's demand.

That increases the compulsion on Mr. Truman and his managers to wage open warfare against the Democratic leaders in enough Southern states to decide the President's fate, even though he should recapture the left-wing "liberals" and retain Mr. Roosevelt's percentage of the votes of labor and the Northern Negroes.

BARKLEY APPEALS FOR SOUTH'S VOTES

He Says in New Orleans Only Hope for Area's Progress Lies With Democrats

New York, N.Y.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 16 (AP)—Senator Alben W. Barkley flew into the deep South today with a bid to rebelling Southern Democrats to re-establish their "friendship and partnership" with the Democratic party.

It was the second foray into Dixie by the Democratic Vice Presidential candidate, who flew more than 700 miles from Kansas City in his role as party peacemaker. Earlier this month he made a peace proffer to North Carolina Democrats.

Mr. Barkley was met at Moisant International Airport by a reception committee consisting of Senator W. C. Feazel, Democrat, of Louisiana. It was the coolest reception he has received since the beginning of his campaign tour on Oct. 1.

In a speech prepared for delivery tonight Mr. Barkley did not mention the civil rights fight which has torn the Democratic party asunder. Neither did he refer to unsuccessful efforts of Louisianans to keep off the ballot his own name and that of President Truman.

He also ignored the Presidential candidacy of Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, representing the States' Rights Democrats.

Sun 10-17-48

However, he reminded his audience that Southern Democrats would still their own voice in Government if they voted for anyone except President Truman.

"A vote for any other ticket than the regular Democratic ticket," he said, " is in effect a vote for the Republican party. A vote for a minor party diversionary political group would not only be futile and hopeless but endangers the whole economic and political future of the South."

The fortunes of the South, Mr. Barkley said, both economically and politically, have been tied closely with those of the Democratic party. From the Republican party, he declared, the South has never received anything and cannot hope to receive anything.

"The Democratic party has a great tradition of friendship and partnership with the people of the South," he asserted. "The South, since the War Between the States, has prospered only when the Democratic party was in power."

Whatever Became of the "Civil Rights" Message?

Sun 10-19-48

By ARTHUR KROCK

New York, N.Y.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18—As the President heads from Miami into North Carolina, one of the former Confederate states in which his so-called civil rights message to Congress on Feb. 2, 1948, aroused strong opposition in the local Democratic party, the question recurs whether he will make any mention of the positive federal program he proposed on that date. Though that message caused a violent sectional split among the Democrats in Congress and at the National Convention which nominated Mr. Truman, and though its affirmative political result was the emergence of the Democratic States' Rights party, which is held certain to gain electoral votes that normally would go to the party nominee, the President has avoided the issue in his campaign speeches.

He toured Texas, another Southern state where the party was badly split by his message, but did not mention it there, directly or indirectly. In view of the fact that he proposed the federal program of enforcement to Congress as a deliberate stroke of major policy, his campaign silence suggests either that he did not expect the serious political consequences that ensued or believes they may be overcome or diminished if he talks about other matters until Nov. 2.

But if Mr. Truman decided to wait to demonstrate the sincerity of his proposals until he spoke in a former Confederate state where, despite them, the regular Democratic organization has stood most firmly behind him, North Carolina is the place. Political tests there indicate that the States' Rights party has made nothing like the headway it has in South Carolina, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Virginia; also that North Carolina Democrats are not going to stay at home or vote Republican to the degree they are in Florida, Texas and Tennessee. The auguries may be incorrect for North Carolina, but, except for Arkansas and Georgia, it looks like the Southern state Mr. Truman is most likely to carry.

Yet, because of the Administration's effort at the national convention to keep out of the platform a plank specifically endorsing the message of Feb. 2 and the President's "courage" in delivering it, and because of Mr. Truman's long and studied campaign silence on the subject, politicians of all sorts will be surprised if he strongly backs up his "civil rights" federal program in North Carolina. For, in plain language, Mr. Truman urged Congress to make the Federal Government an effective enforcement agency of the following laws which he asked it to pass: Tues May 18-1948

A federal anti-lynching statute, violators within any state to be apprehended and punished by the central government. A statute banning the state poll-tax as a voting prerequisite in federal elections. A national fair employment practices law setting up a federal commission "with authority to prevent discrimination" by employers on the bases of race, color, religion or national origin. A statute, to be enforced by federal officers, preventing states from instituting "Jim Crow" segregation in any vehicle on an interstate journey that enters their borders. The establishment of a permanent federal commission, a joint Congressional committee and a new division in the Department of Justice to compel obedience to these measures by the states.

For numerous reasons, some good and some bad, this program aroused bitter resentment in the South, so much so that Mr. Truman is believed certain to lose enough electoral votes in that section to assure his defeat, even if he were to carry some of the Republican states in the Midwest and the West where he is given a fighting chance. While it is true that Franklin D. Roosevelt could have won any of his four Presidential contests without a single Southern elector, that has not been the happy situation in which any other Democratic Presidential nominee has found himself since the rise of the Republican party. None other could have spared as many as two Southern states. When the Republicans are united, as at present, and the odds favor them in the populous states of the Northeast and the Midwest, the loss to the national Democratic nominee of a single large Southern state could defeat him. [illegible]

After the Administration began to realize the seriousness of the Southern Democratic uprising against Mr. Truman it sought to allay this by a drastic compromise in the national platform. The plank offered by the President's supporters spoke of "Congress" as the agency for greater protections of "civil rights," and that of course meant new federal laws. But the specific items were omitted, the message of Feb. 3 was glossed over, and Mr. Truman was not lauded as the champion of these liberties through federal enforcement. The Americans for Democratic Action refused to join the Administration's retreat and forced into the platform a plank that put the national party and its nominees on record for the message in detail. However, Mr. Truman, who was celebrated by name in this text, has left the position to the platform.

But some politicians, while they do not expect him to alter this course in North Carolina, think he may do so in New York or some other Northern state before election day. They reason that he will come to the reluctant opinion he cannot recapture his Southern electors by any strategy and conclude that a firm reiteration of his "civil rights" program will give him his only chance to reverse the unfavorable conditions reported in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and California.

By Nov. 2 they will know whether their speculation is soundly based.

The Question For Workers

News Birmingham Ala

To the Editor of The News:

The most important question facing American working men and women on Labor Day of 1948 is this: For whom shall I vote for president in November? For the people of Alabama it is an especially perplexing question, because the men who have control of our state Democratic Party machinery are not Democrats. They are back-door Republicans. And our Democratic electors are refusing to support the nominees of the national Democratic ticket.

Alabama's 11 Democratic electors have pledged themselves to vote for Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for president.

Thurmond was "nominated" at a Dixiecrat "convention" in Birmingham in July. The people elected no delegates to this "convention." They had nothing to do with calling it or staging it. What was notable about it was the fact that among those in prominence were Texas oilmen, Southern lawyers who represent big Northern corporations and the odious Gerald L. K. Smith, a notorious rabble-rouser.

But the nominee of this "convention" is the candidate our electors have pledged themselves to support! 8-6-48

The position our 11 electors have taken can do nothing but help place Dewey in the White House and continue the Republican control of Congress. Yet they refuse to support President Truman and proclaim they will vote for Thurmond! Birmingham, Ala.

There is little doubt in the minds of thinking people in Alabama that the back-door Republicans who control our state Democratic Party machinery want just that—a Republican administration!

We of organized labor in Alabama are convinced that the so-called "leaders" of our state Democratic Party—Gessner McCorvey, ex-Gov. Frank Dixon, Horace Wilkinson, Hugh Locke and their ilk—are knowingly aiding and abetting the Republican attempts to win the presidency this year. News Sept. 6-48

These men were never in sympathy with Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal. They have never been for the social measures Roosevelt pushed through Congress to benefit the mass of America's citizens. In their attitude toward Roosevelt and the New Deal and its accomplishments in behalf of the people they have been more Republicans than they have ever been Democrats.

Why? These men—these political "leaders" in Alabama—have always been identified with the money interests of the state, more particularly with the interests controlled by absentee owners—by the huge corporations of the North that operate in Alabama.

These men are corporation lawyers. McCorvey, Dixon, Wilkinson and Locke aren't fighting civil rights, although that is what they tell you and me. That, they say, in the crux of their whole opposition to President Truman. But they know the Republicans are committed to a civil rights program the same as the Democrats, although the GOP was less honest about it this year.

What McCorvey, Dixon and their ilk are doing is serving the corporations for whom they work. Big Business controls the Republican Party, and the corporations that control Big Business want another Republican administration, for reasons that are obvious to everyone. Thus these men—the "leaders" in our state Democratic Party—are not serving you and me, the voters of Alabama, in their rabble-rousing tiarades against President Truman. They are serving the corporations which employ them. They are using civil rights as a smoke screen to confuse the voters and lead them into unconsciously helping to elect a Republican president.

Unless it is possible to force our 11 electors to support the Truman-Barkley ticket as Democratic electors named in a Democratic primary to support the nominees of the party, or else force them to resign and be replaced with electors who will support the party, the McCorvey-Dixon crowd will have accomplished their aims—to keep Alabama's votes from the Democratic Party nominees.

Will the voters of Alabama let McCorvey, Dixon, Wilkinson and Locke succeed in obscuring the real issue in this campaign? There is only one issue and it is this: Whether we are to have a continuation of the Democratic administration which has brought so many blessings to the average citizen and to the South, or whether we are to usher in the Republicans again and suffer the consequences.

We of organized labor in Alabama cannot afford to be fooled by the McCorvey-Dixon-Wilkinson-Locke gang of back-door Republicans!

CAREY E. HAIGLER,
President, Alabama State Industrial Union Council.

The Ayes Of Texas

States' Rights faction of the Democratic Party was defeated in its attempt in Texas to wrest control of the party machinery from those who wish to remain loyal to the national party. That is the one clear result of the party convention in Fort Worth in which there was instituted a general house-cleaning of all who showed sympathy for the Thurmond-Wright revolt movement.

The final issue is not yet settled, however, for the States' Rights Democrats are expected to put up an "independent" slate of presidential electors, which they are able to do even this late under the election laws of Texas. Not until Nov. 2, therefore, will it be known which group gets the state's bloc of 23 electoral votes, the largest, by far, in the South, and the sixth largest in the nation. The News

In Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina and Louisiana, the States' Rights faction has been able, sometimes by questionable tactics, to get command of the Democratic Party machinery. It would have been a big plum if it could have done the same in Texas. For the party machinery is a decided asset. It has favors to bestow. It has the color of regularity and loyalty. It has the inside track. Birmingham Ala

Perhaps the greatest significance of the Texas result lies in the clear evidence that the States' Rights group does not have the support of all the South. It cannot successfully claim to be the champion of all the South. It cannot be regarded as the voice of a united Dixie. It represents only itself, and that is only a part of the South. Thurs. 9-16-48

More clearly it is to be seen, now, that there are other loyal Southern Democrats who do not believe that the way toward improvement of the South's political position lies through division and rebellion. There are earnest and sincere and conscientious Southern Democrats who will follow the Thurmond-Wright line. The question is not one of adherence or opposition to Southern principles. There is general agreement on that. The Texas Democratic Party cannot be attacked as accepting the Truman civil rights proposals or as opposing segregation. It is simply holding firm in the belief that the South should fight its battles within the national Democratic Party. 9-16-48

What Next For Democrats?

The Times

(Editor's note: Mr. Childs' article was written before the results of the election were known.)

WASHINGTON—The fate of the Democratic Party in the aftermath of the campaign and the election has a great many people guessing. The many-sided split within the party goes so deep that it hardly seems possible that Humpty-Dumpty can be put together again.

Determined and ambitious individuals will try to prevent the old, uneasy coalition between the agrarian South and Northern Labor from forming anew. Among them are the powerful men who have financed the Dixiecrat revolt in the South.

Wed 11-3-48

They are out to capture the Democratic Party and make it over to suit their own ends. If they have their way, it will become the vehicle of those who use the States' Rights battle cry in an incessant campaign to curb the powers of the federal government. In this camp are the representatives of Northern interests that have gone to the South seeking freedom from the social legislation of such advanced states as Massachusetts and New York.

At the same time the revolt against the Truman civil rights program has been widespread and intense. This passionate revolt has given reaction a powerful lever throughout the South.

How the same party can contain Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis, who forced the extreme civil rights plank in the Democratic platfrom at Philadelphia, and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, it is hard to see. They are irreconcilable opposites.

The Republican Plan

THE FUTURE OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY will be determined, in part at least, by what happens within the Republican organization. The Dewey team has its own strictly private plane for reshaping the Grand Party in such a way that four years from now it hardly will recognize itself.

It would become the party of moderate progressivism, attracting and holding a broad band of support including the moderate segment of organized labor. Outraged remnants of the Tory Old Guard would then be free to join the States' Rights Party and a new kind of North-South Coalition would be formed.

Success along this line would assure the new style Republican Party a long term in power. The opposition would be reduced to ineffectual splinters of reaction on the one hand and an extreme leftism on the other.

But this tidy vision of the future does not take into account the plans and ambitions of a group of men who may have considerable say about how the political parties are to be aligned. William Green of the AFL has already said that the convention of his unions in Cincinnati later this month will take up the question of labor in politics and the possibility of a new third party.

A great deal turns on the decision taken by Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers. Reuther, who was nearly assassinated some time ago, is the most politically conscious and knowledgeable of the leaders of labor. In his own union he licked the Communists and drove them out of office after a fierce battle.

Reports have persisted that Reuther means to have a principal part in forming a third party that would rest on the strength of organized labor. The UAW has virtually taken over the Democratic Party in Michigan.

Wed 11-3-48

The Role Of Labor

THE POLITICAL ROLE OF LABOR will be determined partly by the showing that organized or makes—or fails to make—in Tuesday's election. The large industrial cities may show a heavier anti-Dewey vote than had been expected. That is what the political managers for the big trade unions have been counting on—a silent protest vote. The prospect of such a vote encouraged President Truman to take his swipe at the polls that showed Dewey far in the lead in almost all states with industrial centers.

Should labor unexpectedly deliver a pro-Truman vote that would cut down the Dewey margin, labor leaders would be encouraged to try to take over the Democratic Party in the North. Major elements of both CIO and AFL could be expected to work together in the Michigan pattern.

This would leave the Dixicrat splinter in the South with the Dixiecrat bosses hoping to function in the balance-of-power position. Some who know the South well believe the Dixiecrat movement will be forgotten with this election. They think that inertia and indifference, if nothing else, will overwhelm the revolt. There is also the fact that the Republicans are pledged to a radical civil rights program and if those pledges are carried out, opposition will center on the old enemy—the GOP.

Humpty-Dumpty has had several bad spills in the past and has been patched up again. Perhaps the break this time is not bad as it seems.

Speaking Out

The Defender

THE VOICE OF THE NEGRO WOMAN

MRS. Lucille Douglas, speaking at the founding Conference of the Alabama Democratic Association in Birmingham said:

34d

"Mrs Chairman, delegates and Friends of the Alabama Progressive Democratic Meeting:

"It is a source of very great pleasure to extend to you a most hearty welcome to the City of Birmingham. I need not linger to remind you of the significant place which Birmingham holds in the present political crisis of the nation, and the ever mounting confusion in the South, as incubator of the Dixiecrat movement. Today, we bestow upon Birmingham another honor, one which will do it credit. The call has been issued, you have responded, our meeting has been planned and today we erect a monument dedicated to our posterity. Your very presence here today is an indication that you have decided to live for something; to build well in this state organization of Negro Democrats and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storm of time can never destroy. Today we write our names in kindness, love and march on the hearts of thousands the world over; and our monument will never be forgotten. Our names, our deeds, will be legible on the hearts of our posterity as the stars on the brew of the evening.

Sat 10-2-48

Chicago Ill.

"Today, the nation as a whole is confused as to what course to take to insure justice and to make the American way of life a reality for all people. The actions of the Dixiecrats darken the horizon of our nation and seriously threaten the security of all minority groups.

In the light of these facts, I deem it a privilege to welcome you, because you have come to being in a movement to awaken the Negro to political action. You are endeavoring to make possible by unity of action participation in the making and administration of the laws of our state and land. I trust that you have come imbued with the spirit which prompted Winston Churchill in effect to say in England's darkest hour, 'We will fight in the streets, in the hills, on the plains and on the seas, and we will not surrender.'

Sat 10-2-48

"I welcome you, fellow citizen, because I'm convinced that you can do the job that is to be done, in such a way that you will usher in what historians will refer to as a New Day in the realm of Negro politics. The movement which we are about to begin here today offers the voter and non voter a chance to join hands in a type of folk politics. Those who are unjustly denied the use of the ballot here in Alabama can make their contribution in a financial way; for we are more determined than ever that President Truman will not suffer embarrassment and defeat for the lack of funds. The Negroes not only of Alabama, but of the nation have pledged themselves to replace dollar for dollar every one lost by the national Democratic Party, through the Dixiecrat movement. Again, I welcome you because I'm convinced as a woman, that the Negro women and children of the state of Alabama can depend upon you to see to it that they enjoy the freedom of speech, the freedom of religion, the freedom of peaceful assembly, the freedom from want and fear and the freedom of the ballot. You cannot and must not fail us, good men; for if you do then surely, we will know that the task is ours and we will set about to accomplish it.

"However, we the women, recognize this as an age of equality and we believe that the job can best be done with both sexes working together. We will gladly share our part of the responsibility if you will share yours.

"In a sense, the people of the world are looking to us for leadership. We are the only people in the world who do not have our brothers blood required at our hands. Yes, we have a rendezvous with destiny and we must keep it. Friends, the battle ahead is not an easy one, but with God on our side it is a possible one. Just here I would like to style us on Onward Christian Soldier, marching as to war, with the cross of Jesus going on before. We are not devided. All one body, we are one in hope and doctrine. One in charity.

Sat 10-2-48

"Finally, those who seek to disfranchise the Negro and bar us from our civil or constitution-al rights we brand as killers; for when Negro children are denied sufficient milk and daily bread they become emaciated mentally and physically. As a result they do not live a normal life span. This tends to undermine our race and as a result, we are made the targets of unjust criticism.

"What the Negro wants in the post war world is simple and obvious. Our hopes may be summed up in a single phrase—full equality and the examination of Jim Crow. In this Negroes are united as never before. The attainment of this goal is more than mere hope. It is now the grim determination of all elements within our race. For fear someone may misinterpret the word equality, allow me to explain. Our hopes for equality are simply these; we are entitled to and must have every right, privilege, and opportunity for the develoment of individual personality, the attainment of a fair and adequate share of the world's goods, and the enjoyment of life. We must have the right to work. In the field of politics we must demand the unrestricted exercise of those political rights guaranteed to every American by the Constitution; the right to participate freely in the selection of local, state and federal officials. Denial of these political rights imposes a status of second-class citizenship upon us which we must no longer be willing to accept.

"Then, we want civil equality; for every citizen has the right to expect protection of the law and even-handed justice in the courts of the nation.

"Ultimately, we want and must have equal educational opportunity so that our children can compete favorably with others the world over.

"Fellow Americans, I welcome you to join in the fight for the above mentioned rights and never cease fighting until complete victory is won."

Researcher Credits Progressive Demos With S. C. Voters

COLUMBIA, S. C., (SNS) — The Progressive Democrats, organized in 1944 to aid entrance of Negroes into the Democratic party, are credited in a recently issued booklet with having produced 50,000 registered Negro voters in South Carolina since 1944.

The accreditation is made in the June-July edition of NEW SOUTH monthly publication of the Southern Regional Council and was made by Dr. Luther P. Jackson, professor of History at Virginia State College, who last year conducted a study into voting in the South. His compilation is titled: "Race and Suffrage in the South Since 1940."

Indicating that the state had less than 2,000 registered voters in 1940, Dr. Jackson says the present 50,000 represent thirteen per cent of the state's adult Negro population. He writes:

"The great increase in South Carolina is due almost entirely to the formation of the Progressive Democratic Party by a small group of courageous Negroes in opposition to the white Democratic party at the time when the latter group ruled that Negroes could not vote in their primary." He singles out John H. McCray, chairman since its organization and Oseceola E. McKaine, also one of the founders and the party's 1944 U. S. Senatorial candidate for special mention.

The study covers the South, giving attention to such items as registration, the poll tax, the primary and trends in southern politics.

HUNTSVILLE TIMES GOES G.O.P.

After 40 years, The Huntsville Times, one of Alabama's better dailies, has gone Republican.

"So as for us," The Times said Sunday, "it's Dewey and Warren on Nov. 2."

The Huntsville paper is the third Alabama paper espousing the Dewey-Warren ticket. The Dothan Eagle made a spirited bolt from the Democratic Party soon after the G.O.P. convention and The Brewton Standard, a weekly, was next.

The bolts of all three papers were occasioned by the Civil Disturbance program, but our accumulative impression from the reading of their respective editorials is that they find better reason for going Republican this year than the civil rights issue.

None of the three is unfriendly to the fourth party effort of Thurmond-Wright, but regard going Republican the only way of waging a shooting war.

The Times editorial sets forth in part:

The great, overriding issue of the presidential campaign, now reaching its climax, is, in our opinion, the foreign policy of the United States during the next four years.

Upon whether we have a firm, consistent, vigorous policy toward Russia and the satellite states allied with her in their challenging effort to communize and enslave the world, depends whether we shall have peace or war.

If, despite all, war does come in the final showdown, then we must have an administration that can not only command the unity of the American people, but also provide aggressive leadership for the non-Communist nations of the world.

Upon this basis, and for this reason, principally, The Times will support the candidacy of the Republican ticket, Governor Dewey and Governor Warren, on Nov. 2.

It is distasteful to leave the Democratic party on this occasion, for it, and its candidates, have received our votes, and our support, for almost 40 years. . . .

What do the parties and their candidates offer the voters on this score?

From President Truman, we can look forward only to further bungling and butchering of government policy. The past week, we have seen a conspicuous instance. While Secretary Marshall and the American delegation were grappling with the Berlin and atomic bomb crises at Paris, the bright idea suddenly popped into his head that he should go over Mr. Marshall's head, and send Chief Justice Vinson to Moscow to talk to Premier Stalin, in order to explain how the American people feel about the atomic bomb. Such an ill-advised action, our allies, the British, feel would have all but torpedoed the United Nations.

It's not hard to recall that Mr. Truman almost dealt the same blow to Secretary of State Byrnes a year or two ago. He gave his okay to a speech in Madison Square Garden by Henry Wallace that caused a furor. In order to prevent Byrnes' resignation at a critical time of negotiations, Mr. Truman was compelled to ask Wallace's resignation.

The President is ,unfortunately, a man who has a peculiar faculty for opening his mouth and sticking his foot in it, at critical times, especially on matters of foreign policy.

Governor Thurmond, the States Rights candidate, is running without any mention of a foreign policy. He seems to be unaware that there is any issue on this vital matter. His only concern is Federal encroachment upon the rights of the individual states.

As for Mr. Wallace, it is difficult to see how any American, who is not a Communist, can tolerate him. He's outside the pale. He's swallowed Stalin's program, body and breeches. . . .

His (Dewey) administration as governor of New York for three terms has been vigorous and progressive. He has built upon the policies and programs of the three progressive Democratic governors who preceded him — Al Smith, Franklin Roosevelt and Herbert Lehman. He has made a fine record as a strong administrator. . . .

The nation needs unity, invigorating leadership. There is no hope to get this from the President; Governor Thurmond has no chance to provide it, for he is the leader of only a small segment of the once great Democratic party.

Our sole opportunity for a fresh start is from Governor Dewey and Governor Warren.

They have the strength, and the will, we believe, to wrest control from the reactionary Republicans in both House and Senate, and to provide a unified, cohesive national effort to meet the grave domestic and international problems that now beset us, and that will continue through the next four years.

So, as for us, it's Dewey and Warren on Nov. 2.

The Times, unlike The Eagle, which sometime ago developed a nauseated surfeit of the Roosevelt Administrations, is solicitious about the degree of progressiveness of the incoming Republican Administration.

It is apprehensive over the possibility of control by the Martin-Halleck-Taber element, believing them to be reactionary. Possibly the key to this attitude is the Tennessee Valley's intense preoccupation with the fortunes of TVA. TVA is lifeblood to the Tennessee Valley. The Authority provides yardsticks for measuring politicians as well as electricity rates, which, to illustrate, is one reason why Senator Lister Hill is powerful upstate.

We have no doubt that the Dewey Administration is going to be much too progressive for an important element of the G.O.P. Certainly the records of Dewey and Warren suggest that. In 1944 Dewey ran on a militant New Deal platform. Warren, as governor of California, has been very advanced in views and performance.

A Political Quiz for Young and Old

34d

New York Times

By ARTHUR KROCK

WASHINGTON, July 5—Through the wondrous facilities of modern science this correspondent is able to report a conversation today between a distinguished political observer and his son, an undergraduate in a quieter college than Columbia is just now. Only the captious and the congenitally unkind will attempt to detract from the wisdom and authority with which the elder spoke by pointing out that, in common with so many political experts, he is usually a bad forecaster.

It is true that he said Senator Vandenberg would be drafted by the Republican National Convention, after a deadlock, to run for President this year; that Governor Warren would hold inexorably to his repeated refusal to run for Vice President; and that nothing in the plight of the Democrats and the New Dealers would cause General Eisenhower to lend himself to their dire political necessities—the only prediction that has stood the test of time. But, as the following conversation discloses, this political observer still rates as a sage in his own family circle: Thu. 7-6-48

"Father, do the Southern Democrats who came out for Eisenhower against Truman know how he stands on the issue that has aroused them—federal laws against civil and military segregation of Negroes, lynching, poll-taxes, etc?"

"No."

"Do the New Dealers—Leon Henderson, the Roosevelt boys, Bowles and company—know whether he is to the right or left of Truman on their own political philosophy?"

"No."

"Do the big city bosses like Jake Arvey in Chicago know whether he would ever let them inside the White House?"

"No."

"Have any of them any real information that he would run on the Democratic ticket if they could get him nominated?"

"No."

"Then what's the shooting about?"

A Mixture of Motives

"They all are sure the Democrats will be badly licked with Truman as the nominee. The Southerners and the big city bosses fear the licking will be so bad they will lose control of their organizations to a combination of Wallace and the New Dealers, who for the moment are fighting him. The Henderson-Bowles-young Roosevelt outfit are after future party control. The only way they see to attain this is to eliminate Truman with Eisenhower at the convention. Then, if he rejected it, and they have no assurance he wouldn't, they think they could nominate Justice Douglas."

"Are they sure they could win with Douglas?"

"No, but they are sure they could take over the Democratic party, whether he wins or loses, and probably get Wallace to withdraw and join them."

"How would the Southerners and the big city bosses feel about that?"

"Just terrible. Yet by plugging Eisenhower against Truman they are asking for this unhappy ending unless they are sure Eisenhower could be drafted, which they certainly are not."

"It looks too subtle to work unless Eisenhower can find those 'obvious and overriding reasons' which he said in his letter to the New Hampshire editor, Finder, alone would justify a professional soldier like himself in 'seeking high public office.' Were these reasons supplied by the nomination of Dewey and Warren on the Republican ticket?" 7-6-48

"I'd hate to have to write the piece for Eisenhower that said they were."

What Is "Obvious"

"From what you say, all groups of Democrats are in a hell of a fix, and that sure is 'obvious.'"

"Check."

"It's 'obvious' that the general could get the Democratic nomination if he went after it, and obviously he might be elected. Are those the kind of reasons he meant?"

"Not as I read his letter and estimate his character."

"Would the prospect of John Foster Dulles as Secretary of State and Senator Vandenberg as spokesman of the Congress majority on foreign policy strike him as an 'overriding' reason why he should accept nomination from the Democrats?"

"I'd hate to be assigned to write the piece for him that said it was."

"Then why does Eisenhower let all these Democrats come to see him and give out predictions that he can be drafted by their party?"

"Partly, I think, because he is good-natured; partly because he hopes the people rely on what he wrote to Finder (who seems to think his name is changed to keeper); and partly because he enjoys the spectacle of this mercenary wooing by politicians who love only themselves."

"Back to that civil rights program of Truman's. He hasn't mentioned it since he sent that message to Congress. What does that mean?"

"I think it means he wrote that message just for the record. By environment he is much less for it than Dewey, and perhaps Eisenhower, whom the Southerners are demanding."

"So this is politics, Father."

"Yes, son, this is it."

South Would Accept '44 Platform Plank

By C. P. TRUSSELL.

Special to The New York Times and The Courier-Journal.

Washington, July 2.—Progress toward a possible compromise on a civil-rights plank in the 1948 Democratic platform was reported in responsible quarters of the Northern and Southern wings of the party today.

Highly placed supporters of President Truman, at whom the Southern Democratic revolt is aimed because of his sweeping civil-rights program, indicated that one, and perhaps two, of the Southerners' demands would be met.

As to the first demand, it was said that a civil-rights plank as generalized as was the plank in the 1944 Democratic platform probably would be "acceptable" to the platfor mwriters who will start hearings in Philadelphia next Wednesday.

Voting Rights Urged.

This plank declared for racial and religious minorities the right to live, develop, and vote equally with all citizens, and share the rights guaranteed by the Constitution. It called on Congress to exert "full constitutional powers" to protect such rights.

The Republican National Convention approved a civil-rights plank which went on record for antipoll tax and antilynching legislation, opposed racial segregation in the armed forces, and declared that the right to equal opportunity to work and to advance in life should never be limited in any individual because of race, religion, color, or country of origin.

The plank called for enactment and enforcement of federal legislation "to maintain this right . . . in every part of this Republic."

2d Plank Discussed.

A second ground for possible compromise concerned a "States'-rights" plank. Southern Democrats, through years of successful Congressional fighting on civil rights or racial issues, have contended that such programs intruded on the sovereign rights and traditions of individual States.

It was predicted in Administration quarters today that a States'-rights plank well might be inserted into the 1948 Democratic platform, but on one condition. This condition was that it not be tied directly to the proposed civil-rights plank.

A combination of civil rights and States' rights, it was suggested, might amount to the same thing as writing something on a blackboard and then quickly rubbing it out.

Might Be Hooked On.

It was suggested in quarters seeking the compromise that a States'-right plank might be hooked to a phrase of the platform with which Southern Democrats "wanted to co-operate."

A plank dealing with federal financial aid to States in educational, public-health, or agricultural fields was proposed as a medium.

In such a case, it was contended, a States'-rights plank could be interpreted as applying to all the platform, but not as a deliberate and immediate neutralizer of the pledge on civil rights.

50 TOP DEMOCRATS BACK RIGHTS PLANK

They Meet in Minneapolis and Issue Statement—Some Are Eisenhower Backers

Mon. 7-5-48

MINNEAPOLIS, July 4—Fifty leaders of the Democratic party, including a number who recently have become actively identified with the "Draft-Eisenhower" movement within that party, announced here today that they intend to press for the inclusion of President Truman's civil rights program in the party's 1948 platform.

34d

The declaration was distributed by Mayor Hubert Humphrey of this city, and others who participated in its drafting and circulation were James Roosevelt and Jack Arvey, Democratic leader of Cook County (Chicago); all active in the Eisenhower movement. However, the list also included a number of others, such as Herbert H. Lehman, Edward J. Flynn, William Green, Paul E. Fitzpatrick, James E. Murray of Montana and Emma Guffey Miller of Pennsylvania, who have not taken sides relative to the Stop-Truman drive. 7-5-48

The statement issued by the group follows:

"The report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights is one of the most important measures of moral strategy devised by the United States of America in modern times.

"Although its recommendations do credit to all sections of American life represented on the non-partisan committee, its sponsorship will remain a landmark in the history of this Democratic Administration.

"As an examination of America's political conscience, it dramatizes the internal vitality of our democracy and eloquently challenged the rest of the civilized world.

"Any dispassionate examination of this report will reveal that its fundamental principles are as old as our nation. The report measures the intent of our most cherished documents against the reality of the present and recommends concrete legislative measures to close the gap between profession and practice in the field of civil rights. 7-5-48

"We believe that the gravity of

"As active members of the Democratic party, and as citizens, we support this program. Many of us will be delegates to the national convention of our party in Philadelphia. The issue of civil rights is in the worthiest tradition of our party. We hereby declare that we shall actively seek, at Philadelphia, to make the accomplishment of this program a part of our party's platform for 1948.

the present international situation cannot fail to convince patriotic leaders of our party everywhere that neither imagined rights, private economic interests nor cherished customs of any section of America can remain sacred if they jeopardize the position of our nation in world affairs.

"It is as a measure contributing to the moral strength of America as a free nation that we uphold the President's civil rights policy.

"The cost of opposing this policy must, we believe, be measured in the same coin."

Other signatures on the statement included those of Senator Robert F. Wagner, Henry Morgenthau Jr., Chester Bowles, Mayor David L. Lawrence of Pittsburgh, Will Rogers Jr., Archibald Alexander, Democratic candidate for Senator in New Jersey, and Thurman Arnold.

THE NEW DEAL RECORD

Daily Tribune

340

To give Alben Barkley his due, he has the courage of the tried political professional. He contended for public office for decades before Democrats could ride in on the Magic Coattails, in the years when the Democrats were a minority, repudiated by most of the nation's voters. Experience teaches him that when prospects appear blackest, then it is the time to roar the loudest defiance.

And so Sen. Barkley roared. For a few hours at least he Claghorned the bedraggled Democrats, gathered in Philadelphia to nominate a candidate whom none of them really wants. As reward, or punishment, for this service to his party, he seems likely to be dragooned to make the same sort of speeches from now until November, as the running mate of a nominee who is even less qualified for the Presidency than he is himself.

Chicago, Ill.

Statistically, Sen. Barkley still regards 1932 as the economic Year One. He dragged out all the old figures, brought up to date, and added a few new ones. He failed, however, to notice that some of the latter were double edged.

Wed

For example, he attributed to the New Deal reciprocal trade policy the fact that American exports last year exceeded imports by 6 billion dollars. The reciprocity is a little hard to figure, since the excess exports represented gifts to foreigners in one form or another.

Our old friend and confederate, Mrs. India Moffett Edwards, released a balloon when she followed Sen. Barkley on the speaker's stand, to demonstrate what she asserted was the effect of removing price controls. Sen. Barkley's 6 billions in unbalanced exports supplied most of the gas in Mrs. Moffett's balloon. Americans are paying more for food because we are giving so much away, and taxing both consumers and farmers to pay for it. Only the other day cheese merchants complained that the British, bidding in the national cheese auctions in Wisconsin, have instructed their agent there to top any other bids by as much as 4½ cents a pound. The British don't have to worry about a dollar shortage in that transaction. They get their dollars free, from Gen. Marshall and Paul Hoffman.

Altho Sen. Barkley extoled the New Deal record for more than an hour, he left much more unsaid than he said. Our involvement in war he sought to evade with a single sentence, "We were drawn into the second World war because of events familiar to us all."

Those events are now familiar, it is true, but they have become familiar only since the lifting of war time censorship, and since the Democratic party last met to justify its conduct of the nation's affairs. The best excuse that Mr. Roosevelt's apologists have been able to advance for his war-breeding actions has been the assertion that he deceived the American people for their own good. If Sen. Barkley had a better excuse, Monday night was the time to state it. He let the opportunity pass.

Daily Tribune

In claiming credit for the Marshall plan, he also was careful to avoid discussion of the manner in which the "further totalitarian aggression" that the plan is supposed to stop was built up. The senator's description of New Deal foreign policy left out Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam. It made no mention of the betrayals of free peoples, the abandonment of principles, and the isolation of the American garrison in Berlin where it is possible for the Russians to try to starve it out.

Chicago, Ill.

In 16 years the Democratic party and its New Deal administration have drained the nation's resources, burdened it with a debt unparalleled in history, sent hundreds of thousands of its sons to death, and built up a new enemy, both within and without our gates, more powerful and dangerous than any they struck down. Even the party schisms arise from the policy of setting class against class, and promising everything to every one. What Sen. Barkley could do with words he did, but words cannot struggle against acts, and its acts damn the New Deal as a failure.

Negro Democrats In Wide-Open Split

Thurs

Sat 7-17-48

By LEM GRAVES Jr.
(Courier Staff Correspondent)

Pittsburgh, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA—The unhappy state of Democratic party affairs here early this week was reflected in the bitter fight which split even the Negro faction of the party in a pre-convention caucus, called ostensibly for the purpose of outlining a civil rights proposal and a resolution announcing united Negro support behind the contest of the colored delegation from South Carolina.

Cautiously steered around an open break during the first two hours of the Negro Democratic caucus in a club room of the Pyramid Club here Sunday evening, the caucus considered the two specific issues—civil rights and the South Carolina contest—appointed committees to draw up resolutions and even heard the reports of these committees.

BATTLE BREAKS

But at this point two competing factions of Negro Democrats declined to further postpone the bitter showdown. On a motion to adopt the report of the Platform Committee, the battle, so astutely deferred up to this point, broke with full force.

Sat 7-17-48

Partisans of the National Colored Democratic Association launched an all-out attack on the National Council of Negro Democrats of America and almost immediately the practically hopeless cause of the South Carolina delegates and the civil rights planks were forgotten as the rival factions shouted at each other across the small club room.

Facts developed in the argument conclusively proved that the "association" faction was the guest of the "council" faction in this particular meeting and as such was clearly out of order. The Council had issued a call for its members to meet and the association group had barged in in an obvious effort to force a showdown. The Council faction produced a copy of a detailed call for a meeting at the Pyramid Club at the evening hour on Sunday.

INTRA-RACE FEUD

In a transparently phony rebuttal, representatives of the opposing faction produced a mimeographed copy of a highly general call for a meeting "in July 1948 in Philadelphia."

In the wee, small hours of Monday morning, the caucus broke up with little accomplished in the way of establishing a united organization to back the resolutions so enthusiastically worked out and with little progress in settling the bitter intra-race feud.

Meanwhile, it developed that several key Negro Democratic leaders had boycotted the meeting. They included Congressman William L. Dawson of Chicago, Recorder of Deeds Marshall Shepard, and seceral others. New York's Congressman Adam Powell was also conspicuously absent.

Nevertheless, supporters of these elements, who now control the Democratic patronage, were on hand. It had been rumored through the corridors of downtown hotels throughout the evening that the Council, headed by Detroit's Emmett Cunningham, was seeking to get control of party patronage and hoped to supersede the "association crowd" in the high party councils. Whether or not these rumors were correct, the net result was a concerted effort to stop the Cunningham machine.

COUNCIL YOUNGER

The Council, which dates back to 1944, is considerably younger than the association, which, it is claimed, has been in existence for a time variously estimated at from forty to fifty-six years.

Both organizations claim succession to the "machine" headed by former Recorder of Deeds William Thompkins. At any rate, the association bunch took advantage of the loosely phrased "call" of the Council group to load the club room with men opposed to the Council and succeeded in halting effective development of the Council's program.

The association claimed that the Council represented "only five or six people" and threatened to walk out. Pleas for harmony while specific issues were settled fell on deaf ears.

During one of the intermittent "harmony" periods in the Sunday caucus, Mr. Cunningham made a dramatic plea for a strong civil rights fight. He said: "If the white Southerners who have no place to go can raise all this commotion in opposition to civil rights, then surely Negroes, who have some other place to go, can raise just as much commotion."

Young Dmeocrats Vote Not to Hear Thurmond Talk

Wash Post

Richmond, Va., Sept. 13 (AP).—Spokesmen for the Young Democratic Clubs of Virginia said today that Frank P. Burton, jr., States' Rights Party chairman, was in error in insisting that Gov. J. Strom Thurmond would address the junior party convention here October 8 as schtduled.

Tues 9-14-48

Burton, in the face of a decision of the executive committee of the Young Democrats to "take care" of the already accepted invitation to Thurmond by postponing the convention dates, said that the convention would be held as scheduled and the States' Rights presidential candidate would speak.

Wash D.C.

W. P. Brown, jr., publicity director of the Young Democrats, said Burton had no authority to make such a statement for the organization and spoke only as an individual.

Burton, a member of the Young Democrats' executive committee as chairman from the fifth district, was not present at Saturday's meeting when the committee by a vote of 8 to 6 turned thumbs down on Thurmond speaking to its convention. The invitation had been extended by President Thomas Odom of Whaleyville.

Georgia Elector Chief For Purge, Not Bolting

The Constitution Wed 10-27-48

Atlanta, Ga.

Deploring Democratic Party bolting, Henry McIntosh, of Albany, chairman of the Democratic presidential electors, yesterday asked Dixiecrats:

"Why burn down a house to get rid of rats?"

McIntosh, who has called a meeting of Presidential Electors for Wednesday at Macon to campaign for the Democratic ticket, said he, personally, doesn't subscribe to Mr. Truman's Southern viewpoints.

"I believe that the only sensible course of action, however, is to purge and strengthen the Democratic Party," McIntosh told newsmen at Albany. "Most persons booming the Dixiecrat ticket are not voting for the Dixiecrat candidates but are voting against Mr. Truman. This will get us nowhere. What can we do with a strictly Southern Party? The South has progressed only under leadership of the Democratic Party."

McIntosh criticized Rep. Eugene Cox, of the Second Congressional District, who has strongly indicated his support of the Dixiecrat ticket. He said that persons nominated by the Democrats should not bolt, or even consider bolting, into another party and retain their designation as Democrats.

Wed 10-27-48

Georgia business and labor are joining hands in supporting the Democratic ticket, McIntosh said, pointing to encouragement he has received from J. P. Allen, of Atlanta, prominent business leader, and George Googe, State AFL leader.

Chairman Asserts Few Bolted Truman—'Great Bulk' Held Eligible for a Return

CONGRESS RULE SEPARATE

Majority Will Decide There, He Says—Mrs. Roosevelt Urges Posts Be Denied Many

By CLAYTON KNOWLES

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—Senator J. Howard McGrath, the Democratic National Chairman, disclosed today that he intended to bar from positions of party leadership those who bolted the ranks to take an active part in founding the States' Rights Democratic party.

In his first pronouncement on the subject, Mr. McGrath stressed that the actual number of Southerners in this category was few, that "the great bulk" of those who supported the States' Rights ticket had "understandable motives" that would not foreclose their return to the party.

"But there are those," he declared with equal emphasis, "whose actions have been such that the Democratic party could never have confidence in their integrity in the future."

He stated that he "did not intend to forget those in the South who stood loyally by the party" in emphasizing that new party organizations, formed to fight the States' Rights revolt in South Carolina and Mississippi, would continue to be recognized by him.

He was asked if this would mean, by way of example, that Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, who headed the States' Rights ticket, was definitely out as Democratic National Committeeman.

Tue 11-9-48

"It does as far as I'm concerned, and the only party agency that could upset that ruling would be the Democratic National Committee."

Upon further questioning, he said that there was no meeting of the Democratic National Committee scheduled and that he, as chairman, had no plans for calling such a meeting. He recalled that the first such meeting after the 1944 election was held on Oct. 29 of last year, at which time he was elected chairman.

The Senator emphasized that his decision concerned party organization alone and that it did not apply to the organization of the Congress. There the views of the majority of Democrats in the House and in the Senate would be binding, he said, and he added that he would be sittink just as one Senator, not a party chairman, whene the matter was decided in the Upper House.

Many Southern Democrats, returned to the Congress election after election, are in line for important committee chairmanships on a seniority basis now that the party has been returned to the majority.

Rankin Is Singled Out

Mrs. Eleanore Roosevelt in a radio broadcast in New York today proposed that chairmanships be denied to a number of prominent Southerners. She specifically mentionad Representative John Rankin of Mississippi, whom she termed "one of the worst reactionaries," and Senator Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina, whom she said had "snubbed" President Truman.

Tue 11-9-48

A fairly large number of Southern Representatives took the stump for the Thurmond-Wright ticket, although only Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi of the Southern delegation in the Upper House was active in such a capacity.

Senator McGrath, who will leave Thursday afternoon or Friday morning to join the President at Key West, said that he would have no agenda for their discussions but that he would be ready to talk about anything Mr. Truman desired.

He said he did not believe that the President has thought about or discussed Cabinet changes, a subject that has been the source of much speculation, but he said he would have suggestions should the matter be brought into their talks.

"The results of the election," he said, "constituted a mandate for continuation of the progressive policies that have become synonomous in the public mind with the New Deal. I myself think the people principally voted for a Truman deal and I think that's what they have a right to expect to get."

Rs he prepared to leave, Senator McGrath set at rest reports that, now that the election was over, he would resign as national chairman. Such reports had been coupled in some cases with the implication that his direction of the recent campaign had not met with the approval of the inner guard at the White House.

OLOG,HE LFWPeoAB

"I have no intention whatsoever of changing my personal status in the Democratic National Committee," he declared.

The chairman made it equally plain that he had no intention of shaking up the personnel in the National Committee's headquarters. There had been rumors that the White House also was dissatisfied with their work.

"To the top echelon of the staff at Democratic National headquarters belongs a lot of the credit for last Tuesday's big victory even though their names seldom got into the newspapers," he said. "It was as excellent and loyal a staff as a party could hope to gather. No organization, confronted with the immense and complex roblems that faced the Democratic party, could have succeeded without such staff work."

Return to Ranks Forecast

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8 (AP)—Senator-elect Russell Long, Democrat, of Louisiana, said today he believed that most States Rights Democrats "are ready to return to the regular party."

Mr. Long also predicted in an interview that President Truman would receive some of the electoral college votes pledged to Gov. J. Strom Thurmond.

"President Truman made a smart move when he said he holds no malice against anyone," Mr. Long said. "It leaves the way open for anyone to come back who wishes."

Tue 11-9-48

This does not mean that Southerners would not oppose the President's civil rights program, Mr. Long added.

Mr. Long said he came to Washington to confer with War Assets Administration officials on business "of interest to Louisiana communities." He declined to give any details.

During the day he visited the Capitol and talked with Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley.

In the election, Mr. Long's name appeared on both the ticket headed by Governor Thurmond as the State's Rights candidate and on the ticket headed by President Truman.

Vote for Anyone but Truman Is a Vote for Republicans, He Says at Asheville

Tue 9-28-48

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Sept. 27 (AP)—Senator Alben W. Barkley told Southern Democrats tonight a vote for any other candidate than President Truman "is a vote for the Republican nominees."

Asheville, N.C.

First of top Democratic candidates to invade the South where many dissident party members are backing Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for President, Mr. Barkley said it would "be a tragic thing if the partnership between the Democratic party and the states of the South were to be destroyed."

Mr. Thurmond, candidate of States' Rights Democrats, is on the North Carolina ballot with Mr. Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

Mr. Barkley, Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, spoke at a meeting arranged by the State Democratic Committee.

Should the South break away from the Democratic party, he declared, "it would leave the South without effective means of promoting its own high aspirations" and "without a voice in the councils of the nation."

Asks Adjustment of Dispute

The November election, he said, was between Democratic and Republican candidates, for "no other party has any hope of obtaining more than a fraction of votes."

Without mentioning the revolting Southern party, Mr. Barkley said:

"Some of the following of fragmentary political groups, some of them in the South, have been attracted by sincere interests, some by distortion of issues and some by misunderstanding of these issues."

Mr. Barkley invited Southerners to resume their "long and fruitful partnership with the Democratic party" and to "adjust differences of opinion withim the framework of the party."

Tue 9-28-48

He said the Republican party never had been friendly to the South and "is not interested in its problems."

"Whenever the Republican party has been in power," he added, "the South's fortune shave declined."

Twenty years ago, he recalled, many Southern Democrats supported a Republican, Herbert Hoover, against Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic nominee.

"I am sure," he said, "your memories of the one four-year term of President Hoover are sufficiently etched in your mind that you need no reminder from me."

Freight-Rate Fight Recalled

Neither Governor Dewey nor Gov. Earl Warren, GOP candidates, "knows the South," Mr. Barkley said, and in Mr. Dewey's case "he opposed the interests of the South by intervening against the South in its fight for more adequate freight rates."

"It is well to inquire," he said, "whether the Governor of New York, if he became President, would seek through his appointive power to remove representation of the South on the Interstate Commerce Commission."

And Mr. Dewey, he said, "is in sympathy with the desire of some interests to operate the huge Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic energy plant for their own private profit."

As additional evidence of Republican unfriendliness to the South, Mr. Barlyey said the GOP-controlled Eightieth Congress refused to provide money for further development of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Vote for Truman

The Constitution

Mon. [illegible]

Atlanta, Ga.

Editor Constitution: Why all the confusion about who Democrats should vote for for President? Mr. Truman is the regularly and properly nominated candidate of the Democratic party, therefore, he is the proper one to vote for. I don't agree with his favoring a civil rights law and an FEPC law. But, reading between the lines, it is clear he is bidding for Northern and Eastern votes. I don't believe Mr. Truman actually wants these laws to apply to Missouri any more than we want them to apply to Georgia.

Nor do I believe the Northern and Eastern voters actually want Negroes to eat and sleep in the same hotels as their white men and women, nor their children to attend classes in school with Negro children. Their claim to favor civil rights and FEPC laws is just to aggravate and tantalize the people of the South. I have full confidence in our United States Senators of the South having the ability and willingness to prevent any and all civil rights and FEPC bills being enacted into laws by Congress. Why throw away votes by voting for Dixiecrats? Nonsense. I am going to vote for Mr. Truman. A. J. INGRAM.

The Democratic Party Takes Its Stand

Fri. 7-16-48

MANY who listened to broadcasts of the Democratic convention must have been struck by the solemn note in voices of radio pundits announcing a tragic turn in history's tide. Here, they declared, was the end of the Democratic Party of tradition. They seemed a bit shocked, some of them even sad and reproachful, after the Southern delegates twice were beaten on the issue of States' Rights vs. civil rights. It was as if they had looked upon murder; and deliberate, wanton murder at that.

The occasion was, indeed, a point in history. But in one very clear light it may be seen as a high point, illumined by a kind of moral brightness: touched by a sunrise rather than a sunset. It was a point at which a principle was stated—and then, in the face of an opposition that shouted terror at sight of principle so vivid, accepted for what must be all time.

In other words, the Democratic Party has given a shape and definition to its purpose. It has said that it will not be all things to all men in its old strange association of divers interests. It decided that it must stand for one thing or for nothing. And this was it, a principle on which the party decided it can and should stand, making its cause a fighting cause.

Louisville, Ky.

The thing was done by a vote of the majority of the party's representatives and spokesmen—the rank and file, as it were, rather than the inner core of organization diplomats. It may not have been expedient, in the short view of November 2, but there are many who will believe that it was necessary to be done sooner or later.

Who the Rebels Were

But even looking at November, and at the rebel Southern politicians, there is a point of question whether all was lost thereby. Is the South lost? One must look at the spokesmen for the South who were there in Philadelphia. Many of these were to be recognized as representatives of factions that were not dominant in 1944 or even 1946. In many a State the "outs" of those years are the "ins" of today—the Regulars of Texas, for example, who were thwarted in just such a rebellious move four years ago but who came back in a mood of public disillusionment.

The Alabamans who walked out were representatives of a faction, or an alliance of factions, whom JIM FOLSOM defeated single-handedly two years ago, only to give them opportunity for triumph in the next test through public revulsion against his personal conduct and political ineptness and vainglory as Governor.

And many a radio listener may have missed a brief episode which revealed the rebels from Georgia to be a factional group almost certainly to be challenged. It occurred when E. D. RIVERS, former Governor and momentarily holding on as Georgia's national committeeman, arose to report on a convention routine. He was introduced inadvertently as a member of the Georgia delegation, at which there arose an instant angry protest from the latter. It happens that the delegation was a group of HERMAN TALMADGE's followers, recently come to power, and bitter enemies of RIVERS.

This is to say that the political note in much of the Southern rebels' action ought to be obvious, and that in many states there is bound to be factional challenge for them—issued, doubtless, in the name of the Democratic Party, that rock of ages. You will see then what you will see as to whether the name has lost the old magic of its appeal. It could be that the old incantation plus the new and distinct principles of a forthright platform will have their effect before the summer is out. The men who walked out or who otherwise asserted their indignation are men who have lived by politics, who now are risen by politics, but who also have had the experience of, at least temporarily, dying by politics.

Not Necessarily the End

Fri. 7-16-48

Thus the Philadelphia convention is not to be regarded entirely as the end of everything. In a way, it was the important beginning of several things, including a fight that will go on for several years. The immediate shape of this fight was given to the convention in its final moments by President TRUMAN, who announced his plan to call Congress back into session.

This obviously is a political action, but nonetheless an aggressive, fighting action. Besides a move by the President of the United States it is also a move by the candidate of one party to challenge the intentions and good faith of the platform and candidates of the opposing party. In this, Mr. TRUMAN is certainly to be fortified by the stand which his party has taken on a point of uncompromising principle. For all the wounds that were inflicted in its internecine conflict, the Democratic convention has given assurances, not to be mistaken, of what the party stands for. In the long run, in the years beyond next November, it will rise or fall on its determination to stick by its principles.

SOB STUFF AND ALL

Editor, The Advertiser:

Well, I see Senator McGrath has begun pulling the rope that used to be tied in the Southern Democrats nose. At first they said that the States Rights' movement was just a "flash in the pan" and would soon pass off and we would all come back and be led to the polls and vote the Truman-Barkley ticket.

The Advertiser

He says those of us who vote for Thurmond and Wright will be "leaving the party." I guess he means the Yankee part of the old Democratic Party and he has his cart before the horse. The Northern branch of the proselyted Democratic Party has left us. The party of Truman-McGrath, etc., no more resembles the original party of Jefferson, Pettus, Morgan, Underwood and the Bankheads than a buzzard resembles a canary.

That old original Democratic Party saved the South during Reconstruction days and has always consistently fought for every principle of states' rights that the South has always stood for. That is the party we are supporting.

Wed. 9-15-48

I am surprised that men like Mr. A. A. Carmichael, who has a background of sterling worth and integrity, can be so badly misinformed as to the sentiment of the people. He is not alone as some of our senators and congressmen are also mealy mouthed and indecisive as to how they stand. It may be that they are just waiting to just see which way the band wagon goes, but I am afraid that some of them will be too late. They'll find out which way it went when they offer for reelection.

I don't know much about other parts of the state, but down here we want them to stand up and be counted, so we will know what kind of tag to put on them for future reference. How it is that some of our ablest men, men we have elected to positions of honor and trust, can afford to line up with men like Senator Langan, McGrath, Primm, Aubrey Williams, et al., and be so diametrically opposed to the unequivocal wishes of the same people who have always supported them, I can't understand.

Montgomery, Ala.

I know some men are natural objectors. We expect them to be on the wrong side. It is the men we have trusted and honored whose silence mystfies us. We want them to come out and take a definite stand, either for states' rights Democracy or the old shell of the old party. We have been loyal to that old party for all these many years, but as soon as the time arrived when they thought they were big enough to get along without us, they ignored our wishes, leered at our protests and derided our desires, then they climaxed the whole dirty business by saying, "let them go and good riddance." I don't know who made that remark but it expressed the feelings of the Yankee Democrats toward the South better than could be written in a large book. Now they expect to jerk the rope as usual and look for us to come trotting along.

Senator McGrath I think you have the toughest job your bosses have ever given you for that old line about (bolting the dear old party) Sob stuff and all is not making any headway down here.

Love to Grandma.

HASTIE SEES NEGROES VOTING FOR TRUMAN

The Times

William H. Hastie, Governor of the Virgin Islands, declared yesterday that Negro voters would support President Truman because of his program of civil rights and would not be misled by the civil rights program of the Progressive party into voting for Henry Wallace.

Thur. 10-14-48

Introduced by Senator J. Howard McGrath, Democratic National Chairman, at Democratic headquarters in the Biltmore Hotel, Mr. Hastie announced that he would speak for President Truman in nineteen cities on a campaign trip until the eve of the election.

New York, N.Y.

Mr. Hastie said that he was convinced that the Progressive party was "a political puppet securely tied to the Communist party line" and that he could not find any other explanation of a course of action which denounced the Marshall Plan and at the same time describes every honest criticism of Communist policy as "red baiting."

"Mr. Wallace himself was notoriously disinterested in civil rights and the needs of the Negro when he was Vice President and in the Cabinet," Mr. Hastie said. "He could have helped us then, but did not choose to do so.

"We can and will win the civil rights fight under President Truman's leadership. Nothing but bitter disillusionment and a reactionary Republican Administration could result from following the Wallace will-o'-the-wisp."

One-Party Government

Syracuse, New York N.Y.

President Truman prepares for a far-ranging and energetic campaign not only in the face of public opinion polls which show him trailing his Republican rival but in the face of a drastic Southern revolt. Governor Thurmond and his running mate, Governor Wright, representing the reaction against the President's civil-rights program are now counting on forty-five of the 127 electoral votes in states ordinarily considered the "solid South"; their total in the end may well be more. The magnitude of the revolt was stressed last week when the Democratic State Committee in Louisiana voted to place Governor Thurmond at the head of the regular Democratic ticket, thus making it necessary for Truman votes to be written in.

The Democratic National Committee has reacted strongly against this new defection. It is one thing to have the State Righters qualified to appear under their own name on the ticket, as at present in Kentucky, Virginia, North Carolina and Texas; but it is a different and far more serious thing when they win control of the Democratic organization, substituting their own candidates for those nominated by the party's national convention. Students of political history have recalled that in 1912 Theodore Roosevelt, having split his party, saw his name placed in the Republican column of states where he controlled the regular organization, leaving Taft nowhere on the ballot. But whatever the precedent, the tactic is open to question; and the Democratic leaders complain with much justification that the voters are being deprived of their right to vote for the party's regular candidates. Tue. 9-14-48

That complaint would be the more effective, however, if the South had not been for so long a one-party region. Those who are admitting today that the Democratic emblem at the head of the ballot in the South exercises a well-nigh irresistible fascination for the voter are the same who have been benefiting from this situation election after election. The truth is that a one-party system is not healthy, whether it benefits Mr. Truman, Mr. Thurmond or anybody else. The present tactics of the States Righters will serve a useful purpose if they remind us all of this fact and if, more concretely, they help give to the Republican party a real opportunity to make its way into what has hitherto been for it a barren ground. Such an opportunity is opening up as a result of the split in Democratic ranks, and it is being vigorously taken advantage of by the national committee. The Republicans are now waging in the South an unprecedented publicity campaign and are preparing to assign leading Republicans to speak in each state for the Dewey-Warren ticket. The votes gathered by the party in November may thus mark the beginning of the end in what has long been an anomaly in a country believing in two-party government. 9-14-48 and if they were [illegible] Congress they would be States [illegible]mocrats and not simply Democrats.

National Chairman Acts To Minimize Confusion

But in South Carolina the candidates for the United States Senate and Congress were nominated in the Democratic primary and will make the race as Democratic nominees. Should they be elected as expected—their names will be on both the States Rights (i. e. the regular) Democratic party ticket and on the Truman-Barkley ticket. If they elect to call themselves Democrats who in Washington, including Senator McGrath, will dispute their claim?

The fact is, of course, that the Southern Democrats will come pretty near controlling the Democratic party when the election is over. Losses elsewhere would leave the Southern Democrats almost with the exclusive power to speak for the party in Congress. And gains elsewhere would give the Democrats control of the Senate, only if the Southern Democrats be considered still Democrats despite their support of Thurmond and Wright. Fri 9-3-48

This is the reason the Southern Democrats, although bolting the Democratic nominees for president and vice president, have not been willing to break their ties with the Democratic party.

And McGrath probably doesn't object to considering these Southern Democratic Congressmen Democrats if they are nominees of the Democratic party. A man can be a nominee of two parties. William Jennings Bryan was the presidential nominee of the Democratic and Populist parties.

But the national leaders, concerned now with the immediate problem of getting a Truman-Barkley ticket in the field, are proposing to do for the States Righters what they would not do for themselves—sever their official connection with the Democratic party. The national executive committee will recognize the Citizens Democratic group in South Carolina as the official Democratic party, presumably seating its representatives on the national executive committee and according its state chairman recognition as the head of the Democratic party in South Carolina.

It is a good thing, clearing up some of the confusion and giving South Carolina the rudiments of the two-party system, even though the States Righters had sought to preserve, protect and defend the single-party system.

Now South Carolinians can take sides. It is a little less confusing.

The schizophrenia which has afflicted the States Rights Democratic party from its birth and which has spread from the States Rights party to the Democratic party of South Carolina seems to have Senator J. Howard McGrath, national chairman of the Democratic party, almost as confused as the South Carolina voters. So he moves to eliminate some of the confusion.

Fri 9-3-48

Mr. McGrath, who is, of course, a leading contender for the title as the world's worst Democratic national chairman, declares in Washington that Democratic office-seekers must either support President Truman's campaign for election or else stop regarding themselves as members of the Democratic party. Candidates in the South will "automatically" be withdrawing from the party if they spurn the Truman-Barkley ticket for the States Rights nominees, Governor J. Strom Thurmond and Governor Fielding Wright, he said.

The Dixiecrats are a fourth party in this campaign, he declared, and their supporters are "leaving the Democratic party just as effectively as if they supported the Republicans or Henry Wallace's Progressive party."

Columbia S.C.

Yet the South Carolina Democratic party executive committee, meeting the day before, had decided that it was still the Democratic party of South Carolina even though its electors are pledged to support not Truman and Barkley, but Thurmond and Wright, who call themselves the candidates of the States Rights Democratic party but also describe themselves as still Democrats.

The simple truth is that the States Rights party has never been able to make up its mind whether it should consider itself a fourth party or not.

In South Carolina it is not a new party, but has taken over the regular Democratic party in which it constitutes a faction. And the same is true in Alabama and Mississippi.

In most of the other states, in which it will be represented, it will be a fourth party, however, opposing the regular Democratic party. Georgia's decision hasn't yet been made and cannot be made until the gubernatorial election has been decided.

If in any of these states the States Righters were to nominate candidates for governor and Congress—they threaten to nominate a candidate for governor in Texas—these candidates, of course, would have to call themselves States Rights candidates

Democrat Debacle Bad For The Nation

MARQUIS CHILDS

PHILADELPHIA.

WATCHING this slack and spiritless gathering reluctantly begin its foreordained business, you need no crystal ball to see what kind of campaign will develop in the Fall. The contest will be more one-sided than any in our recent political history. July 7-13-48

The Democratic organization will be virtually without funds. It is even now living from hand to mouth. The newspapers will be overwhelmingly for the Republican ticket.

The Democratic chieftains here for this convention see all too clearly how bad is their plight. But such an unbalance is bad not merely for the party that happens to be on the short end.

Under our two-party system, it is bound to be bad for the country and even for the Republicans, who are at this moment looking on with such smug self-satisfaction. There must be vigorous competition if the system is to produce truly representative government.

Already the effort is being made on the Republican side to make it sound as though this were to be a contest between the individual and individual freedom, on the one hand, and the all-powerful state on the other hand. Nothing could be more false. A victory won on that ground would open the way to exploitation by interests more powerful than government itself.

In two fields it is already evident what this can mean. No. 1 is taxes. In this connection, a plank in the Republican platform deserves more study than it has received. The plank says:

"The Federal government shall as soon as practicable withdraw or reduce those taxes which can be best administered by local governments, with particular consideration of excise and inheritance taxes."

Montgomery, Ala.

THIS is an outright invitation to repeal the Federal inheritance tax. State governments are far more subject to pressure from wealth and power. Moreover, the way would immediately be opened to rivalry, with some states deliberately trying to attract wealth by a low inheritance tax or none at all. 7-13-48

At the last session the Republican Congress went a long way toward this coal. The new tax law permits the splitting of estate and gift taxes between husband and wife in the same manner that income tax can now be split. In his message vetoing the tax bill, President Truman said that nearly all of the $260,000,000 annual reduction would go to 12,000 of the nation's most wealthy families. The new law, according to one theoretical example, would permit $1,000,000 to be passed on tax free.

You do not need to be an apostle of the soak-the-rich tax school to see where this can lead. Perhaps a truly objective study of our chaotic tax system would reveal that too great a share of the burden is being carried by wealth.

But a, compliant Congress, willing to repeal or nullify the inheritance tax, could very quickly throw the whole structure out of balance. In finding ways to make up the deficit, the burden would be passed to those less able to bear it. Our inflation-ridden economy would be under still another strain.

Tue. 7-13-48

POWERFUL exploiters hope to use a Republican victory in the field of public power and public land. As Bernard De Voto has shown so effectively in Harper's, a concerted plot seems to be aimed at turning over all public lands to the states and from there to private owners.

It has begun with a high-powers attack on the modest regulations of the forest service which protects part of the public lands—your land and mine—from ruin through over-grazing. Back of this is seen the dim outline of an intention to break down all barriers, including even those in the national parks. This would be a repudiation of Theodore Roosevelt and Gifford Pinchot, the crusading Republicans who long ago believed they had won the conservation battle.

In public power, the goal is to stop further Federal power development and to turn all power distribution over to private utilities. The real gains that have come to so-called backward regions from Federal power could conceivably be reversed.

A victory won in part by default and on the false opposition of control vs. freedom would give the extremists far too much license; a license they are already preparing to use. In 1934 and 1936, the years of the New Deal tide, we heard a great deal about the need for restraint and effective opposition under the two-party system. That need may be even greater today, when the party in power for so long seems on the point of disintegration and is all but powerless to make itself heard.

A Lesson From Democratic Party History

The Democrats can go back to 1860 for a parallel to the happenings at Philadelphia, back to another Democratic dispute which resulted in the first Republican victory.

The party met for its convention at Charleston and split on the racial issue—the slavery plank in the platform.

Southern Democrats wanted the platform to say that a slave-owner could go into any new territory of the West and be fully protected by the federal government in his constitutional right to own slaves.

The platform committee upheld this view. But a minority report was presented to the convention—just as it was at Philadelphia. It ignored the slavery issue.

After a terrific fight, the minority report was adopted. Eight Southern delegations walked out. The party was so shaken that it adjourned without nominating any candidates.

Fri 7-16-48

Later it met again at Baltimore. Three more Southern states bolted. The remaining delegates nominated Stephen A. Douglas for the presidency. Douglas believed that the people of each territory should decide for themselves whether to allow slavery.

Columbia S. C.

The bolting Southerners held a convention at Richmond and nominated John C. Breckenridge of Kentucky, as the Southern bolters this year are planning to meet at Birmingham.

The Republican party was solidly united under Abraham Lincoln, who was elected although he received only a minority of the votes.

7-16-48

And it was 24 years before the Democrats got back in again with Grover Cleveland.

THE ALSOPS

Atlanta Constitution

The labor groups and their Northern liberal allies now clearly intend to make a genuine effort to transform the Democratic party. Their objective is a party in which the labor-liberal faction, which claims credit for Truman's re-election, will speak with a dominant voice on such matters as appointments, legislation, and party strategy. What labor wants, in a word, is a Democratic party which will be in some measure a labor party. And if labor does not get what it wants, there is sure to be trouble ahead for President Harry S. Truman.

Atlanta Georgian

There are signs of trouble already. For one thing, the Cabinet shakeup which Truman's labor backers expected after the election has conspicuously failed to occur. Truman's enthusiastic assurances to his conservative Treasury Secretary, John Snyder, have particularly failed to please the labor groups.

Sun 11-28-48

Yet the most interesting aspect of the struggle for the soul of the Democratic party arises in the Congress. Those in whom labor and the liberals have real confidence in both Houses are by and large the junior members, of the stripe of Hubert Humphrey, of Minnesota, or Paul Douglas, of Illinois. On the other hand, much of the power which derives from seniority and committee assignments rests with the older conservatives, and particularly the Southerners, men like Georgia's Walter F. George, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and North Carolina's Robert L. Doughton, Chairman of Ways and Means in the House.

The labor-backed liberal Democrats are in a big majority, and they intend to get an equivalent share of power. Already it is clear that this situation will give rise to a bitter struggle for power in the Congress. Initially, the contest will revolve largely around the organization of the House, and particularly about the two most powerful House committees, Ways and Means and the Rules Committee.

Ways and Means, acting as the Committee on committees, appoints members of other committees, including the Rules Committee. In the ordinary course of events, Ways and Means would be heavily loaded with Southerners and conservative Democrats. Already, however, plans are being laid by the Northern liberal contingent to insist in the Democratic caucus, which meets before Congress convenes, on a heavier representation on Ways and Means. The liberals may even attempt to establish the Committee on Committees as a body entirely separate from Ways and Means, thus under-cutting the Southerners and conservatives, and altering the whole structure of power in the House.

The outcome of the fight on the Ways and Means Committee will closely affect the contest which is in prospect on the Rules Committee. As things stand, the Rules Committee can prevent any legislation from reaching the House floor. And an alliance of the Republicans and three Southerners, Cox of Georgia, Smith of Virginia and Colmer of Mississippi, could stop labor-backed legislation in the House dead in its tracks.

The labor-liberal contingent is determined that this shall not happen. It could be prevented in a number of ways. A Committee on Committees controlled by the liberals could disregard seniority and pack the Rules Committee. Or the rules could be changed, so that the Rules Committee could no longer bury legislation. Or a purge of the Democratic Party, which would take care of Cox and possibly Colmer, could be undertaken.

Among labor and liberal groups, there is much talk of such a purge. Indeed, a purge list has already been drawn up. The list includes as a minimum such unquestioned Dixiecrats as Eastland, in the Senate, and Cox, Davis, Rivers, Battle, Hobbs, Boykin, Rankin, Williams and perhaps Colmer in the House. The liberals argue that the Southerners must be diciplined, and that the disciplining should be accomplished right away, as an object lesson to less conspicuous bolters.

In this impending struggle for power in Congress, the key figures are Vice-President Alben Barkley, and more especially, House Speaker Sam Rayburn.

It is a reasonable guess that the Barkley-Rayburn strategy will be, at least initially, one of conciliation and delay. In all probability, no purges will be undertaken. The Southerners, including the overt Dixiecrats, will be allowed to keep their committee places. In the meantime, the pressure from the Northern labor-backed Congressmen can be used, by Rayburn especially, to prevent the Southerners from hamstringing the Administration program.

Thus there is a fair chance for a short honeymoon. But toward the end of the session, civil rights legislation, to which Truman is inescapably committed, will be introduced. Then it is perfectly certain that a battle royal will ensue, which may permanently split the Democratic party. One consequence of such a split would be that the Democratic party would then become wholly a party of labor and the liberals, a party of the Left.

McGrath Predicts President Will Forgive 'Venial Sins'

Truman Not Geared To Punish All Foes, Chairman Believes

Fri 11-12-48

Montgomery Ala

KEY WEST, FLA., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath expressed belief tonight that President Truman will forgive "venial, but not mortal sins" of the campaign when he proceeds with the reorganization of his administration.

Senator McGrath flew here from Washington with William (Bill) Boyle, a special political assistant. His arrival was scheduled to step up Mr. Truman's search for cabinet replacements.

McGrath said he would be "glad to discuss anything the President wants to take up" while he is with him. The party chieftain was asked if he hadn't said there were some groups the President "won't forgive" for failure to support his hard-fought race.

Not Geared That Way

"The President is not geared that way," McGrath said. "There are some groups that the President can't help but forgive."

"I'm sure he will forgive venial sins as opposed to mortal sins."

Asked to define a mortal political sin, he said it was "one which kills the soul."

McGrath didn't volunteer a definition of a venial sin. Reporters looked up a chaplain who likened a venial sin to a misdemeanor.

He and Boyle joined Senator Alben W. Barkley, vice-president-elect, and Leslie L. Biffle, director of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee for top-level discussions about prospective administrative changes as aftermath of the campaign.

Progressive GOP's Welcome

McGrath welcomed the support of "progressive Republicans" for what he described as "progressive legislation" to be offered the new Congress.

Fri 11-12-48

He was told that Senator Aiken (R), Vermont, had suggested that "progressive Republicans" would vote to support such legislation on which Democratic and Republican platforms coincided.

"Such support will be very welcome," McGrath said.

He was reminded that Mrs. India Edwards, chairman of the women's division of the Democratic committee, had expressed belief women would get "a break" in the "little cabinet."

He said "I am all for her idea of more women in public life," but "it is too early to get specific."

Fri 11-12-48

Silent on Cabinet Changes

McGrath was asked point blank what cabinet changes he favored.

"No comment," he said tersely.

A source high in the President's confidence said he is looking for successors to Secretary of Defense Forrestal and Secretary of of the Air Symington in the defense establishment.

This man, who would not be quoted by name, said that a replacement for Robert A. Lovett, undersecretary of State, had not been decided upon, but that Lovett is expected to step out soon.

Secretary of State Marshall wants to retire at the close of the year. The President apparently wants him to stay on the job.

Marshall Report Awaited

Meanwhile, there was no further word from the President's vacation headquarters on developments at blockaded Berlin. The President's aides yesterday threw down reports of a prospective Truman-Stalin meeting.

Whether Mr. Truman sends a personal emissary to Moscow to talk with Premier Stalin in an effort to find an agreement to ease European tension likely will depend on Secretary Marshall's advice when he returns from Paris.

Fri 11-12-48

The President was represented at Armistice Day ceremonies of the Key West American Legion post today by his Army aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan.

Vaughan told the Legionnaires Mr. Truman's "fervent daily prayer" is that the young men of this and succeeding generations "will be spared the horrors of war."

"His life is devoted to peace for this nation and the world," Vaughan said.

HERE'S TEXT OF TRUMAN AND THURMOND BACKERS

Montgomery Advertiser

Editor's Note: Following is a partial text of Senator Claude Pepper's speech in support of President Truman at Sidney Lanier Auditorium last night. Neither the Republican nor the Wallaceite speaker furnished a text.

Montgomery, Alabama

By SENATOR CLAUDE PEPPER

IT is good to feel beneath one's feet again the soil of his native state. Not far from here, I, like my father and ancestors before me, was born. And from Alabama's soil my grandfathers went off to wear the Gray in a cause that was already lost 80 years ago. . . .

Go back with me to 1860. The Democratic Party split because our forebears demanded Federal protection for the extension of human slavery into the new states growing up in the West. A position which the national Democratic Party would not and could not accept.

Jn-10-8-48

In the election of 1860, Northern Democrats, who nominated Douglas, and the Southern Democrats, who nominated Breckenridge, got nearly one-half million votes more than the Republican nominee, Lincoln, but Lincoln, because of the Democratic split, won in the electoral college and became the President. Those who risked all upon extending slavery into the new territory wound up by losing the slaves they had even in the South, which assuredly they could have saved for decades if not generations and have been paid for in the end.

What I am saying is that we can see now that history was against the institution of human slavery although we were not the ones who primarily initiated it and primarily prospered from it; notwithstanding the fact that it was those who sold us the slaves who later took them away.

Today, speaking to you with the candor which the situation demands, history is on the side of the Government of the United States, which is the champion of human liberty and freedom in this world, practicing at home the Democracy it preaches to mankind.

Nothing other or less than the Government of the United States, giving their fair and just constitutional rights under the Federal Government to every segment of our citizenship, holds us up to ridicule and scorn before the totalitarians of the world as hypocrites, is preaching one thing and practicing another.

If the South throws its weight and strength against the Constitution of the United States and the basic principles of Americanism it will and should lose.

Upholds Truman

But there is a clear and distinct sphere for the application of Federal Constitution with utter fairness and impartiality and the obligation of state laws, traditions and customs, without either doing violence to the other.

Jn-10-8-48

The President of the United States has been flagrantly if not designedly misrepresented in his recommendations on the so-called civil rights measures to the Congress. He has not recommended one thing relative to segregation in the states, in the public schols, in restaurants, in hotels, in theaters, swimming pools—and of course he has made no recommendation concerning churches, lodges, clubs and associations of local nature. He has recommended the abolition of the poll tax as a condition precedent to any citizen, white, black, yellow, or brown, voting for president, vice-president, senator or congressman, as the U. S. Congress has the power and and in my opinion the duty to do if the states will not strike it down themselves.

Jn-10-8-48

He has recommended Federal Jurisdiction to prosecute lynchers of any citizen whatever his color if the sheriff or his deputy or the U. S. marshall or his deputy willfully conspire in the lynching but only in such cases. He has advocated that in respect to interstate commerce, commerce crossing state lines, Congress has the right to regulate race, religion, color or national origin should not be the sole basis of either hiring or firing and he has advocated that private companies have no authority to segregate passengers crossing state lines in the Armed Forces. But of course he has not recommended and of course Congress has no power to interfere with or to abolish local laws, traditions, customs, and practices, respecting the wise segregation of the races in local affairs and institutions in the several states.

Time Is Needed

Time, education and wise experience will determine when, whether or to what extent the local practices requiring certain race separations should be changed. And whatever the decision is in these matters, mind you, it will be made by the people in the several states.

The State of New York has abolished segregation between different races. All races are assured equal access to any kind of public place. But that was done not by Federal Government but by Governor Dewey, and the Republican Legislature of New York.

Jn-10-8-48

What I plead for is that we not be deceived over a misunderstanding or by misrepresentation of this issue or fall into the crushing embraces of those who are either the third or the fourth parties means Dewey and depression—nothing less—nothing more.

Don't be deceived by those who cry wolf against Truman but who also just as loudly cried wolf, wolf, against Roosevelt, once or twice or maybe even three times. Many of whom today behind false slogans and exaggerated issues have bolted our party in your state and in mine and many other Southern States as they did in 44, in 40, or maybe even in 36.

You know that in those elections many men with a lot of corporation clients and big business support in the South voted against Roosevelt behind the false facade of States Rights. They did not want the Federal Government to give the public cheap public power. They did not want the Federal Government to help Southern workers get fair wages. They did not want the Federal Government to protect the little investor or the farmer against northern speculators with whom they were tied in. So they used the sword of States' Rights against the shield of the public welfare. The South needs more of what it has been getting—Federal Aid

The South needs more Democracy in America—not less. A government that will fight against monopoly, not a government which will make it more dominant. Let us beware my fellow men of false prophets and of false leaders. Remember the words of the Scripture "where your interest is there is your heart also." And when you hear those voices clamor against the old Democratic faith and party ask where are their interests. Then you will know why their hearts and their mouths are where they are.

Remember "He who's bread I eat, his servant am I." When you hear these voices raised against these old Democratic principles ask whose bread they eat. Then you will know whose servants they are.

Hence I do speak to you of the historical, political and economical enemies of the South.

You know how the South has grown under 16 years of Democratic Administration. You know what Franklin D. Roosevelt did for Southern industry, agriculture, labor, for the aged, for welfare, for women, for children, for the physically handicapped, for public power—for the whole South. You know how those were in the South before Roosevelt came in, under the Hoover Administration. I don't need to remind you of those sad days—the bank failures, the bankruptcys, the farm and home foreclosures, the long lines of unemployed—of a South as prostrate almost as when Lancelot of the Confederacy sheathed his shining sword at Appomatox. I don't need to remind Southern business men and farmers that when they fought for lower freight rates to Northern markets it was Governor Thomas E. Dewey, of New York.

I don't need to remind you how Republican administrations tried to steal and to strangle your Tennessee Valley and the TVA; nor how in the last Congress they refused the building of a necessary steam plant by the TVA. I don't need to tell Alabama farmers of how Republican agriculture legislation in the last Congress cut down parity and the support prices for cotton, corn and peanuts and tobacco and rice—all of which our Southern farmers produce, and that this legislation almost will take hundreds of millions of dollars away from Southern growers, farmers and live stock producers.

A Republican regime restored to national power will again lay the heavy hand of obstructionism on a flourishing South. It will put the farmers commodities again at the mercy of Northern speculators like the cotton my father used to grow in Chambers County.

Sees GOP Depression

I don't need to remind Southern labor that if the Republicans gain full national power they will drive the Taft-Hartley dagger all the way into labor's heart. It will strangle Social Security. Turn over the TVA again to the private power companies. Continue the exploitation of Southern resources by Northern absentee landlords.

Jn-10-8-48

Republican rule meant depression under Hoover. It will mean a worse depression under Dewey. Democratic rule has meant progress for the South. Republicans will mean pushing the South back down the hill. Following off after and for the South which I love. I know the simple lessons of history. I call not only upon all Southerners who have voted in the ranks of Democracy but all Liberals as well—even the erring party which is the home of the Liberal—the party of Jefferson, and Jackson, and Woodrow Wilson, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, and YES, President Harry Truman, who follows in their footsteps with a courage which they should have commended.

YES—I have been a Democrat, I am a Democrat and I shall be a Democrat.

Toward my party I proudly express the sentiment of him who said:

Jn-11-8-48

"Woodman spare that tree—touch not a single bough—for in my youth it sheltered me—and I will protect it now."

My fellow Southerners, for a century and a half the Democratic party has sheltered you. I know the quality of your loyalty and that you will protect it now.

South are entitled to our commendation and not our condemnation. They are entitled to our cooperation and our support."

Quotes Booker T.

And I would quote to you the words of Booker T. Washington, the greatest educator and statesman which the colored race has yet produced: "Brains, opportunity and character for the Negro will settle the question of civil rights. The best course to pursue in regard to the Civil Rights Bill in the South is to let it alone. Let it alone and it will settle itself. Good schools, teachers and plenty of money to pay them will be more potent in settling the race question than any civil rights and investigating committees."

34

Contrary to this sound and statesman-like advice, the platforms of each of the three other parties represented here tonight advocate the enactment, by Congress, of federal laws to make the gress, of Federal laws which invade the legislative province reserved to the States to make the laws concerning marriage, segregation of the races in public places, employment both public and private, qualifications as to voting (which is a privilege, not a right), and lynching, which is no more than murder and no more requires Federal regulation in the South than gangster murders do in the North.

This proposed Federal legislation—and it amazes me again every time I realize that a president elected by the Democratic Party is advocating it—is misnamed the Federal Civil Rights Program, though the word "Federal" is often omitted or forgotten. It is, in fact, an unconstitutional, unwise, thoroughly reprehensible Civil Disturbance Program.

Jn-10-8-48

The National Democratic Party, Senator Pepper, to which we have given our allegiance for a century, will get no more votes from us until this matter is straightened out clearly and unequivocally, as it should be.

Attacks Legislation

To those who advocate such Federal measures on these subjects, I would point out—as we tried patiently to do at Philadelphia—that there is an element of timing which cannot be ignored in evaluating the progress of the Negro race toward full political stature. The Negro has made tremendous progress in the last 200 years in the United States.

He has absorbed more enlightenment and moral character in the last two centuries in this country than he worked out for himself in the 6,000 years of his known history in Africa.

Some of his race are good citizens, responsible and patriotic. They should, and often do, vote and own property. But we in the South know from every day contact and experience that the mass of ten million Negroes who live below the Mason and Dixon line are not yet prepared for, nor even interested in, participation in public affairs. That is the simple fact, verifiable by anyone who will look to see for himself. Improvement in the situation—and we in the South are more interested and more vitally concerned than anyone else could possibly be—can only come through the slow process of education, evolution and patience. Legislative fiat cannot create it, and until it comes by natural processes, legislation upon the subject is not only unwise, but vicious. Fri 10-8-48

What Is Answer

But it is not upon sectional grounds alone that I ask the support of this audience for the States' Rights Democratic ticket. I think there is a principle involved which transcends party and is of inestimable value to the nation and to the world.

Reflect for a moment: What is the most important, the most pressing problem that faces mankind today? Over the centuries, the human animal has conquered all his natural enemies; he no longer fears the giant mastodon or the sabre-toothed tiger. Man is lord of the animal kingdom, much of which he has domesticated to serve his daily needs . . . But he has not learned how to rule himself . . . .

What is the answer? Can anyone doubt that it is one rule of law for all the world; that the proper approach is to show the world that it can confederate, that it can safely yield to some central government—call it the League of Nations, the United Nations, or what you will—the powers essential to its self-preservation, certainly the war power, and perhaps others, being careful to reserve to each nation full control over its own internal affairs? Is there any other practical feasible way to do it, and in time? And how can we persuade the world that such a plan would work unless we have already made it work ourselves? If the free states of this nation are not to be allowed to retain control over the local customs and habits of their own people, if our own states are to be absorbed into the central government, how, I ask you, can we convince a Frenchman, or a Chinaman, or a Russian, or even Americans themselves that world federation is other than a booby trap leading to world domination? Voters Should Decide Purge, Williams Says

Montgomery Ala.

Montgomery Advertiser

Former NYA Administrator Aubrey Williams advised national Democratic leaders Tuesday to let local party members have the final say-so on purging of States' Righters.

In a telegram to National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, he said it would be a "grave violation of elemental Democratic processes" for the committee itself to undertake such action.

Williams, who is publisher of The Southern Farmer, pointed out that he was one of those in the South who supported President Truman and his civil rights proposals. Thur 11-11-48

He reminded that members of the Alabama Democratic committee were elected by Democratic voters and serve until 1950.

"If some of them have betrayed the Democratic voters," he added, "the voters themselves are the proper authority, and not the national committee, to right this wrong."

New Democrats

To the New York Herald Tribune:

Congratulations on your editorial, "South Carolina's New Democrats."

Too many sincere Northern progressives have been deluded by the self-professed "liberalism" of some Southern orators, whether they be newspaper men or ex-Governors. While this "liberalism" consists of many policies with which many can agree, it always stops being liberal the moment the race question is considered. Then a let-alone and gradualist policy is advocated.

New York, N.Y.

It is indeed fortunate that Judge Waring sits on the Federal bench in a Southern district court. It is to such a progressive that liberals must turn on the race question. It is a pity he has been so relatively unsung, while other Southern publicity seekers have received such a voluminous press.

Judge Waring's effectiveness is further attested to by the fact that the five candidates for the United States Senate are busy denouncing him, rather than discussing the problems which must be faced by South Carolinians as Americans.

Democrats Cold To Mrs. F. D. R.'s Purge Proposal

Any Action On States' Righters Is Congress Job, Says McGrath

B'ham Ala.

BY JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9—(AP)—Democratic leaders turned a cold shoulder today on the proposal by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt that States' Rights supporters be purged from the party.

National Chairman J. Howard McGrath told a reporter it will be up to the Democratic members of the House and Senate to decide who gets the prized chairmanships in the new Congress.

He indicated the national committee doesn't want to mix in any such possible fight. McGrath is a senator from Rhode Island.

He hinted further—but didn't say so flatly—that any reprisal program such as Mrs. Roosevelt suggested wouldn't fit in with current efforts to solidify Democrats behind the legislative proposals President Truman will send to Congress in January.

In a radio broadcast from Paris yesterday, Mrs. Roosevelt said she would like to see "the permanent ousting of the Southern Dixiecrats from the Democratic Party."

THE WIOW OF THE LATE PRESIDENT suggested that some Southerners who opposed Mr. Truman's civil rights program would be denied congressional chairmanships if they aren't recognized as Democrats.

She named specifically Rep. John Rankin (Miss.), dubbing him "one of the worst reactionaries," and Sen. Olin Johnston (S. C.).

She said Johnston "snubbed President Truman, campaigned against him and then was one of the first on the train at Washington to congratulate the victorious president after his election."

Johnston refused to attend the Jackson Day dinner here last Winter because of his opposition to the president's civil rights proposals but later announced he was voting for Mr. Truman. He declined comment.

But Democratic committee officials said Mrs. Roosevelt was off base on Johnston's campaign record. William J. Primm, assistant to McGrath, said: "Sen. Johnston was very helpful throughout the campaign. He has worked with the committee in every way we asked."

Johnston can get a coveted Senate committee chairmanship only if Sen. Chavez (D., N. M.), who outranks him in service, decides not to become head of the postoffice and civil service group.

Tues 11-9-48

* * *

CHAVEZ ALSO IS SENIOR DEMOCRAT on the public works committee and might elect to take that chairmanship.

Rankin, however, is top Democrat on the House veterans committee and is in line to head it.

He said at his home in Tupelo, Miss.: "The less the American people hear from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, the better off the country will be."

Of 15 Senate committees, only four chairmanships will be filled by Southerners if the congressional seniority rule stands.

They include Sens. Connally (Tex.), in line to become chairman of foreign relations; McKellar (Tenn.), appropriations; George (Ga.), finance, and McClellan (Ark.), executive expenditures.

NO COMPROMISE, GOV. WRIGHT SAYS

Little Chance of Patch-Up Seen on 'Rights' Level

Thurs. 6-10-48

(The Associated Press)

Jackson, Miss., June 9.—Mississippi's Gov. Fielding L. Wright, leader of the states' rights Democratic movement, sees little chance of conciliation with the national party.

The Southern states' rights leaders, he told newspapermen today, would not be conciliated even if President Truman backed down on his civil rights program.

Commenting on a news report that Democratic Chairman J. Howard McGrath had predicted in Washington that there would be no occasion for a walkout at the National Democratic convention in Philadelphia, Wright said:

"We plan to ask a positive stand by the national party for states' rights and nothing less than that will be satisfactory."

Regarding the possibility that McGrath's remarks hinted a compromise between the civil rights and the states' rights supporters in the national party, Wright asserted: 6-10-48

"The civil rights issue is incidental. We want a positive declaration placed in the party platform that will insure the rights of the states as provided by the constitution."

Gov. Wright clarioned the present states' rights movement in his inauguration address last January when he proposed that the South "break" with the leadership of the national party if it continued to sponsor such legislation as the civil rights program.

PRESIDENT TELLS WALTER WHITE HE WILL PRESS RIGHTS PROGRAM

California Voice

Oakland California

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—"President Truman expressed his determination to go straight through with his civil rights program," Walter White, secretary of the NAACP, reported after a White House conference with the Chief Executive on November 29. Mr. White was accompanied by Roy Wilkins, NAACP assistant secretary. Fri 12-10-48

No signs of compromise on the "minimum program" set forth in the President's civil rights messages of February 2 were observed during the interview, Mr. White said, remarking that the President had declared himself to be under no obligation to anyone and had re-affirmed his intention of carrying out his campaign pledges. Fri 12-10-48

Mr. White reported to the President that results of a post-election survey conducted by the NAACP revealed that Negro voters throughout the country had supported Mr. Truman three to one over his Republican opponent, Governor Dewey. The figures compiled by the Association revealed that the overwhelming Negro vote for the President in the three key states of Illinois, Ohio and California was responsible for providing his slim margin of victory in those states. Fri 12-10-48

In Ohio, noted Mr. White, President Truman won over Governor Dewey by 7,107 popular votes. The Negro vote in the city of Akron alone gave the President a plurality of 6,342 over Dewey, and unofficial statewide returns indicated that Negro voters in Ohio gave Mr. Truman a margin of approximately 60,000 votes over Governor Dewey.

Citing incomplete returns from California indicating the 40,000 plurality given Mr. Truman by Negro voters was slightly more than his 32,512 margin in the state, Mr. White pointed out that this pattern of the Negro vote was general in the South as well as in the North and West. Fri 12-10-48

Democrats' Firmness On Civil Rights In Philadelphia Saved The Party

Norfolk, Va.

IF THE NATION as a whole had any doubts concerning the spiritual bankruptcy of "Southern Democracy," it had those doubts dispelled by the shoddy performance which the Dixiecrats staged in Philadelphia. There the country saw in all of its starkness the utter cheapness of the southern position. It is gratifying to know that the Democratic Party was big enough for once to recognize the essential rottenness of its southern branch and to lop it off.

Sat. 7-31-48

The South took a terrible licking in Philadelphia, the worst it has had since 1865; and I believe this licking came as a surprise to the Dixie boys. In the past, the northern Democrats (and the nation as a whole) have inclined to be tolerant of the South's unreasonableness. Treating Dixie as a problem child, they have used "progressive" methods in handling her, that is, they have allowed her to throw her weight around quite a bit. And Dixie had got into the habit of having her own way.

* * * *

BUT IN PHILADELPHIA, THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY, facing the gravest crisis of its history, couldn't afford to be bothered with the petty whims of a spoiled and pampered South. The situation demanded firm action, and the northern Democrats acted. They gave the Dixiecrats a sound spanking and sent them home, which was all as is should be. Their firmness saved the party and it should be therapeutic for the southerners.

As I have often said in this column, the Negro is the "spiritual barometer" of America; he serves as a sort of index to the state of our spiritual health. Moreover, he seems to bring out either the best or the worst in American men and institutions.

In Philadelphia the Negro brought out the best in the Democratic Party. The race issue forced the party to take high ground, to live up to all of its inherent ideals. The battle for civil rights at the convention increased the moral and spiritual stature of the party tenfold. And today, because of the high stand which it took on the Negro question, the Democratic Party has been "saved;" it is far stronger than it was before the Philadelphia convention and has a far better chance of winning in November. And its severe repudiation of the South, which at first seemed a bad "political move," has given the party a new strength and life.

* * * *

IN A LIKE MANNER, THE NEGRO ISSUE BROUGHT out and accentuated all that was foolish and vicious in the southern Democrats. In Philadelphia, the South lost much of the sympathy (and it was considerable) which the rest of the nation had for the South's stand on race. There are times when the American public expects even politicians to rise and, if nothing else, pay lip service to certain ideals.

Journal and Guide

The National Democratic Convention was such a time. In the face of a world attack on the democratic way of life, the party of the common man was expected to take some position on democracy at home. But the southerners failed to rise to this challenge in any way. As a matter of fact, the Dixiecrats retreated further from light and went deeper into the medieval darkness of their regional narrowness.

Norfolk, Va. 7-31-48

WHEN THE NATION HEARD THE PASSIONATE and fanatic ravings of the Dixiecrats, listened to their childish threats, and saw them hysterically "walking out," it realized that there was no health in that quarter; and the nation simply turned its back on Dixie. Nothing that the Dixiecrats can do in Birmingham or anywhere else will be of real importance because the South has been weighed by the American people and found wanting.

The Southern Revolt Of 20 Years Ago

The Courier-Journal

WE DON'T know what will come out of the sputtering at Birmingham. But we do know what came out of the only other Southern revolt of our time in a Presidential race, and we cannot remember it with pride. That was 20 years ago. Five States of the Solid South—Florida, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia—voted Republican for the first time since Reconstruction days. (Kentucky likewise played a shameful role.)

These States deserted the Democratic Party in spite of the fact that its nominee, ALFRED E. SMITH, had an exceptionally notable and clean public record, and his running mate, the late Senator JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, was an able and popular Southerner. Why did they do so? Well, some people said it was because AL SMITH was a Catholic. Others said it was because he was a wet. And many thought both factors entered into it.

Sun. 7-18-48

The attack on Mr. SMITH's religion was unmitigated bigotry. The attack on his opposition to prohibition was unmitigated hypocrisy in a section whose shibboleth was States' Rights. Prohibition threw States' Rights out of the window. All in all, it was a wholly discreditable revolt. Perhaps a way will be found to clothe the present uprising with more dignity and decency. But that is not the prospect at this writing.

THE RIGHT OF 'STATES RIGHTS'

Northwest Enterprise

Every state, community or village likes to think of itself as being capable of setting up, regulating and managing its own internal affairs. Likewise, every family head likes to think along similar lines in regard to his or her own household. Under proper conditions and with morally fit management these things can and should be accomplished—thus saving higher and more exacting authorities the trouble of "stepping in" for corrective measures. A large majority of the forty eight states of our United States can boast of distinctive accomplishment along this line—including HEALTH, EDUCATION, AGRICULTURE, COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS; CONTROL OF CIVIL AND CRIMINAL AFFAIRS—etc.—etc. These are the states that never squawk about "states rights." They have such rights because they merit such rights!

7-28-48

Seattle, Wash.

Too frequently, however, corrupt and prejudiced local or state authorities ABUSE THE PRIVILEGE AND HIGH POSITION given them by all the people (supposedly), by rank discrimination, impositions and even corrupt biased legislation. This is particularly true in certain Southern states on the well known "race question" and these are the states that are now squawking for "states rights"—all because they want to LYNCH (whenever the spirit strikes them) WITHOUT INTERFERENCE and they want to make certain crooked one-way laws and administer same to suit "occasions" WITHOUT THE "MEDDLING OF OUTSIDERS."

Northwest Enterprise

The world's greatest crime (no less in America) is now—and long has been the ABUSE AND MIS-USE OF CONSTITUTED AUTHORITY! But—in our opinion—the world and even America, is growing better. We feel that there is a new determination and leaning toward RIGHT AND JUSTICE and that when LOCAL AUTHORITIES, including parents, police, governors, etc., fail to function properly in the interests of humanity and justice, they must reasonably expect interference from HIGHER AND MORE EXACTING AUTHORITIES.

Seattle

If Southern states want "STATES RIGHTS" they should PUT THEIR HOUSE IN ORDER and then have a regular political HOUSE-CLEANING. A few special dates with the "undertaker" or the old-folks-home might help considerably.

Dixiecrats To Center Heat On 13 Borderline States

The Constitution

Atlanta, Ga. Sat. 7-17-48

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 16—(AP)—Revolting Southern Democrats planned today to take their battle for anti-Truman electors into the President's home State of Missouri and at least a dozen other States.

Meanwhile, ex-Gov. Frank M. Dixon, of Alabama, was named as temporary chairman for the convention.

These moves were mapped at preconvention caucuses today by delegates to the States' rights meeting called by Gov. Fielding H. Wright, of Mississippi.

Wright led the walkout of his State at the Philadelphia Convention. A decision today by the caucus on the Missouri move also included a plan to have States' rights electors on the ticket in Kentucky, home State of Sen. Barkley.

UNIVERSITY, Miss., July 16 (AP)—Scores of students at the University of Mississippi are planning to attend the States' rights conference tomorrow in Birmingham, Ala.

Sat.

One leader of the Southern revolt predicted the man nominated here tomorrow would "carry more states than Mr. Truman."

The Resolutions Committe, headed by Horace C. Wilkinson, of Birmingham, began the draft of a statement of principles for the meeting.

7-17-48

Members of the committee included two Georgians, Charles B. Redwine, of Fayetteville, and Jim Peters, of Manchester.

Rebellious Deep South party members were angered by passage of a strong civil rights plank and by overwhelming defeat of a states' rights plank.

The leader who made the prediction concerning Mr. Truman's November chances declined use of his name "until tomorrow's meeting." He outlined, however, a plan of action for the meeting.

Alabama and Mississippi, with 20 electoral votes between them, already are committed against Mr. Truman. He named as "certain against Truman and probably for our nominee," the following states:

Georgia, 12 electoral votes; South Carolina, 8; Florida, 8; Arkansas, 9; Louisiana, 10; Texas, 23; Virginia, 11.

The Constitution

Tennessee's 12 and North Carolina's 14 electoral votes, he said, either will go for the Birmingham nominee or for Gov. Dewey, the Republican candidate.

In addition to working for anti-Truman electors from these States through regular State Party machinery, he said a full slate of States' rights electors would be placed on the ticket in such border States as Oklahoma, Missouri and Maryland.

Atlanta, Ga.

Two chief possibilities for the States' rights nomination are Gov. Wright, of Mississippi, and Gov. Laney, of Arkansas.

Sat.

Gov. Wright called the meeting "to begin the fight to save the South."

7-17-48

"It has been made clear at Philadelphia," he said, "that the greatest discrimination existing in this country today is not racial or religious, but discrimination against the South."

An Alabama delegate, still smarting from the Philadelphia defeat, said on arrival:

"We will keep the South solid—solid against Truman and his obnoxious program to deprive us of control of our domestic affairs."

He was Albert Stapp, Birmingham business man and delegate at large.

"The South feels like a mother who has been kicked out of her own home by upstart in-laws," Stapp said. "We were not even given a courteous hearing at Philadelphia."

'People Not Politicians, Backing Dixiecrat Fight'

The Advertiser

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(AP)—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, Southern Democratic states' rights candidate for president, declared Friday that "if the Southern people will just stick together they have the finest opportunity since the War Between the States to gain the respect of the nation."

7-24-48

Thurmond, who goes to Atlanta Saturday to attend a states' rights campaign conference, said "the sentiment in this movement is coming from the people and not from the politicians."

Montgomery

"The rank and file of the people we come in contact with and from whom we hear seem to be unanimous in support," he told a news conference.

Ala.,

He is convinced, he said, that there is strong sentiment throughout the South for the Dixiecrat ticket which he heads. Gov. Fielding Wright, of Mississippi, is the vice-presidential choice.

Sat.

He would not comment on the Atlanta conference, saying he wished to hold back any statemnt until after it is over.

7-24-48

He plans to fly to Atlanta by private plane and expects to arrive there about 9:30 a.m. He said he would be accompanied by State Democratic Chairman William P. Baskin, State Senator R. M. Kennedy, Jr., of Camden, who walked out of the Democratic national convention after adoption of an extreme civil rights platform plank; State Rep. Charles N. Plowden, of Summerton; Robert McC. Figg, Jr., Charleston attorney, and George McNab his press secretary.

Dixiecrats Map Strategy In Secrecy

The Record

Columbia, S.C.

Sat. 7-24-48

(34a)

ATLANTA, Ga., July 24—(UP)—Rebel Democratic leaders from eight Southern states went behind closed doors today in a hotel here to map strategy and mobilize their forces against the "Yankee" element in the party.

The meeting began shortly after the states' rights Democratic party's presidential nominee, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, arrived by plane.

His running-mate, Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, already was on hand.

Press Excluded

W. W. Wright, Jackson, Miss., grocery wholesaler, excluded the press from the conference "because there are matters we have to thrash out."

The Record

However, he delayed closing the meeting to allow photographers to take pictures. A statement is expected this afternoon.

Chairman Wright emphasized to the press that everyone invited was in attendance at today's meeting.

Prominent among those attending were former Gov. Frank Dixon of Alabama, who keynoted last week's convention which "recommended" Thurmond and Wright as the nation's leaders, Frank Upchurch of St. Petersburg, Fla., who served as chairman of his state's delegation at the national convention in Philadelphia, and Atty. Gen. Tom Watson of Florida, who recently was defeated for governor and state Supreme Court justice in that state.

Columbia, S.C.

Walter Brown of Spartanburg, S. C., who was an administrative assistant to Former Secretary of State James Byrnes, was on hand as an advisor to Governor Thurmond.

Brown's 'teen-aged son accompanied him to Atlanta.

Sat.

The Dixiecrats are expected to name a general chairman and a campaign chairman to help them in their electoral college fight against President Truman.

7-24-48

Leaders Present

Other leaders at the conference were Horace Wilkinson of Birmingham, Olin Horton of Birmingham, Robert Goodwyn, Jr., of Montgomery; George McNabb, Thurmond's press secretary from Columbia, Syd Smyer of Birmingham; Judge Merritt Gibson of Longview, Tex., Everett Truly, Fayete, Miss., J. O. Emmerich of McComb, Miss., Ed S. Lewis of Jackson, Miss., George Godwin, Jackson; Robert M. Figg, C. L. Cuttino, and R. M. Kennedy, all of South Carolina; John U. South's New Path

The News

To the Editor of The News:

Alabamians, even those who are unfamiliar with politics, are commendably incensed at the rude treatment accorded their delegates at the Philadelphia convention. Little do many of us know that like boorishness prevailed also at the '44 convention. A Virginia state senator asserted that he had never witnessed equal discourtesy and expressed reluctance ever to attend another national convention.

Birmingham, Ala.

Persons who applauded the legerdemain of the previous administration in cajoling these city machines, accepting their votes and honoring their choices for high office with the purpose of integrating their members with the Southern sector of the democracy, are now disillusioned. How can the two opposed groups fuse? The one is industrial, the other is fundamentally manorial; the one is without traditions, the other has a background; the one is racially diverse, while the other is homogeneous; finally the one is partial to, the other impatient of regimentation. Oil and water will not mix.

The News

Now that our paths have diverged let them not again unite. We have as our leaders two vigorous executives who are likewise equal to the undertaking in their character, training and achievements. Themselves exemplars of constitutional government, they will extol its advantages. Let us then talk of them, hold up their hands, and above all vote for them. We have been overlooked, humiliated and dared. Let us assert ourselves. We have been led, let us now lead. Apathy is submission and ignorance a cloak. To vote for others is to vote against ourselves. Will a man harm himself? Our candidates are of us, among us, for us. Support them we must!

MISSISSIPPI TO DECIDE ITS ELECTORS' STATUS

(34a) Dup

'Pledged Or Not' Is Expected To Be Big Question At Aug. 3 Meeting

By The Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss., July 20. — Governor Wright predicted Tuesday that the Mississippi Democratic Convention that will be reconvened here Aug. 3 will decide whether to pledge its presidential electors.

"The convention probably will decide to have its electors listed on the (Nov. 2) ballot as pledged to Gov. J. Strom Thurmond for President," the Governor said.

May Be Unpledged

"Or it may decide to have its electors listed as unpledged. In any event, the men who are chosen as the state convention's candidates for electors are known publicly as supporters of the Thurmond ticket."

Governor Thurmond of South Carolina last Saturday was recommended by the State's Rights Conference at Birmingham for president, and Governor Wright for vice president, on a States' Rights ticket.

"The main business of the reconvened convention will be to endorse or reject the action of delegates who withdrew from the Philadelphia (National Democratic) convention and went to the Birmingham conference, and then to decide what to do about listing the electors on the ballot."

The Governor explained that an act of the 1948 Legislature provides for the listing of electors on the ballot under the presidential candidate whom the electors, if chosen, would support, or for listing them as "unpledged."

Any Can Qualify

"Anybody can offer himself as a candidate for presidential elector, just by presenting himself to the Secretary of State," Wright asserted. "There will probably be a list of electors who are pledged to Truman, a list for the Republican Party which is led by George Sheldon, a list for the Perry Howard Republicans, and a list for Henry Wallace."

(Sheldon is a leader of the Independent Republican Party of Mississippi. It is an all-white group. Howard, a negro attorney of Washington, heads the Republican Party of the state. His group was recognized by the national organization of the Republican convention. Mississippi is predominantly Democratic.)

Governor Wright pointed out that technically electors cannot be legally pledged to cast their votes for a certain candidate, that they are only morally bound to support the presidential candidate under whose name they are listed on the ballot.

Empty-Handed Folsom Returns, Pledges Suit

The News

BY FRED TAYLOR

Developments piled upon each other on Alabama's political front today as Gov. Folsom headed home from Washington, after abandoning efforts to obtain a pre-election order from the U. S. Supreme Court to force Alabama's Democratic elector nominees to vote for President Truman.

Wed. 10-27-48

But as the governor left Washington, he insisted he would file a suit the day after next Tuesday's election, in an attempt to require this state's presidential electors to support nominees of their national party.

This action would be aimed at the Democratic electors pledged to Thurmond and Wright, since these 11 nominees are listed under the Alabama Democratic Party emblem and are expected to be easy winners.

On another front, State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, one of the elector nominess, blasted a plan of Phenix City Mayor Homer D. Cobb to distribute a special ballot for pro-Truman supporters.

Wed. 10-27-48

CRACKING DOWN on the mayor of the blustery border city, McCorvey wrote him:

"I cannot see where it makes much difference how the people of your city vote, as the vote cast seems to bear little resemblance to the results as certified."

The state chairman apparently was referring to allaged voting irregularities in Phenix City in last Spring's runoff primary when results certified did not give McCorvey, candidate for Democratic delegate-at-large, a single vote. McCorvey had been nominated an elector in the first primary.

AT MOBILE, in the Democratic chieftain's home town, Republicans whaled away at both the Truman administration and the States' Rights movement, with State GOP Chairman Claude Vardaman reiterating that "the Dixiecrats are leading the people of Alabama up a blind alley."

Wed 10-27-48

The South need not fear that a Republican administration will interfere with states' rights, Vardaman and W. E. Brooks, Jr., editor of The Brewton Standard, told a GOP rally in the Gulf City last night.

McCorvey was striking back at Republican critics by calling on Alabama Democrats for a heavy vote next Tuesday "to demonstrate to the world disapproval of President Truman and his civil rights program."

Vardaman, in a plea for support for the Dewey-Warren ticket, told the Mobile rally that "in all the years that we have had a Republican president and a Republican Congress, they have never attempted to ram a civil rights issue down the throats of the South."

"The Republican Party has no desire to attempt to solve our local problems by federal edict from Washington," Brooks told the gathering.

McCORVEY SAID THAT "Alabama men and women have a grave responsibility in the general election."

"They will either vote in great numbers for our duly nominated Democratic presidential electors," he said, "and thereby demonstrate to the world their disapproval of President Truman and his civil rights program, or, by staying away from the polls, they will by their silence demonstrate to the world that they are for the vicious so-called civil rights proposals advocated by Truman, Dewey and Wallace."

Mayor Cobb had written McCorvey that Russell County would permit an unusual write-in method for voting for Truman, but he later said this plan had been abandoned for special "extra" unofficial ballot forms for the same purpose.

"I note," McCorvey replied to Cobb, "what you say about the people in Phenix City writing in on the ballot the names of candidates they wish to support.

"Unless you have in the general election a different arrangement for counting votes from that used in the recent primaries, I cannot see where it makes much difference how the people of your city vote, as the vote cast seems to bear little resemblance to the results as certified."

Wed 10-27-48

GOV. FOLSOM ABANDONED his plan to seek a pre-election mandamus writ from the Supreme Court when he encountered "unexpected legal difficulties." The governor said he and his attorneys have not decided whether to file his post-election suit in state or federal courts in Alabama.

He said the suit would be based on the claim that the anti-Truman pledges of the Democratic elector nominees violate the Bentley act passed by the 1945 Legislature.

It was Folsom who asked the Alabama Supreme Court for an advisory opinion last Spring, when the act was judged unconstitutional and the elector candidates advised they could vote as they pleased.

"I'm disappointed that this thing can't be straightened out before next Tuesday's election," said Folsom, "for the people of Alabama have a right to vote either for or against President Truman if they want to. But the lawyers tell me I'll have to wait until after the election."

THE GOVERNOR HAD said he would take his contention directly to the U. S. high tribunal this week. But his legal advisers, Col. Ira F. Thompson and Kenneth Griffith, after advising with Paul Porter and Thurmond Arnold, counsel for the Democratic National Committee, decided against it. Thompson and Griffith also conferred with Clifford Durr, former Federal Communications Commission member, who recently resumed law practice in Washington. They convinced Folsom that circumstances made it virtually impossible to obtain Supreme Court intervention in the case.

One obstacle encountered, the attorneys said, was they discovered a high court decision dating back to 1880 in which the principle was established that no state could institute a suit against its own citizens in the high tribunal.

Folsom said he was going to confer with Atty. Gen. Albert Carmichael upon his return to Montgomery to determine "just how and where to file the suit after election day."

The governor said he was confident of winning the court test and suggested it would be "wise" for States' Righters to "write in" their choices for electors on the ballot.

Dixon, Sparks, Folsom Typify Paradox In Alabama Politics

Montgomery Advertiser

Montgomery Ala.

By LYNNE BRANNEN
Associated Press Writer

The three living men who have served as Alabama's chief executives provide an almost perfect example of the paradox in Alabama politics today.

They represent diverse schools of thought as to how loyal Democrats should conduct themselves this presidential election year.

Two of them, E-Governors Frank Dixon of Birmingham and Chauncey Sparks of Eufaula — have declared themselves flatly against President Truman.

Jun-10-16-48

Since the state's Democratic electors are pledged for the States Rights ticket, this means they favor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for president.

On the other hand, Gov. James E. Folsom is supporting President Truman, the man he campaigned against earlier this year.

Although none fit into a clean-out mould, Sparks comes nearest to being a middle-of-the-roader, Dixon is more a conservative and Folsom represents the liberals.

Gov. Folsom, coming out for the President this week, clashed head-on with States Righters. He hinted, too, of a possible court suit to put Alabama in the Truman camp.

There appears some doubt, however, that there is time enough to push a court suit through before next month's election. Jun-10-10-48

Straight Words

Former Governor Dixon has not minced words as to his position on the presidential race. He was one of those who helped organize the States Right Democrats and delivered the keynote address at their Birmingham convention.

At that time he belligerently attacks President Truman's Civil Rights program. He called it "a shame and a fraud" and a "cheap" political appeal for Negro votes in northern industrial centers.

Dixon said the proposed civil rights laws were an unconstitutional effort to "reduce us to a status of a mongrel, inferior race . . .; to crush with imprisonment our leadership, and thereby kill our hopes, aspirations . . . and future of our children."

Alabama's former bachelor governor from Eufaula has been only lukewarm to the States Rights movement even though he came out strongly against President Truman. He has had little to say about political developments this year.

In July he made this statement: Jun-10-16-48

"Harry S. Truman has shown repeatedly that the South's demand to be allowed to control its local affairs . . . in accordance with the constitution, means little or nothing to him.

He Stands Pat

"I am against his election now as I was opposed to his nomination at the Philadelphia convention. I shall vote under the rooster in November for the Democratic electors who are pledged to vote against Truman."

Sparks expressed hope that the national Democratic party will force iself of "such aliens as Truman and his satellites" so the South can return to its place in the national party "with honor and pride."

Gov. Folsom, an avowed candidate for the Democratic presidential before he lost out in a campaign for a post to the party's national convention, had this to say about the situation:

Belongs To Ticket

"The president is the titular head of the Democratic party. He belongs on the ticket as a Democrat. I will vote the straight Democratic ticket in November and I hope it will be counted for president Truman."

Folsom said he regretted that Alabama voters find themselves in a position where they cannot vote for Truman even if they want to, a situation that "has never before happened in the history of this country."

There were no Truman electors on the ballot for Alabama's Democratic primaries last Summer and none have been qualified. Jun-16-10-48

McCorvey's Idea May Make Political History In U. S.

He Desires President Who Will Consider Southern Views

Montgomery Advertiser

Sun. 5-16-48

By FRANK GORDY
Staff Writer, Mobile Press Register

An Alabamian, who has never held or sought paid political office is undertaking a political mission that will make United States history, if it succeeds.

The man is Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the Alabama state Democratic executive committee.

His objective:

To elect as president of the United States, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, or some other man free of pledges or inclination to impose on the South the anti-segregation and other "civil rights" racial programs advocated by President Truman.

McCorvey is well aware that Eisenhower has refused to be considered as a candidate for the Republican nomination to the presidency, a refusal which might apply to the Democrats as well. He knows, too, that Eisenhower has expressed interest only in being president of Columbia University.

But, in McCorvey's opinion, Eisenhower is "too good a soldier to turn down the presidency, if it is turned over to him as a duty—and handed to him on a silver platter without the expense and effort necessary to obtain the nomination of either major national political party, to be followed by a long and hard campaign."

5-16-48

This is exactly what McCorvey is trying to do—hand the presidency to Eisenhower on a "silver platter," with the expectation that the general would accept as a national duty.

Possible Under Constitution

The Alabama Plan, as it is called in Washington, is possible of attainment under the U. S. Constitution, through the workings of the electoral college system.

Although it is known as the McCorvey Plan in Alabama, McCorvey himself, working all the while for its success, takes no particular pride in authorship.

"No matter whether this program is called the Alabama Plan, the McCorvey Plan, or anything else, he says, "in reality it is a plan developed at the beginning of the United States.

"The men who wrote the Constitution were wise men. They foresaw that at some time in history there might be no candidate able to get a majority of the electoral college votes. They knew that some other method of selecting a president would have to be provided for use in just such an eventuality. In their wisdom, they decided to have the president elected by the House of Representatives, when a deadlock occurs in the electoral college. What we are trying to do is is to take advantage of this provision in the Constitution."

Montgomery

"Best Chance" For South

McCorvey reasons that with each state entitled to one vote, and one vote only, in a House of Representatives election of the president, the South would have a chance of using its votes to better advantage toward election of someone not pledged to the anti-segregation program. He believes Eisenhower would be a popular choice, under such conditions.

McCorvey realizes that the South is impotent in the Democratic National Convention since abolishing of the two-thirds rule during the New Deal. As he sees it, the South's only real hope lies in deadlocking the electoral college—hence this program, already ratified by the state's voters, for withholding Alabama's 11 electoral college votes from any candidate pledged to or advocating the so-called "civil rights" program. The Alabama Supreme Court has ruled that Alabama's presidential electors can vote for anyone they please. Advertiser

McCorvey points out that unless there is a Republican landslide and if the Southern States cast their total of some 120 to 130 electoral votes for Eisenhower, neither the Democratic nominee nor the Republican nominee will receive the necessary majority (266) of the nationwide total of 531 votes. 5-16-48

In this event, the names of the three candidates receiving the greatest number of electoral votes will go before the House. McCorvey reasons that if Eisenhower's name is placed before the House, popular demand even in Republican and borderline states will assure his election.

While fully in sympathy with objectives of the group of Southerners who have organized themselves into a States' Rights Conference, with talk of running their own presidential candidate, McCorvey feels that their efforts will have no chance of success. He has attended meetings of this group in Atlanta, Ga., and Jackson, Miss, but all the while has been plumping for his own program.

Already nominated a member of the electoral college from Alabama, which is equivalent to election with 10 other Alabamians of similar views to be his colleagues, McCorvey now is engaged in a runoff race for a delegate-at-large seat in the Democratic national convention. Most Alabamians are agreed that he will be a member of the state's delegation to the convention.

Of the two roles, McCorvey feels that membership in the electoral college is far more important than being a delegate to the national convention.

He says that Presidential Elector McCorvey could very well say to Delegate McCorvey.

"Gessner, I don't give a hurrah whether you go to that Philadelphia convention or not, or what you do when you get there, because I am going to do the voting for President."

Nevertheless, McCorvey does want to go to the Democratic national convention as a delegate, and with that in mind he has mapped out a program of strategy.

Sun. 5-16-48

Backs "Walkout" Plan

During the preprimary campaign in Alabama he advocated the election of national convention delegates pledged to a walkout from the convention if an anti-South platform is adopted. McCorvey still favors that course, and there are indications that when the runoff primary is over it will be found that a substantial majority of the convention delegates from Alabama are pledged to the program.

Now 64 years of age, Mcorvey always has been a Democratic party faithful, even in the days when some of his close friends and business associates found it distateful to follow the hybrid party that included such later bolters as Henry Wallace. He is in his third term as chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee and for at least 30 years has taken an active part in Democratic campaigns.

A "walkout" from the national convention, under the McCorvey program, would come only as a last resort after the Alabama delegation had joined other Southerners in exhausting every effort against adoption of an anti-South candidate. He insists that this would not constitute a "bolt" from the Democratic party since, he says, the Democratic party in Alabama is a separate entity from the national Democratic party.

"I never have and never intend to bolt the Democratic party of Alabama, to which I belong," McCorvey says. He points out that when Alabama Democrats go to the polls in November they will vote the straight state party ticket, which will include anti-Truman electors.

Montgomery

McCorvey believes that the already accomplished pledging of Alabama's 11 electoral college votes against President Truman or any other man advocating an anti-South program will provide an effective bargaining weapon at the Demorcatic national convention. "We'll be there with our guns loaded, not just to talk," he says. He believes this weapon will be strengthened if backed up by a convention delegation pledged to a "walkout" in event the party platform contains anti-South provisions.

Advertiser

At the present time, McCorvey is busy—very busy—endeavoring to line up other Southern states with his program. He has acquired support in the person of Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, Democratic leaders in Georgia are interested and McCorvey considers it possible that by the time the electoral college meets in December, after the November election, the South may present a united front, which could throw the choice of a President into the House.

Alabamians Unable To Go For, Against President Truman

B'ham Ala.

BY REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 30—(AP)—Alabama, a pushover for the Democrats since 1872, will vote for a president Tuesday under the shadow of a threatened court fight over its 11 electoral votes.

It's the only state where President Truman isn't on the ballot—unless the U. S. Supreme Court says he is.

The Democratic candidates for presidential elector—they're sure of election—have promised they won't vote for Mr. Truman under any circumstance. Their votes are pledged to the Thurmond-Wright States' Rights ticket.

But Gov. James E. Folsom insists Alabama's electoral votes belong to the president. And he says he will file a court suit, probably next week, to force the electors to support Mr. Truman.

Folsom contends that President Truman is the candidate in Alabama regardless of what the electors say. To back that up, he has taken to the stump again—one of his favorite pastimes—in behalf of the president.

Says People 'Slicked'

THE GOVERNOR'S ARGUMENT is that a "handful of slickers" have "taken the vote away from 3,000,000 people" in Alabama. He says the voters have been "denied the right" to cast their ballots "for or against the president."

The States' Righters answer is that the voters have already spoken—in the Democratic primary last May when they nominated 11 electors who had already signed a pledge to vote against Mr. Truman. Like many others in the South, they were hopping mad over his civil rights program.

10-31-48

Folsom says that explanation isn't convincing, though. He points to the fact that the pledge was made after the deadline had passed for candidates to qualify for the primary.

What's more, the governor contends, a 1945 law says the electors must support the national party nominee. And although the State Supreme Court has said unanimously that it's unconstitutional, the statute is still in force. For this reason:

The Supreme Court's decision came in an advisory opinion, which is purely informative and not binding. The law will remain until knocked out in an actual test case.

In Truman's Favor?

WHEN THAT COMES, Folsom says the U. S. Supreme Court will decide in favor of President Truman. He tried, in fact, to get the high tribunal to rule without waiting for lower court action, but gave that up after a visit to Washington this week.

His advisers predict now that the suit will be filed in Federal Court here soon after election day even if the Republicans win a clear majority of the electoral votes. Folsom has said he wants the question settled once and for all.

10-31-48

A last-minute campaign was started by a "Calhoun County (Anniston) National Democratic Committee" to get a slate of pro-Truman elector candidates on the ballot by write-in votes, but it fizzled out quickly.

A spokesman for the committee acknowledged the move was begun "without hope of success" and merely as a protest against the absence of Truman-pledged electors from the ballot.

The Republicans, meanwhile, are trying to get their slate of electors over, too, along with the Henry Wallace Progressives and the Prohibitionists. All will be on the ballot.

In addition, the GOP has candidates up for the U. S. Senate and four of the nine seats in the House of Representatives.

Parsons GOP Hope

PAUL G. PARSONS, of Birmingham, is the Republicans' hope of getting a seat in the Senate. Parsons is in the race against Sen. John Sparkman.

In the Fourth Congressional District, Sylacauga's B. Hogan Stewart is the GOP nominee against veteran Rep. Sam Hobbs, of Selma. W. P. (Bill) Ivey, of Columbiana, is running against Edward deGraffenreid, of Tuscaloosa, the Democratic candidate in the Sixth District.

Harry J. Frahn, of Sheffield, is opposing Democratic Rep. Bob Jones, of Scottsboro, in the Ninth, and Hiram Dodd's name is on the Republican ticket in opposition to Rep. Laurie Battle in the Ninth (Birmingham) District.

10-31-48

The other five Democrats, unopposed, have clear sailing. They are Rep. Frank Boykin in the First District, Rep. George Grant in the Second, Rep. George Andrews in the Third, Rep. Albert Rains in the Fifth, and Carl Elliott in the Seventh.

Democrats are without opposition, too, in running for two places on the state Supreme Court and for president of the Public Service Commission. Justice Thomas S. (Buster) Lawson and Justice Robert T. Simpson are up for reelection on the court, and Gordon Persons for the APSC.

Others In Clear

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES likewise are unopposed for six circuit judgeships and one circuit solicitor.

Reuben Wright is alone in the Sixth Circuit race; Alta King in the 10th; Kelly Fite in the 25th; J. B. Hicks in the 26th; J. S. Stone in the 27th, and Telfair J. Mashburn, Jr., in the 28th Circuit.

Also on the ballot Tuesday will be 11 proposed constitutional amendments, three of statewide concern and the other eight purely local.

Probably most important to the state as a whole is Amendment No. 5. It would authorize any county except Jefferson, Mobile and Montgomery to put on a special four-mill property tax to finance public hospitals.

Before the tax could be levied, the voters in each county would have to approve it in a referendum.

10-31-48

Two Counties Affected

TWO OTHER HOSPITAL amendments are up, but each would affect only one county. No. 2 would authorize a tax in Marion County; No. 3 in Escambia.

Another matter of statewide interest is Amendment No. 9. If it is ratified, no court of record could be abolished or located outside any county seat without the voters' approval.

Amendment No. 10, also affecting every county, would provide for appointment of National Guard officers instead of having them elected, as they are now, by members of their units. It also would raise the pay of enlisted men to the level of the Regular Army.

Most controversial of the local amendments is No. 11, which would give the Legislature power to consolidate city and county governments in Jefferson County. This may be the most hotly contested of all the proposed constitutional changes.

Others Listed

THE OTHERS on the ballot are:

No. 1—To put the tax assessor, tax collector, probate judge, sheriff, circuit clerk and register in chancery in Talladega County on a salary instead of fee basis.

No. 4—To authorize Tuscaloosa County to vote a special five-mill school tax.

No. 6—To let Jefferson County issue bonds to pay for new sewers and sewage disposal plants.

No. 7—To abolish justices of the peace and create an Inferior Court in Dothan.

No. 8—To authorize any school district in Jefferson County to raise taxes to the level of those levied for schools in the city of Birmingham.

Folsom Urges Mass Protest

The News

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 30—Gov. James E. Folsom issued an executive order Saturday calling a mass meeting in protest against absence of Truman electors from Tuesday's general election ballot.

10-31-48

The meeting was set for 11 a.m. Monday, Nov. 1 at the capitol.

The governor's executive secretary, O. H. Finney, Jr., who released the proclamation, announced simultaneously that Folsom had called an emergency cabinet meeting Saturday night.

B'ham Ala.

He expressed doubt any announcement would be made as to what takes place at the meeting.

Folsom announced at Albertville earlier Saturday. He would issue an executive order in regard to a statement by Alabama's Democratic electors that they won't obey a court order to vote for Truman.

The electors signed a statement saying "neither the governor nor the courts are going to force us to vote for Truman." They also denounced what they called Folsom's attempt "to drive votes away from the Democratic ticket in Alabama."

Voice Of The People

McCorvey And Stalin

To the Editor of The News:

The News

348

Alabama, a so-called Democratic state, is run as a personal affair by Mr. McCorvey and his Democratic State Executive Committee—state politburo. Mr. McCorvey follows closely in Stalin's footsteps.

Stalin insists not on unity but unanimity. Mr. McCorvey follows suit. Stalin purges party members who stray from party directives. Mr. McCorvey says to Sen. Langan, "Support States' Rights ticket if you wish to run as a Democratic candidate in 1950."

10-31-48

Sen. Langan is one officeholder who publicly defies Mr. McCorvey. When nearly all candidates and possible candidates agree with Mr. McCorvey, there is something phoney.

B'ham Ala.

Stalin uses the bogey of capitalism. Mr. McCorvey uses the bogey of Negro domination. There is fear, graft and mismanagement of public affairs behind the iron curtain. In Alabama there is fear of Mr. McCorvey's disapproval as well as misuse of public funds and mismanagement of state affairs by governor, Legislature when in session and other state officials. Millions of state funds are poured down ratholes.

Stalin operates through a selected party with list of candidates to be okehed or else. Mr. McCorvey operates through a select party using the Boswell amendment and pledged word of primary voters to insure election of primary candidates.

Stalin wins majority approval by sending to slave labor camps those who disagree. Mr. McCorvey has for his assistance the 40-year-old non-reapportionment of Alabama, thus insuring an illegally elected Legislature.

The people of Russia and satellites do as they are told. In Alabama a vote for the States' Rights ticket is a vote for approval of continued dictatorship by Mr. McCorvey and his politburo.

'State's Rights' Democrats Form Alabama Organization

Advertiser

Montgomery, Ala

BIRMINGHAM, ALA. — (AP)— A permanent organization of Alabama state's rights Democrats was set up here Friday.

They were pledged by resolution to: Sat. 6-19-48

Oppose President Truman, oppose any Democratic presidential nominee who supports the Truman civil rights program, insist upon a strong state's rights plank in the 1948 party platform, and to make a vigorous fight at the Philadelphia convention against "any proposals contrary" to the first three. 6-19-48

Marion Rushton, Democratic national committeeman for Alabama, was named chairman of the executive committee of the new group. Donald Comer, Birmingham, textile manufacturer, was chosen vice-chairman.

Horace Wilkinson, a speaker at Friday's meeting, said the new group was not one for 1948, but would remain in being to "carry out the wishes of Southern and Alabama Democrats in future years." 6-19-48

Also Elector

Wilkinson is one of the 11 Alabama presidential electors. All are pledged against voting for Truman next November.

Ex-Gov. Frank M. Dixon, Birmingham, outlined the "plan of action" adopted by anti-Truman Democrats at the May meeting in Jackson, Miss. The Alabama group endorsed this plan.

It would warn the Democratic convention, in advance, of the anti-Truman and anti-civil rights stand of Southern delegations. These moves would be plotted at a regional caucus to be held in Philadelphia or Washington prior to the opening of the Democratic convention July 12.

If Southern delegations are seated, after the warning of the anti-civil rights stand, delegates would fight measures contrary to the states' rights program.

Scheduled In July

A Southern ~~Democatic~~ convention has been tentatively scheduled for Birmingham on July 17. The "plan of action" asserts the convention here would be held "should any of the following occur: 6-19-48

"In the event the Southern delegations are not seated; if Mr. Truman or some other person who has not disavowed the so-called civil rights program is nominated, or should the convention fail to adopt a strong states' rights platform."

Dixon explained that the July 17 date was set because of "the necessity of having names for the ballot in the Texas precinct elections July 24."

He said the Birmingham convention would "suggest names for president and vice president" to the Southern states.

In addition to Rushton and Comer, members of the Alabama states' rights executive committee are: Sat. 6-19-48

First district, Gessner T. McCorvey, state Democratic executive committee chairman, Mobile; second, Robert B. Allbritton, Andalusia; third, Wallace Malone, Dothan; fourth, Tom Abernethy, Talladega; fifth, Walker Lusk, Guntersville; sixth, Robert K. Greene, Greensboro; seventh, Charles Wiggins, Jasper; eighth, Norman W. Harris, Decatur, and Ninth, Sidney W. Smyer, Birmingham.

Sen. Hill In Lead For At-Large Post, Folsom Is Trailing

BY FRED TAYLOR

Alabama Democrats, voicing their protest against President Truman's "civil rights" program with ballots, today apparently had made certain the president cannot get this state's 11 electoral votes.

But unofficial returns from about one-third of the state's 2,330 boxes indicated this state would send a delegation to the Democratic national Convention made up of both those favoring and opposing a walkout.

Presidential elector candidates pledged against Truman or any other advocate of his "civil rights" proposals were running far ahead of those who refused to pledge.

Which brought this declaration from State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile, candidate for both delegates and elector: Wed. 5-5-48

"President Truman's goose is cooked as far as Alabama is concerned."

Yesterday's voting also apparently had dealt a blow to Gov. Folsom's vote-getting prestige.

* * *

SEN. JOHN SPARKMAN, who returned to Washington today, had overwhelmed Folsom-backed Phillip Hamm, former state revenue commissioner, in the U. S. Senate race. Three other candidates did not figure in this race.

At Montgomery Hamm conceded defeat in the Senate race and wired congratulations to Sparkman. His telegram: The News

"The people have approved the policies you have advocated. That is democracy and you have my wholehearted support and cooperation in carrying out those policies. Please accept my congratulations."

And Folsom, running as "favorite son" presidential aspirant, was not among the leaders in the race for eight delegate-at-large places. Some had picked the governor to lead the ticket.

Sen. Lister Hill was leading the 24-candidate at-large delegate race, with Handy Ellis, former lieutenant governor and runoff opponent of Folsom in 1946, close behind Hill. Birmingham, Ala.

THE FOUR FRONT RUNNERS in the delegate race included Sen. Hill and former Gov. Sparks, who strongly opposed the walkout proposal, and Eugene (Bull) Connor and Ellis, who are pledged to walk out. Wed. 5-5-48

Rep. Laurie Battle apparently had won renomination over two opponents — former Rep. Luther Patrick and George D. Patterson, Jr., Birmingham lawyer.

But Rep. Carter Manasco, veteran Seventh District congressman, conceded defeat for his seat in Congress to Carl Elliott, Jasper attorney and World War II veteran.

Another veteran congressman, Rep. Pete Jarman, was in a close Sixth District race with Edward DeGraffenreid, Tuscaloosa, circuit solicitor. Other incumbent congressmen were ahead in their races, with the Eighth District's Rep. Bob Jones unopposed.

Winston Committee Is Against Walkout

HALEYVILLE, ALA. — (AP) The Winston County Democratic Executive Committee adopted Saturday a resolution opposing a proposed walkout of Alabama delegates to the Democratic national convention. Montgomery, Ala

The resolution terms the State Democratic Executive Committee's action in requesting the pledge undemocratic. The resolution was approved by a vote of 14-1. Sun.

Former State Senator Bart J. Cowart, W. R. Gulledge and Circuit Court Judge Roy Mayhall, Jasper, all spoke in opposition to the pledge. Mayhall and Cowart are candidates for elector.

Opie Gamble, retired Haleyville business man, cast the lone vote against the resolution. 4-18-48

Presidential Backers Say They Will Go Into Courts If Plea Ignored

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

Alabama pro-Truman Democrats Saturday called on electors nominated in the party primary May 4 to pledge their support to the Truman-Barkley ticket or resign.

If they fail to do this, Mobile States Sen. Joseph H. Langan, who called a statewide rally in behalf of the president here, said twin mandamus proceedings would be instituted in State and Federal Courts in an attempt to force the elector nominees to support the national Democratic Party standard-bearers. Sun. 8-29-48

Langan and his group earlier had abandoned plans to nominate a slate of pro-Truman electors and seek to get them placed on the Nov. 2 general election ballot in opposition to the party elector nominees. The latter already are pledged to support the States Rights Thurmond-Wright presidential ticket.

"What we want to do is give the voters of Alabama an opportunity to vote for presidential candidatese of their choice in the November election," Sen. Langan told a committee session of Truman supporters Saturday afternoon at the Thomas Jefferson Hotel. Birmingham, Ala

This brief meeting, attended by some 75 persons, including leaders of organized labor, preceded a Truman rally Saturday night in the ballroom. This rally was addressed by the Mobile lawmaker and Roy D. McCord, Gadsden attorney and non-walkout member of the Alabama delegation to the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia.

Reads Resolution

SEN. LANGAN READ a resolution, which was to be adopted at the night meeting, calling upon the "electors chosen in the Democratic primary to openly pledge their support" to the Truman-Barkley ticket or resign "so that said party may replace them with electors who will." Sun. 8-29-48

Guy A. Matlock, Birmingham, former Machinists Union publicity director and chairman of the Jefferson County Truman rally group, told the afternoon committee gathering that their aim was to preserve the Democratic Party.

"We are going to maintain the fight to preserve the Democratic Party," declared Matlock, "and to banish from the party those who would destroy it."

In referring to McCord, the night session speaker, Matlock said, "Mr. McCord was an Alabama delegate to the Democratic National Convention at Philadelhia and he didn't walk out like some of these modern carpetbaggers."

This brought applause from his listeners.

Sen. Langan explained before the meeting that pro-Truman Democrats had changed their minds about attempting to nominate and get a separate slate of elector candidates' names on the Nov. 2 ballot. He ponited out that such a slate, even if on the ballot, would be listed as independents. Thus, he added, they would not appear on the ballot under the Democratic Party emblem, since those attending the meeting had not been officially recognized by the Democratic National Committee.

Twin Court Actions

THE MOBILE SENATOR said that twin court actions probably would be filed in state and federal tribunals at Montgomery.

The resolution prepared for adoption stated that the Birmingham mass meeting which nominated South Carolina Gov. J. Strom Thurmond and Mississippi Gov. Fielding L. Wright "was not composed of delegates elected by the people" and "was not a meeting of the Democratic Party." Instead, the resolution added, those attending this session had been referred as "Dixiecrats" and members of the "States' Rights Party."

The resolution went on to state that under Section 226, Title 17, Alabama Code of 1940, requires that electors shall vote for the nominees of the party under whose auspices they sought election.

A number of labor leaders attended the Birmingham pro-Truman meeting, just as they did the first "state convention" called by Sen. Langan at Montgomery two weeks ago. Among these were Carey Haigler, CIO regional director; William Mitch, United Mine Workers district president; Hugh W. Brown, executive committee chairman of the AFL State Committee for Political Education, and others.

Earlier, Sen. Langan had said the group would ask the State Democratic Executive Committee to instruct the Democratic elector nominees to cast their votes for Truman and Barkley in the electoral college.

Won't Call Committee

STATE DEMOCRATIC Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile, one of the 11 anti-Truman elector nominees, said he would not call the committee together for such purpose. But he did say one member of the state committee (he intimated he was Bart J. Cowart, Haleyville) would support efforts to get pro-Truman electors on the state ballot.

McCorvey and other States' Rights leaders previously had urged that pro-Truman electors be placed on the ballot for a test of voter sentiment between the two elements of the party.

Sen. Langan named McCord chairman of the Truman group's resolutions committee. Other members appointed were Brown, Eugene Wells, Mrs. George A. O'Connell and George Trawick.

TUESDAY'S FISHERMEN

The Advertiser

Wed 10-27-48

Montgomery, Ala

Our agreement with Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, is not what may be accurately termed habitual. But when he exhorts every eligible voter to go to the polls Tuesday we echo him. A great many Alabamians are going to "go fishing" election day. Such people ought to be ashamed of themselves. It is a sorry evasion, a default on responsibility, an indefensible weakness.

For some time it has been clear that thousands of Alabamians, not finding an entirely acceptable choice on the ballot, decided simply to stay away from the polls and let fellow citizens cast Alabama's vote.

We are entirely in sympathy with the impulse that prompts a great many of these election day fishermen. The impulse is not unworthy, but obedience to the impulse is. They wouldn't vote for Truman if they could. For this reason, that reason and Wilkinson—they simply cannot warm to the Thurmond-Wright ticket. Naturally they have no use for Josef Wallace's Progressive Party or the Prohibition Party. They actually think a Republican vote would be the sound thing, but for lack of innards and the ancient prejudice they simply cannot vote Republican. So their way out is to remain away from the polls.

There are scores of variations in the thinking and attitudes of those who plan to forfeit their bonds as citizens by fishing election day. As we say, the impulse is entirely understandable and sympathy cannot be withheld by a reasonable person. We do not hold that there are any 100 per cent attractive tickets on the ballot.

But as between Thurmond, Wallace, Dewey and the Prohibition candidate—one of these is a shade or a whit better alternative than the other three. Few of us would estimate the desirability of the alternatives precisely the same. But it is the duty of the self-respecting voter to wring from his mind, knowledge and conscience an opinion and vote it Tuesday though it be necessary to spit in the devil's eye en route.

To want to fish Tuesday is entirely pardonable. That takes in a lot of us. But to do so is to admit that you lack the wits to make a choice or the character and dominion over your own prejudices to register the choice.

Afterwards, when perhaps you are instructing your children in the responsibilities of citizenship or are deriding a politician for his flabbiness, you will—if you are frank with yourself—have to remember that you straddled in the 1948 presidential election.

That takes in also those who have now decided that they would prefer to vote for Truman and the National Democratic ticket, but can't because Truman won't be represented on the Alabama ballot. An overwhelming majority of Alabamians voted for that condition in May and June. But even then any 11 Alabamians who wanted Truman on the ballot could themselves have qualified and their names would be on the ballot Tuesday, the same as Wallace's. But they didn't and that's all that happened.

Folsom and The Advertiser are at one in wishing that Alabama was not the only state in the Union in which Truman's name does not appear on the ballot. There the similarity ends.

Acting as amicus curiae of the people, he's going to have a Philadelphia lawyer enter a suit in the U. S. He has been wallowing for four moons in his dejection over the Truman ballot obliteration. He was willing to do anything to set things right—anything but that which they did in Georgia, Florida and Louisiana—call a special session of the legislature to provide for Truman's addition to the ballot! His tears are crocodile tears both as to size and chemistry.

RIDICULOUS POSTURE

The Advertiser

Senator Lister Hill made it plain to an Alabama Journal reporter yesterday that he stands ready to join Senator John Sparkman in his questionable posture.

That is, the two Alabama senators have declared war to the knife and the knife to the hilt on President Truman, but they are at the ready to further the candidacies of Democratic congressmen and senators in other states.

34d

"I feel free to campaign for Democratic senators and Democratic representatives," Senator Hill told The Journal.

Senator Sparkman has declared similarly.

Wed 9-1-48

Would that, for example, take in Mayor Hubert Humphries of Minneapolis? Humphries is the Democratic candidate for senator. Humphries also happens to be the man who led the successful fight at the Philadelphia convention for the Civil Disturbance plank which caused the Alabama walkout. Humphries is the enemy.

Montgomery Ala

Would Hill and Sparkman aid Humphries to reach the Senate because he is labeled the candidate of the Democratic Party?

Consider a less spectacular example, any eastern or western state where the two Alabama senators might go to campaign for Democratic congressmen. If the senators make votes for such Democratic candidates, they will obviously also make votes for Truman. Actually the two senators would be campaigning as much for Truman as for the Democratic congressmen. Their speeches would be blanket strengthening of the Democratic ticket, which takes in Truman.

Wed 9-1-48

IT IS, THEN, a ridiculous posture to mount the stump in other states to oppose Truman and support Democratic candidates for Congress. It is like shooting into a covey of quail with the aim of hitting only the males.

Yet it is not sound to write off Hill and Sparkman in this case simply as opportunistic knaves, each seeking to retain White House favor and patronage. Only the splenetic and preordained enemies of the two senators will argue that.

In the first place. Truman has less than five months left of his tenure. In the second place, ye real strumpet opportunist would be sounding his klaxon in behalf of the Dixiecrats because that is the popular side in Alabama today.

The senators know that. Yet they have only cold showers for the Thurmond fourth party movement. Yesterday, for example, Senator Hill, who faces a 1950 reelection high jump, told The Journal:

"The South cannot isolate itself and hope to receive equal treatment in the nation's household or to play its full part in helping to obtain so many things that are vital to it."

Wed 9-1-48

Obviously Senator Hill regards the States' Rights Party as an impotent wheeze.

BUT AT the same time Hill will vote for the Thurmond-Wright ticket. He will vote for it because it is under the Rooster. He will vote for Thurmond, but he will campaign for the Democratic ticket in other states, which necessarily takes in Truman.

It has to be admitted that the apple-cheeked junior senator and the pale senior senator could have it easier in the present upheaval if they would simply lie low. But in their rather timid assertion of independence, they have assumed an ungainly if not ridiculous posture.

However, this is a political season of posture contests. For example, it is insisted that, despite Alabama's opposition to the nominee of the national Democratic Party, the state is still a stronghold of the Democratic Party. Thurmond is the nominee of the "Alabama Democratic Party," but the official name of his party and the one being used in many other states is "States' Rights Party."

After The Election

The News

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—With the Dixiecrat revolt, the old political pattern of the South has been broken wide open. The artificial alliance which kept John Rankin and Hubert Humphrey in the same party has been ruptured. The contrasting political situations in Alabama and Georgia suggest two different versions of the new pattern which, after Nov. 2, may begin to replace the old.

34d

In Alabama, a strangely muted battle is in progress. The story of this silent drama can best be told in terms of two of its chief actors, Lister Hill, Alabama's tall, genial senator, and Frank Dixon, former governor and leader of the state's Dixiecrats.

Sun 10-24-48

Although he is a mild-mannered man who has always fought Klu-Kluxism, Dixon is what the Northern liberals mean when they talk about "Southern reactionaries." On the racial issue, Dixon has recently said (and passionately believes) that the Truman civil rights proposals would "reduce us to the status of a mongrel, inferior race, mixed in blood, our Anglo-Saxon heritage a mockery." Hill has never beaten the drums for "white supremacy." But like every Southern politician, he is deeply opposed to federal civil rights legislation. Therefore the real difference between Hill and his allies and Dixon and his Dixiecrats does not concern civil rights.

B'ham Ala

Difference Elsewhere

THE DIFFERENCE LIES ELSEWHERE. To Dixon, the National Democratic Party has become, since 1933, "an unholy alliance of left-wingers, pseudo liberals and radicals of as many hues as Joseph's coat." But Hill has been a party to this wicked alliance. Throughout his career he has been that rare bird among Southern Democrats, a moderate New Dealer. Except on the racial issue, he has voted pretty regularly like the typical Northern Democrat. That is what the battle is really about.

Hill refused to walk out of the Democratic convention, and Dixon reports bitterly that he even refused to answer a letter inviting him to join the Dixiecrat crusade. There is good reason to believe that the Dixiecrats are now out to defeat Hill and everything he stands for when he comes up for reelection in 1950.

Sun 10-24-48

Hill knows this, but for a peculiar reason he cannot fight the Dixiecrats openly. Alabama law requires that a would-be candidate must have supported the candidate of his party in the previous election. J. Strom Thurmond is the official candidate of the Alabama Democratic Party — indeed, the Democratic electors are committed to Thurmond, so that it will be physically impossible for any Alabama citizen to cast his vote in November for Harry S. Truman. Thus if Hill denounced the Dixiecrats, he could be legally eliminated by his Dixiecrat enemies from the 1950 Democratic primary race.

But it is believed that once the election is safely over, Hill will come out fighting. Indeed, he must do so, for his political life is at stake. Thus what is in prospect in Alabama is a running battle which will start, not end, on Nov. 2.

The News

On one side will be those, like Hill, who generally think like Northern Democrats, except on the race issue, and want to stick with the party. On the other side will be those, like Dixon, who generally think like Republicans on national issues, and who want in effect to break all ties with the Democrats of the North. Dixon talks of a permanent regional party in the South, holding the balance of power in Congress, and thus wielding decisive bargaining power.

Sun 10-24-48

B'ham Ala

Some such open, official split between the right and left wings of the Democratic Party—in effect, a two-party system—may emerge as the political pattern throughout the South. Yet what is going on in Georgia suggests a different outcome. Georgia's next governor, Herman Talmadge, has not openly split

THE FOLSOM-CARMICHAEL GAMBLE

The Advertiser

Five months ago Folsom was campaigning against Truman. He said there wasn't a man or woman in America that had any confidence in Truman. Now Folsom is out campaigning in behalf of Truman.

Fri 10-15-48

Among other things, Folsom said that he was worried about certain North Alabama Counties electing Republican officials.

That anxiety would apply with real force in the case of Carl Elliott, the Democratic nominee for Congress from the 7th District. Elliott may be in some trouble here, for there were times when even Speaker Will Bankhead was anxious.

34d (Ala)

The 7th District takes in Franklin, Marion, Winston, Cullman, Blount, Walker, Fayette, Lamar, Pickens. Winston is chronically Republican, whereas Cullman and Walker are intermittently sc In this G. O. P. year, it is therefore possible that Congressman-nominate Elliott is running in ploughed ground (against Walter Denton).

Montgomery Ala

No doubt, as an incident to Folsom's campaigning for the Truman Democratic ticket, he will espouse the cause of Elliott. It might be added that Elliott is campaigning for the Dixiecrat ticket.

Folsom says his speeches will be "explanatory."

"The people," he said, "are confused."

But as we were saying, five months ago Folsom ran for delegate to the Democratic convention. He ran last, receiving the most humiliating defeat in modern Alabama history. He is probably the only governor Alabama ever refused to send to a convention.

But these five months later Folsom is back seeking to peddle his wares again.

The peddling couldn't, of course, be in worse hands. For despite the forthrightness and legitimacy of the processes which led to the withholding of the state's electoral votes from Truman, it is true that the people are, as Folsom says, confused.

Fri 10-15-48

It is true that had the Truman forces been forehanded enough, they could have gotten on the ballot as did Wallace's Progressive Party and the Prohibition Party. But that is not generally understood.

What has sunk in is that Alabama is the only state in the Union where it is physically impossible for a citizen to vote for Truman, the Democratic nominee for President.

It may be that Folsom and Atty. Gen. Carmichael will be able to exploit this unwholesome circumstance in the future. Due to the confusion in the minds of the public and Folsom, the Alabama short ballot has backfire possibilities.

with the national party. He has not done so because he believes that after the forthcoming defeat of Truman, the Southern Democrats will again be able to dominate the party, and Talmadge wants to be one of those doing the dominating.

Talmadge No Fool

WHATEVER ELSE HE IS, Talmadge is no fool. But something has happened in Georgia which is paralleled, in other Southern states, and which may in the long run bode ill for such Southern Democrats as Talmadge. The Republican Party in Georgia has been showing real signs of life—so much life that Thomas E. Dewey may win a plurality in November. Even if he does not, Dewey will have at his disposal some 3,600 jobs in the state. Georgia Republicans somewhat smugly point out that these will provide a useful political base on which to construct an effective state Republican organization.

Effective Republican competition would certainly siphon off much of the conservative support which men like Talmadge now enjoy. This in turn would tend in the long run to shape the Southern Democratic Party increasingly in the Northern image, and might lead to a lasting North-South Democratic reconciliation, provided some compromise formula on tthe racial issue was found.

Whatever political pattern eventually emerges in the South, one thing seems clear. The old one-party system, which so often reduced Southern politics to the level of a popularity contest without real political choice, may not be doomed. But it is closely threatened as never before. If it dies, there will be few to regret its passing.

Big Jim Stumps For Harry Today

Governor Folsom is scheduled to deliver three speeches in North Alabama today to "explain the election" to voters and, if he can, to help President Truman.

He is to speak at Jasper at 10:30 a.m.; Hamilton at 1 p.m., and Russellville at 3:30 p.m.

Sunday he plans to leave for Washington to see, among other things, if he can file a suit in the U. S. Supreme Court to force Alabama's 11 Democratic presidential electors to support the President. They are pledged to vote for the Thurmond-Wright States' Rights ticket.

Announcing plans for his stumping campaign, Folsom said he will speak for "the straight Democratic Party" and will concentrate on counties "where there is danger the Republicans might win" on Nov. 2.

In his speeches, the governor also is expected to repeat his charges that the people "have been denied the right to vote for or against the President." Alabama is the only state where Truman-pledged electors are not on the ballot.

'Stick By Party' State Democrats Urged By Sparks

Gov. Folsom Sticking By Move To Give Alabama To Truman

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

Former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, who never joined the States' Rights movement, today called on "all Democrats in Alabama to close ranks and get behind the Democratic Party."

Sparks, who was a stay-in delegate-at-large to the Democratic National Convention, predicted that the "civil rights" program which so aroused the South, will be a "dead issue" after the next session of Congress.

The former governor said, "It stands to reason that the civil rights program either will be enacted into law or will have been abandoned." And he does not think it will be enacted into law.

But Sparks declared that the states "should assume their responsibilities and do something about these issues themselves."

"If we believe in states' rights, and we say we do," added Sparks, "then we should talk more about states' responsibilities as well as states' rights."

Sparks told The News he was "surprised" at the election of President Truman, "but I think his election will be better for the South." He said he did not advocate the election of Truman, adding "I voted under the rooster."

HE POINTED OUT that the States' Rights Democratic movement was started for the express purpose of fighting Truman's racial policies, but he said leaders of this movement "never had a positive program."

Sparks said President Truman, in winning the election, "demonstrated a character of leadership I never thought was in him. People now will have more confidence in Mr. Truman and he'll be a much better president because he'll have more confidence in himself.

HE POINTED OUT the election proved that the people "are thinking for themselves," and this is seplling the doom to the big political machines such as those of Chicago, Memphis and Kansas, which can only thrive on ignorance and prejudice."

Sparks, who was elected as a non-walkout delegate, served on the Democratic National Convention's platform committee and fought doggedly to work out a compromise "civil rights" plank acceptable to both South and North. He strongly disagreed with Truman's racial proposals.

State Sen. Broughton Lamberth, Alexander City, one of Folsom's lieutenants, joined his chief in promising legal action would be instituted.

Lamberth said a suit would be filed "if I have to do it in my own name," adding it would be filed before noon "if I live to sign my name."

Sen. Lamberth was chosen chairman of pro-Truman forces at a Montgomery mass meeting called by Folsom the day before election to protest against Alabamians not having a chance to vote for the president. Truman was not represented on the ballot.

Statements were issued by Gov. Folsom and Sen. Lamberth following reports that the governor's committee of legal advisers had decided against instituting court action in the squabble over the electors.

State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, one of the state's 11 electors and a leader in the States' Rights campaign against Truman and for Gov. Strom Thurmond, earlier said the governor's activities in behalf of Truman were to "gain publicity."

McCORVEY AND several of the electors have said there is no force that can make them go back on their campaign pledges not to vote for Truman.

Lamberth said proceedings against the electors would be filed in both state and federal courts.

Adjt. Gen. James S. Saliba, named chairman of a finance committee to raise funds for the litigation, announced that $600 had been raised. He said groups were being organized in cities and counties over the state to receive donations.

The Democratic ticket, which was pledged to Thurmond, won a lopsided victory in Tuesday's voting over Republicans. The Wallace Progressive and Prohibition tickets polled only a handful of votes.

Meanwhile, pro-Truman forces in Mississippi pushed ahead with plans to take over the Democratic Party in that state, which gave 80 per cent of its vote to the Thurmond States' Rights Democratic ticket.

State Rep. Philip E. Mullen, vice chairman of the pro-Truman Democratic Executive Committe, said his group is sending a representative to Washington to seek recognition from the national Democratic Party.

MULLEN PREDICTED that the national party would recognize Clarence E. Hood, Jr., Meridian, named by Mullen's group as Democratic national committeeman, after Mississippi party officials veered to the States' Righters.

Mississippi Gov. Fielding Wright, Thurmond's vice presidential running mate, has congratulated President Truman on his surprise election and pledged "full cooperation within the framework of the Constitution in your efforts to preserve world peace and find peace and happiness for our people at home."

"Our fight for States' Rights," said Gov. Wright, "was a fight to preserve the principle of local self-government and we shall fight for this fundamental precept of the Constitution whenever the need may arise."

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL amendments in Mississippi to require "a good moral character" as a voting qualification, which was aimed principally at Negroes, and also calling for annual legislative sessions, were defeated by big majorities.

Vote tabulations showed the Mississippians rejected, 71,272 to 29,565, the voting proposal and turned thumbs down on holding annual sessions of the Legislature by 75,301 to 27,038.

The Election Commission here began an official canvass of election returns at 10 a.m. at the courthouse, with the count expected to be completed late in the day. Commission members are Sheriff Holt McDowell, Probate Judge Tom Garner and Circuit Court Clerk Julian Swift.

Sparks' call for a united Democratic Party came as Gov. Folsom reiterated at Montgomery that he would file legal proceedings in an attempt to force Alabama's Democratic electors, pledged to Strom Thurmond, to vote for Truman in the electoral college.

Predicting the "civil rights" proposals will become "dead issues," Sparks asked the States' Righters:

"What will they be fighting for—a dead past? There is no value in a third party. They should get hehind the Democratic Party."

Pointing to election results, the former governor said "all Democrats of Alabama have an obligation to join ranks in support of the new four-year administration under President Truman."

* * *

"ALABAMA CANNOT isolate herself politically any more than she can industrially or commercially," Sparks emphasized. "We are a part of this great nation and we must find some way to express ourselves through channels of national scope."

Sparks, whose administration did much for schools, including Negro schools, urged "Improved standards—particularly in education—for the Negro through a program to be worked out in cooperation with Negro doctors, lawyers and educators."

He said the time has come when we must have "more and better technical training for everyone, white and black."

As for Truman's election, Sparks said: "I was rather surprised. I couldn't explain it. It was very interesting.

"We all were distracted from the real basic philosophy of the Democratic Party—the party, we must remember, that had brought us out of the wilderness, like old Moses did."

'Stamp' Plan Proposed By Truman Backer

PHENIX CITY, ALA., Oct. 9.—(AP)—Mayor Homer D. Cobb today proposed a method whereby Alabama voters could support President Truman.

In a plea for "people's rights," the mayor announced that Russell County polling places will provide rubber stamps so voters can "make" the state's electors, already pledged to presidential candidate J. Strom Thurmond, vote for Truman.

Cobb urged all Alabama to follow Russell's example in allowing voters to name Truman by the write-in method, in an open letter mailed last week to Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

Under the Russell arrangement, voters will be permitted to stamp Truman's name underneath the Democratic ticket, which carries no candidate's name, and has a "white supremacy" emblem.

Segregation Talk Inspires Bolt Threat

Party's State Committee, Meeting Here, Voices Views On 'Liberalism'

Secession Talked

Col. Rushton Says He's Disturbed By Report On These 'Civil Rights'

With Mrs. Lennard Thomas, National Democratic Committeewoman from Alabama, sounding the keynote of Southern solidarity against any move on the part of the National Democratic Party to disturb the South's segregation laws, the State Democratic Executive Committee here Monday let it be known that there "are limits to what can be endured" concerning an anti-segregation plank in the 1948 platform and brought up the possibility of a bolt. The Advertiser Gathered here to set up the rules for the coming May and June primaries, the Executive Committee, governing body of State Democrats, unanimously adopted a resolution instructing delegates to the convention in Philadelphia in July to "resist with all their ability and power any and every attempt to insert in the ((1948 platform) any proposal that would directly or indirectly favor or allow any Federal legislation which would abolish or tend to abolish racial segregation." Montgomery, Ala.

The resolution was introduced by Tom Abernathy, editor of the Talladega Daily Home and committee member from the Fourth District. Tues. 1-27-48

Qualifying Deadline

Another resolution adopted by the committee set March 1 as the qualifying deadline for the May 4 primary in which 26 delegates to the national convention will be elected.

Also up for election at that time will be the Democratic National Committeeman and Committeewoman, 11 presidential electors, the U. S. Senate seat now held by Senator John Sparkman, all nine congressional seats, presidency of the Alabama Public Service Commission, two State Supreme Court seats (those held by Associate Justices Thomas S. Lawson and Robert T. Smpson), and several county positions.

Asking that Southern Democrats not secede from the National party, Mrs. Thomas declared that leaders in Washington were "scared" of the South because "you have got the power."

However, she chided, "you don't use it, you just sit down."

She then called on the Alabama Democrats to let the National leaders know that the South has the power, to organize and let that power be felt. 1-27-48

It is only when that happens that the South will be able to get some benefits out of the national leaders, she continued. Adding that 13 Southern States are ready to organize, she asked that that be done in an effort to get some recognition.

Such a banding together, Mrs. Thomas asserted, would not be to seceed but an effort to keep State's rights and segregation within the present party structure. The Advertiser Tues.

Col. Marion Rushton, local attorney and Democratic National Committeeman, in making his report to the committee said he was "greatly disturbed by the attitude and report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights." Montgomery, Ala.

BAD AIM

The act yesterday of the State Democratic Executive Committee was one of impoverished wisdom.

34d Ala.

It was aimless to the point of hysteria.

The committee is apprehensive that at the Democratic National Convention this summer the party will adopt an anti-segregation plank. The Advertiser

Dragooned by this anxiety, the committee unanimously adopted a resolution which tells the Democratic Party for Alabama that the state might forsake the party. Montgomery, Ala. Tues. 1-27-48

The resolution asserted that an anti-segregation plank "could but force every southerner into the undesired position of determining which is the greater loyalty, that to the South, or that to the party."

And where is it that the South has to go?

To the third party of Henry Wallace?

To the Republican Party whose congressional majority hasn't any idea of letting another session pass without enactment of an F. E. P. C. statute?

In this circumstance, the South hasn't got anywhere to go. We're not kidding anybody. Talk of bolting will be received as tiresome bluster.

SEGREGATION in the South, as in Indiana—where thousands of school children were lately out on parent-sanctioned strike because of an intermingling atempt—is going to prevail. It is a matter of personal liberty with us. No arsenal can, in our time, raze segregation. The Advertiser

But the practical means and maximum opportunity to control the assaults are from within the Democratic Party. That is where best safety lies. Montgomery, Ala. Tues. 1-27-48

FOR THE State Democratic Executive Committee, for the South, for the nation, for our ebon element and for today's Thad Stevenses—there is vast illumination in post-Civil War experiments with the race problem and bayonet compulsions from Washington.

The lesson is that, the greater the excess, the greater the reaction.

Lincoln in 1865 proclaimed an amnesty for Southern citizens. In Southern states where 10 per cent of the population took the oath of loyalty to the United States, citizens could form state governments and be re-admitted to the union.

By 1866 all the seceded states had complied. But all the time the states had been enacting severe restrictions upon the rights of the freedmen. These became known as the Black Codes. They inflamed the North until it was ripe for the vengeance of Stevens. The Advertiser

That vengeance took the form of dividing the South into five military districts, requiring ratification of the 14th Amendment and a state statute providing the vote for the Negro. Montgomery, Ala.

Alabama ratified the 14th Amendment in 1868. It did so because it had no resource with which to resist the weight of Federal authority. Tues. 1-27-48

But the Thad Stevenses, inflamed by the South's rebellious writhings, went further and submitted the 15th Amendment. The South ratified the amendment.

Extreme begat extreme. And by 1874, Alabama and most of the other Confederate States had reestablished "white supremacy," largely through the Ku Klux Klan.

THE LESSON in the history of Reconstruction Days is that the South cannot resist the weight of Federal authority, and that the Federal authority cannot sustain vengeful, extreme impositions.

This see-saw between Federal and state authority, though now carried on within the framework of law, has continued through the generations. The Advertiser

Such enactments as the Boswell Amendment and the action of the State Democratic Executive Committee yesterday solve no problems for the South. In sum, such actions only strengthen Federal determination to intervene. Montgomery, Ala.

The Constitution of the United States ratified by the Southern states, provides in its 15th Amendment: Tues. 1-27-48

> 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color. . . .
> 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

It's plain that the spirit of that provision in the supreme law cannot be indefinitely flouted. The pressures are gathering on every hand.

What is needed is abandonment of such Thad Stevens bayonets as the F. E. P. C. and abstention from such negative measures as that of the committee yesterday.

Segregation will be less of an object of assault if we would take more forehanded steps in giving the colored man his economic and civil due. The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Tues. 1-27-48

Alabama's party leadership might have spent its time more constructively had it been pointing a decisive plan for working out the waxing problem of Negro education in colleges—rather than resolving to take a walk when it hasn't any place to go.

The South Or The Party!

In declaring flatly that if the Democratic Party this year adopts an anti-segregation plank Southern Democrats may be forced to an unpleasant choice between the party and the South, the Alabama State Democratic Executive Committee was giving voice to a sentiment widespread in this part of the country. There is no question that many Southern Democrats will resent any and every attempt at national settlement of a delicate regional question. Tues. 1-27-48

Birmingham, Ala. Tues. 1-27-48

Nevertheless, there is an either-or ultimatum implied in the state committee's attitude which may tend to aggravate conditions rather than improve them. The committee leaves the impression that only two choices are possible, when in truth there are many choices. The action taken is a kind of challenge, and consequently is not likely to produce that atmosphere of co-operation, understanding and compromise in which differences are most apt to find solution. The News Birmingham, Ala.

The South's best hope rests with the Democratic Party. Certainly it cannot expect the Republican Party, with its history going back to the days of carpet-baggers, to be sympathetic to regional feelings in this area. Nor would the South have anything to gain by a third party, or by refusing to vote at all. Tues. 1-27-48

The South's hope of retaining any influence in national affairs lies within the Democratic Party. There it is that this region would be most effective in trying to affect the trend of social change. The News Birmingham Ala

Deplorable, also, is some of the language used in the state committee's resolution. Jan 1-27-48 It dropped at points to the level of name-calling. Little good is done, and much harm is possible, in applying to those who disagree with you such terms as "ignorant" or to accuse them of "viciousness," or even to say that "there is no room for argument." There should always be room for argument. An arbitrary refusal to discuss a matter is undemocratic and possibly even more dangerous, in its full implications, than courses which the state committee criticizes. 1-27-48

Moreover, the character and caliber of the persons composing the president's committee on civil rights are too high to justify charges of "ignorance" and "viciousness." Wrong they may be, and this paper thinks they were in certain respects, but neither ignorant nor vicious. The state committee did its cause little good in adopting a resolution so harshly worded. It is to be hoped that a better spirit will prevail when it comes to presenting the South's wishes to the national Democratic convention. The News Birmingham Ala 1-27-48

'The South Or The Party?' Issue Threatens, State Demos Warn

348 The News Birmingham, Ala. Jan 1-27-48

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 27—(AP)—Alabama Democrats were on record today with a warning to national party leaders that adoption of an anti-segregation policy in the 1948 platform might force the South to decide between party loyalty and Southern tradition.

A resolution passed without a dissenting vote at a meeting yesterday of the state's Democratic Executive Committee declared firmly, "There are limits to what can be endured." Convention delegates, whoever they might be, were urged to "resist with all their ability and power" any attempt to write into the platform proposals which would "directly or indirectly" abolish the South's racial barriers. 1-27-48

Committee members fixed March 1 as the qualifying deadline for the May 4 primary in which 26 delegates will be elected to the Democratic National Convention.

* * *

THE RESOLUTION SAID further, "Such action by the national leadership of the Democratic Party could but force every Southerner into the undesired position of determining which is the greater loyalty, that to the South or that to the party." The News

Mrs. Lennard Thomas, of Montgomery, national committeewoman, said: Birmingham, Ala

"The Southern states should band together and tell our national leaders we have given them the Solid South in the past but we are not going to do it in the future." 1-27-48

Referring to the recent U. S. Supreme Court ruling that Negroes in Okloham are entitled to educational facilities equal to those given the white race, Mrs. Thomas declared, "We are going to keep segregation in the South regardless of any decision handed down by our wonderful justices on the Supreme Court." 1-27-48

Meanwhile, former Rep. E. C. Boswell, of Geneva, author of the Boswell amendment, which was written into the state constitution about 14 months ago as a means of checking Negro voting, said officials of four other Southern states had asked him for copies of the law as a possible pattern for them to follow.

Boswell, here for the meeting, said he had received requests from Georgia, North and South Carolina and Texas. He did not identify the persons who wrote him.

THE 1945 LEGISLATURE of which Boswell was a member, submitted the Alabama plan to the voters and it was ratified in a 1946 election following a spirited campaign. The News

Proponents admitted frankly it was designed to prevent what they termed a "flood of Negro registration" as the result of a Supreme Court ruling that Democrats in Texas could not keep Negroes out of primaries solely because of race.

The amendment requires prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" any section of the federal constitution to the satisfaction of county registrars. It also took out of the state constitution a 45-year-old provision that anyone who owned $300 worth of taxable property could vote regardless of whether he could read or write. Birmingham, Ala

Discussing the requests from other states for copies of the law, Boswell said, "they told me they had to do something about the Negro voting problem." Jan 1-27-48

State Demo Leaders Differ On Need For Party Platform

348 News Birmingham Ala

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 20—(AP) — Two Alabama Democratic Party leaders disagreed today on the necessity of calling a state convention to adopt a party platform.

Former State Rep. E. C. (Bud) Boswell of Geneva urged calling of the convention in a telegram to State Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey of Mobile.

McCorvey said in a statement that he saw no need for the convention. Fri 2-20-48

Boswell said that unless Alabama Democrats adopt their own platform they would be bound by that drawn at the National Democratic Convention. He is author of the constitutional amendment which requires prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" any section of the U. S. Constitution.

THE FORMER REPRESENTATIVE previously had requested that a meeting be called of the State Democratic Executive Committee to take an official stand on President Truman's civil rights recommendations.

He suggested this meeting be held prior to the March 1 deadline for qualifying for the May 4 Democratic primary.

McCorvey answered at that time that such a meeting would be premature. He said he preferred a meeting after all candidates for the primary had qualified. These candidates, he said, could be called before the committee and asked their views on racial questions.

Boswell said in his telegram to McCorvey yesterday:

"Since our views are so different as to the time and purpose of calling a meeting of the state committee in the present emergency, suggest you call them to meet at Montgomery, Feb. 24, and let the whole committee determine whether a state convention should be called . . . to adopt a platform by delegates elected fresh from the people which Alabama Democrats can stand with confidence and pride." News

AT MOBILE, McCORVEY SAID:

"I have nothing to add to what I have already said about calling the State Democratic Executive Committee into special session.

"I have every confidence in the people of Alabama and I feel sure that in our Democratic primaries the people of our state will only elect as delegates to the national convention and as presidential electors those men who will insist upon a platform securing state's rights. Birmingham Ala

"I do not believe any of our presidential electors or any of our delegates will vote for any candidate who will trample underfoot the traditions of our Southland." Fri. 2-20-48

Boswell repeated reasons given previously for the state meeting:

1. To take an official stand on the president's proposed anti-poll tax, anti-segregation and FEPC legislation.

2. To select representatives to attend a meeting of Southern Democrats in Jackson, Miss., to consider action in opposition to Mr. Truman's proposals.

Two Surprise Entries Among Last-Minute Demo Qualifiers

348 (Ala) The News Birmingham, Ala

BY FRED TAYLOR

Tues 3-2-48

Another crop of candidates, including Philip J. Hamm's surprise entry against Sen. John Sparkman, today looked hopefully toward the May 4 Democratic primary.

Sen. Sparkman, who already faced three opponents in his race for renomination to the U. S. Senate, drew State Revenue Commissioner Hamm as a last-minute adversary. 3-2-48 Tues

Sharing the political spotlight on the last day for qualifying was another surprise development. Sen. Lister Hill, declaring his continued support of President Truman, plunged into the Democratic delegate-at-large race.

The senior senator told James Free, News Washington correspondent, his main purpose in leaping into this campaign was to "try to prevent a disastrous split in the party which would assure a Republican victory in November."

HILL'S ENTRY intensified interest in the delegates race as continued agitation over Truman's "civil rights" program generated more political heat in Alabama and other Southern states. The News

While announcing his continued support of President Truman for the Democratic nomination, Sen. Hill emphasized his strong personal disagreement with the chief executive on his "civil rights" proposals.

"I don't agree with the president on a number of subjects," said Hill, "but we ought to remember that on the supremely important subject of international peace, Mr. Truman is absolutely right. He is so right that his foreign relations program—the Marshall plan—now is a bi-partisan program." Birmingham, Ala

Sen. Sparkman did not comment directly on Hill's announcement although he earlier had proposed the senior senator as vice presidential running mate to Truman as an attempt to quell the Southern revolt.

"ANY TALK at this time of a Southern revolt in the Democratic Party," said Sparkman, "is premature. We ought to make every effort to work out within the party our admittedly serious differences over civil rights. I don't see how we can think we have made every effort to work things out until we have joined with Democrats from other states in our national convention and tried to agree on a platform that would be acceptable to all."

The 38-year-old Hamm, whose home is at Hartford, in the Wiregrass region, is very close to Gov. Folsom and is regarded as the top man in the governor's cabinet. And his last-minute entry against Sparkman reportedly was influenced by Folsom and his alter ego, Gould Beech. The News 2-3-48

The Associated Press reported Commissioner Hamm drove to Mobile to file papers with State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey. He arrived there only two hours before the midnight qualifying deadline. Birmingham, Ala

SEN. SPARKMAN'S other three opponents are Thomas F. Harlan, Montgomery; Wallace Pruitt, Chatom, and Thomas F. Maxwell, Tuscaloosa.

Beech, who had threatened to run against Sparkman, was in Mobile last night with several candidates for alternate delegate to the Democratic National Convention. McCorvey said Beech told him he had never intended making the race for the Senate. Tues. 2-3-48

Hamm was accompanied to McCorvey's office by Bill Lyerly, aid to Gov. Folsom. He said he told the governor yesterday morning he planned to make the race against Sparkman and that the governor seemed surprised. Hamm said he would resign as revenue commissioner to make the race.

ALL OF ALABAMA'S nine congressmen drew opposition with exception of Rep. Robert E. Jones, Jr., Eighth District. Birmingham, Ala

One of the last entries to get in under the wire was Miss Erma M. Appleby, Mobile social worker. She jumped into the First District race in which veteran Rep. Frank W. Boykin already is opposed by Circuit Solicitor Joe Thompson, Butler. The News 2-3-48

Two other aspirants who beat the clock to the deadline were Atty. Gen. Albert A. Carmichael, running for delegate-at-large, and State Docks Director Henry W. Sweet, Bessemer, seeking an alternate delegate-at-large post.

In the Second District, veteran Rep. George Grant has three opponents. Last to qualify was Burton C. Fincher, Pigeon Creek School principal. Frank Mizell, Jr. Montgomery attorney, and James G (Country) Oliver, also of Montgomery, entered several weeks ago.

Edward deGraffenried, Tuscaloosa, was an 11th hour qualifier against the Sixth District's Rep. Pete Jarman. Dr. H. F. Wheat, Tuscaloosa, is his other opponent.

Alabama Democrats Plan 'Walk' If National Parley Okays 'Rights'

The Constitution Atlanta Ga. 4-6-48 Tue.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 5—(AP)—The ruling body of the Democratic Party in Alabama Monday asked the State's delegates to the National Party Convention to walk out of the Convention if any part of President Truman's civil rights program is accepted there.

The State Democratic Executive Committee also formally requested that Alabama presidential elector candidates not vote for Truman or any other candidate supporting the civil rights proposals.

The Committee indorsed 21 candidates for elector who have pledged themselves not to cast electoral votes for Truman. A resolution also gave the seven electoral candidates who did not sign the pledge 10 days in which to notify Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey of their stand, if they so wished.

The action was taken at a special session of the Committee here.

The resolution proposing that delegates walk out of the National Convention further urged the delegates "thereafter to take such action as in their good judgment will best protect the paramount, fundamental and constitutional rights of the several States to handle these and similar problems." Tues

Candidates for delegates were asked to notify McCorvey by April 10 whether they intended to act in accordance with the Committee's request. 4-7-48

The Governor spoke at a special session of the State Democratic executive Committee which is expected to give some indication of Alabama's choice for a presidential candidate. The Constitution

In an apparent reference to Henry Wallace, Third Party candidate, Folsom said: "I don't think anyone who bolts the Democratic Party should be nominated or elected."

He reiterated his support of States' rights and added that information he has received from other governors was to the effect the South would unit behind a program acceptable to the area. He said such a program probably would receive the support of the Southwest and West, and some states in the Midwest and East.

Referring to a proposed federal anti-lynch law, the State Executive said Alabama already has a strong anti-lynch law, and continued, "I'll enforce it." Atlanta, Ga.

He said he didn't think such enforcement would be necessary, however, because "we don't have lynching in Alabama." 4-6-48

Observers Also Predict Selection Of McCorvey Or Sparks As Chairman

By ATTICUS MULLIN

President Truman has lost the Alabama delegation to the Democratic National Convention which meets in June, according to well posted political observers. There is only one man running for delegate, Senator Lister Hill, who is an avowed Truman candidate, while practically every other candidate for delegate has declared against Truman.

There may be one or two men who have not declared their antipathy for Truman but even if these men are elected, Truman would still be far shy of a majority in the Alabama delegation.

For Wallace

The Advertiser

Followers of Governor Folsom probably number six or eight men in the delegate race. Governor Folsom was the first public man in Alabama to attack Truman. He made his attack before President Truman made his famous civil rights declaration. If any Folsom followers are chosen delegates, and some might conceivably stand a chance, it is certain they would never go to Truman. Many think Governor Folsom is merely stalking votes for Henry Wallace. At any rate no Folsom man would vote for the man Henry Wallace hates the most, President Truman.

Revise Stand

Montgomery, Ala.

There are at least 18 States' Rights Democrats in the race for delegate. Most of these men at first supported Truman's renomination but since his civil rights stand, every one of them has repudiated Truman in public statements, and if any of them are elected, Truman would have a slim chance to persuade them that he had his fingers crossed when he advocated what he did. 3-8-48

Senator Lister Hill, a candidate for delegate at large, openly avows himself for Truman. When he announced, some thought he would, if elected, be chairman of the Alabama delegation at Philadelphia. But even if Senator Hill is chosen by the voters to go to Philadelphia, observers say he could not possibly muster three additional delegates for Truman and possibly none, and that, therefore, he would not be considered for chairman of the Alabama delegation.

Politicians believe that the chairman of the Alabama delegation will go either to Former Governor Sparks or Gessner McCorvey in the event the two are chosen by the voters in May to represent them. Mon 3-8-48

Two Leaders Request Mrs. Thomas To Quit State Demo Position

The News

Birmingham, Ala.

ATTALLA, Ala., March 23—(AP)—Two persons today had requested the resignation of Mrs. Lennard Thomas of Montgomery, Democratic national committeewoman and candidate for reelection to the post.

In a letter to Mrs. Thomas yesterday, Mrs. Carolyn Coots, Attalla, vice chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, asked Mrs. Thomas to resign "unless you can explain your . . . attitude."

Brewer Dixon, Talladega, a State Democratic Committee member, also asked Mrs. Thomas' resignation. Tues, 3-23-48

Dixon said he was "shocked and disappointed" by Mrs. Thomas' statements in connection with the president's civil rights program.

(Mrs. Thomas said she was "perfectly satisfied" Democratic Party leaders are not going to try to force the South to change its racial segregation laws.)

Mrs. Coots labeled Mrs. Thomas' attitude "on again, off again."

She said "the only reason you do not have opposition for renomination . . . is the strong stand you took at the last meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee against the so-called civil rights stand."

In Montgomery, Mrs. Thomas declined comment.

In another place on this page there is a letter from Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee. It treats with a question every Alabama voter and candidate will have to answer for himself: To what extent is he bound to the Democratic nominee for President once he has participated in the May primary?

Mr. McCorvey and The Advertiser are not, it will be seen in his letter, in complete agreement. Of that fact The Advertiser wishes to say that it does not rate its conscience superior to that of Mr. McCorvey. Furthermore, we have a very high degree of confidence in Mr. McCorvey's judgment and admiration for his leadership in party matters. In that, The Advertiser undoubtedly speaks for the entire state.

The Advertiser directs the attention of its readers to Mr. McCorvey's viewpoint and urges sober reflection upon it. It will be seen that his preoccupation is with the freedom of presidential electors to withhold their votes from Truman. 3-19-48

MR. McCORVEY is unquestionably correct in his contention that the electors nominated in May are, if elected in November, free to vote as they wish insofar as the pledge of allegiance is concerned. However, there is something other than the pledge of allegiance to be considered.

There is an Alabama law, passed in 1945 which specifically and clearly forbids Alabama presidential electors from withholding their votes from the national party's standard bearer. The Advertiser

This law, called the Bentley Act, provides that electors shall support "the nominee of the national convention of the party by which they were elected."

If this act is valid, then electors nominated in the May primary, no matter if they pledge themselves anti-Truman, can be legally forced to cast their votes in the electoral college for Truman if he happens to be the "nominee of the national party . . ." Montgomery, Ala.

The validity of this law is questioned by some eminent legal minds. It is expected that an advisory opinion concerning it will be asked of the State Supreme Court. If the court says it is valid, then Alabama's electoral votes must be cast for the nominee of the national party no matter what the individual electors wish or have pledged to do. Fri. 3-19-48

Mr. McCorvey is one of the legal authorities who think the law is invalid. The Advertiser is inclined to agree but awaits the final judgment of the Supreme Court.

THE responsibilities and duties of the delegates to the convention are another matter entirely. Mr. McCorvey does not go into the matter extensively in his letter.

Those who offer for delegate to the national convention take the same pledge as the electors. Our elected delegates will go to the convention, first to assist in writing a platform and then to assist in selection of a man to run on that platform.

If these delegates, all or a part of them, decide that the platform finally adopted affronts a basic principle so severely that their conscience will not allow them to participate in nominating a man to run on that platform, then they can withdraw. If the platform adopted does seem satisfactory and acceptable to the temper of the Alabama electorate, then they can participate in the balloting for nomination. That nominee might be Truman because it is conceivable that he would accept the platform as a mandate to withdraw from his Civil Disturbance program. Fri. 3-19-48

Here's the gimmick. What they do in convention cannot be made to bind upon the electors. There is no clearly defined link between what actions the delegates take and what the electors must do. Even if our delegates walk out of the convention because of an unacceptable plank in the platform, their action will not bind the electors to vote against Truman or for him. If the Bentley Act is valid, the electors must vote for the national party nominee anyhow. The Advertiser

This is a confusing maze of legalisms. The confusion arises from the fact that today's impasse was not envisioned by any of the many architects and masons who have jerry-built our state party machinery. The patchwork of yesterday plagues us today. We need a whole new structure of party laws but it is too late to get them before the issue must be faced.

ONE last note:

The candidates are pledged in this fashion: Montgomery, Ala.

"I further agree to abide by the result of the primary election in which I am a candidate and to support the Democratic nominees in said election." 34d

That provision of Alabama's law was quite obviously written to insure complete and unreserved fidelity to the Democratic Party, the Truman odium of which was not foreseen. Fri. 3-19-48

To some extent Alabama is enmeshed like a man who has married the wrong woman and is seeking a legal means of annulment.

UPON WHAT MEAT?

Than Mrs. Nanna Thomas, Alabama's Democratic national committeewoman, there has been no more spirited assailant of those who wish to see segregation liquidated. For example, she recently emitted a ladylike, but lusty sneer at the U. S. Supreme Court for its indulgence of the Negro.

Montgomery Advertiser

34d

However, last week she was in Washington at a luncheon in the White House. She took the President in tow about his Civil Disturbance program. President Truman whipped out a copy of the Constitution from his shoulder holster and read. He didn't give an inch. Tue. 3-16-48

Montgomery, Ala.

Yet, after the luncheon with the President, Mrs. Thomas gave reporters a message for the South:

". . . Forget the revolt . . . get busy and raise funds for the Democratic Party. . . . Stand solidly behind Harry S. Truman."

Upon what meat did this our Mrs. Caesar feed in the White House?

AT THE TOWN MEETING THURSDAY NIGHT

The meeting was a success by any standard. But there are kinks to be ironed out. Questions from the audience could not be heard. The prolixity of the moderator was a snare devoutly to be bewared in the future. The Advertiser

That may appear a tart comment on a professor who did us the honor to come here from the University to preside. But the Town Meeting is a public facility the

On the stage of the City Auditorium were Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, former Gov. Chauncey Sparks and Senator John Sparkman. Sat. 3-27-48

They are all thoughtful, knowledgeable and seasoned politicians. But neither among them nor the rest of Alabama's political figures is there a political talent such as Folsom's. Each lacks color, wit and ability to put on a show. 34d

The fourth man on the platform, Aubrey Williams, a lend-lease item from Henry Wallace to the Democratic Party, had the best speaker's voice and delivery.

One gentleman in the audience who looks like Happy Easter was the only one who was able to make Williams stammer. He reminded Williams that recently at State Teachers College, Williams, in the company of Wallace, said he would never address a segregated audience. His tormentor wanted to know why he was making the present exception. Williams lamely said he didn't know the audience was segregated. But he had his glasses on.

The audience was inflamed when Williams said he enjoyed having cultivated Negroes in his home.

But what should have inflamed the audience was his unscrupulous argument against Universal Military Training. He said he oposed UMT because men were to be put to doing squads right instead of working in factories, etc., where wars are won. Sat. 3-27-48

The truth is, Williams was arguing in a left-handed manner against arming this country against the bloody world marauder, Russia. He left the inference he opposed the method and not the direction of UMT. That's not true. The Wallace gang —Williams called him a "great man"— wants our breast bare to Russia. At a time like this that is, to us, unforgivable.

One thing Williams did for which gratitude is not lacking in this quarter. He bracketed the interests and purposes of Folsom and Wallace in a documentary way and in a manner which will facilitate

A Statement By Mr. McCorvey

EDITOR, The Montgomery Advertiser:

Please pardon me for taking issue with a part of the statements or conclusions contained in your editorial headed "Hill and Folsom Oppose Revolt." Your editorial states:

"The tumult of the revolt is such that neither candidates for delegate nor voters have even surmounted the legal barriers to desertion. Every candidate who has qualified has taken an oath that he will support the party's nominee, no matter if it is Truman.

"Every Alabamians who casts a vote in May will take an oath that, if Truman is nominated, he will vote for him in November. That's Alabama law. Put that oath to the rack and thumbscrew of yes—but reasoning as you will, it's still your undistorted oath.

"The Advertiser does not note that fact with satisfaction, but it upraises the fact as an unresolved and practical problem of revolt." 34d Dem

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S name will not be on the ballot in our primary election, but the ballot will only contain the names of candidates for presidential elector.

Each candidate who enters our primary takes an oath to "abide by the result of the primary elections in which I am a candidate and to support the Democratic nominees in said elections."

The ballot which you and I will cast has printed on it this pledge: Fri.

"By casting this ballot I do pledge myself to abide by the result of this primary election and to aid and support all the nominees thereof in the ensuing general election." 3-19-48

Our candidates for presidential elector are nominated in our primaries. As chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, I will certify to the secretary of State the names of all candidates who were nominated in our primaries for Federal, State, circuit and district offices, including presidential electors, and likewise the county chairmen will certify to the respective probate judges the names of all candidates who were nominated in our primaries for county offices.

THE names so certified by me and by the respective county chairmen, will go on the ballot in the ensuing general election "Under the Rooster"—the emblem of our party—and you and I and all other good Democrats are going to the polls in November and put a crossmark "Under the Rooster," thus voting for the entire list of candidates nominated in our primaries, and when we have done this, we have carried out our pledge and discharged our full duty under our primary election law above referred to, and under the resolution of our State Democratic Executive Committee calling our primaries. 3-19-48

Then, what our presidential electors do is another matter. If the men whom we nominate in our primaries for presidential electors are elected in the general election in November—and I am confident they will be—these electors are the ones who elect our president. With every candidate for presidential elector telling the people of Alabama, prior to May 4, just what he stands for, I can see no objection to those electors refusing to vote for the nominee of the Northern wing of the Democratic Party, if those folks nominate for president a man who would wreck all of our Southern traditions and practically destroy our civilization.

THERE are ways by which we can protect our presidential electors from having to vote for a man for president, who they were elected by the people of Alabama to defeat, but I will not discuss his phase of the controversy in this letter, but will confine this letter to a correction of the statements in your editorial. The Advertiser

If after considering this letter and the thoughts herein set forth, you agree with me, I would appreciate it greatly if you would come out in a clear and unambiguous statement to the effect that no Democrat violates any pledge when he participate in our primary elections and casts his ballot for candidates for presidential elector who have announced that they will NOT support Truman for President in the electoral college, even though he be nominated in the July convention at Philadelphia.

Of course, if these voters should go into the general election in November and vote for an independent slate, or a Republican slate, of presidential electors, then they would violate the pledge they took when they participated in our primaries. Montgomery, Ala.

However, when our voters go into the general election in November and vote for all the candidates nominated in our Democratic primaries, then they have not only carried out their pledge of supporting the nominees of our primaries, but two years hence, if any of them wish to seek the democratic nomination for public office, they can, with an entirely clear conscience, make the necessary oath as to party regularity and become a candidate in our 1950 Democratic primaries. Fri. 3-19-48

I THINK it important for you to make this correction because of the tremendous influence of your splendid paper throughout Alabama. Fri.

I am going to take the liberty of sending copies of this letter to some others who are greatly interested in this proposition and I am sure you will have no objection to this, as we certainly wish every Democrat in Alabama to clearly understand that he can still remain a Democrat and participate in our Democratic primaries without having to aid and abet in the election of anyone as president whose thoughts and ideas are as obnoxious to our people as are those of President Truman. 3-19-48

CENTURY OF CUSTOM VS. THE LAW

The Advertiser

34D

Whether Alabama's electoral vote goes to President Truman may finally be decided by the U. S. Supreme Court.

The Advertiser by no means makes that prediction, but there is a demonstrable possibility.

Dem. (Ala.)

Nor does The Advertiser broach this consideration to diminish the ardor of the Alabama revolt, for, basically, it believes in the merit of swinging back at the South's tormentors. But that is no warrant for ignoring the possibilities. Montgomery, Ala.

Three years ago the Alabama Legislature enacted a statute compelling presidential electors to cast their vote for the nominees of the national party. Oregon, Massachusetts and California have a similar law. Twenty-four other states, unlike Alabama, run the name of the candidate for president on the ballot. Fri. 5-14-48

Three years ago there was no foresight of a Truman revolt. A few weeks ago the Alabama Supreme Court found the 1945 act invalid: The revolt could go on, electors could vote for whom they pleased in December.

There the matter rests. Alabama is certain to have 11 electors pledged to withhold their vote from Truman, candidate of the Rooster Party. As things appear today, there is little likelihood that the election will be close enough for Alabama's 11 electoral votes, or even those of a considerable part of the South, to matter a hoot below. But should Truman come close, or possibly even if he doesn't, any Alabama voter can start mandamus proceedings to compel the electors to deliver Alabama's vote to the party under whose emblem they were elected.

Should the Alabama withholding ever be assailed in the courts, it would likely be along certain easily visible lines. Foremost among these would be the fact that for a century electors have been one thing only—messenger boys. The courts have repeatedly ruled that custom must be given great weight in such decisions.

The Advertiser

THE system of the Electoral College was devised in response to conditions and anxieties that seem fantastic in modern America. As explained in The Federalist papers of Hamilton, Jay and Madison, electors were endowed with discretion to vote the "sense of the people." An independent and temporary body such as that of the electors was depended upon to resist corruption by foreign powers wishing to influence the choice of the American president, or of yielding to domestic conspiracies of this kind or that. It was thought that the electors being so widely scattered and isolated, they could be depended upon to be elected and serve their purpose before any group could work their will upon them.

Hamilton wrote:

Montgomery, Ala

> Nothing was more to be desired than that every practicable obstacle should be opposed to cabal, intrigue and corruption. These most deadly adversaries of republican government might naturally have been expected to make their approaches from more than one quarter, but . . . How could they better gratify this than by raising a creature of their own to the chief magistracy of the Union?

Fri. 5-14-48

But for more than a century custom has perverted and frustrated the original design of the Republic's founders. In arguing the case before the Alabama Supreme Court. Atty. Gen. Carmichael quoted the Encylcopedia Britannica to this effect:

> . . . Almost since the beginning of the government, candidates . . . have been nominated by the great political parties . . . in advance of the choice of electors . . . The electors are only registers of the already pronounced party choice in candidates, and accept the office under a tacit pledge to act only as such. . . .

At this point defenders of the Alabama withholding would interject that the electors ran on an announced platform that they would not vote for Truman. A counter objection would be that the elector candidates took their stands after March 1, the qualifying deadline for candidates.

THE U. S. Supreme Court has never ruled directly on the question, but the attorney general made this citation in his brief for the Alabama Supreme Court:

The Advertiser

> In the April (1912) presidential primary for the Republican Party, the voters of Nebraska were allowed to express their choice for the party's presidential candidate. . . . Their choice was overwhelmingly in favor of Theodore Roosevelt.
> At the same primary election, Republican presidential electors were nominated together with delegates to the national convention. When the national convention was held, Mr. Taft was nominated by the Republicans instead of Theodore Roosevelt. Those presidential electors who had been nominated in the Nebraska Republican primary publicly announced their intentions to vote not for the party nominee, Mr. Taft, but to vote for Theodore Roosevelt. Montgomery, Ala.
> In the meantime and before the general election, a third party had been organized known as the Progressive Party which had nominated Roosevelt.
> The Nebraska Supreme Court in this case held that those presidential electors nominated in the Republican primary were honor bound to support Taft, the party nominee; that since they had publicly announced their intention to support another candidate, namely Mr. Roosevelt, who was running under the auspices of the Progressive Party, they had vacated their offices as Republican electors, and further that the Republican Party organization of Nebraska was authorized to appoint presidential electors who would vote for Taft Fri. 5-14-48

Legal considerations beyond this are a maze into which the layman cannot safely venture. In essence, it appears to be a century of custom vs. law.

As we said it is highly unlikely that Truman will run well enough to care whethe

MANDATE

The Advertiser

EDITOR, The Advertiser: Well, since my last epistle to you the election has come and gone, that is, partially gone, and Big Jim has got his mandate from the voters to get back to the governor's office and do some of the things he was elected to do. They elected him governor of Alabama and not to the U. S. Senate or an international envoy. Hill and Sparkman will look after that. Two of the best the state has ever had.

34D Dem. (Ala.)

The Governor just misinterpreted the meaning of those landslide elections. So maybe he'll get on his job now and at least repair some of the roads Bibb Graves built so that we can get over them safely.

I see by the papers that that States Right gang has headed right where I thought it would, for the Republican Party.

They are going to ask old Senator George of Georgia to lead them. If that isn't the blind leading the blind I don't know what is. Everybody knows who old Senator George is and what he stands for. He fought everything that F. D. R. ever tried to do for the people. 5-14-48

If you will just notice the names of those who are taking the most active and loudest part in this civil rights mess you will see that it is the same old gang that has voted with the Republicans in defeating or triyng to defeat everything that the Democrats have tried to put through for the common men and women who pay the taxes. Montgomery, Ala.

I had a letter from Mr. McCorvey just before the election explaining in very minute detail the difference between the revolt he is maneuvering and the one for which Tom Heflin was barred from the Democratic party in 1928. After reading his learned dissertation I have discovered that there is a vast difference 'twixt tweedle dum and tweedle dee.

By ARTHUR KROCK

WASHINGTON, May 6—What the Democratic voters of Alabama decided at their primary yesterday was sensational by every political test. They nominated eleven candidates who are sure to become electors in November and are pledged to cast the state's vote against President Truman if he is the Democratic nominee. There is an implied reservation—that they will vote for him if the President abandons his "civil rights" program and it is not endorsed in the party platform. But such a retreat would be stultification.

Despite the sensational nature of this development in Alabama, however, the White House and the managers of Mr. Truman's bid for the nomination are outwardly unworried. This apparent lack of anxiety may be real, although the event is extraordinary.

Only Twice Before

The Times

Only twice before in peacetime American history have electors declined to cast the entire vote of the state for the regular nominee of the party on whose ticket their names appeared in the November election. In 1824, the end of the period in which an elector felt freely commissioned by the voters to let his individual judgment serve as his guide, one ignored the result in his state. In 1912, after the South Dakota delegation to the Republican National Convention withdrew as a protest against the refusal of the majority to seat contesting delegations pledged to Theodore Roosevelt, the Republican candidates for elector in that state announced that if chosen in November they would cast the vote of South Dakota for T. R. They were chosen and did so. These are the only instances comparable to the current project in Alabama, which is being advocated in at least four other Southern Democratic states.

5-7-48

New York, N.Y.

A Showdown Looms

The Democratic voters of Alabama went through with this plan in the face of mounting certainty that Mr. Truman will be nominated by the national party convention without retracting or modifying his "civil rights" program and that thus there will be a showdown. They may believe their Sena- ors can engineer a "draft" of General enhower to which the General will though how this could be squared utation for honor is very difficult to see. And the decision of the Chief Justice Monday on restricted land covenants has already silenced some Southern Democrats who have been saying he would be an acceptable substitute for Mr. Truman.

Fri.

Unlike the Republican candidates for elector in South Dakota in 1912, the Alabama nominees have not named the Democrat for whom they will cast the state's electoral vote. If other Southern states follow the lead of Alabama this choice can be expected, but probably not until the national convention has adjourned. 5-7-48

Why So Unperturbed?

In view of all this, why is the Administration seemingly so unperturbed? Inquiries by this correspondent today produced this general explanation:

(1) When the Democratic National Convention meets, the Republicans will have nominated their national ticket and the President's opponents will be dealing with "a condition and not a theory." The Democratic convention will proceed to nominate Mr. Truman on the first ballot—his managers already count a minimum of 900 pledges—and the stark alternative of bolting or not bolting will materialize. The question the Southerners must then decide is whether to put beyond any possible doubt the election of the Republican ticket, also strongly committed to a "civil rights" program. That will produce sober second thought which intervening events will crystallize into a decision to cast the electoral votes for Mr. Truman. The Times

Peace Overtures

(2) The White House is hearing less and less about the "Southern revolt," Alabama to the contrary notwithstanding. Democrats in Congress have been quietly sounding state leaders in the South and report peace overtures from that section for the first time since the uproar began. The sources of these approaches lead Mr. Truman's friends to believe that possibly only one other Southern state will follow the lead of Alabama, in which case the project will surely disappear by November.

Such is the explanation for this singular display of unconcern, though it may be merely wishful thinking.

New York, N. Y.

Another Difficult Problem

The Alabama Democrats have not yet settled another difficult problem, however: at what point their delegates to the national convention shall walk out in the expected circumstances. If they remain to participate in the selection of a national party ticket and platform their state party will not support in November, they will be outright bolters. If they walk out before that they will retain their regular party standing at home but will be classified as bolters by the national party. Their dilemma may be complicated by a plan, now being discussed, to choose the convention ticket before the platform is adopted. This would force the Southerners to walk out before they knew what the platform on "civil rights" would be; or become outright bolters by taking part in the nominations and then refusing to support them—a grave and dangerous political sin. Sen. Hill Lengthens His Lead Over Field In Delegates Race

(340)

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

Alabama's ballot uprising against President Truman and his "civil rights" program became more pronounced today with tabulation of four-fifths of returns from Tuesday's Democratic primary. (Ala)

Voters in cities, hamlets and branchheads alike expressed preference for presidential electors opposed to Truman or any candidate favoring his proposals.

While all delegate and elector candidates were opposed to the president and his civil rights plans, late returns showed Alabama's delegation to the Democratic National Convention would be made up of men both favoring and opposing a walkout at Philadelphia.

Sen. Lister Hill, strongly opposed to a walkout as the best method of combatting an anti-South program, lengthened his lead over the field of delegate-at-large candidates.

Former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, who waged a vigorous campaign against the McCorvey-led walkout proposal which brought bitter fighting within the party, was running third. Atty. Gen. Albert A. Carmichael, another walkout opponent, was in sixth place among frontrunners for eight delegate-at-large places.

BUT THE OTHER FIVE LEADERS in this race, paced by former Lt. Gov. Handy Ellis, all were pledged to a walkout, if any of the "civil rights" measures are written into the platform. The News

The governor's defeat was so stinging as to cause some observers to wonder if he had sought solace in marriage. Folsom was married to Miss Jamelle Moore, pretty Birmingham brunet and employe of the State Highway Department, in a surprise ceremony at Rockford, Ala., yesterday afternoon.

Before his sudden wedding, the stunned and "humble" governor hinted at Montgomery that he would support the European Recovery Program, which both he and his badly beaten candidate for U. S. Senate—Phillip Hamm—had opposed in the campaign.

"Certain policies and candidates have won in the first primary," said Gov. Folsom. "I want to congratulate every one. I am more humble and grateful than ever."

The Story of the Alabama Magnolia Who Went to Washington

The Worker, New York. N-14.

34D

By Benjamin J. Davis
Member New York City Council

IT TOOK Mrs. Leonard Thomas, female of the unreconstructed rebel species, from poll tax Alabama, to go to Washington where, with a minimum of effort, she bearded the ferocious presidential lion in his own den. But decisively!

She did not denounce him, this Magnolia blossom from the South. She twitted his whiskers and made him denounce—or to be more accurate, expose—himself! The White House lion was already toothless after willingly submitting to a series of extractions performed upon him by the Rankin poll-taxers.

Mrs. Thomas had gone to Washington to protect "her beloved South" from the dam-yankee President who hails from—mind you!—the Jimcrow state of Missouri. What she meant by protection of the South, practically everyone knows is: No interference with the anti-Negro lynch system of the sunny south. The Alabama Magnolia, it seems, was mad enough to again fire the first shot from Sumter, S. C., or from Montgomery, Ala., the former capital of the slaveholding confederacy—which, incidentally, is her home town.

Instead, she found Harry to be a pushover. When she encountered him at a luncheon tete-a-tete in the White House, where undoubtedly mint-juleps were served, she merely turned on her slow Southern drawl and her soft charm and the big bad defender of civil liberties wilted.

AFTER putting a few impish questions to Honest Harry, she then issued an undenied statement to the press, in which she declared that the President did not intend by his civil rights message to "ram anti-segregation legislation down the throat of the South." Further, she declared, "He has proven to me that he has no intention of upsetting the social structure of the South." This, of course, is the notorious fascist slogan of the Ku Klux Klan, shouted to the acompaniment of the rebel yell, as they draw the noose tighter around an innocent Negro's neck. Sun. 3-21-48

The actual words of surrender which the President spoke to the Alabama Magnolia were mercifully unquoted by the reporters. But one of the White House correspondents—who has maintained his sense of humor despite the numbing experiences of a Truman press conference—did point out that as the President was whispering away the rights of the Negroes into the cultured ear of Mrs. Lennard, he clasped under his arm a typewritten paper inscribed with the foreign and un-American statement, "All men are created equal."

Such were the results of the pitched, all-out battle which the President of the United States waged in defense of the rights of 15 million Negroes, in defense of the Constitution. And this, by the way, is just about the limit of his militancy toward Ku Klux incitation to violence against Negro citizens, against American constitutional democracy.

But of course, against the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, the Chinese democrats, the Greek patriots—his militancy soars to white heat. All of these people who are fighting for peace and bread and freedom must, according to Honest Harry, be wiped out as abominable Communists. It must be difficult at times for the President's attaches and majordomos to restrain him, for fear big bad Harry might jump into the Sacred Cow and bravely fly over to Czechoslovakia and exterminate every single Czech with one of his own carefully preserved atomic bombs.

IT WAS just two days before the virtuous Harry was politically seduced by the Magnolia, that even without the irresistible provocation of a Southern female colonel, he issued a statement that he was not going to introduce any of his civil rights proposals into Congress, because the introduction of legislation is Congress' business. But the President had no such inhibitions about introducing a fascist measure to draft strikers into the Army. Sun. 3-21-48

The utter cynicism of the President's latest mint-julep betrayal is revealed in the fact that he told the Magnolia that he now stood on the 1944 platform of the Democratic Party—in a word, the President has advanced backwards four years, and, in the advance, has transformed Roosevelt's platform into its opposite. With the GOP running in 1948 on Lincoln's speeches of 1860, it is clear that only Wallace and the Third Party will stop this march backward and carry the country forward.

'Tis a pity that the Negroes and poor whites during the progressive Reconstruction days didn't get a chance to reconstruct all rebels. Three weeks ago Walter White, Secretary of the NAACP,, wrote in his column that Truman on civil rights is a very sincere man. How long will it take Walter White and those Negro leaders of his point of view, to dump the "sincere" Truman and find their way to the Wallace mainstream?

Write-In Votes Are Barred, Thomas Critic Is Informed

A critic of Mrs. Lennard Thomas sought Wednesday to oppose the democratic national committeewoman at the polls, but the outcome was doubtful.

Mrs. Brooks Whitton of Birmingham, announced she would be a write-in candidate against Mrs. Thomas in Alabama's May 4 democratic primary. Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey at Mobile said, however, it can't be done.

McCorvey said write-in votes in the primary would violate party rules. Candidates, to be eligible, must file declarations with McCorvey and the secretary of state and pay a qualifying fee to the party chairman before the official deadline.

Informed of McCorvey's comment, Mrs. Whitton said she was studying the matter, and added: "I certainly wish to comply with any rules and regulations."

Mrs. Whitton said she considered entering the race before the March 1 closing date, but decided against it. No one else qualified for the committee office besides Mrs. Thomas.

The Birmingham business woman's attempt to get her name on the ballot highlighted the day's political developments.

Dr. Wheat Withdraws

In the scramble for Congress, the situation was just the reverse. Instead of trying to get new names on the ballot, the Sixth District race lost one when Dr. H. F. Wheat, Tuscaloosa dentist, withdrew as a candidate.

Because of a poll tax mixup, Dr. Wheat said he "apparently" is not a legal voter and therefore disqualified from running for office. Thurs. 3-25-48

(After talking with Presiden Truman recently, Mrs. Thoma said she was convinced part leaders would not force anti-segregation laws "down ou throats" in the South. She said later she meant national committee officials such as Chairman Howard McGrath.) 34D

Mrs. Whitton's attempt to get on the ballot came less than 48 hours after two members of the State Democratic Executive Committee asked Mrs. Thomas to resign as national committeewoman and withdraw as a candidate for reelection. They were Mrs. Carolyn P. Coots of Attalla, vice chairman of the committee, and Brewer Dixon of Talladega. Montgomery Ala

Dr. Wheat's withdrawal from the congressional field was the second since the March 1 deadline. Dr. J. Sam Snoddy of Russellville got out of the Seventh District race 12 days ago because of ill health. The Advertiser 3-25-48

The Tuscaloosa dentist said he "understood" he was exempt from poll tax payment because of physical disability and that poll tax lists carried his name for veral years.

Records in the Probate office show Wheat was granted an exemption in 1927, but an attorney general's opinion has held that such exemptions must be renewed each year. The Advertiser

A squabble over delegates to the Democratic National Convention centered around Charles G. Dobbins of Montgomery and Police Commissioner Eugene Connor of Birmingham. Both are seeking election from the state at large. Montgomery, Ala

Connor wrote Dobbins and the other 23 candidates asking them to sign a pledge to walk out of the convention if the presidential nominee and platform are not acceptable to the South. 3-25-48

Dobbins, editor of the weekly Montgomery Examiner, replied he is opposed to President Truman but will not "deposit my vote in anybody's pocket."

The Birmingham commissioner retorted that the statement "fails to make clear just where he stands." Thurs. 3-25-48

Senator Lister Hill, from his office in Washington, has mailed this column an explanation of his political position as it differs now from his radio speech to the people of Alabama on March 11. His statement is interesting and should be read by the voters of Alabama. It follows: 34d

"In my radio speech to the people of Alabama on March 11, I told the people of Alabama that I knew how much Alabama and the South would suffer if the Democratic Party was split and Republican victory insured. I told them that I became a candidate for delegate to the Democratic National Convention that I might do all in my power to preserve the unity of the Democratic Party and secure full recognition and fair treatment for Alabama and the South. Montgomery Ala

"The situation in Alabama and the South today makes clear that that there cannot be Democratic Party unity with President Truman as the nominee of the Party.

"If the people of Alabama send me to the Democratic National Convention I shall work for a platform recognizing the rights of Alabama and the South. I shall work for the nomination of a man who will insure the unity of the Democratic Party and who in these critical times will best unite our country for the preservation of peace." Sat. 3-27-48.

Mrs. Thomas Denies Support Of Truman, Plea For Funds

Renewing her denials that she had endorsed Truman or called for fund-raising campaigns to back him, Mrs. Lennard Thomas, Alabama's National Democratic committeewoman, told Kiwanians Tuesday afternoon that "I did represent you. I fought our battle (in Washington)." 34d

Mrs. Thomas, who had denied earlier Tuesday that she made the statements in question, was quoted in Washington news reports last Saturday as having said, "My advice to the South is to forget the revolt, to get busy and raise funds for the Democratic Party, and to stand solidly behind Harry S. Truman."

In her denial, she said she had been "misrepresented and misquoted." The Advertiser 3-17-48

To Save Party

The Alabama committeewoman said she knew Alabama's stand in the civil rights battle after talking to Alabama Protestants, Jews and Catholics, whites and Negroes, and labor leaders. She said she told Howard McGrath and other committeemen in Washington, "We can never accept the FEPC in the South. I am here without malice. I have to speak with angry words but they do not come from an angry heart. All I want is to save the Democratic Party." Montgomery, Ala.

Mrs. Thomas said she asked Democrat leaders McGrath, Gael Sullivan and Les Bipple the question, "Did you advise Mr. Truman on the civil rights program" and each answered, "No." She said that when she asked President Truman personally about his civil rights program, he said, "I stand on the constitution of the United States of America." After that, Mrs. Thomas said, "he read to me from the Constitution, the part guaranteeing equality to all races, creeds and colors.

When she came out of the President's office, Mrs. Thomas said, she was surrounded by "25 or 30 newsmen," all questioning her so fast that her statements were misrepresented. "One Alabama newsman tried to protect me (from their tactics)," she said. She did not identify the newsman. 34d (Ala.)

"I did not back Truman," she said emphatically, "and I did not say that we should raise money for him." Demo

Afraid of South

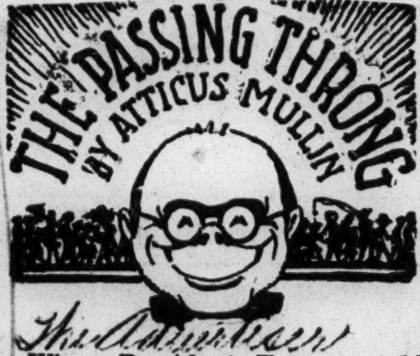
"They are afraid of the Solid South," she continued. "We must work together and we must lick Wallace." The Advertiser

The Alabama committeewoman also touched on the dangers of Henry Wallace and Communism. Saying that she talked with Secretary of State Marshall and top military leaders, Mrs. Thomas said, "We are so near war it is pitiful." Montgomery, Ala.

On Wallace, she gave credit for the fact that "Wallace is preaching peace." So many mothers, she said, don't want their sons to go to war again. Therefore, they back Wallace by virtue of his "peace" platform. Wed.

"We have a terrible threat in Henry Wallace," she concluded. "We must band together and keep on fighting to save the Democratic Party. Southerners can do it by staying together." 3-17-48

Mrs. Thomas, who had pointed out early in her speech that she was unopposed for re-election to her post, spoke briefly immediately before the main address at the Kiwanis luncheon, Jefferson Davis Hotel, which was delivered by the Rt. Rev. C. C. J. Carpenter, Bishop of the Diocese of Alabama, Episcopal Church. (See story elsewhere in this issue.) 3-17-48



The Advertiser

When President Truman told Mrs. Lennard Thomas, Democratic National Committeewoman from Alabama the other day that he would stand pat on everything he had said and done about civil rights and racial equality, the Washington Post quotes her as saying: 34d

"My advice to the South is to forget the revolt, to get busy and raise funds for the Democratic Party and stand solidly behind Harry S. Truman.

Now isn't that something? "Stand solidly behind President Truman! Raise funds to get him re-elected so that he can carry out his pledge to change life in the South.

I feel constrained to say, after talking with hundreds of Alabamians in the last month or two, that Mrs. Thomas won't find many Alabama Democrats forgetting what has happened and she will not find them putting up money for the man they have come to regard, if their talk means anything, as their bitter enemy. Montgomery, Ala.

It appears that Southern governors don't think Truman is the friends of the South nor do Southern senators and congressmen with three or four notable exceptions, Pepper of Florida and some others. Fortunately, no doubt, for Mrs. Thomas she has no opposition for the post she now holds. Tues 3-16-48

Declares He Cannot Back Party's Head

WASHINGTON, March 23—U. S. Sen. Lister Hill, following the lead set by his Alabama colleague, Sen. John J. Sparkman, today asserted he could not support President Truman as the Democratic nominee for president.

"The situation in Alabama and the South today," Sen. Hill said, "makes clear that there cannot be Democratic Party unity with President Truman as the nominee of the party. 34d

"If the people of Alabama send me to the Democratic National Convention, I shall work for a platform recognizing the rights of Alabama and the South. I shall work for the nomination of a man who will insure the unity of the Democratic Party and who in these critical times will best unite our country for the preservation of the peace."

THE SENIOR ALABAMA senator did not—as did Sen. Sparkman last week—directly call upon President Truman to withdraw as a candidate for renomination. Hill made it crystal clear, however, that he no longer backs Truman. Tues.

"In my radio speech on March 11," Sen. Hill said, "I told the people of Alabama that I know how Alabama and the South would suffer if the Democratic Party was split and Republican victory insured. I told them that I became a candidate for delegate to the Democratic National Convention, that I might do all in my power to preserve the unity of the Democratic Party and secure full recognition and fair treatment for Alabama and the South."

The senior Alabama senator's statement must have come as a severe blow to the White House and national party leaders.

Until recently Hill has been one of the Truman administration's most reliable supporters.

On Jan. 2, in a nationwide broadcast, Hill reiterated his support of Truman and predicted the president would be reelected in November. 3-23-48

LATE IN JANUARY—Only a few days before Truman's civil rights message to Congress—Sen. Hill reaffirmed his backing of Mr. Truman. This was on the occasion of Gov. James E. Folsom's announcement he was a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination as Alabama's "favorite son."

At that time Sen. Sparkman also repeated his intention to support President Truman.

The Truman civil rights message, containing recommendations for anti-poll tax, anti-segregation, anti-lynching and FEPC bills, was dispatched to the Congress without consultation with any consultation with any congressional leaders. The News

Hill and Sparkman, together with virtually all their Senate associates from the South, immediately announced they would continue to oppose all such legislation. Tues.

* * *

SINCE SPARKMAN'S announcement on Friday, in which the former head of the Democratic National Committee's speakers' bureau urged Mr. Truman to withdraw his candidacy, two other Southern senators had made the same suggestion. 3-23-48

Sen. Richard Russell, of Georgia, endorsed the Sparkman anti-Truman stand on a nationwide radio program Friday night. Ala.

And on Saturday Sen. William B. Umstead, of North Carolina, followed suit. Birmingham

It is considered very probable that many other Dixie senators will take this same anti-Truman position. Twenty-one Southern senators, including the two Alabamians, have formed an organization to "fight to the finish" the civil rights legislative proposal.

Sparkman said recently that President Truman's civil rights message was delivered without prior consultation with Sen. J. Howard McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

The Alabama junior senator said, moreover, that Mr. Truman had not consulted party leaders in either the Senate or the House before making his civil rights suggestions.

Mrs. Thomas Under Fire For Her Press Stand On 'Civil' Bill

Birmingham, Ala.

BY FRED TAYLOR

Mon. News Staff Writer

Mrs. Lennard Thomas, Montgomery, today was asked by a State Democratic Executive Committee member to resign as Democratic national committeewoman and withdraw as a candidate for this post.

The request was contained in letters to Mrs. Thomas and Alabama Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile, by Brewer Dixon, Talladega attorney and state committee member. 3-22-48

Dixon, who said he was "shocked and disappointed" in press statements issued by Mrs. Thomas in Washington as member of the national committee, wrote McCorvey that if she declines to resign, the state committee should act to repudiate the position taken by her. He referred to statements in connection with President Truman's "civil rights" proposals and the Southern revolt.

ASKED TO RESIGN—Mrs. Lennard Thomas

Mrs. Thomas is the only candidate seeking election as national committeewoman, a post she has held for two terms, in the May 4 primary. The News 3-22-48

The Talladega attorney proposed further that, in event Mrs. Thomas refused to resign, that the state committee either abolish the position or extend the time for qualification of other candidates.

In his letter to Mrs. Thomas, Dixon stated that if she declines to step aside "There is nothing that I see which the State Democratic Executive Committee can properly do at its next meeting other than by due steps taken repudiate the position you have taken and, incidentally, to call upon you for such resignation." 34d (Ala.)

HIS LETTER ADDED THAT the committee also should "take such other action as is necessary in order to see that the basic, fundamental interest of Alabama and the South on these race questions are properly protected." The News

After she and other members had conferred with President Truman at the White House, Mrs. Thomas was quoted by the Associated Press as saying she was "perfectlye satisfied' with th answer giver her by Mr. Truman on the controversy over his "civil rights" proposals. The report added she had been converted to the president's program. Birmingham

She was quoted further as having said "We're going to stand together and work for a Democratic victory." Ala.

Upon her return to Alabama, Mrs. Thomas issued a statement contending that what she had said in Washington concerning President Truman had been misrepresented. She said she had not "defied my home folks" and that "I stand with you—win or lose—to the end." Mon.

In his letter to Chairman McCorvey, Dixon said: 3-22-48

"I enclose herewith a copy of my letter to Mrs. Lennard Thomas. As stated therein, I feel that should she fail to resign (as I doubt she will) that at our next executive meeting the position taken by her should be repudiated in no uncertain words and that she should be called upon to resign and withdraw, and failing to do so within a time stated b ythe committee, that, in view of the situation and that her usefulness is over as a national committeewoman, that the committee either abolish the position of national committeewoman or if that is not possible, then to extend the time for qualification of other candidates for this position in order that the voters may have a chance of a choice in the primary to elect a committeewoman."

Democratic Process At Work

The News

Wed 10-6-48

Bham Ala

For several years Radio Station WSGN, The Birmingham News and The Birmingham Age-Herald have jointly sponsored a weekly discussion program known as "Democracy at Work." It is dedicated to the democratic ideal of giving controversial subjects a full airing. On many occasions participants have presented points of view in opposition to opinions of these papers. However, the discussions have been orderly and the conflicting views have been courteously debated. The purpose of the forum has been to contribute to a widely disseminated knowledge of issues before the public.

This season the series began with a discussion Monday night of one of the livest subjects before the people of Alabama at this moment: Should there be a slate of electors pledged to the nominees of the national Democratic Party on the ballot in Alabama? The panel was composed of two thoroughly articulate upholders of the States' Rights Party; a labor leader; and a lawyer who recently has given special study to Alabama's election laws. Tom Abernethy is an elector pledged to vote for the Thurmond-Wright ticket. In the May primary he led the entire field of those who offered for the posts. Albert Stapp is a business man of Birmingham who was a delegate-at-large to the Democratic convention in Philadelphia last July. After the civil rights plank was voted into the Democratic platform, he joined other delegates from Alabama and Mississippi in walking out of the convention. Carey Haigler, a supporter of President Truman, is president of the Alabama CIO Council. The lawyer was Thomas Christopher of Tuscaloosa.

But there was no debate over the basic point for discussion. There was, however, a sharp cleavage of opinion over the place which Truman electors might take on the ballot form. Both Mr. Abernethy and Mr. Stapp said unequivocally that they believed a Truman-Barkley slate should be on the ballot. They readily acceded to the idea that the democratic process would be served if Alabama's citizens had a chance to vote for or against the national Democratic Party's candidates in November. Mr. Stapp went further. He had, he said, urged from the beginning that such a step should not only be allowed, but encouraged. But he demurred strongly against Mr. Haigler's contention that such a slate should appear under the rooster emblem. That figure should be reserved, Mr. Stapp said, for the candidates supported by the elector nominees pledged before the primary not to support Truman and elected by the voters with the understanding that they would not vote for Truman if he were nominated in the convention. Mr. Stapp would have the Truman supporters listed under the donkey, the emblem of the national party.

Both Mr. Abernethy and Mr. Stapp admitted that the pledge appearing on the primary ballot has doubtful legal validity. Although both held themselves bound by the pledge, they said they would not quarrel with the moral position of any voter who chose to ignore it. They agreed that many Alabamians did not fully realize how they were pledging themselves when they voted in May. Although they insisted, and rightly, that there was no attempt made at any time to keep the purposes of the anti-Truman electors from full publicity, they readily admitted that there is now much bewilderment on the part of many Alabama voters who find themselves without a full choice in this important presidential election.

Mr. Christopher, a specialist on the election laws, said that he saw little if any hope of providing a legal way by which voters could ballot for Truman in Alabama. If the governor should call a special session of the Legislature, a way might be provided. But time is short. Mr. Christopher said that when the secretary of state has officially certified the vote after the election, he sees no possibility of having it invalidated by court action.

The discussion Monday night was never acrimonious. It remained an exposition of the problem from various points of view. It served to clarify in the listeners' minds the problems, which have disturbed many of them. By helping to reduce confusion of thought it served its purpose.

SWEET PAPA IN ALABAMA

Stephen H. Harrington, national secretary of the Truman-Barkley clubs, was in town Thursday and said that "Gov. Folsom is in complete charge of the Democratic Party in Alabama as far as President Truman is concerned."

That pronouncement reached the outside world from the Executive Mansion in the course of some fellowship. When he saw it in print, Harrington was inclined to hedge.

Well, if Harrington doesn't know who is in charge of the Democratic Party in Alabama, this newspaper is quite certain it doesn't know.

But until Harrington or somebody explains, we would say that the possibilities are Folsom, Bill Primm, Senators Hill and Sparkman. The rest of our figures are in Dixiecrat exile.

We do not doubt that Truman is willing to grant amnesty to Folsom the same as Ickes, who left but returned.

Primm undoubtedly will have no little influence in party circles if for no other reason than he was one of the few Alabamians forthrightly faithful to Truman—at a time when Folsom was asking to be invited to the Dixiecrat Convention in Birmingham and when the CIO's Carey Haigler was as silent as a nesting robin. Primm may have known what he was doing, but the minutes of the meeting show that he held fast. And he was special assistant to Senator McGrath.

As politics is played, Primm has honorably earned his seat in party councils. He is not a political force in the state, but he is an influential political agent in Washington headquarters. When the Democratic National Committee wants to know something about Alabama, it will undoubtedly consult Primm, whose brief case is a dossier.

But despite all of that, our unauthoritative guess is that Senator Hill and Senator Sparkman are going to be the ones to see about matters Democratic in Alabama. For unlike Folsom and Primm, Hill and Sparkman have something to offer Truman.

The two senators have national reputations. They are seasoned legislators with foremost influence in Congress. Civil rights aside, they are almost at one with Truman on his legislative program. They were duress Dixiecrats and that will make it possible for Truman to forgive and forget.

Barkley and McGrath are personally fond of the senators. They'll be welcome and thrice welcome. Our guess—still unauthoritative until Harrington makes his mind and his press quotes match—is that Hill and Sparkman will be sweet papa.

6. Gerald L. K. Smith, Christian Nationalist Party.
7. Farrell Dobbs, Socialist Workers Party.
8. John Maxwell, Vegetarian Party.

The above men, together with the parties shown, are candidates for President of the United States in today's election. Their names do not appear on the ballots in this state, but they are officially lisited in many.

They are not on the Alabama ballot. Should The Advertiser deplore the fact that these candidates are not listed on the Alabama ballot and contend that we are thus disfranchised it would be more tenable than yesterday's Folsom-Truman rally in the Capitol.

Why is it that The Advertiser can contend with more logic that the Hon. John Maxwell, presidential candidate of the Vegetarian Party, should be on the ballot than Folsom can contend that Truman was illegally eliminated?

That is because Alabama has not voted on the candidate of the Vegetarian Party. But Alabama has voted on Truman.

Last Spring some 300,000 Alabamians went to the polls and voted against Truman. They elected presidential electors who took pledges they would never cast their vote for Truman. They overwhelmingly rejected six candidates for elector who would not make that pledge.

But why isn't Truman on the Alabama ballot? He isn't on the ballot for the same reason that the candidate of the Vegetarian Party and candidate of the Socialist Party are not on the ballot. That reason was the failure to qualify 11 electors.

Nobody but Folsom kept Truman off the Alabama ballot.

An overwhelming majority of Alabamians voted in May and June to use the Democratic rooster to defeat Truman.

After that it was still possible for 11 Folsom men to qualify as an independent slate of electors pledged to Truman. Had that been done it would now be possible for Alabamians to vote for Truman. But they did not qualify.

After that Folsom was the one man in Alabama who could have put Truman on today's ballot. After the deadline for qualifying to run [illegible] had passed, Folsom might—as was done in Georgia, Louisiana and Florida—have called a special session of the legislature to get Truman on the ballot.

But Folsom would not call a special session for this purpose. We cannot blame Folsom for not wanting the legislature in the Capitol with its militant curiosity about some aspects of the state's business.

Nevertheless, it is fraud when Folsom—the only man in Alabama who could have gotten Truman's name on the ballot—calls mass meetings to protest against the absence of Truman's name!

Tues 11-2-48

The Folsom-Truman rally yesterday was not without its amusements and caricatures.

There strove Pitt Tyson Maner as chairman of the Resolutions Committee which dished up the resolution that Alabamians have been denied the right of a free ballot.

Pitt was in the posture of ardent and martial party loyalty to Harry S. Truman. It's been only a few months since Pitt was managing Folsom's campaign for President against Truman and arranging a Billy Rose show for Folsom at the Philadelphia Convention—a project which aborted when Alabamians voted so heavily to keep Folsom at home.

In the lush days of last spring Folsom and Pitt were as opposed to Truman as is The Advertiser today. Pitt, indeed, wanted more deeply to defeat Truman than do we—for he so desired Truman's defeat that he was willing to do it with Folsom!

The photos of the rally yesterday show a number of notable and lugubrious countenances, made that way because Alabamians can't vote for Truman. Among these were Prison Director Frank Boswell, Ex-Legal Adviser Kenneth Griffith and General W. P. Screws, a new member of the Guckenheimer Board.

It may be assumed from their presence that they, like Jim and Pitt, are distressed over the Truman ballot blank. Why, then, did they not qualify, with eight others, as Truman electors? Why after the qualifying deadline did not Folsom call the legislature to put them on the ballot?

And what of State Senator A. L. Patterson of Phenix City and State Senator Broughton Lamberth? Why didn't they qualify as Truman electors? After all, because they were associated with Folsom, they were smashingly rejected by the voters in the spring primaries. A further defeat with Truman would not matter greatly.

The Advertiser said often and before Folsom that it was regretful that Truman's name is not on the Alabama ballot. It's Folsom's fault that he's not, but we are nevertheless regretful.

There is considerable confusion over why we have a short ballot. The confusion, as we have so often said, holds backfire possibilities. It is this confusion that Folsom is seeking to exploit.

Folsom is out to disfranchise the 300,000 Alabamians who voted against Truman in May and June. Folsom whines that Truman is not on the ballot, when Folsom alone is responsible.

Folsom charges that a "small group" (300,000 voters) excluded Truman from the ballot, and promises court action that would blot out Thurmond's name on the ballot by invalidating the 300,000 votes cast for him in May and June.

Jour. 11-2-48

In short, Folsom made it impossible for Truman to get on the ballot, and now seeks to purge Thurmond from the ballot by nullifying the expressed will of 300,000 voters.

You don't have to be a Dixiecrat to take offense at that.

The Advertiser Is Right, Yes And No

Advertiser

EDITOR THE ADVERTISER—The peope of Alabama voted overwhelmingly against Truman in the primary." This statement, in effect, has appeared many times in Advertiser editorials, articles, and Grandma column.

One point has apparently escaped attention. Twenty-one out of twenty-eight candidates for the office of elector were pledged to vote against Truman. This means simply that everyone who voted at all was forced to vote for at least four anti-Truman electors. I resented this at the time, and I resent it now.

Your best argument against the National Democrats in Alabama is that we failed to qualify electors in the allotted time. In this we are certainly at fault. We should have recognized our position earlier. The Advertiser, which has stated its desire to have Truman on the ballot, is equally at fault.

Gov. Folsom did have the last opportunity to have the National Party on the ballot—but not the sole responsibility, as you implied through emphasis in a recent editorial.

No one should resent the presence of the States Rights Party on our ballot—they should be welcomed as healthy competition. It is not right that they should have usurped the name, symbol, and position of the National Democratic Party.

Another convention time is coming. Let us hope that no Democrats will be so foolish as to have themselves elected on the States Rights ticket, appear at the States Rights convention, and then walk out in protest against the platform of the States Rights Party, leaving Alabama without representation from that party.

Clarification Of The Issues

(An Editorial In The Anniston Star)

THE ANNISTON STAR, as a general rule, does not pay any attention to unsigned letters to the editor. But there came to this office a few days ago a letter from a reader which is so intelligent and apparently sincere in its purpose that we feel it justifies consideration. The "reader" is seeking enlightenment in regard to this state's position regarding the national presidential campaign; he says he has been helped by our editorials in the past and wants further clarification. He asks:

1. What are the main points in the president's civil rights program with which the Southern politicians disagree, and what do they fear as a result of this program?

There were some 15 points covered in Mr. Truman's message to Congress, but he is being held responsible by the Dixiecrats for 41 points raised in the report of a civil rights commission he appointed. The main points at issue, however, have to do with a proposed federal poll tax law, a federal anti-lynching law and a federal fair employment practices law. It is contended that these are questions that properly should be handled by the separate states and that the president's proposals tend toward the concentration of too much federal power.

The Anniston Star, in principle, is in agreement with the Dixiecrats in these contentions, but we disagree with them as to the best way to approach a solution of the issues in question. History teaches us that rump parties are abortive and nearly always defeat the very ends that they seek. We believe that our sectional quarrel should be fought out within the framework of the National Democratic Party, on the floor of the Congress and by appeal, if necessary, to the federal courts.

2. EXPLAIN AGAIN the original meaning of states' rights—and how it is interpreted now. As I understand it, the sovereignty of a state is only on all internal matters, affecting only itself. The real sovereign power lies in the federation of states.

Under the Articles of Confederation each state was presumed to be sovereign, but when "We the people" banded together to form "a more perfect union" under the constitution by ceding superior authority to the federal government, that government became sovereign. Hence, we say the United States is a nation, not the United States are a nation. Yet, South Carolina, in 1832, objecting to a federal tariff, the use of federal funds for internal improvements, etc., undertook to upset sovereignty by act of nullification.

President Jackson very emphatically routed the nullificationists, but out of the concept of nullification there arose the idea of state-rights under the leadership of John C. Calhoun, in order that the South's vested interest in slavery might be preserved. That idea found its ultimate expression in the right of secession; and while it was believed that the supremacy of the federal government had been established at Appomattox, we have since seen the state-right idea invoked by lawyers in behalf of other vested interests, and by both the Democratic and Republican Parties.

3. IF THE PEOPLE of Alabama voted overwhelmingly for Truman, would the electoral vote be influenced in any way?

Not unless the Alabama Supreme Court should reverse its advisory opinion to the effect that electors are independent agents, or unless the electors should decide that the overwhelming voice of the people justified them in changing the pledge they have given to Horace Wilkinson, a Hoovercrat in 1928, but today a leader in the Dixiecrat movement. All Alabama electors now are committed to vote against the president.

4. WILL THE SOUTH stand to lose more than it will gain by pulling away from the Democratic Party?

Most assuredly, that part of the South that follows the Dixiecrats will stand to lose very much. When John C. Calhoun, for instance, changed from a liberal to a strict constructionist of the constitution under the state-rights program, his influence in national affairs, and to a large extent in state and regional affairs, was almost completely destroyed. Probably in recollection of this fact, it is of interest to note that both Sen. Maybank and Sen. Johnson, in Gov. Thurmond's own state of South Carolina, are now standing by the National Democratic Party.

But as far as Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina, the only states where the Dixiecrat movement has gained much headway, are concerned our senators and representatives in the Congress will stand to lose influence and the entire state will be penalized in so far as patronage is involved. It will not be forgotten that we failed to lend financial aid to the party of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland, Wilson and Roosevelt; for if we lose the election and most of the Democrats not under civil service lose their jobs, we will get the blame.

5. FINALLY, WOULD IT BE A good thing if the South voted for Dewey?

We think that the best interests of the South and of the nation are to be served by the National Democratic Party, especially in a time of international crisis that has brought us to the verge of war. But if we continue to denounce both the Democratic and the Republican Parties, as the Dixiecrats are doing, it is conceivable that the two major parties might unite in anger to apply against us the apportionment clause of the 14th Amendment so as to reduce the size of the South's congressional delegation.

Even now, there is considerable talk about abolishing the electoral college so as to make presidential elections determined by a national plurality of popular votes. And if this were done, the Dixiecrats would play into the hands of the so-called leftists of the North whom they want to curb. But a two-party system in the South would be a good thing; and since the Republicans do constitute a national party, it would be far better to vote for Dewey than for Thurmond, who has no influence outside the South, and only a limited influence down here.

'CLOWNING' BLAMED IN FOLSOM'S DEFEAT

New York Times

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOBILE, Ala., June 5—When Alabama failed this week to elect its Governor as a delegate to the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia, it did so for the first time in the state's history, it was believed. The defeated Governor is Big Jim Folsom who, in a runoff primary June 1, finished last in a field of seven.

An analysis of the cause of the Governor's defeat, according to his close friends and campaign managers, found that it resulted from the recent paternity suit filed against him and now pending, his actions in kissing women and his performances of taking off his shoes and socks on platforms from which he spoke during the first primary this spring. 6-6-48

The Mobile Press said:

"The voters of Alabama, weary of Folsom clowning and double talk, went out of their way to chastise the man who has degraded the office of Governor of the State of Alabama in the eyes of the nation. Sun. 6-6-48

"The man who had the effrontery to announce himself as Alabama's favorite son candidate for the Presidency has taken the beating of his life.

"The voters know only too well, and to their bitter sorrow, that Folsom has played the leading role in a comic opera regime and that he has made a mockery of the office of Governor of the State of Alabama." 6-6-48

Governor Asks Truman To Stop In Alabama; Extra Call Is Unlikely

Ala

Montgomery Ala.

Governor Folsom announced yesterday that he is going on a stumping tour on behalf of Democratic Party candidates in the Nov. 2 general election.

At the same time it was revealed that the governor has invited President Truman, the Democratic Party's standard bearer in the coming election, to stop in Alabama for a visit next week.

Announcing that he would take to the stump once more, Folsom said it would be to get people to vote "the straight Democratic ticket."

His speeches, he said, would be on behalf of Democratic candidates for state and local offices where there is danger of Republican candidates being victorious.

Details of the campaign have not been worked out yet, the governor continued, but he said he would do his speaking at night and on Saturdays.

Strawberry Pickers

Folsom said that his tentative plans is to carry the Strawberry Pickers, the string band that has accompanied him on three campaigns already, with him.

He told reporters at his first news conference in weeks that his schedule would be announced later and that he would be in his office every day.

Although the governor refused to tell reporters flatly that he does not intend to call a special session of the legislature to get President Truman's name on the ballot, he did infer that he would not because of the proximity to election time.

Repeating his statement of a week ago, Folsom said he still intends to support Truman, and that his name should be on the state ballot.

Fri 10-15-48

To Submit Measures

He declared that he intended submitting measures to the legislature "so such a condition as exists now can never exist again."

He was referring to the fact that Alabama's 11 Democratic electors have pledged their votes to the States' Rights ticket of Thurmond and Wright rather than the National Democratic Party nominees.

"You can't change the Democratic Party set up this late in the game," he continued. "The president should be on the ticket. I've made myself plain on that."

He asserted that he anticipated joining in any legal action that might be taken to force the state electors to cast their votes for Truman.

Fri 10-15-48

Such action would be taken after the election, he said.

When asked if it would make any difference how the Alabama electors voted in the even the Republican candidate is elected, Folsom said:

"Even if Dewey wins the action should be taken to keep such a condition as this from happening again."

Even GOP Angry

The governor said even the Republicans in Alabama are angry because Truman is not on the ballot. He said they have been telling him they have been waiting three years for the chance to vote against the president, and now they are going to be denied that privilege.

"The Republicans in north Alabama are worse than we Democrats," he stated.

The only way Truman's name could be placed on the state ballot now would be as an independent candidate, he pointed out, "and the national party doesn't want the President on an independent ticket."

He pointed out that for many years it has been customary for the Alabama Democratic Party to be affiliated with the national party.

"It's been both custom and usage," he said.

Meeting Is Told Courts Will Hold 11 Electors Bound To President

Thurmond-Bound Group Called On To Change Stand Before Voting

Montgomery Ala.

By G. [illegible] LONG, JR.

Alabamians were called upon here yesterday at a mass meeting sponsored by Governor Folsom to go to the polls today and cast their ballots for the straight Democratic ticket—"under the rooster."

The meeting adopted a resolution deploring what it termed a "manipulation" that is keeping President Truman off the Alabama ballot.

Folsom viewed the resolution as "a protest" against the ballot being void of any electors supporting the nominee of the national Democratic Party.

The resolution approved proposed court action in an attempt to compel Alabama's 11 Democratic electors, who are pledged to vote for the States' Rights candidates, to vote for Truman. It also demanded that the electors vote for Truman.

Bates Says 500 There

Bankhead Bates, assistant director of the State Department of Public Safety, estimated 500 attended the meeting.

It was held in the hall of the House of Representatives. State employees were scattered throughout the audience. Two Negroes were in the crowd.

Pro-Truman Democrats were told at the meeting that if they wanted their ballots counted for the president, then they should vote under the rooster, because State Senator Joseph N. Langan, Mobile, said, "we believe the courts will rule in our favor"—force the electors to vote for the president.

Later, in a statewide radio broadcast in which he reported on the session, Folsom went even further than that. He said:

"When you go to the polls and vote the straight Democratic ticket it will be counted for the president."

Folsom opened the meeting by saying that "three dozen" men had met in a "smoke filled room" to bring about the present situation in Alabama and "took away the rights of 3,000,000 persons."

He renewed his pledge to go to court.

Tues 11-2-48

Lamberth Is Chairman

State Senator Broughton Lamberth, of Alexander City, who in May was defeated as a candidate for Democratic National Committeeman, was named permanent chairman of the meeting on the recommendation of a nominating committee, composed of ABC Board Chairman Frank Bunkley, ABC Board Member William P. Screws, and State Senator A. L. Patterson, of Phenix City.

After stating that the purpose of yesterday's meeting was to "show a certain group of individuals . . . that they have denied the voters of Alabama the right to vote for the President of the United States," Lamberth named a legal committee to "carry on the fight to the highest court in the land."

Named to that group were Senator Langan, chairman; Kenneth Griffith, Cullman, former legal adviser to Folsom, vice-chairman; James Mayfield, Tuscaloosa; W. C. Taylor, Mobile; Senator Patterson, and Rep. Ira Thompson, Luverne, the governor's present legal adviser.

Lamberth named Pitt Tyson Maner, who headed up Folsom's unsuccessful bid for the Democratic presidential nomination chairman of the resolutions committee. Other members were: J. Allen Tucker, Union Springs, and Eugene Wells, Birmingham.

As a finance committee, primarily to finance the cost of any court fight, Lamberth named State Adjutant General James Saliba, chairman; Jack Brock, Birmingham, state AFL head; J. B. Burkhalter, Olin Hearn, George Wilkinson, Carey Haigler, Birmingham, state CIO head; John G. Ward, Montgomery, and Francis Knight.

Folsom and other speakers said that an Alabama law passed by the 1945 legislature requires the state's electors to vote for the national party nominee.

Court Has Said 'No'

That law is still in effect, they contended, in spite of the fact that the Alabama Supreme Court held the act unconstitutional in an advisory opinion.

Tues 11-2-48

L. [illegible] Treadway, Mobile, asked from the floor how he and others who wanted to vote for Truman could be assured their ballots would be counted for the President if they voted under the rooster today.

He was told by Langan and others that "our only assurance is we believe in what the (1945) law is and that the courts will hold in our favor."

Langan added that with that assurance "it is well worth the chance" to vote under the rooster in the hope the votes will eventually go to Truman.

The resolutions committee proposal to call on the legislature to reaffirm the 1945 act was tabled when there was objection on the grounds that the persons attending the meeting had already said the law is still in effect and should be carried out.

Langan Cites "Dictatorship"

Langan declared the pledge taken by the 11 electors not to vote for Truman a "criminal conspiracy to violate the laws," and that the tactics by which the pledge was secured from the elector candidates "smacks of dictatorship."

Attacking State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile, for his part in the move to get the electors pledged to the States' Rights ticket, Senator Patterson charged that the party chief had "misappropriated" executive committee funds in supporting those electors.

Meanwhile, in Mobile, McCorvey struck back by saying that the mass meeting held here was "ridiculous" and was a move by Folsom "simply to gain publicity."

He repeated the pledge that the 11 electors would "never" vote for Truman.

Wallaceites Unhappy, Too

In Birmingham, Robert Travis, Jr., state chairman of the Progressive (Henry Wallace) Party of Alabama, declared in a telegram to Folsom that "a vote under the rooster in Tuesday's general election can only be counted as a vote for fascisim in Alabama."

Tues 11-2-48

Travis called on Folsom to support Wallace and at the same time condemend tactics of the States' Righters.

The Progressive Party leader in Alabama also said that "the Dixiecrats will seek to win Tuesday's general election by stuffing the ballot boxes, mismarking ballots and voting the dead as well as the living."

He called on Folsom to prevent "fraud" at the polls, to take "all necessary action to insure a fair count of the votes."

The meeting in the House chamber yesterday got under way with the assistance of music by the Draper Prison orchestra.

Commenting on the election, Mrs. Vredenburgh said:

She said that many Dewey supporters "suddenly wanted to get on the bandwagon," after news of a Truman victory. "They literally stampeded our headquarters."

Mrs. Vredenburgh told how sorely pressed Chairman Howard McGrath and the Democratic chieftains were for campaign funds, adding that at times there was no money to pay stenographic and clerical help.

"We conducted the campaign on a shoestring and won it," she said. "But funds came pouring in after the election."

And in so doing, the governor, who at one time sought to be a favorite son candidate himself, ended a long silence on how he stood and at the same time ran head-on into a clash with States' Rights Democrats.

Folsom, in a prepared statement, said he would be for Truman in the general election and hoped that his vote would be counted that way.

He added a hint that there might be legal action to throw the Alabama electoral vote to the national Democratic Party Nominee.

As it now stands, neither Truman nor any electors pledged to him, will be on Alabama's Nov. 2 general election ballot.

Hardly had Folsom's statement been made public before reaction started coming in from Alabama's States' Rights leaders.

Dixon, Wilkinson, Primm Charge, Countercharge

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

Alabama's Democratic family row flared anew today as former Gov. Frank Dixon and Horace Wilkinson lashed back at William J. Primm, Jr., for criticism leveled at them earlier in the week.

Fri 9-10-48

Wilkinson charged that the attempt by Primm, executive assistant to Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, to "purge" Marion Rushton appeared "simply a predicate for purging Sen. Lister Hill in 1950."

Primm had blasted Dixon, declaring the States' Righters should be known as "Dixoncrats" instead of "Dixiecrats" in Alabama, "because they are actually headed by Frank Dixon, Horace Wilkinson and company."

Striking back at Primm, Dixon pointed out that no less a person than North Carolina's late Sen. Josiah Bailey, Primm's father-in-law, had advocated just such a movement as the States' Rights fight to win Southern recognition.

DIXON QUOTED from a speech delivered on the U. S. Senate floor by Sen. Bailey Dec. 7, 1943, as follows:

"There can be an end of insults," Sen. Bailey said. "There can be an end of toleration. There can be an end of patience. We can form a Southern Democratic Party and vote as we please in the electoral college, and we will hold the balance of power in this country. We can throw the election into the House of Representatives and cast the votes of 16 states."

Dixon quoted Sen. Bailey's speech further:

"There is a reason why the South has voted Democratic. I will not go into that, either. But, by the eternal gods, there are men in the South, and women, too, who will not permit men in control of our party to betray or to insult us in the house of our fathers."

Replying to Primm's assertion that Wilkinson and Dixon are "behind-the-scenes manipulators" of the States' Rights movement, Wilkinson wrote him that "If there ever was a time in my life when I have attempted to stand out in front in a movement, it is the States' Rights movement."

Fri 9-10-48

PRIMM, IN A statement earlier in the week whaling away at Rushton, Dixon and Wilkinson, again called on Rushton to resign as Alabama's Democratic national committeeman. Rushton had explained he offered his resignation to the State Democratic Executive Committee, which had refused to accept it. He added he could not quit "on my own motion."

Primm cracked back:

"All Rushton has to do is simply to resign."

In his letter to Primm, Wilkinson questioned his loyalty to the Democratic Party of Alabama and called on him to state publicly whether he intended to "vote under the rooster" in November.

"If you voted in the May 4 (Democratic) primary," Wilkinson wrote Primm, "you agreed to support its nominees. I call on you to publicly state whether you are going to keep your promise."

Wilkinson's letter to Primm continued:

"It looks to me like your plan to purge Col. Rushton is simply a predicate for purging Sen. Hill in 1950, because he will vote the straight Democratic ticket in November, carrying with it electors pledged to vote for Thurmond and Wright. It looks to me like if you were not after Sen. Hill and the congressmen from Alabama you would not be interested in establishing a precedent in Col. Rushton's case.

"To be consistent, you should ask Sen. Hill to resign. You should ask Sen. Sparkman to resign. You should ask every congressman and every other Democratic nominee in Alabama to resign."

MEANTIME, the box supper rally to raise funds for the Thurmond-Wright campaign had been switched from Municipal Auditorium to the Tutwiler Hotel. John Newsome, North Alabama campaign director, said plate dinners would be served at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, explaining the change was made because of difficulties in getting food served in the auditorium.

Fri 9-10-48

The States' Righters hope to sell a minimum of 1,000 dinner tickets at $10 each to help raise a $110,000 Thurmond-Wright campaign quota fixed for Alabama. State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey and Rep. Sam Hobbs, Selma, will address the dinner rally.

Thomas E. Huey, Sr., chairman of the Jefferson County Democratic States' Rights committee, said plans were mapped at a Redmont Hotel meeting last night "to organize the county beat by beat." He emphasized that a permanent organization was being set up.

Huey said those meeting with him were Sid Smyer, Jim Simpson, Hugh Locke, Charlie Harris, Jess Edwards, George Huddleston, Jr., Leon Gilbert, Roy Johnson, Jr., M. M. Marshall, Mike Ross, Bob Billings and Dave Crawford.

ALABAMA VOTES BOLT FOR TRUMAN AND A BOOT FOR FOLSOM

Chicago Daily

Birmingham, June 2 (AP)—Alabama voters have approved a bolt from the Democratic national convention over the civil rights issue or if President Truman is nominated. Thurs. 6-3-48

They also have decided, and by a wide margin, that Gov. James E. Folsom was not going to the convention as a delegate.

Folsom was a candidate for President in the May 4 primary, when he ran 10th in a field of 24 for delegate at large. In the runoff yesterday he was last in a field of seven contesting for four places. 6-3-48

Nine of the 11 delegates chosen yesterday were pledged to walk out at Philadelphia in July if a strong civil rights plank is included or Truman is named. Five others similarly pledged were elected May 4, giving a majority of the 26 man delegation.

Alabama's 11 electors—the men who actually cast the state's vote for President—already were pledged against voting for Truman or civil rights measures.

McCorvey Lays Down Gauntlet For Lister Hill

State Demos' Rally For McCorvey Finds Fireworks A-Poppin'

Fighting among Alabama Democrats over the controversial walkout issue Saturday roared toward Tuesday's voting climax, with both sides lashing out fiercely in the intra-party struggle.

Sparked by a rip-roaring rally for State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey here last night, walkout forces battling President Truman and "civil rights" legislation pressed for a sweep in the runoff campaign for delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

The McCorvey rally, attended by an outpouring of Democrats from over Alabama, brought political fireworks as the state chairman assailed Sen. Lister Hill.

HILL, WHO CAMPAIGNED against a walkout at the Philadelphia convention to lead the field of delegate-at-large candidates in the first primary, was charged by McCorvey with "throwing brickbats."

McCorvey, an anti-Truman pledged presidential elector nominee and runoff candidate for delegate-at-large, asserted he suspected Hill of being behind an attempt to force his resignation as Democratic committee chairman.

THIS BROUGHT A STATEMENT later Saturday from Louis A. Eckl, editor of The Florence Times, blasting McCorvey as "a traitor to the cause of democracy" and saying Sen. Hill had nothing to do with a move seeking McCorvey's resignation.

Eckl said he wrote an AFL resolution criticizing McCorvey and calling for his resignation, which was adopted at the state AFL convention several weeks ago.

"Lister Hill never heard of that resolution before it was adopted," said Eckl. "I wrote the resolution at the request of some of the AFL men in the Muscle Shoals district, who detest the underhanded way in which Horace Wilkinson, McCorvey, et al, are seeking to wreck popular government in Alabama." The News Al

Wilkinson, presidential elector nominee, was chairman of the McCorvey rally.

"I have come to the conclusion," Eckl's statement added, "that it would be a fine thing if McCorvey would get out.

"He is not a Democrat—he is a traitor to the cause of democracy and progressive government."

Striking at Sen. Hill, whom McCorvey recalled had referred to a proposal by the state chairman regarding Gen. Eisenhower for president as "both stupid and ridiculous," McCorvey laid down the gauntlet for a finish fight with Alabama's senior senator.

Pointing out that he had not called for Sen. Hill's resignation when the senator at first came out for Truman, McCorvey declared:

"Sen. Hill's term has only two more years to run and I think we ought to let him serve out his two years." Birmingham, Ala.

DELEGATE CANDIDATES opposing a walkout, including Atty. Gen. Albert Carmichael and Joe J. Money, Birmingham road machinery man, were at nearby hotels, but did not attend the McCorvey rally. Neither did any of the other delegate aspirants pledged against a walkout. Sat. 5-29-48

ATTACKING THE WALKOUT movement, Money declared Saturday that "election of bolters will not only leave Alabama ineffectively represented in a crucial fight, but it will further cripple the efforts of the whole South by splitting the South on its most important issue."

He said that Texas, Louisiana, Florida, Tennessee and Kentucky already have decided to stay in the Philadelphia convention and predicted that North Carolina would do likewise.

Carmichael, who has lashed out repeatedly at the McCorvey-led walkout group, was to take to the air Saturday night in a new assault on walkout forces. He will speak at 8:30 p.m. over WSGN and a statewide hookup.

JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES, Birmingham Post columnist, addressing the McCorvey rally in place of Mississippi Gov. Fielding L. Wright, declared "the revolt in the South already is a success."

"For the first time in history," Graves said, "the South is not going to the national convention in the bag. Every Southern state is going to Philadelphia ready to fight the Truman force bills and the president, who has so cruelly played politics with Southern misery." The News

Graves said Alabama's vote becomes the "mandate of the South, the warhead of the whole revolt—the core of the declaration of Southern independence. He added that in his travels into the various states over the nation he had found "new interest in the Southern view, new sympathy and understanding."

And he emphasized that the South is being advertised for its resistance, its new demands to be heard.

"THIS IS NO NEGRO-HATING movement," declared Graves. "This is not just race-hating, bigotry and despair. We have no quarrel with the Negro. We are doing better and we are going to do a lot better, if they will let us alone."

He said the movement could well be called a fight for states' rights, local self-government, crossroads democracy, as it once had so aptly been termed by former Gov. Frank Dixon. Or, to paraphrase a declaration by Gov. Folsom, it could be called home rule at the branch-heads. Birmingham, Ala.

Chairman McCorvey, in whamming away at President Truman, pictured the president as having the choice of "committing political suicide in the slums of Harlem or on the steps of the white people's homes in the South." He pointed out that Mr. Truman preferred to choose the latter.

In lashing out at Sen. Hill, McCorvey recalled that an Alabama Federation of Labor resolution urging the state chairman's resignation as party leader had referred to the "conspiratorial demands of the State Executive Committee." He added that "conspiratorial" is a "favorite word of a certain United States senator from Alabama."

"I would hate to think that my friend, Lister Hill, had anything to do with writing a resolution like that," said McCorvey, "as I have never thrown any brickbats at him, and there is not reason for him to be throwing any at me. I'm sure it was just a coincidence." Sat.

ERN REVOLT was for "America's most precious principle—the right of people to govern themselves in problems peculiar to themselves. It is especially the principle of the eternal South.

"This is a revolt," he emphasized, "against federalism gone mad, against centralization that makes no sense. It is a thing of dignity, a nationwide thing, in tune with the whole nation's revolt, associating our people not with Bilboism and a burning cross, but with Jefferson, with Woodrow Wilson, with Jackson and with George Washington." 5-29-48

Tom Aebernethy, editor of The Talladega Daily Home and ticker leader in the presidential elector race, lauded McCorvey's leadership.

As spokesman for the group of elector nominees and others of the 21 elector candidates pledged against Truman and "civil rights," Abernethy said "We pay esteem and affection to a gallant warrior, Gessner T. McCorvey. We are proud to follow your leadership."

* * *

ABERNETHY, EMPHASIZING the Southern revolt is a success, brought cheers from the gathering when he said:

"Never again, so long as there is a Democratic Party, will the South be despised, ignored and trampled upon."

Albert Stapp, Hardy Riddle and J. Miller Bonner, the other three delegate - at - large candidates grouped with McCorvey in the runoff campaign, spoke briefly.

H. M. Abercrombie and Jess Edwards, walkout pledged delegate candidates in the Ninth District runoff race, were introduced.

McCorvey was presented a leather handbag—a gift of the banquet sponsors—by Abernethy. Rep. Norman Harris, Decatur, one of the elector nominees, presented gifts to Hugh Locke, co-chairman, and Leon Nolen, executive secretary, of the "Alabama Democratic Campaign Committee." Sat. 5-29-48

Horace Wilkinson, elector nominee and rally chairman, presided. Locke brought the meeting to a close with a warning not to take the outcome of Tuesday's runoff primary "for granted" and a plea to get out the vote.

State Democratic Chairman Noted As Lawyer But Not Politician, Attack On Hill Shows

34d Fri. BY FRED TAYLOR 6-4-48

TAYLOR

Gessner T. McCorvey is not only chairman of the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee. He is an outstanding Mobile lawyer and a highly respected man. And he is an affable, likable fellow.

But he is not a politician. He proved that in Birmingham just one week ago—three days before the Democratic runoff primary.

It may be that Mr. McCorvey, who successfully led the walkout movement in Alabama to help 14 delegate candidates aligned with him get elected, wanted to get something off his chest more than he wanted to win a place for himself on the delegation to the Democratic National Convention.

The official canvass of returns in Tuesday's election may still give McCorvey a place on the 26-member group going to Philadelphia. But complete unofficial returns show he was edged out for a delegate-at-large place by Atty. Gen. Albert Carmichael.

POLITICAL IMPRUDENCE—As all now know, the McCorvey walkout ticket swept the runoff election, winning nine of 11 places at stake. One of these was won by a candidate neither publicly pledged for nor against a walkout at Philadelphia as the most effective method of opposing President Truman's "civil rights" measures. The News

If Carmichael, who campaigned against a walkout, is declared winner over McCorvey, he will be the sole victor of opposition forces in the runoff election. Birmingham, Ala.

It was nothing McCorvey said about Carmichael that resulted in the state chairman's apparent defeat. He made no mention of him. Fri. 6-4-48

It was his verbal assault on Sen. Lister Hill, who opposes a walkout and who led the field of delegate-at-large candidates in the first primary to win without a runoff, that observers agree proved McCorvey's undoing.

His attack on Sen. Hill, not even a candidate in the runoff, was regarded as nothing less than political imprudence, to put it mildly.

COULD HAVE LED TICKET—It was at a statewide Democratic dinner rally, held here last Friday night to honor McCorvey and accentuate the walkout campaign, that the state chairman let Hill have both barrels. McCorvey already had been nominated an anti-Truman pledged presidential elector.

One of McCorvey's close friends said he sought to dissuade him assailing the senior senator, notwithstanding their conflicting political views. He and a number of others close to McCorvey feel this probably not only knocked the state chairman out of the delegate-at-large race. They believe he would have led the runoff ticket on which three other walkout-pledged candidates — J. Miller Bonner, Hardy Riddle and Albert Stapp—were elected, had he not singled out Hill to lambast. Fri. 6-4-48

What McCorvey did was to lay down the gauntlet for a finish fight with Alabama's senior senator. For one thing, he told the rally crowd at the Tutwiler Hotel he suspected Hill of being behind an attempt to force his resignation as state Democratic chairman. The News

Sen. Hill, who returned to Alabama last week-end, made no comment on this. But Louis A. Eckl, editor of The Florence Times, said it was he and not Hill who wrote a labor resolution asking McCorvey's resignation.

Apparently McCorvey had become irritated over a statement attributed to the senator characterizing a proposal by the state chairman as "both stupid and ridiculous." McCorvey said he had never called on Hill to resign for any of his acts, but he hinted at further political warfare with the senator when he declared:

"Sen. Hill's term has only two more years to run and I think we ought to let him serve out his two years." Birmingham, Ala.

* * *

WORK ON McCORVEY—Sen. Hill made no comment publicly about McCorvey's remarks. But he spent the week-end in Alabama, leaving Birmingham Monday afternoon for Washington.

It is no secret, however, that the senator's lieutenants got busy and knocked a lot of votes off McCorvey.

Result was that Bonner was runoff ticket leader and McCorvey was nosed out by Carmichael in the seven-man race for four places. Fri. 6-4-48

ELLIS FOR CHAIRMAN—Walkout forces, who have a majority on the delegation, with 14 of 26 places, had planned to pick McCorvey for chairman.

Sen. Hill and former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, also a walkout opponent who won first primary election, also have been mentioned to head the delegation.

But indications now are that Handy Ellis, former lieutenant-governor and walkout-pledged first primary winner, will be chosen chairman.

Delegates Vs. Electors

All of Alabama's delegates to the National Democratic Convention and the state's Democratic electors are in complete harmony in opposition to federal legislation on the poll tax, lynching, segregation and fair-employment practices, but beyond that point the divergences are wide and the resultant confusion is deep.

Developments over the week-end tended only to increase the confusion. Atty. Gen. A. A. Carmichael, who refused to sign a pledge to bolt the convention, was officially declared winner of a delegate-at-large seat over Gessner T. McCorvey, state party chairman and a leader of the bolters. But Mr. McCorvey made use of his telegram of congratulations to the winner to remind the delegates to the convention that the party's Alabama electors are pledged not to vote for Truman. Birmingham, Ala.

It is very likely that some of the 12 Alabama delegates who refused to sign the bolter pledge will prefer to accept the convention's action rather than bolt the party, even if it nominates Mr. Truman. That course will be in line with their pledge to voters to use their own judgment and discretion in their representation of the state's Democrats. Tues. 6-8-48

. Much depends on what happens at Philadelphia and what happens between now and election time. It is probable that many Alabama Democrats next November will prefer to stick with the party than to help the election of a Republican. The News

President Truman, on a semi-political trip to the West, is said to feel confident of nomination. One correspondent says the president, whose courage is beyond question, expected the Southern dissent with his civil rights program, but thinks that if Southerners took the trouble to study his civil rights message they would find they didn't have much to revolt about. Birmingham, Ala.

That comment of Mr. Truman's strengthens the contention that much of the anti-Truman fight is synthetic, that it is really anti-New Deal, anti-liberal. Much of it is not based on cold analysis of the civil rights message, but on inflamed feelings. 6-8-48

There is still the possibility, therefore, that as time brings better perspective and cooler heads, the Democrats of Alabama may be more willing to abide by the results of the Philadelphia convention, less willing to split the party. In that case, it may well be that some of the electors, whose pledge to bolt was made not to the voters as a whole but only to an individual or, at best, to a committee, will begin to wonder how they best can discharge their duties. Arnall Rapped For Prediction On 'Revolt'

The Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Mon. 5-17-48

Prominent Alabama Democrats Sunday scored Ellis Arnall, Georgia's ex-Governor, for predicting a softening in the Southern revolt against President Truman's civil rights program, according to AP reports.

Eugene Connor, of Birmingham, one of Alabama's four delegates-at-large to the Democratic National Convention, said: "Arnall isn't a Southern Democrat and I don't see by what authority he speaks for one."

Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham attorney and one of Alabama's 11 electors to the Electoral College, said: "It makes no difference whether convention delegates walk out, stay in, stand up or lie down. The 11 electoral votes of Alabama will not be cast for President Truman," 5-17-48

CLARIFICATION

Editor, The Advertiser:

In line with your invitation in Friday's Advertiser, I would like to clarify my stand as a candidate for presidential elector.

To classify me under the general heading, "Will make up mind after both conventions over," does not reveal my views as clearly as seems desirable, though I recognize the diffculty in simplifying this complex issue. The Advertiser

. . . Virtually all people believe they are voting directly for president or mean to indicate that they favor the nominee of the national party, by voting for the electors of that party. That has been true in the past and will be true this year to almost the same extent, despite any efforts that may be made to draw the highly technical line of demarcation. . . .

I could not in March and cannot now sign the Horace Wilkinson pledge to withhold my mid-December electoral vote from any man. The people of Alabama may decide in November that he is preferable to the Republican nominee or to Henry Wallace. Montgomery, Ala.

It is clear to me that I had no moral right to make such a pledge. The people of Alabama should have complete freedom of choice as to a president. Anything less is not much democracy. Sun.

I do pledge to cast my electoral vote for the choice of the people of Alabama as expressed in November. 5-2-48

A Cloudy Political Picture

The News

The post-election analysts are not having an easy time explaining all the things that happened in Tuesday's Democratic primary. There is no simple, or single, explanation. A factor that may account for the results in one race falls flat in another.

Judging by the results, several forces were at work. One was a desire to keep in the United States Senate a man who has brought honor there to the state and nation. In no other way can one account for the heartening and stupendous victory given Sen. John Sparkman over four opponents. Birmingham, Ala.

The election means a definite loss in prestige for Gov. James Folsom. In the first real personal test he has had since he was elected governor, he failed signally to hold to the strength he had previously shown. His candidates for U. S. senator and national Democratic committeeman were defeated by large majorities. His slates in the races for delegate and elector were generally beaten.

Using returns compiled up to this morning and from nearly two-thirds of the state's 2,358 boxes, it appears that of the 16 candidates for delegate-at-large expected to be in the runoff, only five bore Folsom endorsements. Although the governor gave official blessing to 13 of the 28 candidates for elector, the best any of the 13 could do, on the incomplete returns, was to rank eighth. The last seven positions early today were held by men Folsom had endorsed. Folsom will be in the runoff, but he certainly has failed to gain the prestige necessary to cut any weight at all in his presidential aspirations.

It is not possible yet to count the governor out, but he is now likely to be much less of a political power. He has a following, but he cannot command, at will, a majority. Thurs 5-6-48

The results of the election also indicate that the anti-Truman civil rights forces in Alabama won a substantial victory by concentrating on limited objectives. What good that will do them remains to be seen.

In the last few days before the election, a slate sponsored by the "States Rights-Jeffersonian Democrats" received wide publicity. It was advertised extensively, and mimeographed slips carrying the names of the candidates on the slate were distributed freely among voters. The concentration of effort was successful. Of the eight candidates on the slate for delegate-at-large, the lowest placed 14th at the halfway mark in the count. The slate's candidates for elector fared even better at the same stage of the tally. They appeared to have captured 10 of the top 11 places, losing only the ninth. Their 11th man placed 15th. The News

This concentration sent down to ignominious defeat candidates who followed the same general line of the "States Rights-Jeffersonian Democrats." For example, just as the top 10 positions in the elector race seemed to have been won by bolters, so also the last four positions appeared to be theirs.

Another point to be noted is the evident popularity of Sen. Lister Hill. Mr. Hill probably was under fire more heavily than any other man in the delegate-at-large race. Yet unofficial returns from more than half the state show him leading the ticket. Birmingham, Ala.

Although the June 1 runoff will be necessary to determine matters finally, it seems likely that Alabama will send to the national convention a delegation composed of both bolters and non-bolters, with the former in the majority. If the unit rule is enforced, Alabama may lose representation in the convention at a crucial time. The electors may all be pledged to vote against Truman in any circumstances. The hope of the bolters in that case will be to throw the election into the House of Representatives, where they might effect a stampede for some popular hero like Eisenhower. That is a rather forlorn hope. Thurs. 5-6-48

In a post-election radio interview, Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, of the State Democratic Committee, implied that he was prepared for a Republican victory this year. In that confession one reads the full force of the desperation of many of the bolters. They would carry their hostility to Truman to the extent of preferring a Republican administration, with the GOP record of caring little for Southern feelings or attitudes.

Voice Of The People

Folly Of 'Revolt'

To the Editor of The News:

Alabama party leaders are asking candidates to sign pledges that they (if elected as delegates to the convention) will bolt the Democratic convention if it adopts a civil rights plank or if Mr. Truman is nominated by the convention. The News

I would like to know why the men who now holler "revolt" were silent when the 1944 Democratic convention adopted a similar plank? Which way are the "walking" delegates headed? If they organize a new party, it will certainly rank along with the present "third party" as a minority party. Its nominee cannot hope to be a serious contender for the presidency. Birmingham Ala.

No candidate then will likely receive a majority in the electoral college and the choice of a president will go to the House of Representatives, which happens to be predominantly Republican. The result is obvious—the inauguration of a Republican president in January, 1949. Mon. 4-19-48

Republicans believe, as Hamilton did, in a strong centralized government. Democrats follow Jefferson and Jackson and believe in states' rights. Seems that we need a Democratic (states' rights) Congress more than anything else.

But if voters are to have no choice except the Republican Party in November, then why must we take the devious trail behind bolting delegates?

Alabama Shows Way to Real Revolt

Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON—As affecting the ultimate selection of the next President of the United States, the most decisive event so far is the seemingly sure nomination in Alabama's Democratic primary, Tuesday, of 11 presidential electors solidly pledged against President Truman. By this action Mr. Truman is excluded from the regular Democratic column on the Alabama ballot and this almost certainly means that he will lose the electoral vote of that State. 5-7-48

And because there had been more resistance to the anti-Truman movement in Alabama than in most other Southern States, its popularly voted determination to bolt is taken to indicate that at least five other States—South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Arkansas and Virginia—will go the same way. Altogether, these States cast 60 electoral votes. Fri. 5-7-48

After a decision of the Alabama Supreme Court, that State's presidential electors are not committed to vote for the national nominees of their party, a group of candidates for Democratic elector, including every one of the 11 now chosen, signed a public manifesto, as follows:

"First—We will not cast our electoral votes for Harry S. Truman for President.

"Second—If the Philadelphia convention adopts a program hostile to the fundamental principles on which our civilization is based or nominates a candidate for President who advocates such hostile principles, we will not cast our votes for the nominee of that convention but will cast our electoral votes for some Democrat who understands and sympathizes with the peculiar racial problems of the South.

". . . If the Philadelphia convention fails to disavow the Truman so-called 'civil rights program' or if the candidates nominated by that convention fail to disavow that program, such nominees should not be regarded as the nominees of the Democratic Party of Alabama and we shall not be obligated in any way to vote for such candidates."

In addition to choosing electors thus committed, most of the candidates for convention delegates leading in the State primary are pledged to walk out if a platform plank favoring the "civil rights program" is adopted. Final returns on that phase must await a run-off primary on June 1. The Constitution

Sen. Lister Hill, running ahead for delegate-at-large, opposed President Truman but argued against bolting the Party on the ground that this might throw Alabama to the Republicans. But running next after Hill is Eugene (Bull) Connor, the Birmingham Police Commissioner who arrested Sen. Glen Taylor, vice presidential running mate of Henry A. Wallace, for defiance of the city's race segregation rules.

Leaders of the Southern movement against Truman are divided as to whether to bolt the convention over the platform plank, or to remain to cast their votes against nomination of President Truman. In Alabama this issue will be decided by the rank and file of Democratic voters in their final selection of convention delegates. Atlanta, Ga.

Either way the Southern States are expected to name in some fashion a candidate —perhaps Sen. Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, or Sen. Walter F. George, of Georgia—to be voted for by their electors in lieu of Mr. Truman. Fri. 5-7-48

While only the six States above named are enlisted so far in the anti-Truman drive, its effects are expected to extend farther. Texas probably will join the movement fully, and Louisiana and Florida may do so. Many politicians from Tennessee and Virgina are predicting that, whether or not these States list the Southern anti-Truman candidate on their ballots, they are likely to go Republican on account of the Party split.

In 1944, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey polled 39 percent of the votes in Tennessee and 38 percent in Virgina. Entry of Henry Wallace already has divided the Democratic presidential vote in these States.

Alabama Democrats today had approved the walkout movement and administered another jolting defeat to Gov. Folsom.

But State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, leader of the walkout plan to combat President Truman and his "civil rights" measures, appeared in danger of defeat for a place on Alabama's delegation to the Democratic National Convention.

Birmingham News

FOLSOM SICK, ABED

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 2—(AP)—Gov. James E. Folsom, apparently defeated in his race for delegate to the National Democratic Convention, remained at home today nursing an infected throat.

Mrs. Folsom said the governor woke up about midnight with a high fever and sore throat. He was ordered by his doctor to stay in bed today and rest, she said.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

Gov. Folsom, who opposed a walkout and who ran poorly in the first primary, took a severe drubbing in yesterday's runoff to come in last in the seven-man delegate-at-large race.

Walkout-pledged Candidates J. Miller Boner, Hardy Riddle and Albert Stapp were leading in that order and apparently had won three of the four at-large places on the delegation. Wed. 6-2-48

Atty. Gen. Albert Carmichael, who is committed against Truman and "civil rights" but who opposed a walkout, was running in fourth place ahead of McCorvey.

Latest returns, however, had narrowed Carmichael's margin over McCorvey to only five votes to make this a neck-and-neck tussle.

Joe J. Money, who opopsed a walkout, was in sixth place, with Folsom trailing him.

Jefferson County voters gave lopsided majorities to H. M. Abercrombie and Jess Edwards, favoring a walkout, for the two Ninth District delegate places.

AND IN THE JEFFERSON RACES for County Commission president and Circuit Court judge, W. D. Kendrick and Judge Alta King won decisive margins.

Returns from 1,882 of the state's 2,368 boxes in the delegate-at-large race showed:

Bonner	100,252
Riddle	97,281
Stapp	96,251
Carmichael	91,686
McCorvey	91,681
Money	77,005
Folsom	64,427

6-2-48

THOSE OPPOSING a convention walkout centered their fire on McCorvey as the spearhead of this movement.

Observers were inclined to the belief McCorvey's attack on Sen. Lister Hill, who opposed a walkout and who led the field of 24 candidates May 4 to win a delegate-at-large place without a runoff, is likely to cost the party chairman a place on the delegation.

Are The Bolters Hesitating?

Birm.

At the week-end meeting in Montgomery of walkout delegates to the National Democratic Convention there was growing talk, as noticed by Reporter Hugh Sparrow, to the effect that the bolters might be weakening in their resolution to leave the convention if President Truman is nominated, on a platform acceptable to them. It was also hinted that even the state's electors, now sworn never to vote for Mr. Truman, might reconsider if a favorable civil rights plank is adopted. Tues 6-15

Thus there are additional signs of a steady deterioration of the walkout position. Ever since it became obvious that only a minority of Democratic delegates from the South would carry their opposition to Truman to the bitter end, the bolters have been faced with the problem of how to make their protests most effective. They have failed to make the revolt Southwide. They must content themselves with partial victories.

In view of the disaffection in the South with the Truman civil rights proposals, it is very probable that the 1948 civil rights plank of the party's platform will be so worded as to be acceptable to all but the most irreconcilable of the bolters. The 1944 plank violated few Southern feelings. It is hardly to be expected that this year's platform would prove so wholly obnoxious as to justify a general desertion of the national party.

Already the bolters among the delegates are asking themselves what they will do if an acceptable platform is adopted but Mr. Truman is nominated. Will they walk out immediately, thereby leaving to alternate delegates or to an incomplete delegation the duty of representing the state in the choice of a vice presidential candidate? The indications are growing that at least some of them will stay.

34d

Thereby they would be giving a measure of acceptance to the nomination of Mr. Truman. They might find themselves in a position where for the sake of national party harmony it would seem better to abide by the results of the convention.

Birmingham News

In a way that might look like going back on a promise, but a promise made in the heat of a campaign, under special stresses and pressures, might not be considered absolutely binding in the light of changed and unforeseeable conditions. It was very evident in the primary elections that voters were influenced to a considerable extent by personalities rather than by issues. Voters marked their ballots in large degree for men they thought they could trust to do the wise thing when the time for action came. That confidence remains.

One may still hope, therefore, that Alabama's delegates at Philadelphia will take a sane and sober and moderate and realistic view of the political situation and will not follow the extreme course advocated by some of them.

Delegate Race Shapes Up

Birmingham News

Ten days from now Alabama Democrats must again go to the polls to complete the selection of delegates to the national party convention. That election on June 1 will provide a more clear-cut evidence of sentiment than was obtained from the May 4 balloting. Fri

Here is how matters stand at present:

Already elected, 15 delegates, five pledged to walk out if the Truman civil rights program is included in the platform, six who refused to sign the pledge, and four noncommittal.

Candidates for delegate to be voted on June 1, 21 (one candidate dropped out). Of these 21, 11 are pledged to walk out, eight refused to pledge, and two are uncommitted. From these 21, 11 must be selected.

Birmingham, Ala.

Thus it is possible for Alabama to send to the convention a delegation having a majority pledged to walk out or one having a majority that refused to pledge. Or there could be a delegation in which the balance of power was held by those not committed. June 1 will tell the tale. 5-21-48

Although in most cases the runoff candidates who got the most votes in the first primary are "bolters," it does not follow that their election June 1 is absolutely certain.

That uncertainty is illustrated in Jefferson County. There were three "bolter" candidates from this district. Two led the ticket. The other ran far down. The rest of the vote was scattered among six candidates who refused to pledge a bolt and one who was noncommittal. The two top candidates got 40.3 per cent of the vote. They will hold their strength, presumably. Whether they will do more is a question. Certainly the votes of the great majority of those objecting to the plan to walk out of the convention will be cast for the other two delegates. Supporters of the two non-bolters in the runoff, Wallace C. Johns and Robert W. (Bob) Gwin, consider they have a good chance to win.

Fri. 5-21-48

Similar situations may be found throughout the state. In the race for the remaining four places of delegate-at-large the non-bolters include State Atty. Gen. A. A. Carmichael, Gov. Folsom and Joe J. Money, Birmingham. Carmichael lacked only about 9,000 votes of being elected in the first primary and is considered almost a certainty for election on June 1.

Thus there are good chances of electing a delegation which will be dominated by Democrats who believe in fighting the South's battles in the convention to the very end.

SO THEY PLAYED IT

The election in Alabama, which constituted the first official act of Southern rebellion, was prominently displayed on the first pages of papers in other states.

The Stassen-Taft vendetta in Ohio broke at the same time and in most cases was accorded tophead play. The Alabama election, of course, was secondary.

The New York Times gave it a two-column play beneath the fold under a head—"Anti-Truman Candidates Leading in Alabama Voting For Delegates."

"IF WALLACE IS A COMMUNIST"

Editor, The Advertiser:

A few hundred people who believed formly that citizens of Alabama have a right to vote for or against Henry A. Wallace and everything he stands for have joined together to form the Progressive Party of Alabama, in accordance with the laws of Alabama. 5-8-48

The names of 11 electors pledged to Wallace and Taylor will appear on the November ballot, and those who join the Progressive Party will do what they can between now and then to present the issues for which Wallace stands as they are seen by those who believe in them.

Nothing less than this is fair. Nothing less than this is right. Nothing less than this is democratic. The Advertiser

Every conceivable effort has been made by those who oppose Wallace to smear him as an impractical dreamer, as an appeaser in the Chamberlain tradition, even as that most unsavory of all political creatures, a Kremlinized Communist . . .

If Wallace is an appeaser, he is an appeaser in the tradition of the founders of the great religious faiths. Wallace believes that if our actions, national and international, are based on compassion, tolerance, understanding, and adherence to the rules of fair play, lasting world peace can be achieved. He further believes that the American people are capable of a better, fuller expression of these virtues than is being shown in the actions of the present administration, or by the actions and policies of the Democratic or Republican parties . . .

If Henry Wallace is a Communist, then we have had several glorious figures in our history who were—of all things—Communists. But Henry Wallace is not a Communist. A Communist—in the now generally accepted usage of the term—is a man who believes in the overthrow of the government of the United States by violence, or in objectively, willfully betraying the United States into the hands of the Kremlin. . . Montgomery, Ala.

If Henry Wallace is a Communist because Communists will vote for him, then Truman is a Fascist because Fascists will vote for him, and Roosevelt was a Japaness because Japanese voted for him. The argument is unworthy of the minds of sensible people, and is typical only of the minds of people who have been stampeded into a state of hysteria. The government of the United States will never be overthrown by negligence, or panic, the fundamental principles upon which that government stands. Sat. 5-8-48

This is not a time to think quickly or casually of what sort of behaviour the principles of democracy and of our different faiths in God demand of us. It is a time for careful thinking, for deep self-analysis. We have won the right to one more chance for permanent peace. We may not have another.

Finally, it is my own deep personal conviction that if under the conditions which exist today in the world, with the present background of efforts at compromise, negotiation, plan, and connivance, men bring upon themselves another great war, God will never forgive us, and our civilization will surely be destroyed.

Voters And Electors

The News

Candidates for presidential elector in next week's Alabama Democratic primary are finding themselves in somewhat of a predicament. Here, as in the campaign for delegate seats in the party's national convention, the issue springs largely from President Truman's civil rights proposals.

Eleven electors are to be named. There are 28 candidates. Of these, 21 more than a month ago gave their pledge to Horace Wilkinson, one of their number, not to vote for Truman in any case, should he be the party's nominee, nor to vote for any candidate who may approve of the Truman position on these issues. There are only seven who are unpledged. Birmingham

Since the 21 elector candidates made these promises to Mr. Wilkinson in the middle of March, there has been much change in the political situation. It is certain now that some, perhaps most, of the state's delegation to the convention will be composed of unpledged delegates. The only promises which bind them are the promises they have made to the voters to oppose in the convention any plank calling for federal legislation in the civil rights issues and to work for the nomination of that man most likely to be sympathetic to the special interests of the South, while not forgetting the welfare of all the nation. Tues. 4-27-48

Suppose the state's Democrats send to the convention an unpledged delegation.

And suppose Mr. Truman is the nominee. Suppose also that a majority of Democrats want to vote for the party nominee. What then? Especially if there are only seven elector candidates not pledged against Mr. Truman.

To avoid any such dilemma, candidates would do well to withdraw their pledge of March. They can do so in all good conscience. Many candidates for delegates who had first surrendered their freedom of action have withdrawn their commitments. Candidates for elector can still do so, and should. The News

As matters stand now, there are only seven candidates for presidential elector who are free to carry out the expressed wishes of the voters. But 11 must be picked. Voters, therefore, who desire to name electors who have not been pledged, can now do no better than vote for seven sure candidates and then pick out four others from the rest of the list. It is to be hoped that enough of the 21 candidates will have the courage to withdraw their pledges to permit freedom-loving Democrats a complete choice. Birmingham

Here, however, are the seven who may be voted for for elector in free conscience. They are, alphabetically: Ala.

Forrest Castleberry, Castleberry.
Bart J. Cowart, Haleyville.
Guy Hanna, Birmingham.
Roy Mayhall, Jasper.
James McCollum, Tuscaloosa.
Herbert Meighan, Gadsden.
Ralfe Searcy, Greenville.

Plan Write-In Election To Beat Die Hard Dixie Rebels

Defender

Chicago, Ill.

MOBILE, Ala.—Alabama Democrats were urged last week to rally behind President Truman and join in a write-in movement whereby voters who favor the party's nominee could have their ballots counted for him.

The plan was offered by State Sen. Joseph N. Langan of Mobile, with the hope of defeating the scheme of the rebellious Dixie political demagogues who gathered in Birmingham, Saturday. Sat.

The gang which met in Birmingham, announced plans to select presidential electors in 15 Southern and border states opposed to President Truman because of his civil rights program. Those now pledged to Truman will have their status changed. 7-24-48

Alabama presidential electors are already pledged to vote against Mr. Truman.

Sen. Langan proposed that party members who favor the President hold a convention in Montgomery, Aug. 16, to name a slate of 11 electors pledged to the nominee of the national Democratic convention.

The move may be the forerunner of a South-wide campaign to oust Negro-hating recalcitrants who are primarily responsible for the South's plight as the nation's number one economic problem.

One prominent Alabaman who does not want his name mentioned said that the Fielding Wrights, James Eastlands, the Horace Wilkinsons, the Ben Laneys, the Frank Dixons, the Gessner McCorveys and their ilk, have embarrased the South throughout the nation and the world. Sat.

Wright, governor of Mississippi, Eastland, U. S. Senator from the backward state, Laney, governor of Arkansas, Wilkinson, ex-Ku Klux Klan lawyer, Dixon, former Alabama governor and McCorvey, head of the Alabama Democratic party, are leaders in the secession movement from the national Democratic party. 7-24-48

Sen. Langan said that the Truman-pledged candidates to oppose the bolters in the November election would run under the banner of the national Democratic party.

The movement already has the support of U. S. Nix, CIO labor leader at Gadsden, Ala. He urged the selection of 11 presidential electors who will support President Truman as the nominee of the Democratic party.

The South's Gains

The News 8-8-48

To the Editor of The News-Age-Herald:

In a recent letter to the "Voice of the People," one of your correspondents questioned what the Democratic Party had done for Alabama and the South. Without entering into the present political controversy I think it might be well to remember just what nearly 16 years of Democratic administration in Washington has meant to Alabama and the South.

Birmingham, Ala.

Has your correspondent forgotten the millions of dollars that went into the Tennessee Valley Authority? Does he have no realization of what the TVA means to Alabama and the South in dollars and cents? Is he unaware of the tremendous amount of industry brought to the South by the inexpensive power generated there? Does he know nothing of the tremendous gains made by the farmers in that district as a direct result of the soil conservation service of the TVA? Does he believe for one moment that the Republican Party would have ever built the TVA? If he talked with the farmers and business men of that area I think he might change his mind.

Does your correspondent who questions what the Democratic Party has done for the South realize that nearly every school building built in Alabama during the last 16 years was built partly with Yankee dollars appropriated by a Democratic Congress? Is he aware of the city streets and highways built in large proportion by federal funds appropriated by a Democratic Congress? Is he aware of the tremendous amount of money spent in the South for soil conservation and reforestation appropriated by a Democratic administration? Is he unaware of the great material benefits received by Alabama farmers, both large and small, from the AAA and the FSA? Has he any realization of the great increase in per capita income which has come to the South in the last 16 years? 8-8-48

The above list only skims over the top. A real report on the advantages the South has gained from 16 years of Democratic administration would consume many volumes.

Does your correspondent realy believe that the Republicans would have treated us half so well? I don't see how he can. Sun.

Expansion Plans Drafted, Rushton Presides At Meeting Here

By ATTICUS MULLIN

The Alabama States Rights organization meeting here yesterday, determined to spread into every one of the 67 counties of Alabama, and to raise funds to "protect the civilization of the South wherever attacked." Jesse M. Williams, Jr., of Montgomery, was named treasurer at a meeting and Col. Marion Rushton presided.

The Alabama States Rights committee is composed of Col. Rushton, chairman; Donald Comer, vice-chairman; and a district chairman from each of the nine congressional districts of Alabama. Meeting here Friday were all of these men with the exception of Donald Comer, of Birmingham, and Tom Abernethy, of Talladega, whose automobile broke down on the way to the meeting. In addition to committee members, former Gov. Frank M. Dixon and Robert Goodwyn, of Montgomery, representing the Southern States Rights organization, were in attendance.

Members from the districts present included Gessner McCorvey, of the Mobile First District; Robert Albritton, of Andalusia, of the Second District; Wallace D. Malone, of Dothan, of the Third District; Walter Lusk, of Guntersville, of the Eighth District; Judge Robert Greene, of Greensboro, of the Sixth District; Charles Wiggins, of Jasper, of the Seventh District; Norman Harris, of the Eighth District; and Sid Smyer, of the Ninth District.

The unanimous decision at the meeting was that the State Rights movement is a long range movement. "We intend," said Chairman Rushton, who is also Democratic national committeeman, "to raise money to fight for our Southern rights whether in the Democratic National Convention, a state convention, in the courts, in Congress, or wherever we are attacked. Our meeting had nothing to do with opposition to Truman, which seems to be unanimous in Alabama. We intend to fight in the future and to be organized to fight because we are going to be attacked from now on." 7-3-48

COL. MARION RUSHTON

The sentiment at the meeting was that the people of Alabama are 90 per cent behind the States Rights movement and no trouble in raising funds is anticipated.

Truman Loses And Wins

34d

Alabama Democrats Tuesday voiced again their strong opposition to President Truman, but elsewhere in the nation the possibility of stopping the president's bid for nomination grew slimmer.

While Alabama Democrats were piling up a substantial although not overwhelming majority for "walkout" delegates, Democrats in Maryland, California and North Dakota were choosing delegates pledged or instructed to support Mr. Truman. This gives Mr. Truman a total of pledged or claimed votes of 597, just 21 short of the 618 needed for nomination.

Birmingham, Ala.

The stop-Truman movement has not succeeded nationally. There is still a slim hope that a stampede for some popular hero like Eisenhower might sweep over the convention, but that hope has been rather steadily waning as more and more states selected Democratic delegates favorable to Mr. Truman.

Not even all the South can be counted in the camp of those who will oppose Truman to the end. The delegations from Tennessee and Texas have been instructed to stay in the convention and to support its nominees. Maryland, a border state, is for Truman. Kentucky's uninstructed delegation contains some Truman supporters.

Thu. 6-3-48

What, then, will the Alabama delegation do? A majority of its members are pledged to walk out of the convention if Truman is nominated. But others were elected on a non-walkout pledge. In view of the fact that the whole delegation will not likely walk out, what will be gained if some of them do?

The divided character of the Alabama delegation will be a sign of the divided sentiment behind them. The state is broadly united in opposition to federal legislation on the controversial issues in President Truman's civil rights program. But it is not united on the manner and degree of that opposition. Tuesday's campaign should not be indicated as showing unanimity.

Appeals to Ala. Democrats To Save Dixie Traditions

(34a)

Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa

Sat. 1-31-48

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—In session here Monday, the Alabama State Democratic Executive Committee heard appeals from its chairman, Gessener T. McCorvey, of Mobile that delegates be elected to the National Nominating Convention who would oppose the core features of the Civil Rights Report and make a determined stand on issues affecting the traditions of the South.

McCorvey, one of the architects of the "Boswell Amendment (which requires that a prospective voter understand and explain any portion of the Federal Constitution to the satisfaction of the board of registrars)," aimed many of his blows at Gov. James E. Folsom who is understood to be leading a quiet campaign to select a slate of liberal delegates.

SHOOK NEGROES HANDS

Criticism was voiced against Folsom for shaking hands with Negro listeners in the Black Belt and other South Alabama counties during his successful campaign against the "Self-Starter" amendment which would have permitted the Legislature to call itself back into session. Sat. 1-31-48

Folsom won the campaign despite the injection of the "Negro vote" issue and the "higher education for Negroes" question into the campaign.

Pictures were made of Folsom shaking hands with Negroes but were not reproduced when Folsom said he did not have any objections to the publication of them.

McCorvey, in his letter to committee members calling the Jan. 26 meeting, said that it was necessary to select stand-by-the-South delegates to the July 12 convention in Philadelphia "in view of the unwise and anti-Southern report of the President's Committee on Civil Right."

SCORES COMMITTEE

He further outlined his ideas of the duties of pro-segregation delegates as:

1. To fight to the limit to prevent inclusion in our platform of any theories of government recommended by this committee appointed by the President.

2. Make clear that "in the South two entirely different races have lived together side by side, in peace and harmony," is by virtue, of our segregation laws.

3. Wage a "miiltant fight to prevent our party in national convention asembled from adopting resolutions or planks in the platform of our party which will be practically unbearable to those of us living in the South."

Hill, Sparkman Laud Primm On His Civil Rights Stand

Montgomery, Ala. - Advertiser

(34a)

William J. Primm, Jr., of Washington and Montgomery, who was appointed as assistant by Chairman J. Howard McGrath of the Democratic National Committee Wednesday, asserted he was opposed to Congress enacting into law the president's civil rights program. Fri. 5-28-48

At the same time, on a telegram to The Advertiser, Alabama Senators Lister Hill and John Sparkman praised Primm's appointment and said he stood "squarely with the people of Alabama in their opposition to the so-called civil rights program."

Accepting the appointment as assistant to Chairman McGrath, Primm stated:

"I am very happy to accept the responsibility of the assignment and of being placed in a position to do whatever I can for my party. I highly appreciate the confidence which Senator McGrath has placed in me through my appointment, and I have assured him of my wholehearted support and cooperation in his efforts to unite and organize our party for victory in November."

Shoulder To Wheel

Earlier he was reported as saying that Democrats must put their shoulders to the wheel "to insure that the record of progressive liberalism made by Democratic administrations since 1932 will be continued." 5-28-48

In their telegram commending the appointment of Primm, Senators Hill and Sparkman said:

"Mr. Primm as a prominent official of the Young Democrats has done much work with the Democratic National Committee in the past. He has demonstrated his ability and devotion. He stands squarely with the people of Alabama in their opposition to the so-called civil rights program. We are happy that he is to have such a responsible position with the Democratic National Committee and that Alabama has been given this recognition."

Primm was asked now he stood on the president's civil rights program, and he replied that he was opposed to the enactment by the United States Congress of any laws pertaining to such matters, as he considered such methods a direct infringement upon the constitutional rights of the states. Advertiser

He said there were some things in the civil rights program which he agreed upon, but that in his opinion such matters should be handled by the legislative bodies of the several states rather than through the National Congress.

For instance, Primm said that he was opposed to the poll tax as a prerequisite of voting in Alabama, but he strongly believed that it is up to the people of Alabama and their legislature to repeal the poll tax themselves rather than to have it forced upon them by the National Congress.

(34a)

Tax Repealed

Most of the states in the South have already repealed the poll tax, he said, and the others, he thinks, would do likewise if they were let alone. 5-28-48

When asked if his political thinking was liberal or conservative, Primm stated he did not know what the meaning of the term liberal or conservative was, as applied nowadays, but he said that he was for progressive government and was opposed to reaction of any kind wherever it might be found. 5-28-48

Primm was appointed an assistant to McGrath in what the committee chairman called a reorganization of the executive division of the Democratic National ommittee. 7-21

Several other assistants will be appointed, McGrath said, and they will take over the duties formerly handled by Gael Sullivan, who recently resigned as committee executive director.

Results Of The Runoff

Birmingham News

Returns from the runoff primary indicate clearly that opposition to proposed federal intervention in state affairs still runs deep and strong in Alabama. Although all the candidates for Democratic National Convention delegates were on record as vigorously opposed to the Truman program of federal legislation on a number of civil rights issues, the voters favored, on the whole, those candidates who carried their opposition to the Truman program to the point of pledging to walk out of the convention if any part of the program is incorporated in the party's 1948 platform or if President Truman is nominated.

Birmingham, Ala.

34a

There were 11 delegate places at stake in yesterday's voting. Nine of the winners, on the basis of returns from 73 per cent of the precincts, are pledged to walk out. One is uncommitted. The other place may have been won by Atty. Gen. A. A. Carmichael, who refused to sign the pledge to bolt. Only a small margin, however, separated him from Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey at this writing. Wed. 6-2-48

Of the state's 26 delegates to Philadelphia, 14 probably will be for a walkout, seven will be against it and five are not committed, if Carmichael keeps his lead over McCorvey. If the latter eventually wins out, the delegation will be made up of 15 bolters, six against and five not committed.

Thus it is not possible for the bolters to claim that an overwhelming preponderance of Alabama Democrats are willing to split with the party if things go against them. The most that the bolters can claim is that a majority of the voters e definitely so willing, at present. 6-2-48

There may be some significance also in the fact that Mr. McCorvey has either been defeated or has won by a close vote. Mr. McCorvey was the leader of the bolters' group. He has been the spearhead of the Alabama opposition to the Truman program. He has failed, in any case, to get an overwhelming endorsement of his position.

Wed. 6-2-48

Perhaps the most definite result of the election is the repulse given Gov. Folsom. Mr. Folsom ran last, and a poor last, among the seven candidates for delegate-at-large. The voters have rejected his bid for leadership of the state's delegation at Philadelphia. The results also prove that there are limits to the vote-pulling power of Mr. Folsom's personal appeal. One wonders if Mr. Folsom won or lost any votes by his election eve broadcast in which he talked pleasant trivialities and missed altogether an opportunity to assume a bold and constructive leadership.

And so now Alabama Democrats will send to the national convention a delegation minus the governor and probably also minus the state party chairman. The leadership almost automatically falls upon Sen. Lister Hill and former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, who ran first and second in the first primary. Men of their qualities, supported by the knowledge that they were so widely favored among the candidates for delegate, may be able to give some coherence and harmony to the state's delegation, which now stands divided and confused.

Negro Leaders Score Republicans' Failure

Daily World (34d) Atlanta, Ga.

Tues. 6-22-48

PHILADELPHIA -(NNPA)- Failure of the Republican party to carry out representatives who appeared before the civil rights subcommittee of the Resolutions Committee seeking the inclusion of stronger planks in the 1948 platform.

Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told the subcommittee that "we would be less than honest if we did not say frankly that the members of our organizations have been dis appointed by the complete failure of the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress to enact any of the civil rights legislation pledged in the 1944 platform.

Mr. White recalled that the previous platform "unequivocally pledged enactment of fair employment practice, antilyuching and anti-poll tax legislation." He added that "responsibility for action" had been misarably evaded.

Dr. Channing H. Tobias, of New York, representing the Social Action Committee of the CME Church warned that "The Negroes of this country mark my word, are a solid line such as you've never known before. I'm just not speaking through my hat." Daily World

Mrs. Vita Gates, of Hopkinsville, Kentucky, a committee member, interrupted too ask if that was "a considered statement or a threat."

Dr. Tobias replied that it was his considered statement but that "it may be interpreted as a threat." He added that "never before in the history of this country has there been such unity and determination on the part of the colored people to make American citizenship, in all that the word connotes, apply to them as well as to other people."

OPINION UNANIMOUS 6-22-48

W. C. Meekins of Ashland, North Carolina, another committee member remarked that the acts against colored people, of which Dr. Tobias complained, were largely committed in statts controlled by Democrats. Atlanta, Ga.

Orville Bullington, the six-foot Texans who wanted to serve on the civil rights subcommittee because of the importance of the civil rights 'ssue, interjected: "And I've heard no condemnation of the Democrats here today." Atlanta, Ga.

This later remark brought Mr. White to his feet with a statement that colored leaders will testify concerning the Democratic platform later. Daily World

Chief Justice George W. Maxey of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, chairman of the civils rights subcommittee, wondered how a fair employment practice law would be enforced--he compared it to prohibition--but hastily told Mr. White and Dr. Tobias: 6-22-48

Don't think we're antagonistic, Nobody in the world could be any more in favor on equal rights than I am, When a colored man is lynched, the whole United States Army ought to protect that man." Tues.

Mr. White and Dr. Tobias said they were representing twenty-one national colored business, church, professional, labor and civic organizations, with a total membership of 6,084,000.

The Runoff And The Walkout

The walkout issue remains in the runoff Tuesday, but much of the heat and point seems to have gone out of the controversy. Birmingham, Ala.

Alabama's elector nominees are all pledged against voting for President Truman and any candidate supporting a civil rights program similar to that advanced by the chief executive. Those elector candidates who did not receive outright majorities in the first primary, but were among the first 11, became nominees by the withdrawal of the others who qualified for a runoff. As all were pledged against President Truman, there was no great issue among the candidates. So the 11 electors have been chosen and they are committed.

Just what they will do when the electoral votes are cast is a question still to be answered. Much can happen politically between now and November and events will doubtless have their influence on Alabama's electors. Sun. 5-30-48

But Alabama still has to choose 11 of its 26 delegates to the national convention.

Four at-large delegates have been chosen, four still are to be picked. One of the eight who qualified for this runoff withdrew. Of the seven in the race, four gave the so-called walkout pledge, State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, J. M. Bonner, D. Hardy Riddle and Albert Stapp; and three did not, Gov. Folsom, Atty. Gen. Carmichael and Joe J. Money.

Eleven district delegates have been selected, seven are to be chosen Tuesday.

Of the 15 delegates in all named already, five are pledged against Mr. Truman, six refused to give the pledge and four took no definite position on this issue.

Of the 21 candidates for the 11 places to be filled Tuesday, 11 are pledged, eight refused and two made no commitment.

It is obvious, then, that the delegation will be split insofar as the original walkout issue is concerned. That fact in itself raises further doubts about a walkout, whether any will come at all, whether it would be worth while with only a part of the delegation participating.

It has been suggested that pledged delegates may merely remain in their seats, without taking active part in the convention, if an unacceptable civil rights platform plank is adopted and Mr. Truman is nominated. Otherwise alternate delegates might take the seats of walkers.

Obviously, then, much of the point in this walkout business now has vanished, but nevertheless non-pledged delegates will be in the best position to serve their party, state and nation. The News

Robert W. Gwin and Wallace C. Johns are the unpledged candidates for delegate from the Ninth (Jefferson County) Congressional District. Birmingham, Ala.

It still seems highly likely that President Truman will be nominated, despite the opposition of many Southern delegates. Thus the projected walkouts may turn out to have little significance in the convention. Sun. 5-30-48

And, of course, if high Republican hopes are fulfilled, the GOP presidential nominee may be elected, regardless of the votes of Southern electors. If a Democratic victory should hang on whether or not anti-Truman Democratic electors from the South bolted the party nominee, these electors would, of course, face a very difficult decision.

Alabama Walk Voted For Rights, Truman

(34d) The Constitution

Atlanta, Ga. Thurs. 6-3-48

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 2—(AP)—Alabama Democrats voted Tuesday for their delegates to walk out of the National Convention if President Truman is nominated or if the Party adopts a strong civil rights platform.

The voters also repudiated Governor James E. (Kissing Jim) Folsom, who once was a self-announced "favorite son" candidate for the nomination.

Only one delegate race remained unsettled Wednesday night, with the bulk of returns tabulated from the runoff. The Constitution

Folsom, who withdrew his presidential bid after placing 10th in a field of 24 in the May 4 primary, ran last in a field of seven seeking four places as delegates at large at stake Tuesday. Atlanta, Ga.

Still in doubt was one of the delegate at large places. In this contest only a handful of votes separated State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey and Attorney General Albert A. Carmichael. McCorvey was a leader in the walkout campaign. Carmichael opposed the proposed bolt of the convention. 6-3-48

Three other at-large and six district delegate places were won by candidates pledged to walk out. These nine and the five elected in the May primary give the walkout forces a majority of the 26-man delegation. Thurs.

News Birmingham, Ala.

Alabama Democrats are by no means following unanimously the action of their State Executive Committee in breaking with the national Democratic Party. In fact, the number of those who have not joined the bolters is considerable. And the dissenters include Democratic officials.

34d

Among those who prefer to support the Truman-Barkley ticket instead of the Thurmond-Wright ticket named in the Birmingham "convention," are several elected Democratic officials of Randolph County. Included are Judge of Probate H. M. Brittain, Circuit Court Clerk J. B. Taylor, Tax Assessor Walter J. Bartlett, Sheriff T. C. Kirby, Tax Collector W. Y. Chewning, and A. C. George, the county's representative in the Alabama Legislature. Wed. 7-21-48

The statement of purpose by these officials also expresses their belief "that all people who were candidates or voters in the May or June primaries during 1948 will support the nominees of the Democratic primaries and the Democratic National Convention." That statement presents, in part, an impossibility. The nominees of those primaries include the electors who are pledged not to support the results of the Democratic National Convention. It is impossible, as matters stand now, for Alabama Democrats who wish to cast ballots for the ticket named at Philadelphia to do so. They can vote only for electors who will vote for Thurmond and Wright. It is an impossibility in Alabama to support all the nominees of the Spring primaries and also the national ticket.

Wed. 7-21-48

Many Democratic voters in the state are troubled by this dilemma. It may be possible to find a way out of the situation.

State's Rights Issue Argued By Delegates

Conflicting Views Range From 1944 Plank To Open Slap At Truman

Sat. 6-26-48

By The Associated Press

Alabama delegates to the Democratic national convention differ on strength of a proposed state rights plank in the national platform.

Former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, a delegate at large, had requested opinions from members of the delegation on the platform. Sparks, who opposed a proposed walkout of the convention, has been named to the pre-convention platform sub-committee.

Former Lieut. Gov. Handy Ellis, pledged to walk out, replied that he believed the 1944 civil rights plank should be adopted, with this addition: 6-26-48

"Federal legislation should in no event interfere with the rights reserved to the states and never ceded to the federal government, among which are the regulation of voting, lynching, segregation and employment practices.

"These are recognized as rights reserved to the states."

Connor Emphatic

Birmingham Public Safety Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor, also pledged to walk out, said he opposes the 1944 platform plank, and also "any reference to Truman's so-called 'civil rights' program."

He advocated adoption of the 1928 state's rights plank, which said:

"We demand that the constitutional rights and powers of the States shall be preserved in their full vigor and virtue. We demand a revival of the spirit of local self-government, without which free institutions cannot be preserved." Advertiser

Others replying to Sparks's request were Talladega Probate Judge Hardy Riddle and Albert Stapp, Birmingham, both pledged to walk out of the convention if a strong "civil rights" plank is adopted or President Truman is renominated.

Our Lost Privileges

Riddle said federal "infringement upon the rights of the states should not only be stopped, but some of the powers recently taken away from the States should be returned to them."

"Any platform," Riddle said, "with ambiguous words and phrases who necessitate the withdrawal from the convention of all persons who believe as I do that we are threatened with another carpetbag-scalawag rule."

Stapp said "I want all powers not delegated to the federal government by the Constitution to be preserved for individual states." Sat. 6-26-48

Sparks said he had not yet received the letters on platform suggestions. He said he would comment after receiving them.

It Was Decided May 4, McCorvey Declares In Open Letter

Fri. 6-25-48

In an open letter, addressed to the Alabama delegates and alternates to the Democratic convention, and to the presidential electors, Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, observed:

"I sincerely hope that our delegation to the Philadelphia convention will not mince words in giving that convention to understand that the Democrats of Alabama are simply not going to support Harry S. Truman, or any other candidate who runs on an anti-Southern racial platform.

"I believe that if the convention definitely understands that we are not just bluffing, but that we mean what we say, that there is some chance of Southern rights and traditions being respected, although I realize that our delegates are going to have a difficult task, as in recent years those of us in the South have gone along apparently blindfolded, and taken whatever was handed out to us from Democratic National Headquarters. Naturally, the people at the Democratic National Headquarters have come to think of the South as 'in the bag,' no matter what indignities they wished to heap upon us. 6-25-48

"In our Democratic primary of May 4, participated in by over 300,000 Alabama Democrats, every candidate for presidential elector who even intimated or hinted that he might support Truman if he was our party's nominee was absolutely snowed under by our people.

"If the Philadelphia convention should be so unwise as to nominate Truman, or anyone else advocating his diabolical miscalled civil rights program, then there is no chance for such nominee to receive a single, solitary electoral vote from Alabama. As to that, may I add that 'I know whereof I speak'."

Attached to his letter was the complete list of Alabama delegates, alternates, and electors.

Negro Democrats For Convention Delegation To Root For Truman

By the Associated Press

An Alabama delegate to the Democratic National Convention proposed Friday that the delegation nominate Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower itself.

E. C. (Bud) Boswell, of Geneva, told reporters at Birmingham he opposes yielding to Texas, Kansas or any other state at the start of the roll call of states at Philadelphia.

"Instead, we should nominate Eisenhower ourselves," he said.

He predicted the general would be chosen on the first ballot.

Boswell, a former state representative, is one of the 14 delegates pledged to walk out of the convention if a strong civil rights plank is adopted or if President Truman is renominated.

Ex-Lieut. Gov. Handy Ellis, choice of the 14 pledges for delegation chairman, has proposed that Alabama yield to another state for the nominating speech.

He said however he would be "tickled to death to make the speech myself."

Differ Only In Method

Boswell said he would seek to have the 26-man delegation vote as a unit. The delegation, he said, is together on the major issues of opposing Truman's nomination and the civil rights program. He added:

"We differ only on the method of combatting Truman and his proposals." 7-3-48

In another development, State Docks Director Henry W. Sweet said at Mobile that he and several other alternate delegates were ready to step in if any of the regular delegates walk out.

"If any of the delegates walk out, some of us who want to see Truman defeated are going to walk in and complete the job," he said.

State Democratic Committee Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey said he did not believe that alternates could take over places of delegates who quit under such circumstances. He added, however that a ruling on the question would be up to the convention parliamentarian.

McCorvey was a leader of the campaign to pledge delegates to the proposed walkout, but was defeated himself in the race for a place on the delegation.

Negroes Organized

Meanwhile, Alabama Negro Democrats organized a delegation to attend the convention as "observers."

Arthur D. Shores, Negro attorney, was elected chairman at a Birmingham meeting. Ed W. Cain, Birmingham, was named vice chairman, and Emory O. Jackson, editor of The Birmingham World, secretary.

The four-point program was drawn up. It requires the delegation to support the nomination of president, urge a strong civil rights plank in the party platform, oppose any states rights plank, and to "team with other progressive Democrats in fighting for New Deal democracy."

Shores said headquarters would be set up in Philadelphia.

Other members of the delegation include E. D. Nixon, Montgomery; Norman Thomas, Muscle Shoals area; K. J. Sullivan, Gadsden; Arthur Geeter, Wetumpka; Joshua McDaniel, Clanton.

Shores said there are more than 7,000 Negro Democrats in Alabama.

Montgomery Adv.

Thurs

Henceforth, the headquarters staff of the Democratic National Committee will be a mixture of Negroes and whites. Chairman McGrath announced this yesterday. He added that, as a matter of fact, he was going whole hog and would engage a Negro assistant for himself.

All of which is of more than passing interest to Alabamians because it may occasion the resignation of two Alabamians.

One is Mrs. Dorothy Vredenburg, of Vredenburg, Ala. She is secretary of the national committee. She is the first to hold this recently created post of party honor and has received national notice therefor. She has been an Alabama adornment.

During periods of election and convention operations, Mrs. Vredenburg occupies an office in the national headquarters.

The other is William J. Primm, Jr., of Montgomery, who was appointed as assistant to McGrath this summer as part of McGrath's Southern limp appeasement effort. 8-5-48

We would guess that these two Alabamians will, as did National Committeeman Marion Rushton, decide in the face of the new policy of non-segregation, that it's time to turn in their badges.

The thoughtful Southerner, however, will not conclude his speculations with so simple a thing as the resignations of Mrs. Vredenburg and Primm. What of the future? Is it not a fact that the Democratic Convention in Philadelphia this summer was non-segregated? In the convention hall there were colored people to the front and to the rear of the Alabama delegation as any member will tell you. They were the officially elected delegates of other sovereign states. Negro congressmen and Negro divines addressed the convention. This was not a new condition. The same was true of the Republican Convention. Nothing is likely to change that.

The Advertiser trusts that in calling attention to this that it will not be accused of "stirring up" anything. Systematically we decline to print letters which inflame an unwieldy circumstance. On other occasions we have abstained from these speculations. But the paper is puzzled and baffled by what it sees in Philadelphia and in scores of other instances. What is the rational view to take of what irremediably exists and its implications? 8-5-48

SPARKS' PLAN

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

If Mr. Sparks had a plan that he thought would be acceptable to the voters of Alabama, why didn't he suggest it before the meeting of the State Executive Committee? The State Executive Committee is the controlling agent for state candidates just as the national committee is for national candidates, and to me it seems that a state candidate refusing to obey the mandates of the executive committee is as much a bolter as one who refuses to obey the national committee, after these instructions are issued.

The State Executive Committee made several recommendations to the candidates, and Mr. Sparks, after waiting some time refused to observe them, and has brought forward a number of abstract suggestions, in speeches at various places over the state. Not one of these suggestions will materialize at the convention, and no one knows this better than does Mr. Sparks. Sun.

His first suggestion is to get some strong Southerner on the subcommittee; another is get men on the convention floor who will let our stand on the subject be known; another is, if these two fail, to go to both the presidential and vice-presidential candidates, and failing there to go to both the Congress and the Supreme Court. These points are too ridiculous to discuss! 5-2-48

The wonder is how are all these things going to be accomplished? No presidential and vice-presidential candidates are going to listen at such time as this, and as for Congress and the Supreme Court, they have done everything the Negroes and their kind have asked for, although they know they are violating the famous 14th Amendment. Montgomery, Ala

The South has always been the backbone of the Democratic Party regardless of what has been said to the contrary. All this blubbering about bolting is nonsense. In recent years the national party has bolted every Democratic principle known; the so-called "New Deal" was a slightly hidden Communist party. Sun

Mr. Sparks seems to regret that his money is being used to defeat him. I wish it were possible to return it to him, but did he ever consider how much money was spent on those court trials he was rendering null and void by all those reprieves and commutations he was granting?

We do not need any of those abstract tries. We need positive action—"Yes or No!! No more of those "Please Let Us"!!

If the national party prefers the Harlemites to us, let it have them, and we will walk out. Then see how far they will get without us. 5-2-48 EPPES JONES.

Sparkman Far Ahead

John Sparkman was leading Phillip J. Hamm in the senatorial race by more than four to one early this morning, with more than 100,000 votes counted. From the start Mr. Sparkman had maintained an overwhelming lead. This was as it should be; it was as this paper expected. There is no doubt that he has been given a great vote of confidence, that he has won a resounding triumph. It is well deserved. He has been an outstanding member of Congress for a dozen years. For 10 years he was one of the ablest members of the House. Although having served in the Senate only little more than a year, he already is well established in its forefront.

It was scarcely conceivable that such a candidate would be in any danger of losing out in the primary, particularly against the relatively unknown and untried opposition he faced. Birmingham, Ala.

Besides Mr. Hamm, there were three other challengers, all of whom were trailing far behind. There appears to be no likelihood of the need of a run-off. Obviously the smashing defeat of Hamm is both a great tribute to Sen. Sparkman and a blow to Gov. Folsom, who also was having difficulty in his race for delegate-at-large and was suffering another conspicuous setback in the poor showing made by his candidate, Broughton Lamberth, in his challenge of Marion Rushton in the contest for Democratic national committeeman.

Folsom's Poor Showing

The poor showing of Gov. Folsom and his leading candidates was an outstanding result of yesterday's primary. Wed.

Evidence of the depth of the resentment against President Truman's civil rights program was another conspicuous aspect of the results. 5-5-48

In the voting for delegates and electors, many voters cut entirely across the lines of the civil rights disputes and voted for persons or names familiar.

Although final results will await the run-off primary in June, Gov. Folsom is well down in the list of delegates-at-large. It is customary to send the governor of the state to the national party meeting if he desires to go. Many Alabama Democrats apparently do not lean to the idea of letting Folsom head their representation to Philadelphia. The returns are all the more significant because Folsom campaigned for the post throughout the state. Although later returns may boost Folsom's standing, it is almost a certainty that he cannot lead the ticket.

Results in the race for electors clearly indicate victory for those pledged to vote against President Truman should he be the Democratic nominee. Here also a runoff will be necessary, but the top positions are all held by the anti-Truman group. The results show the effectiveness of a statewide campaign in behalf of a particular group of 11 electors. The News Wed.

But when one comes to the race for delegates-at-large, how can one account for the results except that no intensive campaign was waged in behalf of any slate and that voters selected outstanding men regardless of their positions? How else can one explain the presence of such anti-bolters as Sen. Hill, former Gov. Sparks and Atty. Gen. Carmichael placing among the leaders along with such bolters as "Handy" Ellis, Gessner McCorvey and J. M. Bonner? 5-5-48

The anti-Truman campaigners, realizing that they could not be entirely successful in the delegates' election, concentrated their efforts more on the elector race. Apparently they expect to make their last-ditch fight against Mr. Truman in the electoral college. Birmingham, Ala.

Reports are slow coming in regarding the election of district delegates. In the Ninth District (Jefferson County) bolters have the two top positions, but two anti-bolters are expected to be in the runoff. In some other districts anti-bolters are certain to be named.

Collapsing Campaigns

Some of the ideas conspicuously and heatedly advanced in the primary campaign in Alabama have by now undergone a severe deflation, if not even a complete collapse.

One of these ideas, advanced by Folsom followers, was that an outstanding senator, a man of proved ability and distinguished record, a man of truly national influence and stature, should be replaced in the United States Senate by a man little known, inexperienced, generally untried. Birmingham, Ala.

Another idea was that delegates should be pledged to bolt the Democratic convention if a plank on civil rights not entirely acceptable to them was adopted. Sat.

Still a third idea was that of all-out, in-any case opposition to the nomination and election of President Truman. 5-1-48

How the voters of Alabama could be induced to reject the excellent services of so competent, so fair, so well informed, so devoted a man as John Sparkman was a question that the Folsomites, in their grab for power, do not seem to have given much consideration. Else they might not have risked the heavy blow that seems certain to come to them in a decisive victory for Sen. Sparkman.

But the politically ambitious often are subject to great delusions. Sometimes their desire for power becomes so intense that it blinds them to plain realities. At any rate, what seems a very poorly conceived challenge to Sen. Sparkman was launched. By now its weakness seems quite apparent, whatever the personal vote-getting power of Gov. Folsom. 5-1-48

The governor may find that even he may have lost some of that power, as a result of this challenge — and other things — many other things. The News

Sen. Sparkman now appears assured of the handsome victory he so clearly deserves.

There was much feeling, but there never was sound reason in the pledge movement directed at tying up the votes of convention delegates and presidential electors. Obviously a changing political situation makes pledges of the kind sought—and in some cases obtained—very unwise.

Democrats of Alabama do not want their delegates at the convention put into a position where they may have to walk out—with no place to go except to the Republicans, the Wallace movement or to a retreat that would be a wholly futile and silly gesture. Consequently it is no surprise that the convention walkout movement appears on the verge of collapse. The News

This paper strongly opposes President Truman's civil rights proposals. It recognizes the president's limitations. It has found reason to criticize a number of administration policies and moves.

But it also respects the office of President of the United States. It recognizes that Mr. Truman, whatever his shortcomings, has many good qualities, too—and that there are some excellent things in his record. Birmingham, Ala.

It is certainly not prepared to commit itself against him regardless of what kind of situation may arise. It regards Mr. Truman as president as less undesirable than many other possibilities for nomination and election. Sat. 5-1-48

In this situation, again, it is manifestly very unwise to make all-out commitments against Mr. Truman. Growing sentiment of that kind is puncturing the idea too.

Alabama stands to gain much if all three of these conceptions collapse.

Racist Fanatics Take Over Alabama Democratic Party

The Worker New York, N.Y. 348

Sun. 5-23-48

By Mary Southard

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—The results of the May 4 Democratic primary in Alabama have been heralded by the press services as proof that grass roots opinion here is solid against any civil rights program, and that the people of Alabama are strongly behind the Southern politicians' revolt.

This judgment overlooks two essential facts:

- First, the majority of citizens of voting age in Alabama do not have the vote because of the polltax and undemocratic registration procedures, buttressed during the past two years by the Boswell amendment.

The total qualified electorate in Alabama numbers close to 360,000 in a state of over two million people. There are nearly a million persons of voting age — so nearly two-thirds of the people are disfranchised, and had no say in the primary election.

- Second, the voters were faced with not real choice on the question of the civil rights program. All candidates for Senate, for the nine congressional seats (with the one exception of Miss Appleby in Mobile), all candidates for delegates to the Democratic national convention, and electors, stood solidly against any federal law to strengthen the civil liberties of the people of the state.

FOR THE FIRST TIME since 1932—the beginning of the Roosevelt era — the Democratic Party proved itself completely bankrupt before the need to offer any way out to the people of Alabama. The only fight was a tactical one between the more conservative politicians like Senators Hill and Sparkman who opposed civil rights legislation in a more "gentlemanly' way and the rabid white supremacy gang headed by Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham lawyer, and Eugene Connor, notorious Birmingham police commissioner.

Gov. Folsom, who had set himself up as a favorite son candidate, made a poor showing, placing tenth in a field of 24 candidates for eight delegate-at-large positions. His candidates both for the U. S. Senate (against Sparkman) and for national committeeman, were both badly defeated, Sparkman polling over 214,000 votes to Hamm's 55,000.

Folsom's alliance with the southern governors' revolt early this year was the fatal compromising step. He can no longer come before the people of this state as their champion against the Mr. Gotrocks when he is standing side by side with them on the same platform, and knuckling under to their white supremacy disguised as state's rights.

Both he and his candidates attempted to win the voters by attacks on the current foreign policy, shouts about the brass hats and Wall Streeters in control of the State Department. But they had no postive program on foreign policy to offer, and their campaign degenerated into crossroads demagogy, and a cynical playing around with the deep concern of the people over the danger of war.

The Worker

THIS SHALLOWNESS is shown best in Folsom's post-primary remark that if the people of the state were for the Marshall Plan, then he, Big Jim, was for it too! The starch wilted in 24 hours.

Folsom has suffered the fate of every would-be progressive southerner in politics who bares the Achilles' heel of anti-Negro prejudice to the white supremacists. Under the southern revolt fire, he wilted with the failure either to realize or fight for the first principle in southern political life: that the white working people can advance their interests only in so far as they join in the fight for the democratic rights of the Negro people. Now Folsom is doing a lamentable job eating humble pie, all nearly eight feet of him.

The alarming thing in the primary vote is not, however, the desertion of Folsom from the democratic camp in Alabama. It is the considerable showing of the most rabid white supremacy candidates. In the Presidential elector race, 10 top placers of the 28 candidates are "bolters"—pledged to walk out of the Democratic convention if any section of a civil rights program is adopted there. These include a number of Black Belt legislators, McCorvey, reactionary state committee chairman; Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham's most brazen white supremacist. They topped other candidates who declared themselves against Truman and of like mind on civil rights, but pledged to stay within the Democratic Party.

New York, N.Y. Sun. 5-23-48

IN THE DELEGATE RACE—26 places, of which eight are at-large, in a field of 84 candidates—14 of the top 26 men are bolters. And two among the top four in the delegate-at-large race are bolters: Handy Ellis, reactionary former lieutenant-governor, polling over 120,000 votes, and Eugene (Bull) Conner, notorious Birmingham police commissioner, polling over 95,000 votes.

Connor, who has previously been only a local Birmingham figure, emerges from this primary as a statewide menace. He was known to the people of the state mainly for two actions—his banning of the Freedom Train in Birmingham because of his brazen insistence on segregated lines, and his vicious police attack on the Southern Negro Youth Congress in April, culminating in the arrest and manhandling of Sen. Glen Taylor. New York, N.Y.

It is clear that without effective opposition and exposure of their poisonous prejudice-peddling, the white supremacists made a considerable dent on the electorate, and that they have captured the Democratic Party in Alabama. It is true that Sen. Hill, a man with a New Deal record, topped the delegates list, but Sen. Hill has proved himself to be no dike for the white supremacy flood.

The Worker

THE ONLY EFFECTIVE ANTIDOTE to this seizure by the worst anti-labor, anti-New Deal, anti-democratic, anti-Negro clique of the political life of the state is the emergence and fighting organization of the third party movement.

The Progressive Party filed its emblem, its name and 11 Presidential electors for Wallace and Taylor with the Secretary of State on May 4. They have not yet been certified. The primary success of the white supremacy political gangs means that every effort will be made to stop the Progressive Party, and keep the voters of the state hamstrung in November.

The success of the McCorvey-Wilkinson gang is in large measure due to the failure of the labor movement here to stand up against the spurious states rights, anti-civil rights campaign. Both the AFL and CIO endorsed Sparkman, in spite of his anti-civil rights stand. This endorsement is especially flagrant because both labor bodies have taken positions in favor of a federal anti-polltax law and against the Boswell amendment.

The recent capture of the state CIO convention by the Marshall Planners, the red-baiters and the anti-third party cliques was a considerable aid and comfort to the white supremacy, labor-hating clique that captured the Democratic primary. 5-23-48

On the other hand, the Democratic Party of the state stands exposed before the labor movement and the working people, white and Negro, of the state in all its KKK bankruptcy. The only alternative is the fight for the third party and the building of the Wallace movement among the rank and file of the labor movement. Sun.

'Bolters' Lead In Alabama

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga. Wed. 6-2-48

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 1—(UP)—Candidates pledged to bolt the Democratic Party if it embraces civil rights took a wide lead Tuesday night in the Alabama runoff primary for National Convention seats. The State is certain to send a strong bolt-minded delegation to Philadelphia.

Gov. James E. Folsom, his political popularity at stake after a setback in the original primary, was trailing badly in his bid for one of the delegate-at-large seats.

Eleven delegate jobs were at stake in the runoff—four at large and seven from the congressional districts. With the vote-counting approaching the half-way mark, the leaders in ~~10~~ 9 of the 11 races were signers of the pledge not to go along with President Truman or any other civil rights nominee.

If the lead remained unchanged, Alabama would send 15 bolters, seven non-bolters and five uncommitted candidates in its delegation to Philadelphia. If the civil rights plank is adopted, the bolters presumably would "take a walk" to the "Dixiecrat" convention in Birmingham scheduled immediately after the Philadelphia parley.

Alabama For Eisenhower

The Examiner Montgomery, Ala. Thurs. 4-22-48 348

Multiple denials notwithstanding, the name of Dwight D. Eisenhower looms larger and larger each week as the Democratic Party's best bet for President

Washington reports indicate a definite belief that President Harry S. Truman at the proper time will withdraw his name from the running.

Whether there be truth in this or not, there is a very broad and solid Democratic support for Eisenhower North, South, East and West. He is the one man who could unify nearly all the elements in the Democratic Party. With his name heading the ticket, the current defeatism of Democrats would be converted overnight into a fighting will to win. Victory would be not only possible, but probable.

This newspaper would like to see Eisenhower nominated, for we believe a live, unified, progressive Democratic Party is the best hope of America. Without Eisenhower the prospect is definitely bleak for a Democratic victory.

Senator Lister Hill projected the name of Eisenhower in Alabama some weeks ago. We heartily approve the steady trend toward adoption of that proposal.

Alabama, standing at the head of all the 48 states in the convention, may well have the honor of placing Eisenhower's name before the assembled delegates. Should this take place, there would be no question of the genial General Ike's nomination, and very little doubt of his election.

Whither, Alabama Democrats?

The News
Birmingham, Ala.
Sat 4-3-48

In a special session of the State Democratic Executive Committee at Montgomery Monday, Chairman McCorvey will ask that group to make recommendations as to what Alabama delegates to the national convention and presidential electors should do "in the current political situation."

"I do not think our state Democratic committee should compel these delegates to the National Democratic Convention and the presidential electors to follow any course of action," Mr. McCorvey said. "However, these officers are elected by the same people who elected us, and I think it would be proper for us to make recommendations."

To what extent the committee should undertake to advise the elected delegates and electors is a debatable issue. Certainly the committee could not compel them, even if it desired to do so. To what extent officials chosen for the particular purpose of nominating a Democratic presidential candidate and electing a president should have the advice of members of the executive committee seems to us a pretty delicate matter. Surely any attemp tat domination would be resented. Sat. 4-3-48

But we do see that all concerned are in certain need of the best available thinking on party problems and confusions.

Some things are plain. One is that many Alabama Democrats (what proportion we do not know) now regard themselves as irreconcilable opponents of President Truman's nomination and election if he is nominated. But it is equally evident that these and other opponents of the president do not have a strong candidate upon whom they are united and who would consent to run.

Apparently it is being recognized more widely that the chances of changing Eisenhower's mind are relatively slight. Only a great national emergency, in which there would be a united demand for him, would offer much chance of bringing that about.

There is some talk of Marshall. But there are many doubts as to his availability and his qualifications for unifying the party and the country, great leader that he is.

It is evident that conditions may change very drastically by Summer—or by November. Such a change might greatly affect Mr. Truman's political strength. Despite the great weaknesses that have developed in the president's candidacy—weaknesses that now seem to offer some threat to his nomination—he still has great advantages. These advantages may grow. 4-3-48

A Christian Science Monitor Washington correspondent writes that the Republicans are becoming so confident of victory that some leaders are pressing "for the nomination of a candidate who normally would be regarded as a poor risk because of his domestic or international views." The News

Democratic Executive Committee Will Meet In Capital On April 5

To 'Stop Truman'

Chairman Asserts Unit Can Handle Problems; Welcomes Court Ruling

By ATTICUS MULLIN

The Alabama Democratic Executive Committee has been called to meet at the Jefferson Davis Hotel in Montgomery Monday, April 5, and, at that time, plans will be completed to assure Alabama's electoral vote against Harry S. Truman if he persists in becoming the candidate of the Democratic Party.

Chairman Gessner McCorvey, of the committee, issued the call from Mobile Thursday night. "Naturally" said Mr. McCorvey, in a conversation with the writer, "I am gratified at the Supreme Court's decision handed down Thursday, at the request of Governor Folsom, to the effect that the Bentley act requiring Presidential electors to vote for any certain party nominee is unconstitutional. I knew in my mind that it was unconstitutional. The action of the court leaves it to the Democrats of Alabama, through their electors, to see to it that the vote of the Senate is never cast for the man who has gone back on us."

Cooperation Needed

Mr. McCorvey, in his letter calling the committee, will make it plain that the committee will have before it the problem of co-operation with other Southern states in a "stop Truman" drive. But Mr. McCorvey, personally, does not favor a south-wide convention of Democratic Delegates to the National convention before the National convention is held. Fri. 4-2-48

To Handle Problem

Mr. McCorvey did not hesitate to say that he had been in touch with Democrats of Mississippi and other states and he talked about the Jackson south-wide meeting on May 10th. He thought the state committee could handle that problem. And he thought the State committee would handle it.

WHY?

Editor, The Advertiser:
Dear Sir:

Montgomery Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

The sentiments and attitude of Mrs. Thomas are absolutely disgusting to all true Southerners and especially Greenvillians.

We folks from Butler County would have bet our last dollar on "Miss Nanna." We thought she would have been true blue and loyal to state rights, the principle for which our fathers gave their place in society to protect and save.

I can't imagine a woman of her graciousness forgetting her duty to her people—to seek favor from a puppet.

I wonder why she don't move up North. up North. Tue. 3-16-48

SIT THE NEXT ONE OUT

The Advertiser

This is a time of clarifications.

Senator John Sparkman, who is a candidate for a full term, has sought to clarify his position with respect to Truman. Sparkman says:

"I shall certainly not run as a Truman Democrat. I greatly deplore his so-called civil rights program. . . . I will await the action of the national convention before I say more." 3-18-48

Last week our Democratic national committeewoman, Mrs. Lennard Thomas, had lunch with President Truman in the White House, talked things over with him and emerged to encounter 25 to 30 reporters.

The reporters quoted Committeewoman Thomas as saying the South should stand solidly behind Truman and raise money for his campaign.

Mrs. Thomas, in an effort to clarify, says she was misunderstood and misquoted. Both The Journal and The Advertiser have now carried extensive interviews with her about her misquotation charges. She blames it on the confusion of being interviewed by some 25 reporters simultaneously. She says one Alabama newspaperwoman tried to protect her from these "tactics."

"Tactics"? They're getting a worse name all the time. Folsom complained of "political tactics" in connection with his paternity suit. Mrs. Thomas complains of "newspaper tactics."

The Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

But be that as it all is and was, Mrs. Thomas says she has not and does not indorse Truman. That settles that. It appears a fair inference then that Mrs. Thomas elects to sit it out with Senator Sparkman, awaiting "the action of the national convention before I say more." Thurs 3-18-48

EVERY ONE

EDITOR, The Advertiser: Now that Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the Alabama State Democratic Executive Committee, has explained that no Democratic voter need hesitate to vote in the May primary because of opposition to President Truman's force bills, I trust there will be an outpouring of Democratic ballots in the May primary.

Alabama has taken the lead in opposing the President and his anti-South program and as one of those candidates for presidential elector pledged to vote against him, I am proud of the part my State has played and is playing in the fight against further encroachment upon states' rights.

However, the hands of our convention delegates and presidential electors would be strengthened by a tremendous vote in the primary. We need to show to all of the nation that we are in earnest in our fight to preserve what is left of states' rights and that we stand as a united people against any and all who undertake to override Southern traditions for the sake of a few Negro votes in doubtful States.

Montgomery Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

Alabamians are carrying on this fight entirely within the framework of the Democratic Party. Our party primary in May is wide open to every Democratic voter of the State. Surely with the issue so important, every Alabama Democrat should take part in the selection of those who will represent the State in the party convention and in the electoral college.

I respectfully urge every Democratic voter to go to the polls May 4 and cast a ballot. I feel that anything the press, the radio and other public forums can do toward recording a full expression of Alabama's sentiment through the ballot box would be an important public service.

It's Time For A Second Thought

The Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.
Wed 3-24-48

Twelve days ago Senator Lister Hill counselled Alabama to stick to the Democratic Party—Truman notwithstanding. Yesterday Senator Hill, like Senator Sparkman before him, demanded that Truman abdicate.

"The situation in Alabama and the South today makes it clear that there cannot be Democratic Party unity with President Truman as the nominee of the party," Senator Hill said in a formal Washington statement.

Senator Hill's statement is a considerable development in the national party's politics. It is a jagged message that Truman cannot ignore.

The most stubborn of men could not fail to observe the hopelessness of the situation in the face of such messages as Truman has received from Alabama, first on the roll call of states.

The state's electoral votes are to be withheld from Truman. The state's two senators, outstanding and powerful figures in the national party, have been forced to recant their support of Truman.

In the last four elections the National Democratic Party has not needed the Solid South to win. Victory would have been attained with the no-Southern elements of the party, for which elements the South in its current wrath has developed a rather startling disdain. But Truman never had a chance without the South. Presumably he has lost that. Wallace's growing strength is a devouring cancer in states such as California and New York.

Truman cannot be blind to the demonstrable fact that his candidacy is rigor mortis for the Democratic Party.

Not the least evidence of that is the Alabama evidence. The two Democratic senators were forced to flop in their support of Truman. They did so, even at the probable cost of depriving themselves of all Alabama presidential patronage from Federal judgeships to VA clerks.

Wed 3-24-48

We would admire Harry Truman's courage in playing the game out if that courage were matched with ability. It is not. The Advertiser has a better opinion of Truman than is common these days, but it believes his usefulness has been destroyed beyond his ability to re-establish it. For him to force himself upon the party as standard bearer is to booby-trap the party.

WHAT of Lister Hill?

The Advertiser will begin by saying that Lister Hill faces a sea of hostile faces in Alabama. His political standing is undoubtedly at its lowest.

The Advertiser

Having said that as bluntly as Hill's best enemy can say it, we ask Alabamians to suspend their resentment of Hill's initial willingness to stick with Truman long enough to have a second and sobering thought.

Montgomery, Ala

The Roosevelt haters and the Perpetual Anti-New Dealers of this state are panting like a frying egg over this presumed opportunity to rend Lister Hill.

Wed 3-24-48

But let it not be forgotten in the tumult of the time that this state is faced with the effort of Henry Wallace madams to capture this state politically.

Let us not be so fixed on washing-up the already washed-up Truman and punishing those tarred with Truman pitch that we allow Henry Wallace and his madam, James E. Folsom, to take political dominion over Alabama.

Is the threat there?

In 1944 Folsom, a member of the Alabama delegation at the convention, stuck it out with Wallace in his bid for the Vice-Presidential nomination. Since then Folsom has gargled consistently with the Wallace preparation: "Tea-sipping fancy pants" like George Marshall are "dumping billions" in Europe to inflame the branchheads of Russia. Just give in to Stalin, and everything will be felicity. It's probably Wall Street and the Washington brass-hats that really brought about the extermination of Czechoslovakia.

The Wallace line and the Folsom line are party lines. The phones are different, but the line is the same. Compare their statements.

THERE are obvious signs that Folsom is trying to take over this state politically, as Huey Long took over Louisiana. He is openly and all at the same time offering his candidates for state and federal posts.

He is trying to put his former revenue commissioner, Phillip Hamm, in the United States Senate to displace John Sparkman. He has appeared on the stump with Hamm.

He has indorsed an upstate candidate for Congress.

He is having his appointee, State Senator Broughton Lamberth, run against National Committeeman Marion Rushton.

In the 4th Congressional District, at Wetumpka, Folsom Agent Gould Beech yesterday was holding the hand of his candidate against Congressman Sam Hobbs.

Folsom, a candidate for president, has candidates for delegates to the convention. He has candidates for the electoral college.

The Advertiser

Montgomery, Ala.

Those he doesn't have before election, he will try to work on with blandishments and patronage afterwards.

Alabamians would be well-advised to abate their Truman frenzy long enough to ask what Folsom would prevail on his delegates and electors to do.

Wed. 3-24-48

TWO YEARS from now Lister Hill will be running for re-election to the United States Senate. He knows that Folsom, his mysterious campaign fund and his gang will be after him.

Hill knows that. It is one reason why he originally decided to come in now and break a lance with Folsom. The Truman Civil Disturbance pronouncement intervened to distort the issue.

The Advertiser has repeatedly chided Hill for consorting with the Folsom gang. The Hill excursion was opportunism. It is difficult to understand how Hill could have failed to discern that Folsom would ultimately turn on him, as he did on Col. Richard T. Rives.

Hill, away in Washington and a key figure in the Senate's concern with war with Russia, made a very costly blunder in his March 11 loyalty speech. He has been forced by Alabama reaction to take it back.

Now Hill has repudiated Truman. He has, as they say, been in touch with his constituents.

If the South is serious about trying to turn the situation about in the Philadelphia convention, it is going to need such seasoned and nationally influential figures as the senior senator from Alabama.

The Advertiser

Those Bourbons who are so vengeful in their lust to get at Hill's jugular will be prudent to fan themselves and think of what's to the left of Lister Hill.

Montgomery, Ala

Wed 3-24-48

They had better recognize both the present and future dangers of the Folsom-Wallace gang.

Now and in the future we're going to need the likes of Sparkman and Hill around to protect us.

ASSURED

Mon. 3-15-48

MRS. LENNARD THOMAS (above), Alabama's Democratic national committeewoman from Montgomery, told reporters Saturday that President Truman assured her that "he isn't going to force anti-segregation down our throats" in the South. "We're going to stand together and work for a Democratic victory," Mrs. Thomas said. A few hours later Gov. Folsom of Alabama agreed with five other Southern governors to oppose Truman's renomination. (AP Wirephoto).

The South And Gov. Dewey

From The Roanoke Leader

Long before anyone could say with assurance who would be running for president in November, Democratic electors were chosen in Alabama on the proposition that they would never vote for Truman or any other Democrat favoring civil rights legislation or running on a civil rights platform.

Barring a miracle, this method of revolt cannot result in the election of a man after the revolters' own heart. It can only increase the chances for a Republican victory.

The Republicans have spoken. Their platform offers no comfort to rebellious Southern Democrats. Neither does their candidate for president. Gov. Dewey is recognized as "Mr. FEPC" himself.

Wed. 7-7-48

Withholding Alabama's electoral votes from the nominee of the National Democratic Party will help to put Gov. Dewey in the White House. Is that what our "Democratic" revolt leaders want? Perhaps we misunderstood them when we thought they said something about promoting the principle of states' rights!

Session Of Party Committee Termed Urgent By Boswell

Alabama Participation In Southwide Call Is Advocated

Sun. 2-15-48

By ATTICUS MULLIN

Not only should the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee be called into session prior to March 1 but it should take cognizance of any southwide call for Southern Democrats and send representatives to that conference to cooperate with other Southern States whose voters have been insulted by President Harry Truman. Sun.

E. C. Boswell, of Geneva, author of the now famous Boswell amendment, made these suggestions to The Advertiser in a long distance telephone conversation late Saturday. 2-15-48

"Like other Democrats," said Mr. Boswell, "I am at sea about qualifying for delegate to the Philadelphia Democratic convention. I don't know but what we ought to qualify as delegates to a Southern Democratic convention. I intend to qualify as a delegate but, when I do I intend to make it plain that I am not going to Philadelphia to take part or give assistance and color to other insults to the South from President Truman and the gang machines of the big cities of the North and East.

"Go Our Way"

"If they think more of the votes of the Negroes in the big Northern cities than they do of the Democrats in 13 Southern States, I say let them have them and we will go our way. Montgomery, Ala.

"I have talked to Chairman McCorvey about the matter. I feel deeply that we should join with other Southern Democrats in refusing to 'lie down and take it' forever. This revolt is coming from the rank and file of Democrats and not from the politicians.

Only Authority

2-15-48

"The only party authority we have now is the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee. This committee was elected by Democrats to speak for them. This committee can send delegates, legally, to any convention it desires. It sent delegates to the Philadelphia Democratic convention in 1936. It can send delegates to a southwide convention. I think we should send representatives, not delegates, to any conventtion called in Jackson by Democrats. Then we could return and report to the full committee for such action as the pary in Alabama might desire to take. This is no time for further pussyfooting.

"We have mistakenly said many times that the governor of Alabama was the titular head of the party in Alabama and that the President of the United States was the titular head of the party in the nation. This is untrue. The head of the party in the State is the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee, the representatives of the people, and the head of the party in the nation is the Democratitc National Convention. In other words, the mass of Democratic voters constitute the head of the party and their voice is the voice of the party. The Advertiser 2-15-48

Mr. Boswell told The Advertiser that he talked Saturday with Frank Covington, veteran member of the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee from Henry County, the third district, and that Mr. Covington, like himself, thought the State Democratic Executive Committee should be called into session before March 1, the deadline for candidates to qualify. Montgomery, Ala.

Bonner's Platform—'White Supremacy'

J. M. Bonner, candidate for delegate to the National Democratic convention, said in a written statement to The Advertiser Saturday that he would "bow his head in shame if even one Alabamian casts a vote for Truman or Folsom in Philadelphia," and added that, if elected, he would favor Gessner T. McCorvey as Alabama's Favorite Son.

In referring to a recent editorial comment in The Advertiser, Mr. Bonner said:

"In your editorial of 11th inst., captioned 'Abstainer,' you said: 'We own confusion over the statement made by J. Miller Bonner.' "You said further: 'He (referring to me) would vote for all Democratic nominees—except Truman.'

"I request that you read again my statement to which you refer, published on Feb. 8th. In it I said: 'I will never vote for the nomination of Truman for president. However, I will abide by the result of the primary election in which I am a candidate and will support the Democratic nominees in said election. There was and is no exception.

"You also said: 'The Advertiser feels safe in saying without consultation with Bonner that he would not vote for—hail to the chief—Folsom.' The Advertiser

"Courage is the rarest of all political virtues, truthfulness next. It took no courage to say that I would not vote to nominate Truman. It was plain then, and much plainer now, that I sounded a popular note when I made that statement—the first Alabama candidate to so state. But it does take courage to declare against Folsom. The man who does not recognize his political power in Alabama is simply ignorant. Yet every candidate for delegate to the Democratic National Convention should be called upon to say whether he is for Folsom or against him. I now answer with this pledge: I will never vote to nominate Folsom for president or vice-president. Montgomery, Ala.

"I was proud to be one of the Alabama group who cast 24 votes for Underwood for 103 ballots in 1924. I shall bow my head in shame if even one Alabamian casts a vote for Truman or Folsom in Philadelphia next July.

"For whom shall I vote if elected? Sun. 2-15-48

"I give you as my choice for Alabama's Favorite Son, a real Democrat, a great Democrat, Hon. Gessner T. McCorvey.

"My platform is summed up in two words: "WHITE SUPREMACY."

Wallace Also Blasted By Chauncey

The News

Birmingham, Ala.

EUFAULA, Ala., March 23—(AP)—Alabama voters should shun both the "Truman Democrats" and "those who furnish a smoke screen for Henry Wallace," says former Gov. Chauncey Sparks. Tues

"I would follow neither leadership," said Sparks, who is seeking a delegate's post to the Democratic National Convention in the May 4 primary. 3-23-48

"On the one hand, the Truman Democrats threaten the very roots of our Southern civilization with the so-called civil rights program," the ex-governor said at his home here.

"On the other hand, those who furnish a smoke screen for Henry Wallace . . . would lead us to an equally ruinous fate."

He declined to mention names.

The time has come for "all real Alabamians to . . . separate the wheat from the chaff; to join together to bring democracy back to Alabama and to defeat these threats to our way of life," he added.

Governor's Plan To Control State Demo Voice Gets Slap

Sun. 1-18-48

The News-Age-Herald

Birmingham, Ala.

BY HUGH W. SPARROW
News Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 17—Recently-hatched plans by the governor to control Alabama's Democratic National Convention voice through the election of a so-called "governor's slate" received an indirect, but none the less sharp slap Saturday.

It came from the sturdy hands of Gessner McCorvey, State Democratic Committee chief. It was in the form of a letter to state committee members who are to meet here Jan. 26 to prescribe rules for the Democratic primary.

McCorvey, among other things, declared that although the renomination of President Truman is assured, regardless of who represents Alabama at the national convention, the state, nevertheless, has a great stake in the convention. 1-18-48

Because of that stake, Alabama should choose well the state's 26 delegates, he pointed out.

"I am very hopeful that Alabama will send a strong delegation to our Democratic National Convention," McCorvey's statement declared. "I would not be at all surprised but that it will be necessary for Southern delegates to make a strong fight to prevent the more radical elements within our party from taking action which could be most detrimental to the Democratic Party in our section of the country." The News-Age-Herald

There appeared to be little doubt McCorvey was referring to the governor—still regarded as leader of the so-called "Wallace faction" in Alabama—who wants to elect a "liberal" slate of convention delegates, including himself.

The governor likewise is seeking to elect his own Man Friday—Sen. Broughton Lamberth — as Democratic national committeeman. Reportedly he is also anxious to have a strongly pro-labor plank inserted in the party's national platform.

Birmingham, Ala.

McCORVEY'S LETTER SAID it is all the more important at this time to elect delegates who will stand true to Southern traditions "in view of the very radical, unwise and anti-Southern report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights." The News-Age-Herald

"It will be necessary for our delegation in the next Democratic Convention to fight to the limit to prevent inclusion in our platform of any theories of government as have been recommended by this committee appointed by the president," McCorvey added. Sun. 1-18-48

"Those of us in the South know that the only way in which two entirely different races have lived together, side by side, in peace and harmony, in the South, is by virtue of our segregation laws."

The President's Committee on Civil Rights, McCorvey reminded state committee members, advocates the withholding of federal aid or grants to states having segregation laws. Birmingham, Ala.

"I am very fearful," McCorvey continued, "that it is going to take quite a militant fight to prevent our party in national convention assembled from adopting resolutions or planks in the platform of our party which will be practically unbearable to those of us living in the South."

ON SEVERAL OCCASIONS during the recent self-starter amendment campaign the governor shocked many persons, especially those in the Black Belt and South Alabama, by shaking hands with Negro listeners at his meetings.

A picture of the governor shaking hands with a Negro admirer was snapped at one of his meetings but it was not reproduced. The governor later said he did not care whether or not the picture had been reproduced or published.

McCorvey took another slap at the governor in the same statement. He heartily recommended the work of Marion Rushton, Montgomery attorney and Alabama's Democratic national committeeman, in the high councils of the Democratic Party.

Rushton qualified only this week for reelection, a few days after Sen. Lamberth announced his candidacy and insisted he has the backing of Alabama's two U. S. senators.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 18—(AP)—Mrs. Leonard Thomas says she hasn't softened a bit in her opposition to President Truman.

Alabama's Democratic national committeewoman said yesterday she was "misinterpreted" in her remarks after a recent conference with the president and other party leaders. The News.

She was quoted as saying she was "satisfied" Mr. Truman "isn't going to force anti-segregation down our throats" in the South.

What she actually said, Mrs. Thomas related in a statement, today, was that leaders of the Democratic National Committee convinced her that they were not trying to force the civil rights program on the South. Thurs.

She said she referred to National Chairman Howard McGrath and other committee officials. 3-18-48

The committeewoman also said it was the preamble to the Constitution and not the civil rights message which Mr. Truman read to her during the conference, and that he told her "I stand on the constitution." 34d Thurs. 3-18-48

"I asked him if states' rights were not still in our constitution," her statement continued, "and he said 'yes'." Birmingham, Ala.

Bolting Democrats Chip In $61,500 At Jackson Rally; Arrange Protest Session On Civil Rights Bill In March

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

Plans were afoot today to bring Mississippi's fireball Gov. Fielding L. Wright to Birmingham to address a mass meeting of Alabama Democrats in protest against President Truman's "civil rights" program.

This was learned after several Alabamians, who attended the revolt rally of Mississippi and other Southern Democrats at Jackson Sunday, had conferred with the Magnolia State's chief executive.

Gov. Wright, spearheading the revolt movement in the South, was one of the speakers at the Jackson session when $61,500 of a $100,000 goal was raised to fight the Truman leadership in the Democratic Party.

Plan is to bring Gov. Wright here early in March for a statewide rally at Municipal Auditorium. Candidates for delegates to the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia, and other party leaders, as well as the general public, would be invited. 2-23-48

AMONG ALABAMIANS attending the Mississippi meeting were Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham attorney, and Olin Horton, business man here; Barrett Shelton, editor of The Decatur Daily, and Maynard Layman, of that newspaper; Sam Johnson, Mobile, former president of the Alabama Bar Association, and Mobile Circuit Judge Claude Grayson; Judge W. M. Rayburn, Gadsden, and W. C. Rayburn, Guntersville. The News

They gathered with some 250 others from eight Southern states to raise funds and map strategy to dislodge national party leaders. Birmingham, Ala.

Wilkinson said only Mississippians were permitted to contribute to the fund raised at Jackson, with representatives from other states requested to conduct their own fund-raising campaigns in their respective commonwealths.

"Mississippi and the whole South are on fire," declared Wilkinson, in citing the fact that the Mississippi Democrats raised $61,500 within a few minutes. "I never saw people shell out money so quickly and anxiously." Mon 2-23-48

GOV. WRIGHT WAS quoted at Jackson as saying the Democratic Party must be purged of leaders not in accord with the "principles of true white Jeffersonian Democrats."

"We want to kick out these birds who stole the party from us," declared Gov. Wright. "We want to see the South revive the conservative Democratic Party."

Those gathered at the Jackson rally heard Wright denounce present party leadership as "radical" and urge that conservative and radical parties be formed. He predicted the movement very probably will lead to realignment of the major political parties. 2-23-48

Contributions at the Jackson meeting ranged from $5 to $5,000, with Wright's staff of civilian colonels pledging $25,000. Dem (Ala)

WILKINSON SAID one of the significant things about the Mississippi meeting was that telegrams pledging support to the movement were received from numerous persons in Northern and Western states. Among these states were New York, Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Ohio and Illinois. News

Some of these messages, the attorney said, deplored the national party's program to crush the South and recalled fights waged by the late Sen. Borah, of Idaho, and other Northern and Western leaders, to prevent just such a thing from happening. Birmingham, Ala.

The attorney said delegations at Jackson from South Carolina and Texas emphasized that Truman would not get a single delegate vote from either of those states. And he said it was readily apparent that the president, if renominated, certainly would receive no support from Mississippi.

Wallace White, chairman of Sunday's meeting, said strategy of the snowballing movement is "top secret." The News

Gov. Wright is expected to fix a date for his Birmingham appearance, after he fills a speaking engagement at Little Rock Wednesday night. 2-23-48

A NUMBER OF OTHER ALABAMA DEMOCRATS were invited to the Jackson meeting, but were unable to attend. Among these were Birmingham Public Safety Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor and State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, both of whom are candidates for delegates-at-large to the national convention.

At Mobile over the week-end, Chairman McCorvey said that unless the National Democratic Party "changes its attitude of hostility, I hardly see how we Southerners can continue following the party's leadership." The News

"You can rest assured we are making plans to combat this situation and the National Democratic Party either will have to give a different sort of recognition to the South or we are going to have to part company." Birmingham, Ala.

The Southwide revolt started last Jan. 20 when Gov. Wright, in his inaugural speech, attacked the administration's "civil rights" program as "anti-Southern." The program calls for anti-segregation, anti-poll tax and anti-lynch laws.

Aside from Alabama, South Carolina and Texas, other states represented at the Jackson meeting were Georgia, Louisiana, Tennessee, Arkansas and North Carolina. 2-23-48

Another meeting of "true white Jeffersonian Democrats" will be held at Jackson at a date to be announced. Meantime, similar meetings were being planned in the various other Southern states.

The Coming State Primary

Birmingham, Ala.

Although the issue of how best to deal with the problem of civil rights will be outstanding in the primary campaign now getting under way in Alabama, many important choices will be made.

342

A United States senator and nine congressmen will be nominated. Sen. John Sparkman is hardly expected to have any great trouble, but apparently he will face an active opposition.

Sat. 3-6-48

Dem

Only Rep. Robert E. Jones, Jr., of the Eighth District, is unopposed among the candidates for the lower house of Congress. Some of the other incumbents may win renomination quite easily. But in other cases, including the Birmingham (Ninth) District, there apparently will be a vigorous fight.

Two justices of the Supreme Court, Thomas S. Lawson and Robert T. Simpson, are unopposed for renomination. But Gordon Persons, president of the Alabama Public Service Commission, has two opponents.

There are long lists of candidates for delegate-at-large to the Democratic National Convention. In most of the congressional districts, too, there are a good many aspirants for convention seats. A considerable number have qualified for presidential elector.

In six circuits candidates for judge are to be qualified and in one circuit a solicitor is to be chosen. There are, of course, many important county races.

Marion Rushton, of Montgomery, is opposed by Broughton Lambert, of Alexander City, for Democratic national committeeman. Mrs. Lennard Thomas, of Montgomery, is unopposed for Democratic national committeewoman.

Although this campaign does not seem likely to produce any spectacular statewide personal battles, some intense issues will be involved, and there will be plenty of hot campaigning. Enough of it, in fact, to make it necessary for voters to apply themselves very carefully and thoughtfully to a number of questions in making their decisions. Sat.

With Sen. Hill and Gov. Folsom both having declared they will stand by the Democratic Party even though they may not accept all platform decisions, it hardly seems likely that a sizable actual "rebellion" will grow out of this campaign. However, the general political situation continues to be very fluid and surprising turns and developments may come. 3-6-48

The News and The Age-Herald already have expressed their conviction that Southern Democrats do not stand to gain anything by a large-scale defection from the party simply because of the civil rights recommendations of President Truman. Pressures inevitably will be exerted and strenuous efforts made to prevent federal action of the kind asked by the president. It is possible that such efforts will be successful, that federal action will be largely or altogether blocked in this connection. But in any case, Southerners should make their decisions on a broad basis of national, as well as regional, interest. The News

Such consideration is likely, as usual, to hold the great majority to the Democratic Party. Birmingham, Ala.

'I Was Made The Bullseye' At Parley, Mrs. Thomas Says

348 Dem (Ala)

The Advertiser

Explaining that "I was made the bulls' eye" in a recent meeting of Democratic leaders in the nation's capital, Mrs. Lennard Thomas, national Democratic committeewoman from Alabama, told members of the Exchange Club Thursday that she was "not making apologies for anything" she said or did at that meeting.

She declared that since she was the only Southerner appointed to attend the gathering, "the blue-bellied Northerners" were anxious to misrepresent her every statement to the advantage of the Republican party.

"In ridiculing me they were also ridiculing you, and you and every other Southerner," she challenged. Montgomery, Ala.

She declared that Truman made his civil rights address because "the northern Negro and labor vote is now largely for Wallace. The run of Negroes down here don't want segregation—we protect our Negroes instead of exploiting them down South," she added. Fri

Stronger Laws

Mrs. Thomas advocated strengthening registration laws for voting instead of "giving away our vote as they have done up North."

Truman, she said, felt safe in making his civil rights address because he believed that although the South might be temporarily offended, it would "come back to the fold." 3-26-48

"I am going to do all I can to keep the South solid for the Democratic party, but I have never said we had to be solid for Truman. I would have been a conceited mule, though, if I had come out of the committee meeting blasting Truman, for I am too insignificant to say whether or not Truman should be the party man."

Alabama Vote Recalls The Record of 1860

The Courier-Journal 34d

Louisville, Ky.

DEMOCRATIC Party leaders were watching the Alabama primary election intently for a measure of the Southern Revolt. They saw plenty. They saw the party split, with Alabama hellbent to vote against HARRY S. TRUMAN where the vote counts, in the electoral college, even if he is nominated. It is 1860 all over again, with only slight variations.

As the ballots stand, yet incomplete at this writing, they show the opposition to the President and his civil-rights program to be triumphant. Presidential electors appear to have been named who are pledged to vote against TRUMAN or any other Democratic candidate for President who may approve the program. If others among the Southern States follow this example—and there is a fair prospect now that this will happen—the country may witness a major political revolution. Thurs 5-6-48

The probable result will be a re-shuffling and re-alignment of parties and policies. The Alabama vote could portend the end of political solidity in the South. Many a rank-and-file voter, offended by the electoral-college trick, which foreordains action no matter how the people vote next November, will be marking their ballots, perhaps for the first time, under the symbols of other parties. Negroes, newly enfranchised in the Old South, will hardly be voting to support the States' Rights, white-supremacy opponents of legislation for civil rights.

And so the temporary victors may have their pride and their vengeance for their pains as did their forebears who 88 years ago left STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, flocked to JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE on the States'-Rights issue and assured the election of ABRAHAM LINCOLN. There can be no reconciliation on terms such as the Deep Southern State organizations would dictate today. The times and the world have gone beyond that. The Courier-Journal

However, if Alabamans were positive as being against TRUMAN, a study of their vote shows a bit of uncertainty in other aspects. It is always like this, as if a sense of guilt were prodding, when people rush impulsively under the lash of prejudice. The incomplete vote shows that several moderate leaders, who have been counselling against a bolt of the Democratic convention in Philadelphia if the South isn't given what it demands, are running well in the front as delegates. Louisville, Ky.

These include Senator LISTER HILL and former Governor SPARKS. Senator JOHN SPARKMAN, who is in this group of stick-with-the-party advocates, seems to have beaten the man whom Governor FOLSOM, recently grown dizzy with power, trotted out against him. And Big JIM himself seems faring poorly in the race for a place as delegate to the national convention. He probably will squeeze in when the votes from down the creek are counted, but not as the leader. If the FOLSOM bubble is pricked, and demagogery, administrative ineptness and personal misbehavior are rebuked, the day is not completely lost in Alabama. Thurs. 5-6-48

Fight Within The Party

In the language of its chairman, Hugh A. Locke, the newly formed "State Democratic Campaign Committee" will "wage a fight within the party in Alabama for the preservation of the party itself." It is to be assumed that he speaks for the 21 candidates for presidential electors who are on record as pledged not to vote for President Truman. The 21 spearhead the committee.

It is encouraging to get this sign that the anti-Truman leaders in the state do not wish to split the Democratic Party in Alabama. Whether their course can avoid a split in the party nationally, if not on the state level, is another matter. The block headed by Judge Locke is naturally seeking to solidify control of party matters in the state. The voters, however, have not yet spoken. Birmingham News

It should be noted that some of the leaders of this movement have had experience in party rebellions. Judge Locke was one of those Democrats who in 1928 refused to vote for the Democratic nominee, Al Smith. The State Democratic Committee said any Democrat who voted for Hoover could not seek office in the Democratic primary of 1930. But Judge Locke ran as an independent for governor in the general election that year. He was defeated by the regular candidate, Judge B. M. Miller, 155,000 to 95,000. Birmingham, Ala.

It is more than of casual interest that some of the men who led the revolt against the Democratic nominee in 1928 should be in the forefront of the present fight against Truman. There are broad similarities in the two movements. The 1928 opposition to Al Smith made use of prejudices against the Catholicism, the background, the Tammany connections and the anti-prohibition views of Al Smith, but there was a deep and important undercurrent of feeling that in nominating the liberal governor of New York, the national Democratic Party was injuring and threatening established race relations in the South. Wed. 3-31-48

The same sort of fear is appearing now. But instead of having other pegs on which to hang their fight, Southern opponents of a liberal Democratic Party are pitching it directly on the race issue. The tune is changed, but the same men are doing a lot of the piping. Wed. 3-31-48

Will they be able to keep the fight within the party, as Judge Locke says? He was not able to do it in 1928. This time he and others have wide support within the party organization. They have been able to arouse a lot of highly vocal backing. The voters, however, have not yet spoken. And we suggest, again, that it would be democratic to give the voters a chance to be heard before the leaders of the revolt commit themselves and the party too far.

'Bolters' Challenged

34d

To the Editor of The News:

Horace Wilkinson would have us believe that when the majority nominates a so-called anti-Southern candidate or passes an unwelcome law we Southerners must fight such a dastardly deed with every trickery we can think up. In plain words, this means Southern Democrats believe not in democracy, majority rule, but totalitarianism, minority rule. Southern states—one-third of the nation—must, like a dog's tail, insist on directing the dog—the nation—instead of the dog directing the tail. Why not cooperate? The News

Mr. Wilkinson says, "Protecting our civil rights is more important than protecting the prestige of the presidency in a time of international uncertainty." What a farce this civil rights agitation has become! More than 80 years ago the Civil War ended Negro slavery. Very few Negroes vote in Alabama, though the federal constitution says they have the right to vote. Birmingham, Ala.

If 80 years failed to give voting rights to Alabama Negroes, why worry over an anti-poll tax law which is clearly unconstitutional, non-segregation which can be enforced only in interstate travel, and FEPC, which, like anti-poll tax law, requires a federal constitutional amendment? Fri 4-23-48

Southern bolters should remember that those who support not majority rule are advocates of totalitarianism, which is world disorder. When the tail, the minority, refuses to cooperate we are advocates of a police state, which Mr. Wilkinson claims to dislike.

Backing up our president is not agreeing with everything Truman says and does. Mr. Truman is the head of a government which is the embodiment of an experiment in human freedom. This freedom is the fulfillment of Christian idealism—the brotherhood of man. Let us all think about this before we destroy our experiment in human freedom.

GOAT JUDGING

Editor, The Advertiser: 4-29-48

Is it possible that for once you agree with Horace C. Wilkinson? If so, I must be wrong but I don't know how to get right.

Last Saturday I started a series of letters to all candidates for party office and to the candidates for United States senator and congressman in which I asked them to answer this question:

"If the Philadelphia Convention nominates a candidate for president who advocates civil rights or puts a civil rights plank in the party platform, will you advocate standing by the platform and supporting the nominee of that convention?"

And you come along in an editorial in Sunday's Advertiser and say:

"It is high time we separated the sheep from the goats."

I wonder what rational mind was guiding the editorial pen when that sentence was written. The Advertiser

The Democrats of Alabama are not worked up over whether our delegates remain in the convention or walk out. What they want to know is where their leaders will be after the convention nominates Truman or puts a civil rights plank in the platform. Montgomery, Ala

Gessner McCorvey and those pledged to walk out will be against Truman after that happens. The other candidates have not said what their position will be if that happens. Thurs. 4-29-48

Alabama needs leaders who are not only against Truman and his program now, but who will be against Truman and his program after the convention steam rollers our delegates and undertakes to make us like it.

You should find out how many candidates for delegates are figuring on coming back home and telling us that they fought a good fight but they were outnumbered so now the only thing to do is to stand by the platform and support the nominee of the civil rights party. The Advertiser

Why not smoke them out. The Advertiser might, with some assistance, qualify as a judge of goats.

TRUMAN QUITTERS AND TRUMAN SITTERS

Columnist John Temple Graves has raised a point in the following: The Advertiser

A . . . proper question is what gentlemen like Chauncey Sparks and Lister Hill, who have led the ballot for delegate because of their personal influence, will do about the mandate which gave them their big votes when the second primary confirms it. Dem (Ala)

Never was the voice of our people more positive, or loud, than this one for going to the convention free, which is to say, willing to repudiate the convention at one time or another if the convention repudiates the South.

Will Senator Hill and Chauncey Sparks accept the will of the majority of Alabama's Democrats and the majority of Alabama's elected delegates, or will they go on with their untenable proposal to stay there and fight the janitor at Philadelphia?

Montgomery, Ala.

As for Hill and Sparks, they have a right to do precisely as they wish. They told the voters of this state squarely that they did not promise to walk out. The voters put them first on the list. That's their warrant. Wed. 5-12-48

It was not so simple a matter as the renown of the two names that placed Hill and Sparks foremost. The vote was Hill, 161,629; Sparks, 143,065; Handy Ellis, 137,601.

If it were purely a matter of names, why should Hill have led Sparks by nearly 20,000 votes. And second, if it were simply a matter of names, why should Ellis, pledged to take a walk, have run nearly 30,000 votes behind no-walk Hill and nearly 10,000 behind no-walk Sparks?

The voters cast ballots in only one name sense. They skipped the fine points of the strained walk and non-walk issue and, from among the body of anti-Truman candidates, voted for those in whom they had faith as public figures.

The walk and non-walk issue is a nagging bagatelle in comparison with that clean axe-stroke that is the withholding of the electoral vote from Truman.

Every Alabamian will want to see the Alabama delegation bellow and cavort with spirit and skill to block that which is unbearable to us. But many of us have some uneasy recollections of the impression Senator Cotton Ed Smith of South Carolina made at the 1936 convention when he walked out because a colored chaplain was allowed to pronounce the invocation.

Nevertheless, Mr. Graves had made a point. We are to have a delegation of the Truman quitters and Truman sitters. Sooner or later, we take it, they will have to get together and decide to do this or that as a bloc. There is also the matter of electing a chairman. Wed. 5-12-48

Oppose President Truman; oppose any Democratic presidential nominee who supports the Truman civil rights program; insist upon a strong States' rights plank in the 1948 party platform, and to make a vigorous fight at the Philadelphia convention against "any proposals contrary" to the first three. Sun.

Marion Rushton, Democratic national committeeman from Alabama, was named chairman of the executive committee of the new group. Donald Comer, Birmingham, textile manufacturer, was chosen vice chairman. 6-20-48

Horace Wilkinson, a speaker at today's meting, said the new group was not one for 1948, but would remain in being to "carry out the wishes of Southern and Alabama Democrats in future years."

MOBILE, ALA.— (AP) —Former Gov. Frank M. Dixon, of Birmingham, and Robert T. Goodwyn, Jr., of Montgomery, clerk of the House of Representatives, were named Alabama's members of the campaign committee of the States' Rights Democrats. Ala.

The appointments were made by Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, of the Alabama Democratic executive committee.

McCorvey said each of the Southern States in on the fight against Truman's civil rights program, were to name two members. Mon. 5-17-48

The committee will meet at the call of Gov. Ben Laney, of Arkansas, "to plan to secure the aims and objectives established by resolutions at the conference of States' Rights Democrats in Jackson, Miss."

One of the committee's duties will be to plan for a meeting in Birmingham, in July, if the National Convention does not name a presidential candidate acceptable to the South.

THE PASSING THRONG
BY ATTICUS MULLIN

I had a hard time down in Florida last week explaining to delegates to the National Peanut Council—and they came from several states—just what Alabama did in the May primary.

Finally I had to get down to hard tack and tell the whole truth and that was, that to all intents and purposes, Alabama not only voted in a State primary but also voted in a national election and in that election voted for presidential electors who were pledged against the re-election of President Truman or any man running on a platform which contains the Truman civil rights plank.

Then I immediately had to explain my explanation. They all agreed with me that Truman would be renominated on the first ballot and that the platform would contain a civil rights plank. I told them in that event the Alabama electoral vote would not be cast either for Truman or the Republican nominee. And, of course, Wallace was out. Then they wanted to know for whom it would be cast. I told them Alabama's vote in the electoral college would be cast for some great man not nominated by any big group of voters and right now Eisenhower was the choice. Mon.

I found that Florida, although votes for delegate had not been completely tabulated, seemed to have gone in a recent primary for delegates to the Democratic national convention pledged to Governor Wright, of Mississippi. Florida wants none of Truman and none of his civil rights, either.

We, in Alabama, can certainly look on the forthcoming national election without getting unduly excited. Our electoral votes are not going to be cast for either Truman, the Republican candidate or Wallace. We have already spoken. 5-17-48

Praising The Alabama Plan

John Temple Graves

The Record

"And read their history in a nation's eyes..."

Columbia, S.C.

Of Gessner Thomas McCorvey, chairman of the Alabama State Democratic committee, history will say that he gave dignity, drama, and direction to a move which began in the grass roots of the South and, by one device and another, with Alabama most boldly leading, voiced again for America her long dream of government at home, free of distant force and uncomprehension. Mon. 5-31-48

Some of the other southern states will name free electors, too. All the southern states will name delegates opposed to the federal force proposals and prepared for battle at Philadelphia. But in Alabama alone the southern revolt has been put to the supreme test of popular voting. And from that vote has come a mandate which is the southern people's mandate. Here, where our Democrats have spoken, they have said the South is more precious than the national party, and so is the great basic principle of America. Without Alabama's unstinting stand there still would have been a revolt. But because of what Alabama has done under Gessner McCorvey's lead, the revolt in the South has told the nation in utmost drama that these states must be considered, and that their philosophy, which is America's philosophy, must be restored.

And the nation has listened. Not since the War Between the States has southern opposition weighed so much in national estimate as at this moment. Not since Appomattox has the South been so wooed and accounted for as in these months since the revolt began. If these states hold true to their course, a new place for them is certain in the political respect of a nation.

Editor W. R. Smith, of The Macon News, puts both President Truman and the South on the spot by proposing that Mr. Truman "talk to Southern Democrats about a positive program of civil rights that our (southern) leaders know can be presented and made acceptable to our people...ask southern Democrats to present to you such proposals for a civil rights program as they know are needful and as our people would accept and support...Give us the ball. Let us run with it a while. We might surprise you—and ourselves." Mon. 5-31-48

The trouble is that no matter how pleasantly surprised the President might be or the South might be, Walter White would veto. We do need a civil liberties program of our own in the South, but we could never hope to have it acceptable to the paid professionals and politicians above the Potomac.

There I go saying above the Potomac again when my friend Lloyd T. Everett, of De Land, Florida, a native and unceasing Marylander, has just reminded me that "Mason and Dixon should not be spelled P-o-t-o-m-a-c." He well-says that I do his native state an injustice when I "continue to class her with Northern States and their inter-meddling in our Southern affairs—she has stood staunchly, time out of mind, with us in such matters." It is the truth, and I am ashamed of my slip. Especially when the South is in the front of battle for the great American principle of states' rights and local self-government. Not for nothing do they call it "the Maryland Free State." Mon. 5-31-48

Hill Against Bolting

Sen. Lister Hill took a very strong stand for the Democratic Party in his speech before the assembled Alabama State Federation of Labor. He repeated with emphasis his statement of some days ago that he would not pledge himself to bolt the convention in July, and he rested his reasoning on the sound grounds that to do so would help materially to elect a Republican president and Republican congressmen.

Sen. Hill has always stood for the principle of states' rights and against the so-called civil rights bill. He believes that such matters should be settled within the individual states, a conviction with which this paper thoroughly concurs. He also believes that to walk out of the convention should a civil rights plank be voted into the national platform would be a disloyalty to the party he has served so well for so long.

For a split in the party would mean that it would lose the election to whomever the Republicans nominate. "It is not necessary for me to tell you what a Republican victory would do to organized labor," he said.

Birmingham, Ala.

The senator did not mince words in his comment on the action of the State Democratic Executive Committee. He does not, he intimated, intend to be its stooge. He charged the committee with dictatorial practices. Wed. 4-21-48

In the light of hard common sense one finds it impossible to see what could be accomplished by a bolting delegation. It is known to everyone at home and in other sections what the united attitude will be toward the insertion of an objectionable plank. Mr. Hill does not believe that a nationally imposed FEPC bill would work, and he will exert all his considerable influence against it. He understands the impossibility of legislating against a prejudice widely held. He knows that the North must be educated as well as the South in methods of better race relations. But he also knows that there is no hope for the South's point of view to prevail through a Republican administration. Whatever is accomplished must be done through the framework that already exists. To destroy it is to act as Samson did in the temple, and worse problems for the South would then ensue. Wed.

The News 4-21-48

As this paper has always held, much will happen between now and the convention. The Republicans meet in June, and by the time the Democrats assemble there will be a Republican nominee committed to a Republican platform. The whole strategy of the Democrats will have to be largely evolved thereafter. Sen. Hill is concerned over the possibility of a party disaster. His refusal to bolt is founded on his deep conviction such action is the only feasible way in which to serve and protect the party.

34d 1948 Democratic (Americans for Democratic Action)

3—Old New Dealers

(34D)

Newsweek - N.Y., N.Y.

President Truman had reason to expect that, although his recent attacks on Wall Street, his reaffirmations of the New Deal, and his civil-rights program might irritate conservatives and Southern Democrats, at least they would earn him the active support of those New Dealers still devoted to Franklin D. Roosevelt's memory.

Mar. 3-1-48

Last week end Americans for Democratic Action, the anti-Communist counterpart of Henry A. Wallace's Progressive Citizens of America, held its first annual convention in Philadelphia. On hand were such longtime New Dealers as Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, former Price Administrators Leon Henderson and Paul Porter, former Assistant Secretary of State A. A. Berle Jr., former State Department counsel Benjamin V. Cohen, former Housing Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt, Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis, and three Democratic senators,* as well as more than 600 delegates from 40 states. Mar. 3-1-48

The upshot: Violent denunciations of Mr. Truman and pointed, vociferous refusal to endorse him for the Presidency.

Paradoxically, the platform which the convention adopted was almost identical with Mr. Truman's program, though written in sharper, more insistent language. One notable exception: a plank opposing Universal Military Training, in which the delegates reversed a favorable stand taken previously by ADA leaders. Otherwise, the platform called for the reinstitution of price controls, denounced race discrimination, and warmly backed the Marshall plan. Moreover, the delegates made it clear they had no use either for such Republicans as Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio or for Henry Wallace's third party. They cheered loudly when Wyatt denounced the "dismal 80th Congress" and when he branded Wallace's candidacy as "dangerous and irresponsible."

The Fainthearts: However, even Wyatt, who declared that "I am a Democrat with a capital D," had no warm words for Mr. Truman. Neither did Mrs. Roosevelt, though she praised the Marshall plan and urged passage of Universal Military Training. And when Democratic Sen. Francis J. Myers of Pennsylvania called for support of Mr. Truman in the 1948 campaign, not one delegate applauded. They sat in glum silence. Mar. 3-1-48

A conference to consider the convention's campaign resolution showed why. Delegate after delegate angrily declared that Mr. Truman's actions belied his New Deal words. The President was denounced for appointing Wall Streeters to Administration posts even while attacking Wall Street. He was charged with having abandoned Wyatt's housing program "under pressure from real-estate interests." Berle cited the long and growing list of New Dealers ousted from government posts under the Truman Administration, asserting: "The President takes his orders from the rotten, corrupt, reactionary Democratic machines." Others assailed the embargo against shipment of arms to Palestine.

As originally drafted, the resolution merely declared that ADA would hold off endorsing anyone for the Presidency until after the Democratic and Republican conventions. At the demand of the delegates, it was rewritten to point up the reasons.

Privately, the delegates admitted they would finally end by voting for Mr. Truman, but they weren't going to like it and, unless something unexpected happened, they weren't going to work for him.

Race Dems In Ark. Support "Old Line"

Journal & Guide

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(ANP)—Seven delegates, elected by the Arkansas Negro Democratic Association to attend the Democratic national convention at Philadelphia, will demonstrate "evidence of good faith in the regular old-line Democratic Party," it was announced here last week by Dr. J. M. Robinson, president. The delegates, though having no legal status at the convention, "will attend its sessions harmoniously, in good faith."

They will represent 25,000 Negroes in the state who are qualified and "ready to vote" in the Democratic primaries and the general election. Dr. Robinson also said that if "insurgent delegates vacate their seats in a rebellion, Negroes will be ready to offer their services."

"Arkansas Negro Democrats don't want any Wallace stuff or any third party stuff," he said.

He revealed that the state committee had been petitioned to name two Negroes as alternates-at-large, but that the request was received at a time when "the hullabaloo arose" over President Truman's civil rights proposal. The rebellion is expected to come at the convention over the same issue.

Battle Sighted at State Convention Today

New Orleans, La.

(The Associated Press)

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 22.—A bitter fight between Truman Democrats and States' Rights Democrats for control of Arkansas' presidential electors was signaled today. Thur 9-23-48

The States' Righters announced they would press an effort to get the Democratic state convention opening here tomorrow to pledge the party's electors to the States' Rights ticket rather than to President Truman and Sen. Barkley, national Democratic nominees.

The announcement was made by John L. Daggett, of Marianna, a member of the States' Rights executive committee, after Democratic gubernatorial nominee Sid McMath had rejected a "compromise" proposal by the States' Righters. 34d

McMath, titular head of the Democratic party since his nomination last month, offered an alternate method for selection of the Democratic presidential electors.

1. Electors from the seven congressional districts of the state be chosen in district caucuses;

2. Two electors at large be named by the Democratic state convention opening here tomorrow;

3. No attempt be made to instruct any of the electors on how to vote in the electoral college, leaving them free to vote individually as they choose—for President Truman and Sen. Barkley, the national Democratic nominees or the States' Rights ticket of Govs. Strom Thurmond and Fielding Wright. Thur 9-23-48

Electors named in the district caucuses would have to be approved by the state convention.

The States' Righters' "compromise" proposal was that the state convention name no electors and that both States' Rights and regular Democratic electors appear on the general election ballot by petition, thus allowing the voters to make their own choice.

Regular Democrats seek to qualify a slate of electors pledged to vote for President Truman and Barkley.

Fear Showdown On Convention Floor

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Tues. 7-13-48

By LOUIS LAUTIER

PHILADELPHIA—(NNPA)—The question of a civil rights plank in the 1948 Democratic platform is the paramount issue at the Democratic national convention. This issue apparently may not be settled without a fight on the convention floor when the Resolutions Committee makes its report Wednesday.

There is talk of Dixie delegates walking out of the convention if the committee reports a strong civil rights plank.

If the plank contains no specific commitment on antilynching, anti-poll tax, fair employment practice and other points in President Truman's program, northern liberals threaten to carry the issue to the convention floor.

Senator J. Howard McGrath, of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, at a press conference Sunday afternoon declined to answer a question as to whether he expected the civil rights fight to spill over on the convention floor. He said he would have to know how successful the Resolutions Committee was in ironing out differences.

He said he expected the committee to come out with a civil rights plank that will be acceptable to the South. He added that the plank on civil rights in the 1944 platform was acceptable to both the North and South.

EYE 1944 PLANK

While he has not discussed the specific language of that plank with Senator Francis J. Myers, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Resolutions Committee, Senator McGrath said, there was considerable speculation that the civil rights plank this year will be similar to the one in the 1944 platform.

Earlier Sunday afternoon, Senator Myers told a press conference that the seven-member platform drafting committee had skipped over a civil rights plank.

Daily World

The drafting committee went to work Saturday and worked until 2:30 a. m., Sunday, went back to work at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon, recessed around 5 o'clock and returned to work about 9 o'clock Sunday night. Atlanta, Ga.

It was working against time to complete its draft of the platform in order to have it in the hands of the 17-member subcommittee. Senator Myers was hoping to have the draft of the platform in the hands of the full committee sometime Monday. Tues. 7-13-48

LAST ON AGENDA

He said the civil rights issue would be left until the last. When the drafting committee reached civil rights Saturday night or Sunday morning, he said, it decided to pass over the issue rather than have a lengthy discussion. He added that there had been some "conversation" in the drafting committee about civil rights, but nothing had been reduced to writing.

Senator Myers declared he had heard nothing about threats of Dixie delegates to walk out of the convention over the civil rights issue.

Told that Representative Emanuel Celler, of New York, had announced that liberals on the Resolutions Committee had held a rump session and decided ot fight to the last ditch, on the convention floor, if necessary, for a strong civil rights plank, Senator Myers said he had heard nothing about it.

Daily World

"My record in the Congress is as liberal as Emanuel Celler's," he declared. "I do not know why there would be a rump session.

Nothing has occurred that would necessitate a rump meeting, North, South, East or West."

Atlanta, Ga.

Asked whether the telegram sent to President Truman and Senator McGrath by Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York, indorsing Mr. Truman's civil rights program, had come to his attention, Senator Myers said it had. Tues.

TRUMAN CONSULTED 7-13-48

Asked whether he had received any "written suggestions" from the White House, Senator Myers replied that he had reecived suggestions from everywhere. "I won't say the White House," he added.

"It doesn't exclude the White House," a reporter persisted.

Fight on Floor

Tues. 7-13-48

Philadelphia, July 12.—The Democratic Party's civil rights split tonight appeared headed for a convention floor row as a compromise built around the 1944 plank failed to meet intersectional differences.

The first full draft of a platform calling for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and a return to "New Deal" principles meanwhile went to a preliminary showdown in an 18-man drafting subcommittee.

Neither faction in the party-breaking fight appeared satisfied with the 53-word proposed civil rights settlement.

Civil Rights Text

It read: Tues.

"The Democratic Party and the Democratic Administration are solely responsible for the great gains in recent years made in the continuing effort to reduce and eliminate unfair and illegal discrimination based on race, creed or color. 7-13-48

"We have implemented our often expressed belief that racial and religious minorities have the right to live, develop and vote equally with all citizens, and to share the rights guaranteed by the Constitution."

"It don't suit," said former Gov. Chauncey Sparks of Alabama, one of the leaders in the Dixie rtbellion. The South wants "States Rights" language written in.

Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis, leader of liberal wing demands for a much stronger plank, retorted by calling a strategy conference of all interested in a more explicit statement.

Decision Demanded

Up to a late hour tonight, the 18-man group had not reached a showdown vote on the proposed compromise. The members met in a nineteenth-floor suite of the Chateau Crillon Hotel. Determined to reach at least a preliminary platform decision before adjournment, Resolutions Chairman Francis J. Myers (Pa.) refused to recess at the dinner hour. A snack was served in the suite.

Regardless of the vote, Mayor Humphrey predicted the fight would go to the floor.

"If we lose, we will want a convention decision," said the Minnesotan. "If we win, the Southerners will take it to the floor."

Convention Parliamentarian Clarence Cannon (Mo.) was consulted by both factions in readiness for the battle. Cannon said House of Representatives debate rules may apply to what may be the first pdatform contest to go to the floor since 1924. Cannon's ruling means speeches on any proposed amendment would be limited to five minutes. The Post

Must Be Explicit

Humphrey's group wants the plank to spell out the President's Committee on Civil Rights recommendations for antipall tax, antilynching and FEPC legislation and nonsegregation in the armed forces. Washington,

The Southerners had called on the party to "reaffirm and pledge strict adherence to States rights." D.C.

Subcommittee differences broke out also on an eight-point Palestine plank adopted in all night session by an inner circle group of seven platform blue-printers. Tues,

Representative Emmanuel Celler (N. Y.) said it "won't do" unless two of the points are strengthened to call for immediate recognition of a "permanent" Israel government, and for shipment of arms to Palestine whether or not the United Nations clears it.

Points in Israel Plank 7-13-48

The text of the subcommittee's proposed Israel plank:

"1. President Truman by granting immediate recognition to Israel, led the world in extending friendliness and welcome to a people who have long sought and justly deserved freedom and independence.

"2. We look forward to extending full and prompt recognition to the permanent government of Israel as soon as it is established.

"3. We affirm our pride, too, that the United States, under the leadership of President Truman, played a leading role in adopting the resolution of November 29, 1947, by the U. N. General Assembly for the creation of a Jewish state. Tues.

"4. We approve the claims of the State of Israel to the boundaries het forth in the United Nations resolution of November 29 and consider that modification thereof should be made only if fully acceptable to the State of Israel. 7-13-48

"5. We look forward to the admission of the State of Israel to the United Nations and its full participation in the international community of nations.

"6. We pledge appropriate aid to the State of Israel to secure in the United States and elsewhere the arms and equipment necessary to defend itself, subject only to the decision of the United Nations. Subject thereto, we favor the lifting of the arms embargo to accord to the State of Israel the right to defend itself.

"8. We continue to support within the framework of the United Nations the internationalization of Jerusalem and the protection of the holy places of Palestine."

On domestic issues, the preliminary blueprint not only calls for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, but for a 75-cent minimum wage law, public housing and slum clearance legislation, Federal aid to education, health insurance and social security expansion. The Post

In addition to differences over civil rights, the Israel plank and Taft-Hartley law repeal, slowing down a platform decision was a coastal versus inland state row on the tidelands oil issue. Tues,

The Supreme Court ruled the Federal Government holds sway over submerged coastal oil lands, but the GOP platform urged a quit-claim to the States. The Democrats are debating whether to keep silent on the issue or declare flatly for Administration proposals to hold the oil lands and divert royalties from them to irrigation and other purposes beneficial to other States. 7-13-48

Negro Leaders Press For Strong Civil Rights Plank

Daily World

By EMORY O. JACKSON

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — (SNS)— Alabama Negro Democrats made history when members of the nine-man delegation of observers attended the National Democratic Convention here Monday. Tues.

Also on the scene were two different groups of pickets in front of Convention Hall as the meeting opened and the anger and indignation over civil rights and jim crow in the armed forces appeared destined to be carried to the convention floor. Atlanta, Ga.

The Alabama observer delegation, which has asserted it would walk-in the convention if the regular delegation bolted, listened from outside of the Hotel Bartram window to the heated caucas of the 26-man Alabama delegation as it voted 13-12 in favor of a walk-out. The caucus refused to seat an alternate who was opposed to the walk-out.

A. D. Shores, W. H. Hollins, Lorenzo Cates of Birmingham and Norman Thomas of Tuscumbia were at the hotel window, along with other spectators including newspaper reporters. Shores had brought the observers to the Alabama Democratic headquarters to pick up seven convention seats promised to him by Alabama National Committeeman Marion Rushton of Montgomery, who evidently changed his mind. 7-13-48

Congressman William Dawson of Illinois, worked out a plan to get the observers into the convention. James Fields of Montgomery, through a contact, received tickets. Judge King and C. E. Colston and other Alabama delegates were guests at the Pennsylvania press lounge.

D. C. Unit Demands Civil Rights Law

Washington, D. C.

Tues. 7-13-48

Philadelphia, July 12.—A civil rights law for the Nation's Capital was demanded today by the District delegation to the Democratic National Convention.

The proposed civil rights law for Washington was listed as one feature of a resolution approved by the 12-member District group calling for a "liberal" civil rights plank in the Democratic platform.

Segregation practices in Washington were sharply scored in the report of the President's Commission on Civil Rights. Action of the District group in calling for a civil rights law for Washington thus reinforced the group's stand for nomination of President Truman, and against the Southern coalition fighting the President on the civil rights issue.

The District civil rights resolution was adopted at a closed caucus in the Penn Sheraton Hotel. The action was announced by John Wattaway, chairman of the delegation. He said the civil rights stand was taken unanimously.

Six Points Stressed

The District resolution said the liberal civil rights plank in the Democratic campaign platform should put the party on record as favoring: Tues.

1. A fair employment practices law. 7-13-48
2. Antipoll tax legislation.
3. Antilynching legislation.
4. A ban on racial discrimination in the armed forces.
5. The civil rights law for the National Capital.
6. Exclusion of any tie-up between States' rights demands and the civil rights program.

The District delegation also voted support for a Washington home rule plank identical to the one included in the 1948 Republican campaign platform. It says: "We favor self-government for the residents of the Nation's Capital."

If that is not to be adopted by the Democratic platform writers, the District group agreed that it would accept the 1944 Democratic platform declaration in support of District suffrage.

1944 Plank Less Specific

The Post

The 1944 Democratic plank said: "We favor the extension of the right of suffrage to the people of the District of Columbia."

The caucus formally ratified the following District delegation officials previously chosen in Washington. Washington, D.C.

John Wattawa, chairman; Arthur Clarendon Smith, vice chairman; Mrs. Kathleen Louchheim, secretary; Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox and Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, members of the resolutions committees; James Francis Reilly, credentials committee; William L. Houston, rules committee; A. L. Wheeler, committee on permanent organization; Mrs. Estelle Pearce, committee to notify the presidential nominee; and Edward Williams, committee to notify the vice presidential nominee. Tues.

Four honorary convention officials were chosen: William L. Houston, honorary president; Tilford E. Dudley, honorary assistant vice president; A. L. Wheeler, honorary secretary; and Arthur Clarendon Smith, honorary assistant secretary. 7-13-48

Republican Congress Hit by Barkley In Appeal to People of Nation

Philadelphia, July 12.—With a slashing attack on the Republican "wrecking crew" in Congress, Senator Alben W. Barkley tonight keynoted the thirtieth national convention of the Democratic Party with an appeal to the people of the Nation to support the forward march of progress under his party's leadership.

With the first ballot nomination of President Truman assured, party managers here aimed at a fast windup on Wednesday night.

National Chairman J. Howard McGrath said there is a "strong possibility" that President Truman may come here Wednesday night to accept his nomination in person.

Appeal to People Planned

The Post

Weary of what they term the "hari-kari" preconvention tactics of Southern Democrats and a few left-wing splinter factions, party managers pressed for a speed-up convention that will end in three days. If they are successful, the convention which opened here today will be one of the shortest Democratic conclaves in history.

Party managers are anxious to carry their case to the country in the belief that the dissident voices raised here are those of politicians rather than of the people.

That appeal to the people to support the Democratic Party as the force which will achieve a "progressive, dynamic democracy" was sounded today by Chairman McGrath at the opening convention session. Washington, D.C.

The Democratic Party, said Barkley, has an obligation to "march forward on the highway of human advancement, both here and throughout the world." Tues.

Barkley Quotes Jefferson

7-13-48

In an oblique reference to the civil rights fight which has been keeping the Democratis Party in a turmoil, Barkley referred to the "immortal words of Thomas Jefferson in the Declaration of Independence—"we hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal."

Jefferson singled out no creed or color, Barkley pointed out, but included all men.

"The equality which he proclaimed was equality in the right to enjoy the blessings of free government in which they may participate, and to which they have given their consent."

Barkley, seasoned veteran of many a bitterly fought campaign, outlined for the Democrats and major ground of attack on the Republican Party during the coming campaign.

No Acceptable Plank Given Consideration; 'Reservations Made'

Truce Is Rejected

Remaining Group Likely To Nominate Russell As Anti-Truman Man

By Leroy Simms

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — Thirteen of Alabama's 26 vote delegation were ready Tuesday to walk out of the Democratic convention if any of the suggested civil rights planks are adopted.

J. Miller Bonner of Camden, a member of the platform committee, said prior to Tuesday afternoon's executive session that no "acceptable civil rights plank" has been given serious consideration.

Bonner, E. C. (Bud) Boswell of Geneva and Ex. Gov. Chauncey Sparks of Eufaula were in the platform session Tuesday.

Boswell and Bonner both are pledged to leave the convention hall over the civil rights issue.

Looks Bad

Sparks, leaving the committee session for a moment, said "it looks bad," in reply to questions from reporters. The Advertiser

Asked if he meant it "looks bad for your side," Sparks answered "that's right." Sparks is a member of the anti-walkout group, all anti-Truman and anti-civil rights but pledged to remain in the convention.

An effort was made Tuesday to get the walkouters to remain in the convention long enough to cast votes for Arkansas' Gov. Ben Laney for president. Members of the delegation refused, however. Montgomery, Ala.

They listed as the reason this statement of their stand, used in their campaigns by the state executive committee: Wed.

"Our delegates to the Philadelphia convention will walk out of the said convention without further participation therein if the convention adopts any part of the impossible, obnoxious and unthinkable provisions of the so-called civil rights program of Harry S. Truman." 7-14-48

Several members of the walkout group planned to leave here Wednesday. Others made travel reservations for Thursday.

Choose Russell

With the walkout group apparently certain to be outside the convention by that time, it appeared certain that Alabama's remaining delegates would nominate Senator Richard B. Russell, of Georgia, as their anti-Truman choice. The Advertiser

Roy D. McCord, of Gadsden, has been at work on a nominating speech. Since Alabama is first on the list of states, Russell's name thus would be the first placed before the convention. Montgomery, Ala.

Alabama delegates rejected overtures for a settlement of their differences with party leaders Tuesday. Boswell and Handy Ellis, delegation chairman, said the group turned down a proposal from National Chairman J. Howard McGrath. They said this proposal would have included a return to the two-thirds rule on presidential nominations—a regulation dropped at the 1936 convention. Wed. 7-14-48

In return, Boswell and Ellis said, the Southern delegations would have accepted civil rights and Taft-Hartley repeal planks.

Members of both factions of the Alabama delegation planned full attendance at convention hall Tuesday night and for Wednesday's day session. Ellis said all members want to be on the floor when the platform is brought up.

White Rights Advocate Assailed by Southerners

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

PHILADELPHIA

Southern members of the Democratic platform drafting committee, who sat in imperturbable silence Thursday, when colored spokesmen demanded that President Truman's civil rights proposals be included in the party's program, became clamorous with rage Friday, when a white Southerner voiced the same demands. Sat.

Aubrey Williams of Montgomery, Ala., former head of the National Youth Administration, moved the Southerners to give vent to their spleen when he said it was mainly Southern Democratic leaders who opposed the Truman program—not the people. 7-17-48

Immediately Chauncey Sparks, former Governor of Alabama, heatedly declared that Williams represents nobody but himself and does not carry any weight, adding that he "spoke for about 1% of the intelligent people in my State."

Hurls Communist Charge

Williams, who is the publisher of The Southern Farmer and is president of the Alabama Farmers Union, said that when white people keep colored ones in an inferior position they "brutalize every decent instinct of mankind."

Sparks then rejoined, "When you use the word brutalize I think you are going a little too far." He then asked Williams if members of the Senate did not charge him with being "more or less" of a Communist when he was nominated for the post of Rural Electrification Administrator. Sat.

Williams replied: "Oh, yes, but I am more hated by the Communists than you are." He added that he was against any kind of segregation. "A man is a man to me, regardless of the color of his skin," he stated. 7-17-48

Tells of Ballot Injustices

When Sparks sputtered that colored people in Alabama were treated fairly and properly and were content to be by themselves with their separate institutions, the New Dealer told the ex-Governor: The Afro-American

"You know perfectly well if a colored person tries to register in Montgomery his chances are about one-tenth of that of a white man. A colored man told me he stood in line in Mobile for two weeks. Let's don't pretend."

Relations Tense, He Charges

When Sparks insisted that the relationship between people of the two faces was "friendly" in Alabama, Williams flatly contradicted him, saying, "There is great tension." Baltimore

Charles E. Shepperd, Florida legisator, was stirred to interject, shouting loudly: Md.

"We do not propose to tolerate any further interference in States' rights in the South. We and the colored man understand each other. 7-17-48

UNPOPULAR WITH ANTI-TRUMAN FORCES

Sunday Continues Quiet After Pepper Announcement

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga

Mon. 7-12-48

By RALPH McGILL

PHILADELPHIA, July 11—A quiet Sunday evening received the news that Sen. Claude Pepper, of Florida, had determined to campaign for the Democratic nomination in opposition to President Harry S. Truman. After the news had been received, the Sunday evening still was quiet. It was, in fact, quieter than ever.

The Pepper announcement was received largely with laughter, as even Henry Wallace is about as popular with the established anti-Truman forces as is Claude Pepper. From the Truman viewpoint, the campaign by Pepper is a fortunate one. There is no leadership behind Pepper and his claims tonight that 22 States are backing him are not believed.

There was speculation that the forces seeking to draft Douglas had switched to Pepper. At any rate, the Pepper campaign had not got off the ground at a late hour Sunday night and was not expected to have any altitude by Monday.

The Constitution

No one is cooking with gas at this convention but in a dozen or more hastily-improvised kitchens, a lot of pots were swung and some of them had garlic in them.

Over in the Ben Franklin Hotel some of the revolting delegations from the South were putting on an act which made the scene with the three witches from Shakespeare's Macbeth where there are three crones cooking up a pot of trouble for Macbeth look very polite indeed. When I looked in on it they were putting in a leg of Gen. Lee's horse and the hip bone of a Yankee soldier killed at Gettysburg.

Atlanta, Ga.

There were those from Louisiana, Texas, Georgia, North Carolina and Florida, including quite a few from Alabama, who were trying to make sense of it and organize some sort of fight against Harry S. Truman which is what they think the South wants. But they were having so much trouble with the whoopers and shouters they couldn't even agree to support Georgia's Sen. Richard B. Russell for the nomination or, for that matter, anyone else. The crazy ones kept talking about Lee and Jackson and so the South again was deprived of a constructive, sensible anti-Truman program.

Mon. 7-12-48

That was one pot that was boiling over.

Both CIO and AFL were having trouble with cooking up their political stews. They don't care much for Truman. So far they haven't been able to get a repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act in the platform.

They frankly are withholding endorsement so as to have greater trading value. The Democrats know it. Both are playing a waiting game.

Meanwhile, a thousand conflicting reports swirled about the hotel lobbies like the little dust whirls that one sees along country roads in the hot Summer time when a heat storm is about to blow up. They whirl frantically, blowing dirt in the eyes of the traveler, and then subside, only to spring up again at another place.

The vice presidential pots are cooking and some of them are very smelly.

I still think that Sen. Barkley and Sen. Scott Lucas are the best bets. But this is Sunday night and it will be tomorrow some time, and maybe Tuesday, before the decision is made.

This morning Sen. Barkley, the grand person from Kentucky, was asked, by a very important person on the Committee, if he would take it. He replied that he didn't want it and thought he would be of more value in the Senate if he were not tagged with having been a candidate.

He then made a remark which is the only one that has been generally received with open arms in a convention which has produced little to amuse.

"If the White House asks me," he said, "I will take it out of loyalty to the Party and because of the honor of it. But, if they want to they had better hurry because I don't want any warmed-over biscuits."

This afternoon Francis Myers, of Pennsylvania, Chariman of the Platform Committee, said the civil rights plank had not been discussed save to bring it up and agree to pass it over until the other and less controversial platform planks had been written.

There are some on the Committee who are trying to have written a general plank such as the one the Republicans wrote and to put in also a general and rather meaningless states' right plank.

It is sure to go to the floor.

If it doesn't contain the full platform of civil rights, such as Dewey personally pledges for Republicans, the minority report will be brought to the floor.

So the convention will have those fireworks and there are some of the Southern delegations who have brought old English walking shoes here and who will wear them that day so they may walk out in style.

It is no secret at all that some of the Committee at top levels are angry because they can't get any direction from the White House. Of course, if they got it there would be others screaming about White House pressure. So it doesn't really matter.

I had dinner last night with Sen. Barkley at a down-town restaurant. He is easily the most popular Democrat here. He is a grand person and one whom the Democratic Party owes a lot. It really is wrong to ask him to accept the Vice Presidency spot in a year such as this.

We could hardly get out of the hotel for people stopping him to shake his hand. At the restaurant the people came over in throngs so that we could hardly eat. One visitor put on a show. Slightly drunk and very large, so that the Senator said, "Son, you are big enough to be five or six ordinary constituents." The South Carolinian put a lamb-like hand on the Senator's head and shook it, saying, loud enough for the whole restaurant to hear: "Folks, I love him like a daddy." He continued to shake the Senator's head and said, "I love all Southern people." He brooded on it a moment and then said, "Yes, that's right. I do. All Southern people."

The Senator was the center of attraction from Northern groups as well, some delegates from Rochester insisting on sending for a photographer and being photographed with him. Barkley is one of the great Americans.

The argument against him is that he is from an adjoining state and that the Party, facing almost sure defeat, is in no condition to compromise, but must get Douglas on there to appeal to the liberals and to the labor vote so as to help carry state tickets and keep the Party in the East together.

So, the long day drew to a close and the cooks kept the political pots boiling in every hotel and on almost every floor.

No one knew much for sure. The sure things were few indeed. Truman will be nominated. That is sure. The South missed its chance to put forward a progressive platform of opposition which would have enough substance and dignity to attract the anti-Truman support, when too many of its leaders, chiefly Mississippians, South Carolinians and Arkansans who want to put themselves in as the nominee, would not agree on anyone else.

The tidelands oil case was dragged in by Texas. The South again gave itself a black eye by appearing unable to agree on even the manner of its opposition.

There are real reasons to oppose some of Harry Truman's policies. But they have not been gathered together and presented with sense and force.

Also sure is the fact there will be a floor fight on the civil liberties platform plank.

Georgia is sure to oppose Truman, but the Georgia position is that they will fight Truman as long as they can and then leave it up to the Georgia people to determine by their November votes what they want to do about his nomination. That is an honest position. However anyone may differ with it. It is not a cry-baby selfish act and no one from Georgia is trying to elevate himself at the expense of the South as are some of the great leaders from Mississippi, Arkansas and South Carolina, plus a few from Alabama, who have put self above the South's interests, and above the interests of those who sought—as did Georgia, to find someone on whom to agree on as the anti-Truman candidate.

Progressive Democrats Get National Support For Their Fight Against White Party

Columbia, S.C.

The Lighthouse and Informer

Sun. 7-4-48

National support for Progressive Democrats when they appear for seats at Philadelphia July 12, appeared certain in a letter state chairman John H. McCray made public Monday.

The letter came from James E. Williams, eastern vice president of the National Council of Negro Democrats, of Jamaica, N. Y., who wrote partially:

"For the past few days Mr. Emmett S. Cunningham (of Detroit, Mich.), our national president, has been in conference with several of the key men of the Council, and we have agreed that your fight in th convention to seat your delegates in Philadelphia is a just fight; we have agreed to join the fight with you and other states in the South whose plight you also represent."

Mr. Williams said that a pre-convention caucus on this battle has been scheduled for 7 p. m., July, at the Hotel Chesterfield in Philadelphia, which will serve as headquarters for the Council which will serve as headquarters for the Council, which is meeting simultaneously with the national party.

PUTS HEAT TO SOUTH

The announcement of this national backing by Negro Democrats for full recognition of southern members puts the proverbial heat behind the lily-white delegation from South Carolina. It also puts the party leaders on notice and perhaps gives more concern than the recent so-called southern revolt.

The Lighthouse & Informer

Clearly, the national party will have to run the risk of recognizing South Carolina's Progressive Democrats as part of South Carolina's seated delegates and irked segments in the South, or reject them and incur the displeasure of northern Negro delegates in important and decisive states.

Unless there is atonement and a backing down on one or both sides somebody is going to walk away from Philadelphia and take with them many sorely needed votes for the all-important November elections.

Columbia, S.C.

In 1944, Progressive Democrats went to the convention arguing that it was the obligation of the national party to amend its rules so as to make it impossible for units practicing racial discriminations on membership to be recognized. This is the basic contention again this year, but with more weight backing.

7-4-48

SOUTHERN STATES TO HELP

In addition to the powerful northern bloc behind them, the Progressive Democrats will have also the support of delegations from Arkansas, Alabama and possibly Georgia, though the last named hasn't yet committed itself. But since Negro Democrats in that state also belong to the national Council, it can be expected that Georgia will also line up with and behind the South Carolinians.

Sun.

Moreover, indictions were that key party members throughout the country were also behind Progressive Democrats this year and, a contingent of white Democrats in South Carolina who are opposed to the anti-Negro policy the state maintains, even after Negroes have legally achieved the right to party participation.

7-4-48

The Progressive Democrats will probably entrain for Philadelphia the latter part of the coming week. They will number 28 delegates and a few alternates. Final details for their trip were to be worked out during conference in Washington by this week-end.

The Walkout Now

The News
Birmingham, Ala.
Sat. 7-16-48

Let there be no doubt of the depth and extent of Southern feelings on the civil and states' rights issues. Though only Mississippi and half of Alabama delegates actually walked out of the Democratic National Convention after adoption of the amended civil rights plank and failure to include a strong states' rights declaration, Southern delegates generally showed how strongly they opposed this outcome of the deliberations. They will not be readily reconciled.

348

Many Southern Democrats will continue to support the Democratic Party, if only as the less unpalatable choice. But the Republicans seem likely to make substantial gains in this region. And the voting conceivably may be so close in the country as a whole that Southern states may have a decisive voice in the outcome.

* * *

If the final choice seemed to be between a Democratic victory with Truman and Barkley and a Republican victory with Dewey and Warren, practical political considerations and traditional sentiment still would keep many Southern Democrats within the party. But it is too early yet to judge what that prospect may

The News

Meanwhile, the projected convention of the walkout movement in Birmingham Saturday raises many questions. The candidates of such a group obviously would have no chance of election. These Democrats who are so much concerned about the civil and states' rights issues can find no comfort in Dewey. It is very doubtful that they will be able to swing behind them any large proportion of the regular Democratic organization leaders in other states of the South.

Just where the walkout will go, what it can accomplish, then, continues very hard to see.

Birmingham, Ala.

Yet Alabama Democrats, on the face of the present situation, have no way of casting effective votes for Truman, if they wish to do so. That is going to disturb many of our people. It may react sharply against the walkout movement. Doubtless efforts will be continued, however hopeless they may seem, to alter this situation. 7-16-48

'Rebel Yell' Walkout By South Reported

By JOHN B. HENRY

The Commercial Appeal

International News Service Writer

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—Irate Dixie leaders Saturday night reportedly laid plans to proclaim the Southern States' Rights case on the Democratic Convention floor, then walk out amid Rebel yells and the strains of music from the era of the War Between the States.

International News Service learned that key men in the so-called Southern revolt feel that, as far as actual results in the convention are concerned, their cause is lost and their strategy must proceed accordingly.

348

Governor Laney of Arkansas, chairman of the States' Rights group, told INS:

"I doubt if even adoption of our plank could stop the walkout. These folks won't vote for Harry Truman."

Memphis, Tenn.

Preliminary strategy is said to call for the States' Rights plank to be presented first to the party's Platform Committee, and then to be read from the convention floor as a means of "clearly stating the South's case."

Sun. 7-11-48

At this junction, according to these plans, the Arkansas delegation will lead the States Rights' "bolters" out of the Convention Hall. There appeared to be no ready estimate of how many state delegations would be ready to follow through in the walkout gesture.

Southerners Firm In Opposition To 10-Point Program

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—A variation of the issue that ripped the Democratic party 60 years ago and allowed the then new Republican party to capture the national election is the chief barrier to complete party harmony facing delegates to the 1948 convention that got underway here Monday.

348

Sixty years ago the big question was slavery.

This year it's civil rights, specifically the 10-point civil rights program outlined by President Truman in February of this year.

Issue Explosive

It advocates equal racial economic opportunity, federal legislation against poll tax and lynching, and the end of racial segregation in the armed forces.

Because of the explosive nature of the issue every effort is being made to reach agreement on the civil rights plank behind closed doors to preclude a fiery floor debate that might prove damaging to the party at the ballot box.

VOTE TO SECEDE

PHILADELPHIA—A rump convention in Birmingham, Ala., next Saturday was planned by delegates from eleven southern states who voted in a caucus here to bolt the Democratic party if President Truman is nominated.

Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida declared he would seek the presidential nomination.

Democratic chieftains, however, declared President Truman would not be stopped by the threatened secession of the Dixie rebels.

Russell Nominated After Southern Revolt

(Special To The World)

PHILADELPHIA — (SNS) — Georgia's delegation to the Democratic Convention here last night prolonged its (Civil War) fight against President Truman's Civil Rights proposals by nominating as a candidate for the presidency, Senator Richard B. Russell.

Atlanta, Ga.

The nomination of Sen. Russell by Charles Bloch, of Macon, came after the Alabama and Mississippi delegation walked out of the convention hall in heated resentment, resolving steadfastly that they would have no part of the Civil Rights resolution passed by a majority of the delegates earlier in the afternoon.

Thurs. 7-15-48

Mr. Bloch's nomination of the Senator appeared more as an inflamatory denouncement of the party's espousal of Civil Rights rather than a nominating speech. His reference to the Senator's qualifications were far and few in between his haranguing against proposals of civil liberties.

MAKES WARNING

"The Democrats can no longer take the South for granted," the speaker warned. He claimed that the party cannot elect a president without the Southern vote. "You shall not crucify the South on the cross of Civil Rights," the speaker went on to say. "We do not propose to return to the Era of Reconstruction."

Thurs. 7-15-48

As if by mere chance, the speaker did cite briefly why he thought Sen. Russell should carry the majority of the convention votes. He termed the Senator an outspoken opposer to Civil Rights legislation.

During the mass demonstration which followed Russell's nomination, other Southern states were seen to join the Georgia delegation, but the hand writing was clearly visible that in the end Georgia would find few states willing to stand pat on Sen. Russell's nomination over and against the Truman bandwagon expected to rally later.

When the Alabama delegation walked out, alternate delegates replaced them, pledging their support to the Georgia nomination.

N. J. Delegation Backs Plank on Full Civil Rights

State Banner Leads Way for Demonstration After Speech by Humphrey

PHILADELPHIA, July 14 (AP).—New Jersey Democrats today threw their thirty-six convention votes enthusiastically in favor of a broadened civil rights plank in the party platform and helped push it to victory.

Archibald S. Alexander, chairman of the delegation, who has often expressed himself strongly in favor of full civil rights, said he and the delegation were "tickled pink" with its approval and inclusion in the national party platform.

The New Jersey banner was hoisted high by Mr. Alexander when the report spelling out President Truman's civil rights program was introduced.

At the conclusion of a speech by Minneapolis' Mayor Hubert Humphrey presenting the report, fifty-eight-year-old delegate Joseph T. Conroy, of Elizabeth, snatched the New Jersey signpost from its socket and advanced to the platform—first of the demonstrators to pluge the sign into the air before the rostrum. Other states' banners joined.

"He was a real hero," Mayor Frank H. Eggers of Jersey City commented.

One of his Union County associates remarked that Mr. Conroy, a former postman, "was a good man to walk around—he's had experience."

It was pointed out by Mayor Eggers that as the total vote count was 651½ to 582½ and New Jersey's thirty-six votes—if cast for the other side—would have defeated the report. A majority of 618 votes is needed to carry a motion.

Thu. 7-15-48

On the rollcall for the Texas "states' rights" minority report, Mr. Alexander announced: "Mr. Chairman, New Jersey casts thirty-six votes nay."

Earlier in the day, the delegation formally approved its choice of the Truman-Barkley ticket.

Placards with President Truman's picture were distributed to the delegation in the afternoon in preparation for the night demonstration after the nominating speech.

Ritchie Asserts Slap At South Too Dangerous

By FRANCIS M. LEMAY

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— Platform committee supporters of President Truman's civil rights program decided at a "rump" session Sunday to carry their fight to the convention floor. Many Dixie delegates promptly threatened to walk out of the convention if they succeed.

The Democrats' fight over the race issue boiled up to the point where Southerners, if they take a walk, may nominate their own candidate for president and write their own platform at a later convention down South.

Substitute Plank

Rep. Celler of New York announced that "a rump meeting of liberals" from the platform writing subcommittee had organized to present a substitute civil rights plank to the convention if the committee does not present language backing Mr. Truman's program. The Truman proposals call for anti-lynching, anti-poll tax, fair employment and "anti-discrimination" legislation.

Among those attending the meeting, Celler said, were himself, Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey, Jr., of Minneapolis, Mrs. Esther Murray of California, William Ritchie of Nebraska and former Senator Hugh B. Mitchell of Washington — all platform committee members.

Celler said the "rump meeting" also discussed platform planks that would call for repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law, federal aid to education, a federal housing program, and a revision of the arms embargo to permit shipment of arms to the new state of Israel. Mon. 7-12-48

New Deal

Senator Myers of Pennsylvania, platform chairman, told a news conference "I think the platform will follow generally in outline the philosophy of the New Deal and the Roosevelt program and the Truman program." Montgomery, Ala.

He said it in general would advocate what Mr. Truman has advocated in his messages to Congress, but he declined to say how specific it will get on civil rights. Mon. 7-12-48

Myers told the reporters he had not heard of the rump meeting and said "there has nothing happened so far that would justify a rump session."

Celler had complained that all the members of the 108-member platform committee, except the five-member writing group, are "being kept in the dark" on what is going on. Myers said the small group is only getting some words together for the larger group to work on and revamp as it sees fit.

He said the drafting group which labored nearly all night probably would work througout Sunday night in an effort to produce a preliminary document by Monday.

When reporters asked if Mr. Truman had submitted platform suggestions in writing, Myers said "I'm getting suggestions from everywhere." He said he had talked with Clark Clifford, White House counsel.

While the party rift on civil right appeared to be widening, the element of compromise still showed itself.

Avoid Slap

Ritchie of Nebraska told reporters he attended the "rump" meeting but "I did not go so far as the others in insisting upon the details of the President's civil rights program. I told them that we cannot slap the South in the face." The Advertiser

The Nebraskan said the group was in unison in urging a plank to permit arms shipments to Israel. Montgomery, Ala.

The outlook for a slam-bang convention floor flight widened Sunday as Dan Moody, former Texas governor and a platform committee member, issued a statement declaring "so-called civil rights" advocates aim "to take the South through a new reconstruction era—this time by federal law rather than federal bayonets." Mon. 7-12-48

Meanwhile, some of the five-member platform-writing group despaired of harmony efforts as they returned to a secret huddle after working until 3:30 this morning.

1944 Plank

One source said the group tentatively had approved a restatement of the 1944 racial plank that recognized that "racial and religious minorities have the right to live, develop and vote equally with all citizens and share the rights that are guaranteed by our constitution."

This may be accompanied by a declaration against federal interference with states' rights.

Some Southerners regarded the 1944 plank as too strong.

On the other hand, mayor Hubert H. Humphrey, Jr., of Minneapolis, a platform committee member, laid down a direct threat of a convention floor battle if the party's document of principles fails to come up with a strong stand for the basic points in Truman's civil rights program. Mon.

The 1944 plank was too weak, Humphrey said. 7-12-48

It was the President's civil rights message to congress—calling for anti-lynch, anti-poll tax, fair employment and "anti-discrimination" legislation—that caused the intra-party rebellion in the South.

When reporters asked if Mr. Truman had submitted platform suggestions in writing, Myers said "I'm getting suggestions from everywhere." He said he had talked with Clark Clifford, White House counsel. Mon.

A CIO political action committee spokesman said delegates to the convention who are members of the CIO would support in the convention a move to substitute a strong civil rights plank, if such a plank is not presented by the platform committee. 7-12-48

Blast from Moody

The outlook for a slam-bang convention floor fight widened today as Dan Moody, former Texas governor and a platform committee member, issued a statement declaring "so-called civil rights" advocates aim "to take the South through a new Reconstruction era—this time by federal law rather than federal bayonets."

Meanwhile, some of the five-member platform-writing group despaired of harmony efforts as they returned to a secret huddle.

Too Weak, Says Humphrey

The 1944 plank was too weak, Humphrey said.

Georgia's platform committee members were urged to present in the convention a substitute plank if the proposed civil rights declaration is unsatisfactory to the South. The Times-Picayune

Not all Southerners were unhappy, however, at the idea of adopting the 1944 civil rights plank. New Orleans, La.

George D. Key of Oklahoma City, member of the platform committee, predicted the 1944 language would be used again and added that he believes it would be satisfactory to the uninstructed Oklahoma delegation as well as to the similarly unbound Texas group. Mon.

Moody of Texas took a blast in his statement at "misguided people" who he said seek to return "reconstruction" to the South. He said the Negroes he knows down South are "not in sympathy with the program these so-called leaders are sponsoring."

Moody is the only Southerner on the five-member group now drawing the first draft of the platform. 7-12-48

"The issue of civil rights has been presented on the basis of conditions that do not exist," he said. "The people of the South are as much opposed to mob violence as the people of the North are opposed to riots and gang wars among rival criminal elements in the populous centers of the North and East.

"The only difference is that we in the South have been more effective in putting a stop to mob violence in the South than our equally well intentioned good citizens of the North have been in curbing gang violence there."

Here's Text On Minority Plank

PHILADELPHIA, July 15—(AP)—The text of a minority plank on states' rights which was defeated yesterday after debate by former Govs. Dan Moody, of Texas; Chauncey Sparks, of Alabama, and Sen. Clyde Hoey, of North Carolina:

Birmingham, Ala.

"The Democratic Party stands for the principle that the constitution contemplated and established an indestructible union of sovereign states and that the general federal government and the several states under the constitution have their separate fields of power and permitted activities.

"Traditionally it has been, and remains, a part of the faith of the Democratic Party that the Federal government shall not encroach upon the reserved powers of the states by the centralization of government or otherwise.

"Firmly embedded in the American ideal of government is the principle of equal rights to all persons regardless of race or creed, and the Democratic Party repeats its adherence to this principle. Within the limitations imposed by the 14th and 15th amendments to the constitution upon their powers, the states have the right to control their internal affairs and enforce police regulations." 7-15-48

THE TEXT OF a second minority plank on states' rights, filed by Cecil Sims, delegate from Nashville, Tenn.:

"The Democratic Party reaffirms its complete adherence to the fundamental principle of states' rights as reserved in the federal constitution and pledges that it will oppose any attempt, by legislation or otherwise, to invade the exclusive jurisdiction of the states in their domestic affairs." South Defeated On Civil Platform Indorses Truman

Courier-Journal. Louisville

States'-Rights Proposal Beaten

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 14.—The South went down in overwhelming defeat on the racial issue today. The Democratic convention rejected its States'-rights plank and then slapped into the party platform an indorsement of President Truman's civil-rights stand.

Alabama delegates frantically waved their State flag, seeking recognition to announce that 13 of the 26 were ready to walk out of the convention. But the shouting delegates recessed before the Alabamans could be heard.

The crucial convention action came in the face of a solemn warning from one Dixie spokesman that it would mean destruction of the Democratic Party in the South.

Separate Convention Planned.

Some Southern delegates quickly made plans to call a separate convention, nominate their own candidate for President, and write their own platform.

The history-making political development, that may determine whether Democrats will be one party or two, rocked the convention just before a majority of delegates shouted approval of 5,000-word, 1948 "Roosevelt-Truman" platform.

First the convention refused, 925 to 309, to put a States-rights plank in the platform. This plank, offered by former Governor Dan Moody of Texas, would have declared that States have the right to run their own internal affairs and police powers. Thus the South had sought, while joining in support of a general civil-rights plank, to have the convention declare that the States have jurisdiction over the legal processes governing those rights.

Plank Is Strengthened.

(It was President Truman's civil-rights proposal—for antilynch, antipoll tax, antidiscrimination and fair-employment-practices legislation—that split the party early this year.)

Then, to rub it in, the convention adopted an amendment to the platform sponsored by Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey of Minneapolis and former Representative Andrew Biemiller of Wisconsin, indorsing the President's civil-rights stand. The vote was 651½ to [illegible].

The amended and strengthened civil-rights plank, as finally approved, declares:

"The Democratic Party is responsible for the great civil-rights gains made in recent years in eliminating unfair and illegal discrimination based on race, creed or color.

7-15-48

"The Democratic Party commits itself to continuing its efforts to eradicate all racial, religious and economic discrimination.

Truman Is Commended.

"We again state our belief that racial and religious minorities must have the right to live, the right to work, the right to vote, the full and equal protection of the laws, on a basis of equality with all citizens as guaranteed by the Constitution.

"We highly commend President Harry Truman for his courageous stand on the issue of civil rights.

"We call upon the Congress to support our President in guaranteeing these basic and fundamental American principles—the right to full and equal political participation; the right to equal opportunity of employment; the right of security of person, and the right of equal treatment in the service and defense of our nation."

Representative John Bell Williams, Mississippi delegate, issued a statement saying, "It drives a knife into the heart of the party and reads the South out of the party."

Chairman James S. Peters of the Georgia delegation said, "It is even more than the well-known Truman civil-rights program."

Former Governor Maurice Tobin of Massachusetts was one of those speaking against the States'-rights plank.

The deep South and Texas stood solid for States' rights, but the border states—including Maryland, Kentucky, West Virginia, and Oklahoma—opposed it. Dixie got only a scattering of votes outside its boundaries.

Boos and Cheers Heard.

The South was overwhelmed by the votes from heavily populated Northern states.

Voting came after resounding debate, punctuated by cheers, catcalls, and boos.

Mayor Humphrey shouted to the convention that the words, "All men are equal," in the declaration of Independence mean equality without regard to race. He demanded a "new emancipation proclamation" with a party declaration on "human rights" instead of States' rights.

Texas' Moody, author of the states'-rights proposal, strode to the microphone and told the convention he never had bolted a Democratic convention and "I never will." He said he did not want to deny anybody the rights guaranteed by the Constitution—but he wanted the States to have their guaranteed rights, too.

Courier Journal Louisville Ky.

Warns of Party Breakup.

Cecil Sims of Tennessee offered another states'-rights proposal, but it was shouted down. While some Southerners talked of walking out, Sims said, "We came here as Democrats and we expect to leave as Democrats." But he declared, "If we are defeated, then I say to you here today that you are witnessing the dissolution of the Democratic Party in the South."

Southerners pleaded in the name of Thomas Jefferson for approval of the states'-rights plank.

The 1948 Democratic platform echoes Truman's bitter attacks on the Republican-controlled 80th Congress, blaming it for most of the nation's ills at home and abroad.

Would Curb Inflation.

Along with its politically sizzling racial plank, the platform calls for many far-reaching policies to meet the challenge of the G.O.P. Dewey-Warren ticket. It calls for:

Courier Journal

1. A curb on the "Republican inflation" by adopting Truman's program to manage living costs with limited price controls and rationing, if necessary.

2. Repeal of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act and a boost in the legal minimum wage for labor from the present 40 cents an hour to 75 cents.

Louisville Ky.

3. A "continuing" vigorous international policy; an international police force for the United Nations; curtailment of the U.N. veto; all-out "humanitarian" financial support for the Marshall plan for European recovery.

4. Action against communism; the maintenance of an Army, Navy, and Air Force strong enough to defend America under all circumstances; effective international control of the atom bomb.

5. Revision of the arms embargo to permit shipment of war materials to the new State of Israel.

6. World press freedom as the "foundation on which freedom can exist in every nation."

Says After Seeing Truman Democrats' 1944 Plank Would Satisfy the South

By Robert J. Donovan

WASHINGTON, June 22.—A clew as to how the Democratic National Convention may try to soften the friction over President Truman's civil rights program emerged Tuesday from a meeting between the President and Representative John E. Rankin, Democrat, of Mississippi.

The clew, was supplied by Mr. Rankin, who, in a statement prepared after he left the White House, said: "If that convention adopts the same plank on this question that was inserted in the platform of 1944, I am assured that it will be adhered to."

When Mr. Rankin was asked, "adhered to by whom?" he said that the statement would have to speak for itself. One plausible interpretation was that the 1944 civil rights plank, if reiterated, would be acceptable and "adhered to" by Southern Democrats who since last winter have been threatening a revolt against Mr. Truman over the issue.

As a result of this dissension in the South, it has been generally believed that the handling of the civil rights plank would be one of the toughest and potentially most explosive problems at the Democratic convention, which opens July 12 in Philadelphia.

Thurs.

Mr. Rankin has been one of the bitterest foes of the President's program, but after leaving the White House Tuesday he said: "I am not without hope that the Democratic convention will reach a satisfactory agreement on the civil rights issue."

Herald Tribune

He said that if the convention re-adopts the 1944 plank "it would be far less offensive to the people of the South than the plank on this subject inserted in the Republican platform of 1944 and which I understand is being inserted in its platform at Philadelphia now."

The Democratic platform of 1944, after asserting that mankind believes in the "four freedoms" and that the Democratic party believes that the nation with the greatest measure of social justice is capable of the greatest achievement, aid: "We believe that racial and religious minorities have the right to live, develop and vote equally with all citizens and share the rights that are guaranteed by our Constitution. Congress should exert its full Constitutional powers to protect those rights."

The 1944 plank was thus phrased in general terms, whereas the President's program is specific and includes such proposals as anti-poll tax legislation, anti-lynching legislation, anti-Jim Crow legislation and other measures to bar discrimination.

The 1944 Republican platform specifically favored anti-poll tax and anti-lynching legislation and a fair employment practices commission and pledged a Congressional investigation into segregation of Negroes in the armed forces. Mr. Rankin said Tuesday that insertion of the civil rights program in the 1948 Republican platform "must be a disappointment to decent Republicans throughout the nation."

As We See It

What The CIO's Policies Mean To The Negro People

By Abner W. Berry

SOMEWHERE on the floor of the Democratic Convention near the Alabama standard sits a man named Eugene Connor. From his post as Public Safety Commissioner of Birmingham, Connor helps direct the white supremacy campaign throughout the state. In Birmingham the Safety Commissioner has charge of the police force, a fact which makes Connor's activity in behalf of white supremacy more effective—he can enforce his undemocratic beliefs. For the past few months his cops have maintained a death-to-Negroes average of about one-a-week, a gruesome detail which the Democratic convention is not likely to discuss.

34d

Like the other seven delegates-at-large from Alabama, Connor won his seat with the slogan "Safeguard Segregation!" The ballot on which he ran has a picture of a Plymouth chicken at the top. Above the chicken are the words: "For the Right." Directly below the chicken are the words: "White Supremacy." I leave it to the readers to figure out the logic and sanity of this trademark used by one of our great sovereign states.

The platform committee of the Democratic convention has already indicated its readiness to appease those in the convention who, like Connor, have the blood of Negroes on their hands. The Honorable John W. McCormack, Democrat of old Abolitionist Massachusetts, in a radio interview, said he thought the South would continue to be loyal and follow the platform and candidates of the party. 7-15-48

This utter lack of principle, decency and elementary humanism on the part of capitalist politicians—both Democratic and Republican—betrays the dry rot in our leading political institutions that is an ingredient of fascism. In a bid for power so-called Democrats are willing to shake the bloody hand of a Connor and sell out democracy and the rights of 14,000,000 Negroes for his vote. Even more—Democrats like Sen. J. Howard McGrath, who heads the Democratic National Committee, and Republicans like Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York are willing to grant the killers federal immunity through the device of states' rights.

It is the same moral bankruptcy which is exposed in the Democratic and Republican unity on foreign policy. They allow themselves the privilege of exercising their predatory instincts against each other for the right to rob America. But in order to be able to gobble up great hunks of the global wealth, applying their Jim-crow system throughout, they must unite against the peoples of the world.

EUGENE CONNOR is a part of this global struggle, although he may not be aware of its full implications as he sits and sweats under the glaring kleig lights in Convention Hall. He has contributed his share to its success. But, whereas Connor may not be aware of his complete role, the same cannot be said of labor leaders like CIO President Philip Murray and Emil Rieve, head of the CIO Textile Workers.

Murray may not know Connor, but they stand strangely on a similar platform. Connor is anti-Truman. He is for the Marshall Plan. He hates the "reds" in a way that makes Murray's anti-Communism no more virile than a Churchillian rebuke of Bevin. Although Murray may not know Connor, he nevertheless bears a responsibility for him. Murray's Alabama man, Carey Haigler, head of the State CIO Council, saw to it that no fight was put up against Connor and his white supremacy associates. Haigler, last April, pushed through a CIO endorsement of Connor's Senatorial candidate, John J. Sparkman. Another Murray man, Ben Gage, head of the Jefferson County (Birmingham) CIO Council, is a crony of Connor's. Both of these CIO officials are members of Murray's Steel Workers Union.

IT IS REPORTED from Philadelphia that the 75 CIO delegates are in a gloomy mood as they view the election prospects. But Jack Kroll, national CIO Political Action Committee head, should know that in Birmingham, Ala., the local PAC has done next to nothing to get the Negro vote registered. The fight of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People against the Boswell Amendment has go on unsupported by the CIO-PAC headed by an official from Muray's union.

Murray's underlings in Alabama could act without fear of being called to account by their chief because they were holding the Marshall Plan, anti-Communist line. It is known that there is great sympathy among the Alabama Negroes for the Wallace movement. It is equally certain that they weren't any too hot for the Marshall Plan. The NAACP was called "Communist" by Connor. The Southern Negro Youth Congress was called the same. How, then, could Murray's men fight for civil rights for groups so designated? Of course not!

Under cover of this red-baiting barrage the KKK is growing as a threat to labor and the Negro people. The Alabama Magazine, mouthpiece of Big Business in the state, announced uncritically in a recent issue that there were 8,000 Klan members there.

Behind the gloom of CIO men at the Democratic National Convention are acts by labor men which bear examination and open discussion. Connor, the leader of killer-cops in Birmingham, and the destroyers of democracy he represents, have nothing to be sorry for in the pro-Marshall Plan, anti-Wallace, anti-Communist position of CIO leaders. But to the membership who built the organization it is time to ask for an about-face from certain disaster.

Walkout Protests Civil Rights Plank

Platform Lists Minority Rights

By Alexander H. Uhl
STAR Convention Bureau

CONVENTION HALL, Philadelphia, July 14—The Democratic National Convention late today dramatically amended its official platform to salute President Truman for his courageous stand on civil rights and to spell out four basic rights for minorities:

¶ The right of full and equal political participation.

¶ The right to equal opportunity of employment.

¶ The right to security of person.

¶ The right to equal participation in the service and defense of our nation. 7-15-48

The vote was 651½ for strengthening the civil rights plank and 582½ against it.

Committee Defeated

It came despite efforts of the resolutions committee to have its milder civil liberties plank accepted and it came against the frantic efforts of some of the southern states to get adoption of a states' rights plank which, in effect, would have nullified the civil liberties stand of the party.

The southerners were overwhelmed on their amendment, 925 to 309. 7-15-48

The vote represented a sharp victory for northern liberals who had felt that the drafting committee plank was an advance over the 1944 plank, but that it did not spell out issues such as anti-lynching, anti-poll tax, FEPC and non-segregation in the armed services as specifically as they wanted.

Even as it was, the language finally approved by the full convention was circuitous, but there was little doubt in anyone's mind what was meant. At any rate the Southeenrrs had no doubt about its meaning and fought bitterly to the end.

34d

Fight Anticipated

For the first time the hot and sweat-lined faces of the delegates, tired after two days of oratory, lit up in anticipation of the coming struggle as Sen. Francis J. Myers, chairman of the resolutions committee, finished his reading of the platform and minority reports.

Former Gov. Dan Moody of Texas, in behalf of 15 southern delegates, demanded an amendment to the platform which would have assured the states the "power to regulate and control local affairs and act in the exercise of the police power." 7-15-48

Moody made a strictly constitutional appeal and got applause and some boos. It was his amendment, milder than three others presented by southerners, that represented the test vote on the strength of the South. But already it was clear that the South was licked.

Cecil Sims of Tennessee then presented a much stronger states rights plank which would have pledged the party to oppose any attempt, by legislation or otherwise, to invade the exclusive jurisdiction of the states in their domestic affairs." Sims said he entered the convention as a Democrat and would remain one and that the Tennessee delegation would accept the verdict of the convention. But, he added:

"Your votes will determine whether the Democratic party is to be destroyed. If we are defeated, then I say to you that we are witnessing the dissolution of the Democratic party in the South."

Former Gov. Chauncey Sparks and Walter Silvers of Mississippi, joined in the southern demands for states rights, but the convention by now was tensely waiting for the liberal position and when that came, burst into one of the liveliest demonstrations of the past two days.

It began when Andrew J. Biemiller, of Wisconsin, presented the amendment for the northern liberals. He got his first big break of applause and the first indication of how the convention felt when he read: 7-15-48

"We highly commend President Harry Truman for his courageous stand on the issue of civil rights."

But it was Mayor Hubert Humphrey, Jr., of Minneapolis, spokesman for Americans for Democratic Action and a member of the drafting committee, who sounded the liberal keynote. And he got a striking demonstration from the crowded convention hall.

"We must testify in our platform," he demanded, "that we will support a spelled-our program for civil liberties. It is time for the Democratic Party to get out of the saddle of states' rights and into the saddle for human rights. Now is the time for us to follow the courageous stand on this issue that has been taken by our president, Harry S. Truman."

Roll Call Vote

Whatever the personal feelings of the delegates toward the President, this appeal touched off a demonstration that lasted for more than 15 minutes. Northern states, including New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Connecticut and New Jersey, shouted and cheered, paraded through the aisles, waved their banners and, with difficulty, finally were persuaded to come to order.

Shortly after, the vote began. On vote of the convention a roll call was held on the amendment by former Gov. Moody for a states rights' plank. It got support only from southern states with small and scattered backing from such states as Colorado and Wyoming. Alaska, which is seeking statehood, split 3-to-3.

The South Must Understand---

Atlanta, Ga.

PHILADELPHIA—For a long time we had known that President Harry S. Truman was in the Convention Hall in Room 205 where an air-conditioned unit was at work. But when at last the weary, hot hours of convention were done; when Truman was nominated and Sen. Barkley, too, there was the drama of their appearance.

It was almost 3 o'clock in the morning.

An era had ended a few hours before. It is easy to say that phrase and sometimes it is said lightly, but this time there was little doubt about it. It was not so much that when the President did come there would be no one sitting in the rows of seats assigned to Mississippi. It was not that in the Alabama section half the seats were empty. Nor could one look out there and see the tired faces of the other Southern delegations and see that an era had ended.

But, it had.

Ultimatum The high-pitched angry voices had died out. The anger and the bitterness had been revealed and ignored. The South had not been read out of the party, but told in unmistakable words that they could stay or go, as they pleased. It was hoped they would stay, but if they wanted to go then they could go.

The East and West had joined to do that. When Mississippi's delegation had walked out none had called "come back." Instead there was loud and derisive booing and laughter. So it had been for the half of Alabama's delegation departure. There was apparent nowhere any regret or desire to appease the South. I say this thus coldly and plainly so that the South may understand and know it.

Atlanta, Ga.

Change What happened was that the industrial States of the nation, the big Eastern ones and those in the West, had taken over the Democratic Party and had begun to reshape it according to their own needs and desires. The Democratic Party of Wednesday morning was gone by Wednesday night.

But, on the surface, there was no sign of this as the big lights came on and the committee escorted the President of the United States and Sen. Alben Barkley, nominated to run with him, and their families to the platform.

For some unknown reason someone loosed a basket of pigeons. What the symbolism was none could explain. The poor, frightened, silly birds flew about the brilliantly lighted hall and dipped into the crowd where hands tried to catch them. It was a stupid thing to have done and for a time there the crowd was about to laugh itself into another mood.

Constitution

Greeting It had been asked that there be no long demonstrations, because of the lateness of the hour. But there was a good, sincere greeting for the nominees, although it did not have in it any of the deep, confident bellow that used to greet Franklin Roosevelt.

You got the feeling of the new era as the President talked. Looking at the tired, weary faces in the crowd, one found it a little difficult to realize it was 3 o'clock in the morning and that a President was speaking, saying he was going to call back a Republican Congress and ask it to go to work on its own party platform of promises.

You felt, too, the fact that a new era was at hand as the President accented the platform which called for outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley law, and for legislation which ends for all times the theory of States' rights. Only the Supreme Court can determine how much of States' rights remains as it will test in the future laws which the Republicans will pass and which the Democrats will pass if they should, by some quirk of political fate, be retained in office.

Fri. 7-16-48

Future The Democratic Party of the future is going to be more unified than it ever was when it contained the conservative Southern leadership and policy, requiring some great personality to hold that force the big city masses together. It will be, within eight years or less, a unified party directed by the city masses of the East and those of the West. It is going to become an urban party and a party of the political left devoted to the policies such as this platform expresses. The thoughtful person will not fail to note what has happened in the rest of the world and will note that this follows the pattern.

All this will not happen at once, although much of it already has happened here in this steaming, bitter convention. The Democratic Party, the old jerry-built one of Southern conservatisms and big-city pressures, now is the party of the cities and of the industrial working masses. This may, eventually, be a good thing for the country to have a two-party system which is more clearly defined.

Out But, for the time being, the South must not fail to know that when the new leaders of the party in the East and West had to decide between their policies and the South, they let the South go coldly and without hesitation. How much of the South will be with the Democratic Party of four or eight years from now no one may say. Some of it will. The South, too, has cities and it will be well for the South to keep that in mind as it seeks to evaluate its political future.

It is not a time now for hot words. They were said here in plenty. It is a time for evaluation.

MATTER OF FACT

New York Herald Tribune

By JOSEPH and STEWART ALSOP

New York, N.Y., Thurs. 7-15-48

The Twilight of the Gods

PHILADELPHIA.

In the long run, the final, open split between the Northern and Southern Democrats is likely to prove a more important event of this convention than any mere nomination of candidates. The passage yesterday afternoon of the strong civil rights resolution of Mayor Hubert Humphreys of Minneapolis leaves a split far more embittered, far more difficult to heal, than the splits of the Northern and Southern Democrats of the '20s. Then the issues were merely rum and romanism. Now they are civil rights and social change.

The convention's action was, of course, the result of the mounting rage of the Northern Democrats against the Southern shouters for white supremacy. Some of these have gone so far, at this heartbreaking convention, that one began to expect the Mississippi delegation to propose repeal of the anti-slavery amendments of the constitution.

The general odor of the Southern bloc was not improved, either, by its almost equally impassioned advocacy of the Tidelands oil grab, no doubt not unconnected with the reported financing of the forthcoming Southern rump convention by the oil interests. In the passion of the moment, men more representative of the real South, like Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama, were rendered powerless. And in the passion of the moment, the Northerners became infuriated with all Southernes and hit out with little regard for immediate consequences.

The background of this great event is dramatic. President Truman had desperately hoped to patch up a compromise. By his instruction, his few faithful henchmen like Senator J. Howard McGrath, of Rhode Island, and Senator Francis Myers of Pennsylvania, tried frantically to pass the resolutions committee's weasel-worded civil rights plank.

But the plans of the insurrectionists had been well laid, mainly at a meeting of the Americans for Democratic Action, for whom this is a big score. John Shelley, of California, was prepared to lead his men in a march on the platform if convention chairman Sam Rayburn tried to gavel the rebels down. The A. D. A. had men in every Northern delegation, ready to demand delegation roll calls if delegates tried to go along with Truman. And the big city leaders—Ed Flynn, Paul Fitzpatrick, Ed Kelly, Jake Arvey, David Lawrence—formed part of the combination. They had the votes, and they won. 7-15-48

The melodrama is stirring. But the melodrama of the moment is less important than the great process of social change which has transformed the big city leaders of the North from rigid conservatives to progressives. The split in the Democratic party is so much deeper now, for a very simple reason. This vital change has already affected the North, while the Democratic party in the South has largely remained in the hands of the obligarchy which has always controlled it. Formerly planters, the leading oligarchs are now industrialists and bankers. 7-15-48

Different interests predominate in different states. Textile mill owners are strong in the Carolinas. The power people carry great weight in Georgia. In Mississippi the cozy relationship between Governor Fielding Wright and the Mississippi Power and Light Company is a beautiful example of mutual affection. And so it goes.

Meanwhile, although the oligarchy still rules, the same social change that has altered the Northern big city organizations has been going on more slowly in the South, as a result of diversification of agriculture and industrialization. The effects can already be seen in Congress. There are fewer and fewer moderate Southern conservatives in the great tradition of Senator Joseph T. Robinson and Secretary of State James F. Byrnes. There are more and more Southerners like Senators Hill and Sparkman and Representative Kefauver, who are strongly progressive on all questions but the race question. Unfortunately, there are also more and more Southerners of the type that used to be classically represented by Senator Theodore Bilbo.

The advent of social change has, in fact, rendered the position of the oligarchy insecure, as the emergence of the Hills, Sparkmans and Kefauvers suggests. Thus the oligarchys are being driven more and more to support Bilbo-like candidates (as big business is supporting the revolting Herman Talmadge) because these candidates insure the submergence of social issues in the race issue. This tactic hits, in turn, at the Hills, Sparkmans and Kefauvers, who, being civilized men, will not go to the extremes of the Bilbos.

In the end, one suspects that the old fashioned Southern conservatives of the Byrnes type will disappear. Where the oligarchy is defeated, there will be Southern leaders like Kefauver. And where the oligarchs triumphs, there will be such denials of all the guaranteed, constitutional rights and liberties as will confront the Federal government with a real problem of making the constitution stick. For the short run, it is not a happy prospect. 7-15-48

For the dong run, it must be added, the prospect makes the tactics of the Northernehs at this convention seem a little less politically unwise than President Truman, thinking of the campaign only, no doubt believes. The issues had to be faced sometime. It was probably just as well to face it now, whe nthere is almost

No Veto For The South

The refusal again of the Democratic convention to revert to the old two-thirds rule for nominations was a disappointment, even though expected, to many Southerners. Had it been restored, the South, with just a little help from the outside, would have been able to exercise a veto over a simple majority action of the convention. It would have had more influence in opposing an undesirable candidate, as in the 1948 convention.

But the South had no hope of getting the two-thirds rule at this convention. The proceedings of the convention clearly have indicated that the North also has a grievance against the South. There appears to be some feeling that the course of some Southern states this year has blocked what little hopes the Democratic Party has of victory in 1948. Hence the rest of the delegates were in no mood to listen to the South in the matter of the two-thirds rule. The South's own course this year has made more remote the chances of its ever regaining the power it had under the two-thirds rule.

certainly going to be a epublican administration in Washington. Control of the Federal government by the epublicans ought to give the Southern progressives their chance, iw anything ever will.

Rayburn Assails Dewey and Wallace—Wind-Up Set Today by Continuous Sitting

Text of the speech by Representative Rayburn, page 8.

By W. H. LAWRENCE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—Pinning their November election hopes to a Truman-Barkley ticket, Democratic National Convention delegates heard more campaign oratory tonight while, offstage, efforts were undertaken to heal party wounds and reduce the intensity and scope of a Southern rebellion.

While delegates sweltered under the fierce television lights which sent the temperature in Convention Hall up close to 100 degrees, the party leadership set in motion a speed-up schedule to end the convention tomorrow night. The wind-up will include an acceptance speech by President Truman, who will fly here from Washington after he has been nominated on the first ballot.

Senator J. Howard McGrath, national chairman, formally announced that the convention would assemble at 11 A. M. tomorrow and remain in continuous session until it had adopted the platform, nominated the ticket, and head the two acceptance speeches.

Speed Program Is Cheered

The delegates cheered his desire to get the meeting over by tomorrow night.

The Times

With the White House's belated capitulation to the demonstrated preferences of the delegates for Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky as the Vice-Presidential nominee, the two remaining potention sources of friction lay in Southern efforts to restrict the civil rights platform pledge and to reinstate the two-thirds rule governing party nominations.

From the South came a display of party regularity tonight when Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, former Speaker, took over as permanent chairman of the convention with a fierce attack on the Republican party and its ticket. He called Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Gov. Earl Warren of California "fronts" for a "party of privilege."

New York, N.Y.

He had sharp words, too, for the third-party movement of former Vice President Henry A. Wallace, whom he dubbed "the Pied Piper of Politburo."

Wed.

Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, came up at the first session of the day with one of the convention's best lines, a reference to Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, Speaker Joseph W. Martin Jr., Representative Charles Halleck of Indiana and Representative John Taber of New York as "the Feudal Four."

7-14-48

The resolutions committee, which expected to work far into the night at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, held the key to early adjournment and whether there would be a violent fight on the issue of race relations.

If the civil rights pledge is too strong for those who believe in poll taxes and "Jim Crow" laws they can be expected to run screaming to the floor waving the flag of "white supremacy." President Truman's lieutenants, however, cannot go too far in watering down the plank in the interests of party unity without risking serious counterattack by Northern Democrats. These Northerners do not expect the President to win, but they need the Negro vote to save their local tickets.

Some Trend Toward Unity

In other phases of party activity there were real signs that unity efforts were paying off. Some of them were:

Acceptance by President Truman of Senator Barkley as his running mate. The Kentuckian is popular with New Dealers and Conservatives, and, hailing from a "border" state, is well qualified to promote harmony between the North and South as "caretaker" of the possible minority party awaiting its chance to get back into the White House in 1952.

The withdrawal by Senator Claude Pepper of Florida of his candidacy for the presidential nomination. He had sought to be the beneficiary of delegate strength stirred up for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and left leaderless when the Columbia University president flatly refused to run. He said that party unity had not developed behind him and "our continued efforts can only make a bad situation worse."

The Times

The announcement by Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas, the "states' rights" candidate for the presidential nomination. That he did not think there would be a Southern revolt against President Truman in the election. He conceded defeat by President Truman for the nomination here, estimating his own strength at 150 votes on the first ballot. Observers figured even that figure as high.

New York, N.Y.

James Roosevelt in Line

A harmony session between James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late President, and Senator J. Howard McGrath, Democratic chairman, Senator McGrath said that Mr. Roosevelt told him that, while he had made an honest fight against President Truman's nomination and lost, he now wanted to help the national ticket in his capacity as Democratic national committeeman from California. There will be more such "love feasts" in the days just ahead.

Wed.

Resisting the unity trends, however, was announcement that part of the Alabama delegation—probably 13 of its 26 members—were ready to bolt the convention as soon as the platform is adopted tomorrow. It will be interesting to see how many southerners follow them then, or after President Truman bowls over Governor Laney's candidacy on the first ballot.

7-14-48

Mississippi, South Carolina and Arkansas had been counted the best possibilities to walk out with the Alabama group, but Gov. Laney's announcement that he foresaw no Southern ticket, although still unwilling to vote for President Truman, cast doubt on whether the Nebraskans would join the convention defection.

It is confidently predicted that Florida, Georgia, Virginia, Texas, North Carolina, Louisiana and Tennessee will stick with the party and receive the rewards which go with party regularity.

3 Delegations Challenged

The right of the South Carolina, Virginia and Mississippi delegations to sit among regular Democrats in view of their anti-Truman position was challenged before the rules committee today. South Carolina and Virginia won handily in the test, but the margin to seat the Mississippi group, which proclaimed its continued unwillingness to vote for the nominee in November, was only 15 to 11. That fight was to be carried to the floor.

That the South's fight to reimpose the two-thirds rule can be no more than a losing gesture was clearly indicated in the Rules Committee when a motion to wipe out the majority rule was defeated 24 to 6. Southern members of the committee prepared a minority report.

McCorvey Refuses AFL Adbication Demand; Awaits Voters' Rule

4-22-48

The list of candidates for delegate to the Democratic National convention who have pledged to walk out if any part of the president's civil rights program is put in the party platform dwindled Wednesday when two Ninth District candidates backed up on previous statements.

In the meantime, State Democratic Executive Committee Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile, has begun circulating to State Democrats a list of candidates who have pledged not to stay at the convention if the civil rights program is put in the platform.

The Advertiser

Along with the list, which will be found on another page of The Advertiser, is McCorvey's explanation as to why Alabama Democrats sent to Philadelphia as delegates cannot stay in the convention if the civil rights program is included in the platform.

In a move that lessened the number of candidates pledged to bolt the convention, Frank L. Eddens, Jr., Birmingham, candidate from the Ninth District, announced he was withdrawing his pledge to quit the convention.

Eddens said he has written McCorvey: "I hereby retract my pledge to you."

Raymond Weeks, another Ninth District candidate from Birmingham who had previously signed the pledge, also modified his position.

Montgomery

"This idea of walking out seems to me too extreme at this time," Weeks said in a statement. "It's like striking at a ball before it is pitched.

Ala.

To Whip Rights

"We delegates in Alabama and all over the South are going to the national convention and whip any plan on 'civil rights,' including Mr. Truman. There won't be any need to walk out."

McCorvey announced last Saturday that 30 delegate candidates, including himself, have pledged themselves to the walkout. He said 24 were opposed and 30 uncommitted. He announced Tuesday he had inadvertently omitted the name of Tom C. King, Anniston, from the list of those pledging the walkout.

29 On List

Eddens and Weeks were included on that list. Their withdrawal would leave 29 names on the list of those signing the pledge.

Thurs 4-22-48

Included among those opposing the proposed walkout are U. S. Senator Lister Hill, Governor Folsom, former Governor Chauncey Sparks, State Attorney General Albert A. Carmichael and all the candidates for delegate from the Second Congressional District.

S. J. (Steve) Colpack, Bessemer, another candidate opposing the pledge, urged Tuesday that all such pledges be nullified. He wired McCorvey:

"Suggest you notify the press that you will release all candidates from pledges made to bolt the Democratic Party and admit your mistake in advocating bolting the South's party."

Meanwhile, McCorvey engaged in an exchange with the state federation of labor (AFL) over the proposed walkout.

Committee Is Upset In Fight on Floor

Plank Lauds Truman for Stand, Urges Poll-Tax, Anti-Lynch, F. E. P. C.

By Robert J. Donovan

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—The Democratic National Convention, dealing a crushing defeat to the South, indorsed President Truman's civil-rights program today in a dramatic fight on the convention floor that led to the bolt of half of the Alabama delegation of twenty-six and all the twenty-two Mississippi delegates.

In another blow to the South the convention overwhelmingly defeated three Southern resolutions proposing a strong stand in support of states' rights. The South wanted this as protection against Federal interference in the handling of racial problems.

Smarting under this double humiliation, the Alabama and Mississippi delegates walked out of the convenion hall, followed by jeering and boos from the other Democrats.

Overrules Committee

In an action unprecedented in recent Democratic history, the convention overruled its resolutions committee and by a vote of 651½ to 582½ wrote into the 1948 platform a declaration praising President Truman for his "courageous" civil rights stand and calling on Congress to carry it out.

New York

In language which scarcely could have been more galling to southern delegations, the declaration said:

"We highly commend President Harry Truman for his courageous stand on the issue of civil rights.

"We call upon the Congress to support our President in guaranteeing these basic and fundamental rights:

"1. The right of full and equal political participation.

"2. The right to equal opportunity of employment.

"3. The right of security of person.

"4. The right of equal treatment in the service and defense of our nation."

Reduced to legislative language these four points implied abolition of the poll tax, a fair employment practices bill, anti-lynching legis-

Dixie Bloc Threatens Own Candidate in Fall Election

Choice Likely Within 24 Hours, Says Alabaman

(The Associated Press)

Philadelphia, July 11.—A rebel band of Southern Democrats threatened tonight to run a candidate of their own in the November presidential election.

Shouting opposition to President Truman's civil rights program, the Southerners also called on the Democratic national convention to adopt a platform leaving civil rights legislation to the states.

Mon. 7-12-48

But their meeting broke up without naming any standard-bearer—either to oppose Mr. Truman for the Democratic nomination, as a protest gesture, or to run against the president, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Henry A. Wallace in November.

Marion Rushton, Democratic national committeeman from Alabama, said a committee now at work would pick a Dixie candidate within the next 24 or 36 hours.

Roosevelt Attends

And Arkansas Gov. Ben Laney told the Southerners they would be called together again before the convention opens at 10:30 a. m. (EST), tomorrow.

James Roosevelt, son of the late president and a leader in the California Democratic delegation, attended the meeting but took no active part. He said he was there "as an observer."

Roosevelt sat with Sen. Olin Johnston of South Carolina, leader in the recent anti-Truman drive.

Johnston, like Roosevelt, supported Gen. Dwight Eisenhower for the nomination until Eisenhower emphatically withdrew.

After tonight's session Gov. Laney told reporters that some of the Southern delegations "may walk out" when, as they and everyone else expects, President Truman is nominated. He said it is undecided whether the Arkansas delegation may or may not quit the convention.

Meeting in the Benjamin Franklin hotel, the Southerners responded with rebel yells of approval when Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina said they should unite behind a candidate of their own.

7-12-48

"We must defeat any man who has attempted to stab the South in the back as has Harry S. Truman," Thurmond told a protest meeting attended by about 400 persons in the Benjamin Franklin hotel.

7-12-48

Senator John McClellan of Arkansas said national convention delegates from at least 12 states south of the Mason-Dixon line were among those attending.

Dixie leaders conceded that Mr. Truman's first ballot nomination can not be prevented. But they went ahead with the meeting as a demonstration against the president's civil rights program.

Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas, presiding, said the caucus was called to "register our protests."

Amid cheers and stamping of feet, Laney declared:

"We are a states rights group.

"We do not come here with any abuse. We come regretting that such a meeting is necessary."

From somewhere in the crowd came the shout: "But it is necessary."

Charles Sheppard, an alternate delegate from Saint Augustine, Fla., told the caucus he was "in sympathy with everything Gov. Laney said."

Emmerich Secretary

J. O. Emmerich of Mississippi was elected secretary of the caucus.

The Southerners approved a resolution calling for a platform leaving enactment of any civil rights legislation to the states.

Specifically, it recommended the following plank:

"The Democratic party reaffirms and pledges strict adherence to those fundamental principles of constitutional government laid down by Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the party, private initiative.

"And the party declares that the several states shall exercise, free from federal interference or encroachment by legislation, directive or otherwise, all the rights and powers reserved to them by the constitution, among which is the power to provide by law for the qualifications of electors, conduct of elections, regulation of employment practices, segregation, and to define crimes committed within their borders and prescribe penalties therefor."

The resolution pledges Southern members of the platform committee to work for adoption of this plank by the committee itself.

7-12-48

If they should fail within the committee, the Southerners are directed to file a minority report bringing the dispute to the convention floor.

Atty. George L. Vaughn Of St. Louis Starts 'Firework' In Appeal For Action Against Rebels

President Nominated On First Ballot

340

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 14 (Special)—The Southern anti-Truman and anti-civil rights fights were defeated in the Democratic National Convention, Tuesday and Wednesday. The stage was set for the historical victory of liberals over reactionaries by St. Louis' Atty. George L. Vaughn, veteran lawyer and party campaigner

The unsuccessful upheaval reached its climax when the Alabama and Mississippi delegation walked out at the start of the roll call of states for the nomination of the party's candidate for President of the United States.

Tuesday night Atty. Vaughn touched off the expected showdown struggle when he offered a recommendation that the Mississippi delegation be denied seating because of anti-Truman and anti-civil rights resolutions adopted at their state convention. He spoke for adoption of a report by a minority of the Credential Committee of which he was a member.

St. Louis

Not since the early post Civil War era, had a Negro ever faced a National Party Convention in the U. S. and attacked party leaders of a deep South State. It caught most of the delegates unaware and when he launched into his remarks, the convention was fired with excitement [illegible] as has seldom been rivaled. The situation grew tense as he went on as Chairman pounded with his gavel and appealed vociferously for order.

With force and power that raised with intensity as he progressed, Atty. Vaughn made a stand that will rank with that of great statesmen of history.

After presenting the findings of the committee and offering the recommendation, the speaker completed his ten-minute address with an appeal for upholding the principles of Democracy.

"Mr. Truman comes from my state. I know him quite well," said Atty. Vaughn. "In his civil rights program he has asked nothing but for what the Constitution of the United States provides."

St. Louis Argus

The speaker then cited applications from the Bill of Rights and the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments.

After the St. Louis alternate delegate's appeal, the house was in an uproar. When voting by a voice vote was possible, Senator Barkley recognized the opponents to the minority recommendation as victors.

Fri. 7-16-48

The repercussion of the fight hed started a spirited contention rolling among the liberal Truman supporters amandant throughout the remaining actions of the convention however. The efforts of the South to win a two-third majority vote for nomination of the party's presidential candidate failed.

An Impression of Size by Contrast

New York N. Y.

By ARTHUR KROCK

PHILADELPHIA, July 12—President Truman, humiliated by many of the most important Democratic leaders and battered by Congressional majorities which included a large group of Democrats, is emerging at the national convention here as the only figure of continental size in his party.

In part this can be attributed to the fact that he is the President of the United States; and when delegates who are composed mainly of Federal officeholders and regular machine politicans assemble in one place, this fact seems larger and more compelling on action than when they are scattered and being played upon by local emotions. But the new measurement Mr. Truman has taken on here is even more the consequence of a comparison between him and his challengers.

Tues. 7-13-48

Ignoble Showing

That comparison in the President's favor began Saturday when Jake Arvey, the Chicago machine boss; Frank Hague, the Jersey City machine boss, and James Roosevelt, who aspires to the same hierarchy, began their attempt to neutralize the political effects on their local interests of their combination to reject Mr. Truman in the convention. In the effort to maintain their party machines and their appointees on the Federal payroll these politicians had risked the national Democratic prospect on the gamble that General Eisenhower did not really believe in the principles he asserted. Having lost, they were returning to the President's standard as their only hope, and they looked very ignoble while doing so.

Mr. Truman at once took on larger proportions in the party assemblage when the minuscule stature of this group was revealed. But a succeeding event made him look like a titan among pygmies. This was the press conference last night at which Senator Pepper of Florida announced he would oppose the President for the nomination, and added with as straight a face as he could manage that he has a very good chance of success.

The Pepper Faction

The only following this Senator can have is made up of irregulars affiliated with the Democratic party who did not venture to leave with Henry A. Wallace, but sympathize with his attack on the bipartisan foreign policy toward Soviet Russia and believe Mr. Pepper feels the same way. Add to these a handful of the Senator's henchmen in his own state, where he has distributed Federal patronage, and there is the Pepper faction in this convention.

7-13-48

There are very few delegates here who have any enthusiasm for the President as a candidate, and fewer who feel for him any personal devotion. But his course while the quarreling pack of politicians abandoned their own dogfights long enough to try to pull him down, and his calm and unshaken certainty that the attempt would end as it has ended, have won for him a considerable new measure of respect. If he decides to address the convention after he has been nominated this will be demonstrated, which did not seem likely until the tactics and type of his so-called "liberal" opposition were fully revealed.

Guilt by association is a verdict disputed in many quarters. But growth by contrast is more than an optical illusion in politics: it is first cousin to a fact.

The Southern opposition to Mr. Truman and to a platform based on his professions and his record has proved as futile as the self-designated "liberal" revolt. It is true that, if weasel vocabularies are inadequate to the task of making certain sections of the 1948 platform mean whatever the warring factions over "civil rights" and labor legislation choose to make them mean, there will be a platform battle on the floor and "walk-outs" on the part of two or three Southern delegations. Also, more than this number will never vote for Mr. Truman's Presidential nomination.

Tuesday

Dignity the Only Difference

But unless several of these delegations decline to make his choice unanimous, and unless more Southern states than Alabama cast the vote of their Presidential electors against Mr. Truman, this much-advertised revolt will retain only dignity to distinguish it from the shabby surrender of the Northern and Western bosses. The situation with respect to the Democratic organization of Virginia illustrates the strength of the national party symbol.

Virginia Democrats were the first to supply machinery to make the anti-Truman movement in the South effective in electoral terms. At the request of Governor Tuck, the Legislature provided a means whereby the Democratic candidates for elector, who were sure to be chosen, could cast their votes irrespective of whom the Democratic National Convention names as the standard-bearers of the party.

But, now that the test has come, the Virginia Democracy—like that of Texas, Georgia, North Carolina and other Southern states—(while its delegates here will vote against Mr. Truman and the probable platform) will set up no independent ticket in the Old Dominion. If the President should carry the state the Democratic electors will vote for him. And, by deciding not to walk out here in any circumstances, and thus to participate in the choice of national candidates, the state organization is bound to the regularity it legislated to evade.

May Lead Ticket For Southerners If Truman Gets Bid

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

Mississippi Gov. Fielding L. Wright, or Arkansas Gov. Ben Laney was seen today as likely ticket leader of a Southern states' rights bid for the presidency, if President Truman is nominated by the Democratic National Convention.

Former Gov. Frank Dixon, member of the Southwide States' Rights Committee campaigning against Truman, said he believed either the Mississippi or Arkansas chief executive would be nominated for president at a separate Southern convention date set tentatively for July 17.

News

This prediction came as leaders of the last ditch stop-Truman movement sought desperately to block the expected first-ballot nomination of the president at Philadelphia next week.

B'ham, Ala

BUT INDICATIONS were that wind had been taken out of the sails of even the most hopeful "draft Eisenhower" plumpers by the general's statement he would not accept the nomination.

7-7-48

Gov. Wright, spearhead of the fight being waged on Truman and his "civil rights" program, said today at Jackson he would not heed a reissued call by James Roosevelt for a Philadelphia caucus Saturday night. The Mississippi executive, like Sen. Lister Hill, State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey and other Alabama party leaders, had received a telegram from Roosevelt expressing hope that Gen. Eisenhower might still accept nomination by the Democrats.

The Mississippi keynoter of the states-righters has not been among those booming Eisenhower for president. Reason he has not, Gov. Wright said, is because Eisenhower has not declared himself on states' rights and other principles for which the South is fighting.

Wed. 7-7-48

"Not knowing how Gen. Eisenhower stands on these principles, we would not participate in a caucus to draft him or any other man until his views are known to us (Mississippi delegates)," Wright said.

REVOLTING SOUTHERN DEMOCRATS, under a plan of action adopted at the Jackson conference, contemplate holding a separate convention in Birmingham if either of two things happen at Philadelphia: Nomination of Truman or adoption of his "civil rights" measures.

They are hopeful the race equality proposals will be discarded, but they now have little hope of blocking Truman's nomination.

However, Roosevelt and a member of others, including Handy Ellis, McCorvey and Dixon, still think there is a chance to draft Gen. Eisenhower.

ELLIS, AT-LARGE DELEGATE, who has been picked to head Alabama's delegation, thinks the general might change his mind. Dixon says the war hero's statement has not changed the situation but rather "left a crack in the door."

McCorvey, one of the state's 11 anti-Truman pledged presidential elector nominees, has insisted all along that Eisenhower would accept the presidency, if the election were forced into the House of Representatives.

McCorvey's fellow townsman, Delegate John Mandeville, said he did not consider Eisenhower's statement as a positive refusal and believed the general yet might be drafted.

Sen. Hill said it appeared that Gen. Eisenhower "very definitely has taken himself out of the presidential picture." The senior senator, who has been among those plumping hardest to persuade Eisenhower to accept the nomination, said "We'll have to look elsewhere for a nominee."

Sen. Hill and Mandeville wired Roosevelt they would attend the Saturday night caucus.

Some think that if either Wright or Laney sehould be nominated to head a sperate Southern presidential ticket, the other likely would be chosen as running mate. Others mentioned include Virginia's Sen Byrd and South Carolina Gov Strom Thurmond.

The Southerners know they would have little chance, if any, of electing such a ticket. It would be principally a protest gesture.

In his telegram to Southern leaders, Roosevelt said Gen. Eisenhower might consider being a "national candidate," since his statement "clearly indicates he will not serve as a partisan president but will answer a call to national duty."

WITH REGARD TO THIS, Gov. Wright said:

"As a delegate to the national convention acting under instructions of the state of Mississippi, I will not cast my vote for any man as nominee for president until he has publicly taken a stand for states' rights.

"The fight made by the Southern states has been a fight for a principle—a principle in which we believe—and for constitutional government. We are not interested in personalities.

"Not knowing how Gen. Eisenhower stands on these principles, we would not participate in a caucus to draft him or any other man until his views are known to us."

The Mississippi governor said he would attend a caucus called by Gov. Laney, chairman of the States Rights Campaign Committee, to plan action of states' rights delegates. This huddle is set for 4 p.m. at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel. The Mississippi delegates are obligated by state convention resolution to withdraw if Truman is nominated or the convention fails to repudiate his "civil rights" program.

South Clings to Dead Past

Black Dispatch, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Is it not funny we can see the mote in the other fellow's eye, overlooking the beam in our own optic? That's what it looked like from long range as we observed the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia last week.

Sat. 7-24-48

The Southern delegates wanted to hark back to the two-thirds rule for no other purpose but to get control of the convention. The South has always believed in the rule of the minority. That is why it suppresses the Negro and allows the blacks no voice in government. If the two-third voting rule had been adopted as a rule of procedure in Philadelphia then a handful of Southerners could have controlled the selection of a president. Under such procedure all the South would have to secure would be one vote above one-third and it could tie up the convention and brow-beat the delegates until its choice was accepted.

In other words, the South wanted to be placed in a position where it could veto any legislation it did not like. Americans think it is wrong for Russians to veto legislation they do not approve, although the Russians are using a tool insisted upon by President Roosevelt and Churchill. If it is wrong in principle for the veto to be used in international parleys, why does not the same rule apply with equal moral force in national affairs? The South wanted the right to veto all discussion of civil rights, labor legislation, housing, and a half dozen other controverted subjects. There is after all nothing Democratic about the rule of the minority. The filibuster in the senate is often used by Southerners to effect the same end.

'Tis a long hark from the day when Negroes, likened to social lepers, sat behind a hog-wire screen in the Democratic National Convention in Houston, Texas, some twenty years ago, to the day when Attorney George Vaughn, of St. Louis, presented a resolution on the floor of the convention in Philadelphia which all but ousted the Mississippi delegation. That's progress in liberalism. The Mississippi delegation had already openly pledged itself not to be bound by the will of the majority. The attitude of the delegates was sound when they severely censured with their votes participants in the parley who showed open defiance to democratic procedure.

It was also stimulating and inspiring to note that when the vote came on the question of civil liberties, Oklahoma, along with Maryland, Kentucky and Delaware, broke away from traditional southern moorings. Oklahoma for the past twenty years has been leaning towards liberalism until today enacted statutes are all that stand between minority groups and full equality. It is not strange to see delegates attending a political convention from Oklahoma act as did the delegation headed by Governor Turner, from Oklahoma.

On the other hand, the presence of "Cucklebur" Bill Murray in Birmingham at the call of the Dixiecrats who oppos fair play and decent treatment to Negroes, is well understood. It was Murray, while governor, who drew an arbitrary line across Oklahoma City, dividing whites and blacks, and announced to assembled blacks, "I don't have the law but I have the power" to force acceptance of this order. This in essence is what state righters seek to inflict upon minority groups: force, power and violence unsupported by constitutional law. The fact that the revolting Southerners were presided over in Birmingham Saturday by "Bull" Conner, the vicious police court judge who sentenced and lectured Senator Glenn Taylor for attending a meeting in a Birmingham Negro church, shows that water seeks its level and that Oklahoma's former governor Bill Murray was Saturday in the right church and the right pew.

Sat. 7-24-48

Perhaps Alben Barkley, keynote speaker at the convention, delivered the most significant and forthright admonition when he warned the Southerners, "For what shall it profit a man if he gains the whole world and lose his own soul?" Barkley represents a large and growing number o Southerners who realize we have a "white," not "black" problem down in Dixie. Barkley knows the hypocritica South, in unholy desire to cling to the dead past, has crushed freedom and liberty, has uttered untruths about justice and has made a shambles of democracy. Senator Barkley knows that every evil has within itself the seeds of its own destruction, and the able Kentuckian sought to head off the evil consequences of the South's age-old folly.

But even the astute, beloved and understanding Barkley could not save the South. After centuries of loot and pillage of Negro rights, labor and human dignity, the South just as the Biblical and immoral Samson of old, unwilling to give us its accesses, lust and power, has reached up with its own strength to tear down the temple it builded. In the meeting at Birmingham last Saturday the South has stuck a dagger into the body of the Democratic party.

The Black Dispatch does not think the Democratic party will die resulting from the suicide pact in Birmingham Saturday. We would rather feel that the Saturday meeting purges the authentic Democratic organization of its Bilbos, Talmadges and Fielding Wrights. It means that the Democratic party will in finality become the truly liberal party in America and a two-party system will emerge down in Dixie where men may become politically free from the old ante-bellum traditions that have weighted down and well nigh ruined the Southland.

Caucus Scheduled Today To Name Candidate To Oppose President But Ranks Close

Chief Executive Picks Up Still More Support; Running Mate In Dark

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—Southern Democratic leaders laid tentative plans Saturday to nominate jointly an opponent to President Truman in the party's convention opening here Monday.

A committee was named to select a possible candidate to offer at a caucus of anti-Truman delegates today.

The Southerners, representing seven states, also named a committee to draft a states' rights plank to be offered if the majority report of the convention's platform committee does not suit them.

A third committee was named to draft plans for a possible southern Democratic convention at Birmingham.

States represented at the meeting were: Mississippi, South Carolina, Alabama, Louisiana, Florida, Arkansas and Texas.

Named to look over the field of possible candidates upon whom Southerners might agree and directed to report to today's caucus were: Sun. 7-11-48

Governors Laney, of Arkansas; Thurmond, South Carolina; Wright, Mississippi and Tuck, Virginia, and Palmer Bradley, Texas; Frank Upchurch, Florida, and W. W. Wright, Mississippi.

Selected to seek drafting of a states' right plank agreeable to the South were: Walter Sellers, Mississippi; George Warren, South Carolina; J. M. Bonner. Alabama; W. H. Talbot, Louisiana; Miss Hortense K. Wells, Florida, and Senator McClellan (D), Arkansas.

Selected for arranging the possible Dixie convention at Birmingham were:

Governors Laney, Wright, Thurmond and Tuck, and Herman Pressler, Texas; G. W. Godwin, Mississippi; J. D. Emmerich, Mississippi; Robert Goodwin, Alabama, and C. E. Shepperd, Florida.

But the Democratic clans, after feuding fiercely for months, closed ranks almost solidly behind Harry Truman for President. The Advertiser

But they held the vice presidential contest wide open for the national convention beginning Monday and ending, it may be, as early as Wednesday.

First the running mate swing was toward Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois. Then it moved toward Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, and then toward Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming.

Douglas said in Oregon that he would not quit the bench for the vice presidential nomination.

But there wasn't any doubt about the presidential nominee. The Democrats are going to place in the willing hands of Mr. Truman the banner Franklin D. Roosevelt carried to four victories in a row. Montgomery

If any clinched was needed, the eldest son of the late F. D. R. supplied it. James Roosevelt announced Saturday night he was cancelling a caucus he had called with the idea of lining up power behind Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for president. Ala.

Huddle Backs Truman

Up to that point, there had been some suggestions that the caucus might go on anyway, to look over other possibilities than the general. Eisenhower knocked the props from under the campaign for him with a statement Friday that he wouldn't accept the nomination under any terms. 7-11-48

A big huddle of midwesterners—from 13 states with around a fifth of the 1.234 convention votes — agreed unanimously to back Mr. Truman. Heads of 12 of the 13 farm belt delegations then voted also to push O'Mahoney for vice president. Iowa wouldn't go along with that.

O'Mahoney is the only vice presidential possibility out in the open. He has set up a campaign headquarters here. The Advertiser

But the talk for Douglas still was strong Saturday night. Chicago Democratic Chief Jacob M Arvey and Illinois State Chairman George D. Kells put in plugs for him. Kells said also, however that Lucas would be a fine compromise.

Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath said Douglas, who has disavowed any eagerness either for first or second place on the party ticket, had asked him months ago to try to prevent the justice's name from going into nomination for vice president

McGrath said he was keeping hands off any effort to boom Douglas. Montgomery, Ala.

Both McGrath and Leslie L. Biffle said so far as they knew, Mr. Truman had not decided whom he would prefer for a running mate. Sun. 7-11-48

Biffle is a close friend of the President and convention sergeant-at-arms.

"Personally," Biffle told a reporter, "I am for Senator Barkley of Kentucky. He would make a fine candidate. But that does not mean that the administration is supporting Barkley."

Arrives At Hall For Acceptance Speech

Thurs. 7-15-48

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—The Democrats nominated Harry S. Truman for President Wednesday night on a strong civil rights platform that threatened a deep north-south split in the Democratic Party.

President Truman's nomination came on the first ballot. The national convention immediately nominating Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky for vice-president—its last order of business before closing down for good.

Mr. Truman arrived from Washington to address the convention in its final hours and to fire the Democrats first official campaign gun in the coming struggle against the Republican ticket of Governors Thomas E. Dewey and Earl Warren.

The harsh echoes of a north-south floor fight over party principles were still resounding when the delegates gave Mr. Truman the campaign banner last held aloft for them by the late Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Gov. Ben Laney, of Arkansas, stepped out of the picture as the "white hope" of southern rebels against Mr. Truman for the nomination. The Southerners immediately began rounding up the votes for Senator Richard Russell of Georgia instead.

Mere Formality

But choice of the Truman-Barkley ticket was boiled down to mere formality by weeks of heated pre-convention battling and three days of meetings in this steaming hall.

On the showdown, there wasn't any substantial opposition left to letting President Truman have the No. 1 spot.

Big city delegations, which were beckoning to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower last week, long since had swung into line for Truman. The Advertiser

As for the Southerners, the question bothering party leaders was not in their revolt in this convention but what may come later—what may develop out of talk of bolting the party, or refusing to support the Democratic ticket. Montgomery, Ala.

Gov. Phil Donnelly of Missouri put Mr. Truman's name in nomination as "the man of the people." Just as he finished, the President arrived by special train from Washington to accept the nomination that was certain in spite of all the South could do.

And as for his running mate, the choice was Senator Alben Barkley from border-state Kentucky. Thurs.

Praises President

Donnelly praised his fellow Missourian as "soldier, patriot, and statesman," a man "whose splendid courage never faltered, in war or in peace, and who is today leading this nation to a new and greater destiny."

And then the Truman version of bedlam broke out in this vast, super-hot hall. It was bells, horns, whistles, a siren or two, band and organ, just plain hollering and whooping. 7-15-48

There had been one for Russell, too. Twenty minutes of it. The folks from Dixie struggled through the aisles, with Trumanites using huge pictures of their man as barricades.

And this is the convention the delegates and spectators had been calling dead and dreary.

At least in equipment, the Truman demonstrators outstripped the anti-Truman crowd. They trotted out a live donkey who blinked in bewilderment at an Indian doing a war dance.

Up the platform came a five-foot liberty bell of flowers, a gift of local florists to the chief executive.

The flower dealers weren't taking sides. They had given Republican Thomas E. Dewey an American flag just as big.

Tells Of Close Vote On Miss.

Fri. 7-23-48

By Geo L. Vaughn

The National Democrat Convention at Philadelphia is now a matter of history—but what an item of history! From an ordinary, drab affair, the meeting suddenly developed into a dynamic, seething mass of delegates, yelling and gesticulating in their efforts to get a hearing on the vital issues stemming out of the question of civil rights. Until the presenting of the minority report of the Credentials Committee, the meeting had followed the usual lines of such gatherings, except that the statesman-like fighting speech of Senator Barkley, the temporary chairman, had inspired new hope in the hearts and minds of the delegates, and had challenged the Republicans in such a sharp and logical manner as to lay bare their shortcomings before the country.

From the beginning, it was apparent that certain followers of F. D. R., certain big city bosses who felt that the President had not consulted them as much as they liked, and the anti-civil rights block from the South had joined forces to defeat the nomination of President Truman as the standard bearer for 1948. But one by one the other two groups left the fight, leaving the Southerners alone to oppose the nomination of the President. In fact, after the fight over the seating of the Mississippi delegation had been waged, the so-called lieberals of the Roosevelt regime and the city bosses joined hands with the Truman following and helped to defeat the anti-Truman Southern block. This rapid switching of sides during a convention is unique not to say unprecedented.

Civil Rights Issue

But all of the controversies in the convention, whether the seating of the Missisippi delegation, the attempt to restore the two-thirds rule for nominations, the struggle to adopt a state's rights plank, or the substituting the minority report of the Platform Committee on civil rights for the majority report, stemmed out of the civil rights program of President Truman. It turned out that there was a mjority of the delegates present who were determined to spell out in no uncertain terms the measures which the President advocated in reference

It Slaps Down Proposal For States' Rights Plank, Okehs Civil Rights

By FRANCIS M. LEMAY

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — The Democratic National Convention handed the South a double-barreled defeat on the race issue Wednesday. It slapped down Dixie's states right plank and then amended the platform to stamp endorsement on President Truman's civil rights program.

The repercussions came loud and fast, as:

1. The Mississippi delegation and half of Alabama's 26 delegates stalked out of the convention—taking a walk.
2. Governor Ben Laney of Arkansas, bitter foe of Mr. Truman's civil rights program, withdrew as a Southern bloc's candidate for President, saying if nominated he could not run on the platform ratified Wednesday by a majority of the Philadelphia convention.

The crucial convention action on the race issue came in the face of a solemn warning from one Dixie spokesman that it would mean destruction of the Democratic Party in the South.

Bans States' Rights

First the convention refused, 925 to 309, to put a states' rights plank in the platform. This plank, offered by former Governor Dan Moody of Texas, would have declared that states have the right to run their own internal affairs and police powers. Thus the South had sought, while joining in support of a general civil rights plank, to have the convention declare that states have jurisdiction over the legal processes governing those rights.

Thurs.

Then, to rub it in, the convention adopted an amendment to the platform sponsored by Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey of Minneapolis and former Rep. Andrew Biemiller of Wisconsin, endorsing the President's civil rights stand. The vote was 651 1-2 to 582 1-2.

The amended and strengthened civil rights plank, as finally approved, declares:

7-15-48

Here It Is

"The Democratic Party is responsible for the great civil rights gains made in recent years in eliminating unfair and illegal discrimination based on race, creed or color.

"The Democratic Party commits itself to continuing its efforts to eradicate all racial, religious and economic discrimination.

The Advertiser

"We again state our belief that racial and religious minorities must have the right to live, the right to work, the right to vote, the full and equal protection of the laws, on a basis of equality with all citizens as guaranteed by the constitution.

"We highly commend President Harry S. Truman for his courageous stand on the issue of civil rights.

Montgomery, Ala.

"We call upon the Congress to support our President in guaranteeing these basic and fundamental American principles — the right to full and equal political participation; the right to equal opportunity of employment; the right of security of person, and the right of equal treatment in the service and defense of our nation."

Thurs.

Rep. John Bell Williams, Mississippi delegate, issued a statement saying:

7-15-48

"It drives a knife into the heart of the party and reads the South out of the party."

Chairman James S. Peters of the Georgia delegation said: "It is even worse than the well-known Truman civil rights program."

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

"HE'S stopped trying to be president. He's being Truman now." A close observer of the President made the remark a little sadly in the ghastly early hours of this morning while the President was shouting his defiance of the Republicans before the sweating delegates to the Democratic convention. The most striking thing about the President's speech was his final abandonment of the rather stilted, elevated tone which he has thought suitable to his office. He was campaigning for re-election as a county sheriff in the Ozarks might campaign.

The drama and interest of the whole episode were more genuinely intense than is usual in politics. There was first of all the inescapable feeling that the President was venting on the Republicans some of the resentment which he feels against the Democrats who opposed his re-nomination. It was known that his congratulatory telephone call to Senator Alben Barkley the previous evening had been rapidly transformed into a philippic against his enemies within the party.

From the rear steps of the convention hall where the President waited for hours to speak, word kept coming back of the sharpness with which he still felt this resentment.

Fri. 7-16-48

THERE were, secondly, the circumstances of the stirring decision to call a special session of Congress, which was being bruited about hours before the President at length spoke. The decision was taken at the White House without consultation with any of the congressional leaders. Even the President's running mate, Senator Barkley was not informed of what was afoot, at least until late in the afternoon, before the convention's final session.

Here in Philadelphia, Robert Hannegan, James Roosevelt and a group of representatives of the big city leaders had agreed the previous evening that there ought to be a special session and had passed their view to the White House. But very probably the President himself was not informed of this meeting, since a good many of those present had played leading parts in the abortive anti-Truman coaltion.

Truman and his advisers—most conspiciously Clark Clifford—took the decision by themselves, to all intents and purposes.

Then there were also the decision's motives. The President beyond question sincerely believes in the social and economic objectives which he set forth in his speech.

It is also important to note that he and his advisers have sincerely convinced themselves, as threatened politicians so often can, that the victory of their opponents will inevitably usher in a total triumph of reaction and perhaps of Fascism. These two beliefs provided the atmosphere of the decision.

In this connection, it is vitally important to distinguish between the effects of the call for a special session and the motives for the call. The Republicans in Congress richly deserve what they are getting.

The President was entirely correct in almost every word he said about their handling of social and economic measures, no matter what you may think of the tone in which he said it. The Republican platform may, and probably does, represent the views of Governor Dewey and Governor Warren but the platform's kind words for enlightened social policies do not correctly represent the congressional majority.

7-14-48

IT WILL be incredibly costly and dangerous to have the whole country set by the ears, and all the dirty linen of our politics publicly washed, in a time of dreadful danger abroad. But it will also be useful to have the wide difference between the Republican candidates and the Republican Congress aired during the campaign. And certain badly legislation may even be passed before the special session ends.

So much for the effects. As for the motives, no one who is not very naive can suppose that securing passage of needed social measures was a predominating influence in the President's decision to call the session. The decision was taken with the clear knowledge that tremendous risks were involved. Yet the real reasons for the decision were obviously political.

First, a special session provides the President with an inexpensive form of electoral campaign. Second and more important, holding the session, which is helpful in view of the present state of Democratic Party finances, will be a much more effective way to campaign than a straight debating match against such a powerful adversary as Governor Dewey.

All these assorted facts, so complexly inter-related, in turn say something about the President himself. Even the majority of his oldest and closest friends now agree that he is a man, who, although decent, patriotic, honest and courageous, has been terribly over-burdened by the responsibilities of the presidency in such a time as this.

7-16-48

At first, he seemed to hate those responsibilities. Then he began to cling to them, as men in such positions will. And now that the campaign is ahead, and defeat looms up, he is "being Truman now." in the sense that he is fighting for re-election on a sort of no-holds-barred system, without any of those claims to the grand style which he used to try to make.

It would have been better if he had fought for his program in this manner from the first. As matters stand, one must admire the President's course. One must hope that those who deserve to be shown

After The Convention

PHILADELPHIA, July 15

AFTER the convention here in Philadelphia the facts and implications begin to grow clearer. The South is faced with a political urgency now that demands axe-stroke action. And it's important that the action of the convention be fully understood.

One thing above all must be understood by Alabamians. It must be remembered. And that is that the writing of that unbearable plank providing for a phase No. 2 of Reconstruction was the work and will of the rank and file members of the Democratic Party.

We Alabamians, in our traditional and ancient attachment to the party, would wish to believe that it was a cynical and opportunistic political device of the vote-craving party leadership.

Montgomery Ala.

But that it emphatically was not. It is entirely the reverse of that.

The mocking fact is that President Truman, National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, and the others upon whom Southern wrath and bitterness have cascaded were actually the advocates of a watered down, appeasing plank.

It was the common people of the convention—that is, the delegates representing a cross-section of the party—that vehemently overrode Truman and scornfully voted the plank.

Fri. 7-16-48

THE plain and indisputable fact is that Truman-McGrath and Co. have been trying to appease the South for some weeks.

For example, there was the appointment of William J. Primm, Jr., of Alabama, as special assistant to McGrath. Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky was chosen keynoter and Congressman Sam Rayburn of Texas was made permanent chairman of the convention. Examples might be multiplied.

And finally, as Chauncey Sparks will tell you, the platform committee offered the South a comparatively watered-down civil rights plank. Certainly it was no worse than the 1944 platform which caused no stir with Roosevelt standing upon it. And most certainly it was toothless compared with the sabre-toothed plank that the convention finally adopted.

McGrath even went so far, it is competently reported, as to offer the South restoration of the two-thirds rule in conventions if it would accept the watered-down plank. 7-16-48

Alabama and associate states declined this even-steven compromise and went on to prosecute the war with a walkout.

The answer was a crushing defeat by the rank and file of the Democratic Party.

On the basis of this undisputable array of remarkable facts, you could argue that McGrath and Alabama were overruled.

7-16-48

WE ARE now in this position. We threatened to leave the party. The answer was an inflamed "Get the hell out then and good riddance."

Furthermore, we have got to recognize that the Southern border states voted against the deep South.

All of this has got to be understood, and understood well, before we can intelligently seek our wilderness path.

We have an idea that in Alabama there will be some distracting agitation and opportunistic thrusting between the Ellis-Hill factions over the act of walking and non-walking.

No Alabamian should allow himself to be bamboozled with an empty, aimless controversy over that.

The enormous fact is that the rank and file of the Democratic Party is unsympathetic and intolerant of Southern viewpoint.

In a choice between the Southern electoral votes and the Negro power balance votes of the North, the convention found its choice easy.

Fri. 7-16-48

THE compromise rejected. The all-out plank adopted. It is entirely understandable that Truman moved swiftly to interpret the convention's act as a mandate for him to capitalize the situation. He therefore summoned a special session of Congress.

Thus the issue of civil rights is maturing ahead of any predicted schedule.

We shall have the spectacle of a Republican Party with a comparatively mild civil rights plank and a Democratic Party with the strongest possible civil rights plank.

In this one regard and on paper at least, the Republican and Democratic Parties have swapped the roles they assumed in Civil War days.

The presidential campaign then will open in Congress this month. Truman will dare the Republican Congress, with doubtful states in the balance, not to enact the Democratic Party's civil rights plank. The pressures for enactment will undoubtedly be greater than ever in the past.

7-16-48

It seems this afternoon in Philadelphia that Alabama and some, but not all, Southern states are homeless.—G. C. H.

Matter Of Fact

IN the long run, the final, open split between the Northern and Southern Democrats is likely to prove a more important event of this convention than any mere nomination of candidates. The passage of the strong civil rights resolution of Mayor Hubert Humphrey, of Minneapolis, leaves a split far more embittered, far more difficult to heal, than the splits of the Northern and Southern Democrats of the '20s. Then the issues were merely rum and Romanism. Now they are civil rights and social change.

The convention's action was, of course, the result of the mounting rage of the Northern Democrats against the Southern shouters for white supremacy. Some of these have gone so far, at this heartbreaking convention, that one began to expect the Mississippi delegation to propose repeal of the anti-slavery amendments of the constitution.

Montgomery, Ala.

The general odor of the Southern bloc was not improved, either, by its almost equally impassioned advocacy of the Tidelands oil grab, no doubt not unconnected with the reported financing of the forthcoming Southern rump convention by the oil interests. In the passion of the moment, men more representative of the real South, like Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama, were rendered powerless, and in the passion of the moment, the Northerners became infuriated with all Southerners and hit out with little regard for immediate consequences. Thurs.

The background of this great event is dramatic. President Truman had desperately hoped to patch up a compromise. By his instruction, his few faithful henchmen like Senator J. Howard McGrath, of Rhode Island, and Senator Francis Myers, of Pennsylvania, tried frontically to pass the resolutions committee's weasel-worded civil rights plank.

BUT the plans of the insurrectionists had been well laid, mainly at a meeting of the Americans for Democratic Action, for whom this is a big score. John Shelley, of California, was prepared to lead his men in a march on the platform if Convention Chairman Sam Rayburn tried to gavel the rebels down. The A. D. A. had men in every Northern delegation, ready to demand delegation roll calls if delegates tried to go along with Truman. And the big city leaders—Ed Flynn, Paul Fitzpatrick, Ed Kelly, Jake Arvey, David Lawrence—formed part of the combination. They had the votes, and they won. 7-15-48

The melodrama is stirring. But the melodrama of the moment is less important than the great process of social change which has transformed the big city leaders of the North from rigid conservatives to progressives. The split in the Democratic Party is so much deeper now, for a very simple reason. This vital change has already affected the North, while the Democratic Party in the South has largely remained in the hands of the oligarchy which has always controlled it. Formerly planters, the leading oligarchs are now industrialists and bankers.

Different interests predominate in different states. Textile mill owners are strong in the Carolinas. The power people carry great weight in Georgia. In Mississippi, the cozy relationship between Governor Fielding Wright and the Mississippi Power & Light Company is a beautiful example of mutual affection. And so it goes.

Meanwhile, although the oligarchy still rules, the same social change that has altered the Northern big city organizations has been going on more slowly in the South, as a result of diversification of agriculture and industrialization. The effects can already be seen in the Congress.

There are fewer and fewer moderate Southern conservatives in the great tradition of Senator Joseph T. Robinson and Secretary of State James F. Byrnes. There are more and more Southerners like Senators Hill and Sparkman and Representative Kefauver, who are strongly progressive on all questions but the race question. Unfortunately, there are also more and more Southerners of the type that used to be classically represented by Senator Theodore Bilbo. Thurs.

THE advent of social change in the South has, in fact, rendered the position of the oligarchy insecure, as the emergence of the Hills, Sparkmans and Kefauvers suggests. Thus the oligarchs are being driven more and more to support Bilbo-like candidates (as big business is supporting the revolting Herman Talmadge) because these candidates insure the submergence of social issues in the race issue. This tactic hits, in turn, at the Hills, Sparkmans and Kefauvers, who, being civilized men, will not go to the extremes of the Bilbos.

In the end, one suspects that the old-fashioned Southern conservatives of the Byrnes type will disappear. Where the oligarchy is defeated, there will be Southern leaders like Kefauver. And where the oligarchs triumph, there will be such denials of all the guaranteed, constitutional rights and liberties as will confront the federal government with a real problem of making the constitution stick. For the short run, it is not a happy prospect.

7-15-48

For the long run, it must be added, the prospect makes the tactics of the Northerners at this convention seem a little less politically unwise than President Truman, thinking of the campaign only, no doubt believes. The issue had to be faced some time. It was probably just as well to face it now when there is almost certainly going to be a Republican administration in Washington. Control of the federal government by the Republicans ought to give the Southern progressives their chance, if anything ever will.

At The Convention

PHILADELPHIA, July 14

THIS day in Philadelphia has been so long, so gruelling and turbulent that its clear outlines are lost to the editor's view. One thing stands out like a jagged iron pike—the South asked this Democratic convention for understanding and forbearance, and received a savage blow on its face in return.

The Advertis

This convention dealt Alabama and the South a brutal and contemptuous blow.

Montgomery, Al

It was not an act of any sinister leaders, any opportunistic big city sewer voices or New Deal pinks—it was the rank and file of delegates from all over the country.

340

The West no less than the East was responsible for adoption of the Truman civil rights plank. This was jarring, for in other days and climates the West was the ally of the South. This afternoon the three corners of the nation came down upon the South.

Thurs. 7-15-48

It is clear that we of the South are alone, quite alone with our oppressive and gathering problem. We stand alone somewhat as England did in 1940.

The attitude of this convention towards Alabama and the South this afternoon was cold, forbidding and contemptuous.

Of the road ahead for us, of the response that she shall make to this coldness and contempt—of all that, more in season.

UP until this afternoon the question in the Alabama delegation was the proper time to walk.

It was taken up anew this morning at a caucus in the John Bartram Hotel. People on the street stuck their heads in the first floor window to see and hear Alabama at work.

This morning—which tonight seems a remote and almost unrelated time—members of the delegation were involved in family strife. Senator Lister Hill began by saying "We're all against Truman," and all chorused after him.

But presently John Mandeville, a mercurial young Mobile politico who is being groomed to inherit the mantle of Congressman Frank Boykin, suddenly accused Senator Hill of desiring to vote for Truman after the walk-outers had departed.

It was an unfair and insulting charge by the young man.

Senator Hill's pallid face flushed. He arose with considerable dignity and said in a subdued, grave voice: "The gentleman does me a very great injustice. . . . I am as unalterably opposed to the nomination of Harry Truman as any man in this room. . . ."

In the fullness of his regret, Mandeville apologized, they shook hands and the fratricide was resumed in other departments.

In the end, Senator Hill said that if nobody else made a nomination to prevent Truman from being first, he himself would nominate Sen. Dick Russell of Georgia.

7-15-48

WHEN the delegation took its seat in the convention hall — without clearly defining its course as to walk-out time or nominations—the word had spread among the nation's newspapers and radios that Alabama was getting ready to walk.

The delegation sat hot and huddled in the steaming convention pit. The stifling heat and humidity were unforgettably punishing as the newsmen crowded about to ask questions of Alabama's second historic break with the Southern mother, the Democratic Party.

To questions about when his half of the delegation would walk, the imperturbable Chairman Handy Ellis would say:

"Oh, we want to see as much as we can. . . . I told you, brother, I don't know yet . . . probably when the platform is adopted."

The photographers wanted to know whether the walking element would take the Alabama standard with it. Ellis said, No, that was convention property. They would turn in their badges and leave it to the durationalists.

The Advertiser

A 240-pound Michigan lawyer, delegate in the Michigan delegation, just in front of the Alabama section, turned to Ellis and several of us newspapermen. This rotund gent, sweating in his yellow sweat shirt, jested:

"We ain't gonna let you out."

"We have some husky men in the Alabama delegation," joked the serene Ellis, "but none as big as you."

J. MILLER BONNER, who looks like Uncle Sam, sat suffering on Ellis' left because a colored woman was allowed to sing the national anthem and Negro congressmen address the convention. The more thoughtful Probate Judge Hardy Riddle, of Talladega, sat close by and wondered what would ever become of us.

Congressman Frank Boykin, not a member of the delegation, was in the middle of everything, and even in this convention hall, was certain that "everything is made for love." He bragged on Alabama and invited half the convention to an Alabama hunt this fall.

"When do you want to walk?" Ellis asked "Bud" Boswell.

"When they adopt the platform—right then," answered the purposeful Boswell.

Montgomery, Ala.

They gave Jimmy Roosevelt an ovation, after his speech. Delegate Henry J. Mayfield tried to have Alabama's standard join in the Roosevelt ovation. Inflamed, Bonner grasped the standard and bellowed, "Over my dead body—to hell with Jimmy Roosevelt."

The afternoon wore on. A radio man brought the microphone to Birmingham Police Commissioner "Bull" Conner, a lovable clown whose antics were winning but grotesque in such a time. He roared that they should stop worrying about the colored man's lot and do something about the disgracefully cast-off and downtrodden American Indian.

Thurs.

A lady came by with Truman buttons. Bonner declined: "No thank you, lady. Getting ready to fly out of here."

Convention Chairman Rayburn ignored Alabama's frantic motions for recognition to uncork its walk-out demonstration. The convention adjourned for an hour and now we're all back.

Atlanta Constitution

It'll Be Long Time Before Ideals Win

Atlanta, Ga.

Well, the Democratic convention adopted the strongest civil rights plank offered for its platform. Over the opposition of the South, the enthusiastic supporters of President Truman's civil rights program succeeded in having their view on the issue incorporated in the party platform.

7-16-48

It has always seemed to me that the South, while fundamentally correct in its opposition to that program, because it places in Federal control matters which properly should be decided only by the individual States, has been wrong in assuming that the sole question involved is the question of race as between white and Negro. While that is the spotlighted issue in this part of the country, in actual fact the civil rights program seeks to secure the basic rights of all minority groups, regardless of race, religion, or other differentiation.

Further, it has seemed to me that Southerners, in accusing supporters of the Truman program of a direct attack on the South—of using unfair political tactics for sordid political reasons—do an injustice to many of those Truman program supporters.

Undoubtedly, many of the civil rights champions have been motivated by coldly practical political reasons. They have looked with covetous political eyes on the large blocs of Negro voters in some of the Northern States and have assumed, it now seems erroneously, that the Southern States will remain in the Democratic column, when the votes are counted next November, no matter how the party treats them.

Some Idealists But not all those who voted for the civil rights plank at Philadelphia did so from political or other less admirable motives. Some, beyond question, feel deeply on the issue from none save idealistic motives. They see in every instance of religious or racial bias a violation of the ideals on which American democracy is based and they consider themselves champions of a noble cause. They are, most of them, impractical and unaware of conditions in the South. But they are determined that, in enjoyment of the basic rights of an American citizen, neither Negro nor Jew, Oriental-American, Indian or other, shall be penalized because of race. Their championship is rooted in idealism and, in their view, is essential to the continuance of the American concept of human equality and democratic government.

It is these who contend that, if America continues to treat some of her own people as citizens of the second class only, America is merely a hypocrite when she urges democracy upon other nations of the world.

Atlanta Constitution

A Long Way Off Just an example of how other differences than those of race affect public opinion, consider what chance of election to high State office would a Catholic candidate have in Georgia? Why, I can remember the days, not so long ago, when it was common saying that only a member of the Baptist Church need expect to win a Georgia election. That was, of course, exaggeration, but it had sufficient basis in truth to be widely quoted. I dare say, too, circumstances are different today and it could be that a Presbyterian or a Methodist could be elected Governor. But not, you will agree, a Catholic. (Remember when Al Smith, a Catholic, ran for the presidency? Remember that mythical party that flourished in the Protestant South that year? The Hoovercrats?)

7-16-48

Idealists would champion the cause of the submerged Baptists of Boston as well as that of the submerged Catholics of Georgia.

Maybe there will come a day when idealism will become reality. A few centuries hence, perhaps. When that day does come the Truman program, too, may be realized. But one other condition will have to be met first. That is, the scheming men who have, this year, made political capital out of the emotional reactions to the civil rights issue, will no longer carry any weight in party affairs. For sordid schemes for unscrupulous political gain can have no place alongside idealism triumphant.

Politics may make strange bedfellows—but not that strange.

The Party Changes Hands

Atlanta, Ga.

PHILADELPHIA—What has happened now is that the Democratic Party has made a decision and a gamble. ~~Faced with~~ the issue of the Southern revolt, it sought to compromise, but only a little. When the issue of States' rights reached the floor of the convention which ended about 3 o'clock Thursday morning, the big Eastern city political leaders, joined by the Western States, took over the party.

Atlanta Constitution

7-16-48

It is necessary that the South understand this cold and realistic fact. These Party leaders had determined they could not continue themselves, and they believed the Party could not continue without a strong civil rights plank. They were not sure about the future. They could not know how much of the Party success in the past 16 years was the success of Franklin D. Roosevelt and how much of it was the success of the program. This was the gamble they had to take. It meant ignoring the South. They had won in the past four elections without the South. So, they took the gamble. Only the future will determine how right or wrong they were and are.

7-16-48

The South must understand something else, as it contemplates this just-ended convention in the reality of the cold gray dawn of the morning after. And what the Southern people, for their own good, and the good of their region, must know is that an era is ended. The Democratic Party has chosen to shake out of it the one element which was always incongruous anyhow—the conservative Southerner who always voted Democratic, but who never believed in much of the program. The South, for example, will not at all agree with the plank calling for repeal of the Taft labor law.

The Eastern cities have become the owners of the Party for the time being, and perhaps for the future. But it is important for the Southerners, seeking to evaluate that future, to keep in mind that the Western States joined the East in the gamble to ignore the South.

So, on the one issue to which the South most objected, there is little difference between the Republicans and the Democrats. The South, which was mother and nurse to the Democratic Party, has been told, very, very plainly, it is not longer welcome with its ideas. For the time being there is no place to go. The next years will see the slow change as the new Democratic Party evolves based on the large cities of the nation, and as the Republican Party moves slowly into the South. An era is ended. 7-16-48

For the moment, the South must not misunderstand what has happened. There was here no consideration for the deep South position from either the East or the West. It is a time for evaluation and decision.

Name Contesting Delegates To Philadelphia Confab; 'To Stay'

(34) The Lighthouse & Informer

Columbia, S.C.

The already entangled picture of South Carolina Democrats moved deeper into confusion when a brand new Democratic party, led by liberal white forces, launched itself in the State Tuesday. 7-4-48

This new or third Democratic party picked twenty delegates to the Democratic National convention, convening on July 12, three of them being Negroes, named in their absence. Simultaneously, a spokesman announced the new organization is "in South Carolina to stay."

Judge Richard I. Foster of the Greenville of the Domestic Court and state president of Labor Democrats, lashed out at the regular party as the "politicians' party" in a key note address. Judge Foster declared that state leaders now opposing civil rights were in support of these during the administration of the late President Roosevelt and raised no objections as they waxed fat on patronage. He charged that the May 19 convention of regular Democrats was but a "scheme to defy the Supreme Court's ruling on the right of Negroes to vote in primaries." 7-4-48

The new party adopted resolutions which outlawed the obnoxious oath adopted May 19, set membership limits to persons holding registration certificates; opened membership rolls to citizens of both races and voted to sponsor a general election presidential elector slate committeed to the Democratic party. They also favored legality of voting for persons between 18 and 21.

Dr. A. L. Fletcher of Leesville was elected state chairman and W D. Amis of Newberry, secretary and treasurer. Delegates elected include: W. H. Harley, Laurene; Mrs. Agnes Macaulay, Chester; Mrs. Richard Allison, Columbia, Rev. A. C. Griffith, Gaffney; Proctor Fletcher, the Rev. Maxie C. Collins, E. L. Garity and Ms. T. Thornton of Greenville, Amis, Miss Rebecca Reid, Sumter, Miss Laura Ebaugh of Greenville, and three following Negroes, Dr. M. F. Whittaker, Orangeburg; Lt. Colonel Charity E. Adams, formerly of Columbia and President E. H McClinney of Voorhees Institute at Denmark. The Lighthouse & Informer

None of the Negro delegates was present at the meeting however.

The new party repudiated actions of the older party and elected to allow its delegates freedom to use their own judgment at Philadelphia. Columbia, S.C.

STATE PARTY WILTS

There were indications late Tuesday that state Democratic leaders were wilting; Governor J. Strom Thurmond, for the second time within a week, urged a state convention all over again to iron out difficulties the party set before itself. Sun 7-4-48

And this was being done while delegates from half a dozen counties, defying state party rules, were reported to be in secret session at Goldville, where a strategy for possible court and other action was beng worked out in the event the state party should attempt to invalidate their primary votes. All of these counties permitted Negroes to enroll in violation of party rules.

BEFORE HE WALKS OUT

Editor, The Advertiser:

With reference to a resolution adopted by the State Democratic Committee, I have attempted to make my position clear and in addition to submitting a definite "No" to the questionnaire sent out by Mr. McCorvey. Montgomery Advert.

I am against the incorporation of any part of the so-called civil rights program in the platform of the Democratic Party. As a delegate to the convention I will cast my vote against any such program. I am also against the nomination of President Truman and as a delegate to the convention, I will not vote for his nomination. I have previously stated my position on both of these issues. Sun. 7-11-48

On the other hand, I do not propose to tie my hands by promising in advance to walk out of the convention at any particular stage of the proceedings. Before I walk out of the Democratic Party, I will want to know what I am walking into. Montgomery Ala.

If I am elected as a delegate to the National Democratic Convention, I expect to exercise my own "good judgment," to use the words of the committee resolution, in meeting the problems of the convention as they arise.

The Democrats Defy Custom

The Constitution

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA—Democrats of the United States of America will go before the people in November with a Presidential ticket unusual in at least two aspects. Atlanta, Ga. (34d)

It will include a Southerner, Sen. Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, as the Vice Presidential nominee. It also will present two men from adjoining States, thus defying the accepted custom of taking candidates from separate areas of the nation on the theory that such an arrangement attracts more voters. There might be included a third factor. Missouri itself is almost a Southern State and is so regarded by many Americans. Indeed, one of the reasons for some of the Southern anger, now expressing itself in the platform fight and in the opposition to President Harry Truman, is the fact that some of the Truman opponents regard him as a Southerner who, as they claim, sold them out. Wed 7-14-48

Certainly it is a most unusual ticket. After Sen. Barkley's great keynote speech, there was nothing else to the argument about who would be nominated for the second place.

He gave the convention its first enthusiasm, its first confidence. He may not attract much following in the East. That remains to be seen. But he will help the Southern cause, although he will not assure it. Mississippi is the focal point today. The general opinion is they would not be satisfied with less than a repeal of Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation. They are actually holding out for no plank at all on civil rights but instead a strong State's rights plank. Other than with Mississippi, Sen. Barkley will help, even in the next strongest bolt-minded States, Arkansas, South Carolina and Alabama. He will also hold the border States, which were in jeopardy. The Constitution

He is a great American, and the South, as well as the nation, can have confidence in him. Atlanta, Ga.

What this ticket will do remains to be seen. It will pick up some strength. But as of now the Republicans remain far in front in the outlook for November. Wed 7-14-48

3 Groups Primed For Convention

Columbia Record

Columbia S.C.

Some For, Some Against Truman

Wed. 7-7-48

Three groups of delegates were ready today to attend the National Democratic convention in Philadelphia Monday.

The regular South Carolina Democratic party delegates are pledged to oppose President Harry S. Truman for nomination, and to oppose the civil rights platform.

The Progressive Democratic Party (Negro) is pledged to support Truman and the civil rights program.

And, a third group which claims membership in the regular party, will send a slate of delegates to "assure South Carolina of representation at the convention."

These two second groups have meetings scheduled today to outline plans for their participation in the convention.

James M. Smith, secretary of the South Carolina Democratic party, said that some of the delegates will leave the state Friday to participate in the pre-convention caucuses presumably to "draft" Gen. Dwight G. Eisenhower for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Gov. Strom Thurmond, one of the delegates who will arrive in Philadelphia early, has announced that he would release the South Carolina delegates in favor of Eisenhower. The state's regular Democratic delegates are instructed to support Thurmond for president.

Dissension Prevails

Meanwhile, as the Democrats plan to enter the national convention, dissension continues to prevail on the home front. James M. Hinton, head of the South Carolina National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, announced that his organization will seek court action against the party.

The NAACP plans to sue the Democratic groups of 40 counties which, abiding by the state party rules, refused to permit Negroes to enrol.

7-7-48

An attorney for the group will ask Federal Judge J. Waties Waring of Charleston for an injunction tomorrow.

John McCray, chairman of the Progressive Democrats, said today that his group would seek "at least 40 per cent representation" in the Democratic convention.

Delegates from the South Carolina Democratic Party named by the May 19 convention are:

At large—Chairman William P. Baskin, Governor Thurmond, Mrs. Kitty McCravey Willson, State Sen. George Warren of Hampton, Lt. Gov. George Bell Timmermon, Jr., of Lexington, State Sen. Edgar A. Brown of Barnwell.

State Sen. J. D. Parler of Dorchester; Robert McC. Figg of Charleston, R. A. Jolley, Edwin B. Boyle of Sumter, C. Bruce Littlejohn of Spartanburg, Rep. S. Lewis Wallace of York, William G. Morrison of Charleston.

STATE'S RIGHTS PLANK LOSES 925 TO 309

Daily World
Atlanta, Star

BY EMORY O. JACKSON

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (SNS)—A badly-split Democratic Party showed furthur evidences of cleveage over the civil rights issue when the convention voted 651½ favoring a resolution approving President Harry S. Truman civil rights legislation and 589½ against.

Thurs. 7-15-48

Earlier the convention had rejected a fight for a states' rights plank by a 925 to 309 vote.

After a riotous floor fight by embittered Southerners who were anxious to eliminate any reference to the race question a roll call vote was held also on the suicidal civil rights resolution.

Even the South split over the states' rights question with Kentucky, West Virginia and border states voting its rejection.

THE DESERTIONS

Yet, the civil rights questions caused even the president's home state, Missouri to vote against the resolution. Kentucky, even deserted its favorite son, Alben W. Barkley on the race question. Surprise votes against the civil rights resolution came from New Hampshire and Rhode Island, who joined reactionary Southerners in an attempt to defeat the resolution.

Mayor Hubert Humphrey, of Minneapolis, started the offensive for the minority civil rights report, with a withering blast against opponents of the measure.

Perhaps, the most dramatic appeal for civil rights came Tuesday night from George L. Vaughn. Negro delegate from St. Louis, who survived determined Southern boos and catcalls as he spoke, to demand that Mississippi delegates pledged to walk out if Truman is nominated or the civil right program be included in the party's platform, be ousted.

Thurs. 7-15-48

He labeled the Mississippi delegates "botters" and insisted the people of the state had not authorized them to leave the party. He told the convention between boos and cheers, that the civil rights program contained nothing not already guaranteed by the United States Constitution.

Vaughn sppech caused the convention to border on pandemonium as Temporary Chairman Alben Barkley called for a voice vote and ruled the minority reported offered by Vaughn defeated.

Daily World

Wednesday, the platform-writing committee headed by Sen. Francis Myers brought what some had hoped would be a compromise on civil rights in stating that the Democratic party believes everybody, regardless of race or color, should enjoy equal rights under the Constitution.

Atlanta, Ga.

MINORITY REPORT

But a group of Southerners led by Dan Moody of Texas, Chauncey Sparks of Alabama, both ex-governors, came out with a minority report.

Thurs, 6-15-48

Mayor Humphrey of Minneapolis demandd a more specific declaration for civil rights and the fight wan on. Tempers flared, and angry argument broke out but it was evident long before the vote reached Ohio that the delegates were determined to bid for a stronger civil rights plank. The same was true regarding states' rights.

Immeriately after Temporary Chairman Alben Barkley announced the official vote on the civil rights issue, Alabama delegates stormed to their feet to demand the floor, but Barkley ignored them and hastily adjourned in order to give tempers a chance to cool.

SOUTHERN WING OF PARTY GIVEN REBUKE

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

By EMORY O. JACKSON

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. —(SNS)— Northern Democrats handed the Southern wing of the party a stinging rebuke by an emphatic endorsement of President Harry S. Truman's civil rights proposals.

Thurs.

Cheering delegates to the 30th Democratic convention riveted into the platform a resolution that which bolstered the revamped 1944 civil rights plank reported out by the Platform and Resolutions Committee. It read: "We highly commend President Harry Truman for his courageous stand on civil rights.

7-15-48

"We call upon the congress to support our President in guaranteeing these basic and fundamental American principles—the right of full and equal political participation; the right of equal opportunity of employment; the right of security of person, and the right of equal treatment in the service and defense of our nation."

SOUTHERNERS LOSE

The Scutherners were flamed by even the compromise over civil rights. Northerners said there should be specific backing for the Truman program. The North had superior voting strength and the North had its way.

The final vote was 651 1-2 to 582 1-2. Only 618 were needed.

However, in another controversial issue—states' rights, Northerners and Southerners rode roughshod over a recommendation that states have "the right to control their internal affairs and enforce police regulations" within the limitations imposed by the 14th and 15th amendments to the Constitution.

At the opening of the night session Alabama delegates angered by the Convention's actions on civil rights walked out. They were followed by the Mississippi delegation. Their seats were taken by 13 alternates who remained.

This move had been foreshadowed by the action of Birmingham's Police Commissioner Eugene "Bull" Connor, who a few minutes before the recess before the balloting sought vainly to get the folor, when the civil rights balloting was announced so that the delegates could announce they were leaving, but Chaiman Sam Rayburn did not recognize him. Frantically screaming, with the Alabama sign in his hands, the Alabaman got nowhere.

ARGUED HUMAN RIGHTS

Prior to this Mayor Humphrey of Minneapolis had argued that human rights come before states' rights. He told the convention that no watered down civil rights plank would do. He said the choice was between the shadows of states' rights and the brightness of human rights.

Daily World

The civil rights debate which lasted over an hour gave the convention one of its liveliest sessions. The victory was a resounding defeat for the South and a glorious triumph for liberalism. It is not clear yet what the course of the South will be.

Atlanta, Ga.

Charlie Block, spokesman for the Georgia delegation nominated Sen. Richard Russell, but it was plain this was an empty gesture since Truman forces were well in command. Even President Truman had already left Washington for Philadelphia so strong was his belief that he would be nominated.

7-15-48

But several speakers said the Convention was watching the smashup of the party. Robert Figg of South Carolina called for the furor "the funeral of the Democratic Party."

Daily World

Congressman William Dawson of Chicago was one of the afternoon speakers. Rev. Marshall Sheppard offered prayer.

Atlanta, Ga.
Thurs.

Delegates who walked out were in addition to Connor, J. Miller Bonner of Camden, Alabama; Handy Ellis of Columbiana, Ala.: Albert Stapp, Jes Edward, H. M. Abercrombie, all three of Birmingham, Thomas King of Anniston, John Mandeville and John Moore of Gadsden, Thomas Maxwell of Tuscaloosa, E. C. Boxwell of Enterprise, Graham Right and Albert Riddle, of Talladega.

PARTY LEADERS UPSET

Middle-Of-Road Civil Rights Program Ditched By Big Northern Delegations

Commercial Appeal

(See Alsop Column, Page Six)

By GEORGE E. REEDY JR.
United Press Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—The Democratic Convention Wednesday rode roughshod over the protests of angry Southerners and adopted a "Roosevelt-Truman" platform that included a sharp-toothed civil rights plank.

To the consternation of party leaders, the delegates accepted a plank drawn up by the New Deal wing of the party. It called in unmistakable terms for antipoll tax, antilynch, antidiscrimination and fair employment practices legislation.

Memphis, Tenn.

Regular Democrats Upset

The New Deal wing was led by Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey of Minneapolis, who tossed in the racial rights plank at the last moment. His move was a complete upset to regular Democrats who thought they were in control of the situation.

They had presented a compromise plank carefully worked out by a handpicked group of seven headed by Senator Francis J. Myers of Pennsylvania. It was clear that that declaration would have voided a deep split in party ranks.

Thu. 7-15-48

The party leaders successfully beat back a Southern attempt to weaken their plank with a strong "states' rights" declaration. It was offered by former Gov. Dan Moody of Texas.

Moody's amendment was turned down by the convention on a state-by-state roll call vote of 925 to 309.

The crucial racial rights issue overshadowed every other controversy in the party platform.

O.K. Taft-Hartley Repealer

A plank calling for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act was passed without a dissenting voice or vote.

The delegates hurriedly riffled through a long series of planks pledging strong aid to Palestine, a nationwide minimum wage of 75 cents an hour, a strong foreign policy, and firm opposition to Communism.

Their primary interest was in the civil rights question.

Party leaders had hoped to steer a middle course between North and South on the burning civil rights issue.

7-15-48

Humphrey came up with a substitute for the civil rights plank drafted by a hand-picked group of high-ranking Democrats. It was adopted by a vote of 651½ to 582½. A majority of states opposed the amendment, but the big delegations from Northern States brought about its passage.

Southern Bolt Loses Power As 'Regulars' Force Issue

The Times New York N.Y.
Wed. 7-14-48

340

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—The hand of party authority began today to fall in heavy rebuke upon those irreconcilable Southerners still threatening to bolt President Truman in November. There were signs that this campaign was having its effect and that the bolting faction was losing some heart and strength.

Dem.

The tactic of the "regulars" was one of seeking to isolate the most active prospective November rebels, a plan first developed last night by the Texas delegation, and of forcing them to the fullest public disclosure of their intentions.

In a sharp test case, the Mississippi delegation, which under questioning bluntly proclaimed "with no apology" its intention not to support the President in November, was able to cling to its right on the convention floor only by a 16-11 vote of the credentials committee.

Wed.

This was the most clear-cut issue thus far raised in the Democratic National Convention on the great question as to what the South would do, not now, but in November. The victory of the anti-Truman delegates was so narrow that the opposition prepared a minority report to resume the fight on the floor. 7-14-48

The Mississippi group headed by Gov. Fielding Wright, which was challenged by other Mississippians pledged to back Mr. Truman if nominated, was opposed solely on the bolting question and no legal or technical question was raised by its antagonists.

The credentials committee, which had just rejected less fundamental challenges to the Virginia and South Carolina delegations, fought over Mississippi in closed session for two hours. At one time, it was learned, the committee stood tied and it was only after much pulling and hauling that those favoring the Wright group were able to bring in a slender majority.

Senator Carl Hatch of New Mexico, for example, at length supported the Wright delegation, but declared that he thought it not entitled in principle to a seat and would have so voted had there been any clear existing rule against those who threatened to bolt.

He not only proposed such a rule for future conventions but successfully carried through another resolution for a new policy by which the national party would speak out against discrimination against Negroes in making up future southern Democratic delegations.

Two-Thirds Vote Plea Rejected

The Times

The Rules Committee for its part refused by 24 to 6 an old Southern demand for the restoration of the principle by which it once required a two-thirds vote to nominate a candidate.

Outside the convention and the committee rooms, matters were going badly for the extreme Southern rebels. Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas, the "states' rights" candidate against President Truman, was slow in picking up strength and at a press conference he declined to predict how many votes would go to him. Finally he accepted a reporter's suggestion of "about 150." He asserted also that he had "never" said that he would "actively oppose" the President. A decision on this point, he added, would be made only after the present convention.

New York N.Y.

The Governor, one of the original leaders of a Southern group that tentatively had scheduled some time ago an anti-Truman rump convention in Birmingham, Ala., likewise refused to say whether this meeting would be held after all. Again, he implied, it was too eary to tell; he did say, however, that he had at present "no definite plans" to go to Birmingham.

Tonight, he had in prospect for the first ballot, barring threatened Southern "walkouts" ahead of time which could greatly reduce his score, an aggregate of 114 votes for certain and 139½ in all likelihood of a convention total of 1,234.

Wed.

Georgia Has Favorite Son

Some Southern delegations which he badly needed, for the strong gesture of protest which is the South's aim, remained severely aloof. Georgia, for example, prepared to stay entirely away from the Laney movement, because of its bolt complexion, by putting up as a favorite son Senator Richard B. Russell. 7-14-48

Some in the Arkansas delegation itself, which was bound under the unit rule to support Governor Laney, were nevertheless not happy with his candidacy. One of these, Lee Seamster, asserted:

"If Laney intends to stay home on election day he should stay home from this convention."

Former Representative Claude Fuller declared:

"I can tell the world that the State of Arkansas will stay Democratic in November in spite of this man's bolt."

As for the credentials committee, the contests settled there, apart from that of Mississippi, involved disputes implying possible bolts but having none of the defiance showed by the Mississippi anti-Truman faction.

Decisions on Credentials

South Carolina's delegation was challenged by two other factions, made up by Negroes for the most part, on the contention that the party in that state had excluded all negroes from any effective participation. This protest was rejected by 25 to 2. 7-14-48

Virginia's delegation, under the command of Senator Harry F. Byrd's organization, was attacked on the claim that it was a prospective bolters' group. Unlike the Mississippi leaders, however, the Virginia spokesman, John J. Wicker Jr., strongly rejected this accusation in behalf of his state.

Wed.

The effort was not actually to unseat the Virginia delegation, but only to exact from it a pledge of party loyalty. The committee declined unanimously to demand such a commitment, holding that there was no precedent for it and no precedent for applying to Virginia sanctions that were not being applied to other states.

Truman Pulls Ace; Dares Show By GOP

Atlanta Daily World

Fri 7-16-48

Atlanta Ga.

CONVENTION HALL, Philadelphia —(SNS)— President Truman in his acceptance speech as the 1948 Democratic presidential candidate here Thursday morning showed the Republicans that he plans to live up to his ole home state adage - I'm from Missouri, you'll have to show me!

Mr. Truman made known his ace in the hole when he told convention delegates that he's going to give the Republicans a chance to do less talking and more acting on their proposed 1948 platform when he called a special session of Congress on July 26.

Terming the 80th Republican Congress as the worst in history, Mr. Truman accused the majority Republican Congress of defeating all measures proposed to help the common man.

"Let us see then what those Republicans will do," the President remarked as howls of approval reverberated throughout the hall.

CONFIDENT

With a voice of confidence, the president shouted:

"We'll win this election and make the Republicans like it."

Mr. Truman told how he had advanced several worthwhile measures for congressional consideration which were met with either an attitude of indifference or hostility at the hands of the Republicans.

Nominated as the vice-presidential candidate is Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky.

With such a running mate, Truman declared that the Democratic party can't lose the 1948 election.

7-16-48

Dressed in a natty white suit and accompanied by his wife and daughter, President Truman climaxed the three day convention with his acceptance address.

Meanwhile, the Southern anti-Civil Rights-faction of the party saw a revival of Sherman's march to the sea when they were repeatedly defeated in attempts to get a States' Rights foothold.

They suffered their first defeat when party delegates overwhelmingly voted down a proposed resolution to taint the party platform with a States' Rights plank. They tasted defeat again when the party strongly approved the inclusion of a Civil Rights plank. And last but not least, they suffered a do or die defeat when their States' Rights champion, Senator Russell, of Georgia, was defeated in the nomination of the presidential candidate.

Daily World

Fri 7-16-48

Their forces shattered beyond repair, Alabama delegates tried to recall the remnants by nominating Sen. Russell as a vice-presidential candidate. This also crumbled with no less disintegration when it was made known by Georgia delegates that their stalwart son desisted in the vice-presidential offer.

Atlanta, Ga.

"RUN OUR STATES"

Among the rebels who walked out of the convention were the Alabama and Mississippi delegates who avowed steadfastly that "we'll run our states as we see fit."

Licking their wounds, they boarded the fastest train South with their "tails curled under," thinking perhaps that a proposed caucus meeting in Birmingham tomorrow might in some way alleviate their despair. The special caucus of the "Dixiecrats"—as they have been so rightfully named is being called by Mississippi's Governor Fielding Wright. Other Southern states are also expected to be represented at the caucus.

Governor Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, harangued at length why States' Rights should be the foremost concern of the party delegates. He, like the many others who wasted their eloquence, was shown that safeguards of individual liberties are the true roots of any democratic organization.

Sen. Barkley was nominated unanimously, after Chairman Sam Rayburn, of Texas, waited in vain for changes in the Southern vote and finally accepted a motion which was approved and gave unanimity to the lone nominee.

FORMAL CALL

Daily World

Thursday noon Mr. Truman issued a formal call for the special session. His proclamation did not outline reasons for the call, but merely directed the members to assemble to receive such communication as may be made by the executive.

Fri 7-16-48

Two reactions were seen to Mr. Truman's call for the special session. however, the Republican presidential nominee, Gov. Dewey, of New York, withheld any comments, it was said.

Atlanta Ga

Some Southern Democrats believe that the Republicans will waste no time in putting a Civil Rights Bill before the Senate, while some Republicans regard Truman's dare with hilarity in the prospects of another Southern Democratic filibuster.

Whatever the results, speculations are that Mr. Truman's maneuver will be a boon to his popularity, especially among Negroes and labor.

Truman's maneuver was the first pulled since 1856 when another Democratic President, Sam Pierce, issued such a call. Meanwhile the nation awaits with bated breath the outcome of the session.

Fight Centers Around Civil Rights Plank

By RALPH MATTHEWS

CONVENTION HALL, Phila. — Harry S. Truman is the Democratic nominee for President.

His selection by the perspiring delegates was a foregone conclusion after the stop-Truman movement, headed by Jimmy Roosevelt and Southern delegates, collapsed with the announcement by Gen. Ike Eisenhower and Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas that they would not be available.

The delegates chief fight now is to choose Truman's running mate and to write a civil rights plank in the platform acceptable to both liberal and Southern delegates.

At the same time President Truman was winning, Cong. William L. Dawson of Chicago was emerging victorious in his quadrennial struggle for leadership in the party.

Detroit Man Loses

Challenging Dawson's supremacy was Emmett L. Cunningham of Detroit, president of the National Council of Negro Democrats. Cunningham's idea is to form a separate organization of colored Democrats. Dawson holds to the plan of integration on the local level.

7-17-48

"There was confusion" was the best phrase to describe the City of Brotherly Love as the various factions and delegates began jockeying for position at the opening of the convention.

This confusion was not only evident around the convention headquarters at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel where the huge paper-mache donkey has replaced the inflated rubber elephant of the GOP, but it was also dominating the influence around the Chesterfield Hotel and the Pyramid Club where colored delegates held their pre-convention caucus.

At the main headquarters the confusion centered around the selection of a running mate for President Truman and the possible verbage of the contraversial civil rights plank.

Struggle for Power

At the Pyramid Club the confusion revolved around a struggle for power between Emmett Cunningham, Detroit and William L. Dawson, Chicago, who is chairman of the colored division of the Democratic National Committee.

The big issues, at a special meeting Sunday night were who would dictate the writing of the civil rights plank and who would carry the ball to expedite the seating of the South Carolina delegation whose attempt to be recognized was turned down by the credentials sub-committee Saturday.

The Afro-American

Mr. Dawson, titular head of colored Democrats, was not present at the session attended by approximately 100 delegates, alternates and observers, but he was there in spirit through the booming voice of one of his Illinois proteges, State Legislator Charles Skyles.

Dawson Not Present

Mr. Dawson was not present for the simple reason that he has never placed his official blessings on the National Council of Negro Democrats, whose activities he views as subversive and a studied attempt of the Detroit faction to undermine his national leadership.

Mr. Dawson also resented the equally studied snob by which he was not invited as an official of the Democratic National Committee, but was merely sent a form letter to be present.

As a result, the meeting ended on a note of dissatisfaction and split loyalties.

To get a clear picture of what is going on behind the scenes in the "little convention" it is necessary to recall some of the history of our participation in Democratic circles which is at best fairly recent.

Baltimore, Md.

Thompkins Was First

Long before the arrival of the New Deal which brought colored voters into the Democratic fold in numbers sufficiently large enough to be felt, the late Dr. William J. Thompkins, former Recorder of Deeds and a few scattered Democrats from all parts of the country organized what was known as the National Negro Democratic Association.

Sat

It was their practice to meet a few days prior to the regular convention and draw up petitions which were presented to the regular convention in an "advisory" capacity.

7-17-48

With the death of Dr. Thompkins, Mr. Cunningham, aware that without Thompkins's leadership the field was wide open, organized the National Council of Negro Democrats, which he called the successor to the Thompkins movement.

Many, however, have tried to keep the old NNDA functioning and have refused to admit that it is dead in spite of Cunningham's funeral pronouncements.

Recognition Refused

In the meantime, Congressman Dawson as a member of the regular Democratic National Committee, has refused to recognize either group, but has fought for recognition of colored personalities who win their leadership within the framework of the regular Democratic machine in their respective communities.

Dawson's philosophy is that each leader be recognized by his county, city or State Democratic organization and that the cause of the race cannot be advanced by these individuals separately themselves from their white compatriots and attempting to bring pressure by affiliating themselves together as a "colored bloc."

He opposes any attempts at racial isolation although he thinks they should have a oneness of purpose without resorting to the technique of jim crowing, themselves.

The Afro-American

Cunningham, on the other hand, believes all colored Democrats should pool their strength in pre-convention caucuses and gibe a physical as well as a spiritual manifestation of their combined strength.

Baltimore, Md.

Here Are Stakes

This is the behind the scenes struggle that took shape as the convention opened and here are the stakes.

Sat

If Cunningham succeeds in binding the delegates, alternates and others together in a solid block he will be able to put himself forward as the popular leader of colored Democrats and insist that Dawson is the hand picked leader of the white party bosses.

On the other hand, Dawson in his strong position inside the "Smoke-filled rooms" can approve or veto jobs and appointments and can keep those who lean toward Cunningham from getting patronage for their workers and supporters.

7-17-48

Delegates Divided

That's why most of the delegates were torn between two loyalties. Most of them are uncomfortable in their peculiar and admittedly lonesome marriages to their State delegations where they have little chance to blow off steam and participate in the convention proper.

7-17-48

By attending the Cunningham meetings they make speeches, pass resolutions, serve on committees and have a heck of a good time in spite of the fact that all they do must in turn be submitted to the main convention for ratification or rejection through emissionaries.

I AM FOR HARRY S. TRUMAN

AS this column goes to press, I hope to be in the City of Brotherly Love as an alternate delegate to the National Democratic Convention. Since it is generally known that I am taking a great interest in national politics these days, many queries have been directed to me asking whom I would support in the nomination for president of the United States. Without equivocation, I have said Harry S. Truman, and will continue to say Harry S. Truman.

Sat.
7-17-48

It seems to me that those of us who come from minority groups and those of us who serve in the ranks of organized labor certainly would fail dismally if we did not recognize the great contribution that Harry S. Truman has made, not only to the labor movement and to the minority groups in this country, but to the world at large.

Truman's stand on civil rights, to which he has steadfastly clung, has never been equalled by any president in the history of our nation. Not only has he advanced the theory of civil rights in a very practical way, but has gone about making it an actuality. Certainly, Thomas Jefferson did not go this far, neither did Jackson. Lincoln had his reservations and FDR applied it when expedient; but Truman, who had all to lose and not too much to gain, gamely stood out in defiance against the forces of bigotry in behalf of disposed Americans, and has continued to do so.

Not only this, but he fought for price controls as he did against the Taft-Hartley Act and the fraudulent tax reduction act, all of which were defeated by a reactionary Republican Congress who are now saying to us, "Give us your suffrage and in turn we will give you a better administration and a land of milk and honey."

The adroit talk and the zealous fence straddling of Speaker Martin in addressing the National Republican Convention is an indication of what to expect should the Republicans succeed in placing Tom Dewey in the White House. Mr. Martin, in so many words, says that the Republican Party is going to give to the American people a constitutional government. Well, the Republicans have had many years to give us a constitutional government but somehow or other, the Republican Party seems to have been of the opinion that the civil rights section of the Constitution was more or less an appendage to be considered lightly.

Defender

No less adroit and zealous is Henry Wallace, who now comes before the minority groups and certain sections of the organized labor movement with preachments of justice and equality for all, and yet, by his own record, there appears a grave contradiction.

Chicago, Ill.

If we really believe in constitutional government and we are sincerely interested in the welfare of our country, we will not permit ourselves to be misled by the usual political acrobatics that seem to permeate every nook and corner today, but rather will look into the record of those that seek office.

Herb Graffis, in his weekly column of the Chicago Sun-Times a month or so ago stated that the "trouble" with Truman is that he would rather be right than president. He continues by saying, "FAIR-MINDED MEN AND WOMEN, WHEN YOU TALK TO THEM ABOUT WHAT'S THE TROUBLE WITH TRUMAN, NOW ARE BEGINNING TO THINK THAT HE'S BEEN TOO RIGHT IN WORKING FOR THE COMMON INTERESTS OF THE NATION AND NOT GRANDSTANDING ENOUGH FOR THE MANY GROUPS THAT DIVIDE US."

Sat

Thus it is I am prepared, if the occasion warrants, to l it be known that there are some of us in this country who fully appreciate the integrity and the sincerity of those who labor so diligently to make this nation of ours the democracy it should be; and as one member of the Illinois delegation, I INTEND TO BE IN THE CORNER OF HARRY S. TRUMAN UNTIL THE BITTER END.

Pepper Withdraws From Race With Party Unity Plea

By M. L. ST. JOHN
Constitution Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—Georgia's delegation will ask the Democratic National Convention tomorrow to nominate Sen. Russell for President of the United States. The delegation will not walk out of the Democratic Party.

Meanwhile, Sen. Pepper, in stepping out of the race, spoke gravely of what he called the "splintering of the Democratic Party . . . which is about to be consummated in the Convention."

All in one statement, Pepper called for party unity, heaved bricks at President Truman and the Republicans, and pledged himself to support and work for the Convention nominees.

"The present leadership of the Democratic Party," he said, "has proved incapable of holding the Party together."

Because of "bungling and ineptitude by the present leadership of the Party," the Senator said, Southerners were about to form another party.

Wed.

He said such a split would not lead to a war between the States as it did in 1860, but:

7-14-48

"It most certainly would contribute to a divided world and might mean World War III."

The Georgia policy formally was ratified by the delegation at a caucus this afternoon when it unanimously voted:

1. To place Russell's name in nomination if another State doesn't do so before Georgia's name is called, and keep voting Georgia's 28 votes for Russell until the final gavel falls, and,
2. Against joining any "fourth party movement," which supporters of Arkansas' Ben Laney are planning if they walk out of the Convention.

National Committeeman - Elect Robert Elliott, of Columbus, pointed out that the delegation was not committing Georgia to support President Truman in event he is the Democratic Party's nominee. He said the caucus did not mention a nominee's name at all when it said it would not walk out of the Party.

The Constitution

State Chairman James Peters, of Manchester, said that how Georgians voted in the general election was a matter that addressed itself to each individual Georgian. The only thing the delegation could do, he said, was to fight for the nomination of Russell and fight against the nomination of Mr. Truman and against a civil-rights program in the platform and then go home.

Atlanta, Ga.

National Committeewoman-Elect Iris Blitch, of Homerville, described Chairman Peters' action in walking out of the recent Jackson, Miss., meeting of "States'-rights" Democrats when they wanted to bolt the Party as "the greatest thing that has been done for the Southern wing of the Democratic Party."

Wed.

Mrs. Blitch said the South formed the core of the Democratic Party. If the Party were defeated, it would be rebuilt around the Southern core and around States' rights, she predicted.

7-14-48

Shelby Myrick, of Savannah, reported that the National Party's Credentials Committee came near eliminating delegations from Mississippi, South Carolina, and Virginia because of their threats to quit the Party. He warned against Georgia, making any threats which would jeopardize its position.

He also said a move was on foot to force all States to pledge to support Mr. Truman after he was nominated.

B. D. Murphy, of Atlanta, made an unsuccessful fight in the National Party Rules Committee to re-establish the two-thirds rule. He said the States opposing the rule always had been "doubtful" States, and he warned that the South now was "doubtful" for the first time.

Charles Bloch, of Macon, was selected in a resolution presented by Spence Grayson, of Savannah, to make the nominating speech for Russell. Sol. Gen. Randall Walker, of Blackshear, introduced the resolution to nominate Russell.

George Googe, of Atlanta, AFL leader and Truman supporter, said he would go along with Georgia's delegation on Russell.

A. L. Henson, of Atlanta, and H. G. Bell, of Bainbridge, called for Georgia to remain Democratic, stating it was the only State never to leave this party.

Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, of Athens, and Judge T. Hicks Fort, of Columbus, were in high dudgeon early today over reports that the national party's Platform Committee had met without notifying them. Later they learned that it was a subcommittee which met. They were to attend a session of the full Committee later today.

7-14-48

Truman Williams, youngest delegate at the convention, declared he had been misquoted by a newspaper stating he would vote for Dewey in the general election. He said the paper did not carry his full quotation and that it also jumped at a conclusion.

The 18-year-old Notre Dame student from Douglas, Ga., said he had declared he did not want Truman or Wallace or Dewey, but that the paper (not The Constitution) failed to add the "or Dewey" and jumped at the conclusion that he would bolt the Democratic party. Williams said he would not leave the party.

Sen. Pepper Sails Hat Into Presidential Ring

Mon 7-12-48

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

PHILADELPHIA, July 11—(AP Revolt flared up from the South and parts of the North tonight—but the Truman-for-President bandwagon rolled on with hardly a jolt.

And the Democratic high command opened the door wide to Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas for the Vice Presidential nomination. But Douglas wasn't talking and the race stayed wide open.

Justice Douglas

These were the top developments as the Party's national convention got ready to open tomorrow:

Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida added spice to the hitherto dullish proceedings by proclaiming that he was bowing to a draft and would run against Mr. Truman for the Presidential nomination. There were few votes behind him.

Rebellious Southerners threatened to pick a third candidate, or even to run a man of their own against Mr. Truman and Republican Tomas F. Dewey in November.

They hollered their approval of caucus jabs at the President and his civil rights program, and then they decided to let a committee see what can be done about selecting a Dixie standard bearer in the next day or two.

Frank Hague, New Jersey leader, called on the State's Democratic Convention Delegation to vote for Harry Truman for the Presidential nomination.

Hague is one of those who was calling last week for a draft of Gen. Eisenhower.

The meeting of the Delegation and State Democratic leaders adjourned without action.

Southern leaders were saying what nearly everybody else was—that Mr. Truman is going to be nominated on the Convention's first ballot.

Americans for Democratic Action gave up on Justice Douglas for the Presidential nomination. They were late, because most delegates had done so long before.

ADA Chairman Leon Henderson announced that "we will accede" to Douglas' wishes that ADA stop its drive for him. Henderson said "it has been widely reported President Truman wants Douglas to run for the Vice Presidency" and that the organization hopes the Justice now "will make himself available" for the Vice Presidential spot.

And tonight Douglas looked like as good a bet as anyone, and a better bet than most, for second place on the ticket.

Top men in the Party and Convention were flirting with the idea of Douglas for Vice President. But the Justice himself was being coy and having "no comment."

The Pepper people moved into a headquarters once used by backers of the abortive boom for Gen. Eisenhow. They pulled down Eisenhower's picture but left up the signs saying "People's Choice for President."

A seven-member committee of Democrats who wanted somebody other than Mr. Truman announced late today they had settled on the Florida Senator who has the reputation of being one of the most leftish men in the Party.

The committee included William Ritchie, Nebraska State Chairman; Joseph M. Baird, of New York; Harry Carlson, New Hampshire National Committeeman; William W. Shayne, of Florida; Robert George, Kansas; Joseph DeSilva, California, and August Scholle, Michigan.

Then Pepper turned up with his "I accept" pronouncement at a news conference in his new headquarters.

Seated at a table behind a battery of microphones, his pretty wife beside him, the Senator said he came to Philadelphia with the belief "the one man to lead this nation was Dwight D. Eisenhower."

But since Eisenhower refused to be drafted, Pepper said:

"Many delegates have been looking for someone to present the principles of Franklin D. Roosevelt. They have been looking for a man to express these principles. I accept."

He said he had a "good hope" of winning, that liberals in the convention would flock to him.

Pepper has long been a favorite of the CIO. Today Jack Kroll, Director of the CIO Political Action Committee, said in reply to a question that Pepper's entering the contest would be a "healthy thing." But an aide of Kroll said this should not be interpreted as a flat CIO-PAC indorsement.

At any rate, Mr. Truman's critics had no hope of stopping him from getting the nomination.

Even the Dixie Democrats conceded he will be nominated on the first ballot along about Wednesday, and that all they could do at this time was lodge a protest against it.

While Douglas has disclaimed any interest either in the presidential or vice presidential nomination, it became clear that he was officially sounded out once again for second place on the 1948 ticket.

A prominent party member who didn't want his name used said as much.

Then National Chairman J. Howard McGrath supplied what looked like confirmation. He told a news conference it was "a fair assumption" Douglas hadn't made up his mind yet about becoming the vice-presidential nominee.

He said friends of the justice were consulting both himself and Douglas, who is out in Oregon.

Would Douglas be acceptable to Mr. Truman for a running mate? A reporter inquired.

"I am sure," the national chairman said, "the President will accept as his running male any man the convention chooses to nominate."

He said yes, that meant the vice-presidential contest still is wide open.

McGrath said the chances are increasing that Mr. Truman will appear at the convention before it adjourns.

The Southerners made plenty of noise and stirred up plenty of enthusiasm at their conference. But there wasn't much real action after the speeches.

Sen. McClellan, of Arkansas, said delegates from an even dozen Southern states were among the 400 people at the caucus. But many were spectators or reporters.

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, asked the Southerners to place a candidate of their own in nomination against Mr. Truman. He accused Mr. Truman of stabbing the South in the back. He called Mr. Truman's civil rights program "damnable."

And the delegates stomped and broke into rebel yells.

Sitting in but taking no part was James Roosevelt, son of the late President and chairman of the California delegation. Roosevelt was one of the leaders in a deflated boom for Eisenhower.

Gov. Ben Laney, of Arkansas, who presided, said after the session that some Southern delegates may take a walk when Mr. Truman is nominated.

McGrath told reporters he didn't think that was right.

Earlier, Chairman W. H. Talbot, of the Louisiana delegation told a reporter it would "not bolt" the Convention.

In the vice presidential picture, James A. Farley stood out against Douglas. He told reporters:

"I don't think Douglas would add as much to the ticket as the others. And there would be considerable opposition to him in the Convention."

The man who master-minded the first two victories of Franklin D. Roosevelt listed five men he thought would be better:

Senators Barkley, of Kentucky; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Tydings, of Maryland; Atty. Gen. Clark and House Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas.

The outlook for a slam-bang convention floor fight widened as Dan Moody, former Texas Governor and a Platform Committee member, issued a statement declaring "so-called civil-rights" advocates aim "to take the South through a new reconstruction era—this time by Federal law rather than Federal bayonets."

President Truman is a shoo-in for the presidential nomination. And the top man on the ticket always has the big say about second spot.

Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson told a reporter there "definitely will be no decision on the Vice Presidency for another 24 hours." Donaldson had just conferred with McGrath.

Ex-Gov. Sparks Grim As Battle Is Lost At Philly

The News

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA, July 15—Nomination of the Truman-Barkley presidential ticket and adopting of an even stronger than expected "civil rights" plank in the Democratic platform may bring a far-reaching political revolution in the South.

That was the opinion expressed today by Former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, after having watched the Democratic National Convention steamroller at work before it ground to a close in the early morning hours.

Sparks, Alabama delegate-at-large and a key man on the platform-writing committee of the convention, sat solemn-faced as he and the other thousands who packed the meeting hall watched the dramatic walkout of half the Alabama and all the Mississippi delegates.

Birmingham, Ala.

NORTHERN and Eastern liberals, who dominated the convention, rode roughshod over the Southern rebels. They treated the Dixie delegates, including those like Sen. Lister Hill, Sparks and the others who remained in the convention, as well as those who walked out, with arrogant rudeness. Thurs.

For sheer drama—many of the delegates from states in the North and West didn't believe the Dixie revolters actually would take a walk—the walkout led by Alabama Chairman Handy Ellis was a climactic moment in prolonged and stormy final day of the convention. 7-15-48

Sparks, who stayed in the convention and voted with Alabamians and other Southern delegates for Georgia Sen. Richard B. Russell, was not happy over the outcome and viewed Democratic prospects in the coming presidential election gloomily. What may happen to the South disturbed him even more.

"This convention may mean a far-reaching political revolution throughout the South," said Sparks, who worked long and hard along with other Southerners on the platform-drafting subcommittee. They tried to kill off the "civil rights" proposals by watering them down so as to be acceptable to the rebellious Southerners. 7-15-48

J. M. BONNER, Camden, delegate-at-large, and E. C. (Bud) Boswell, Geneva, Third District delegate, who served with Sparks on the platform and resolutions committee in the final day of its work, walked out with Chairman Ellis and others of the walkout faction which made up 13 of the 26 members. The News

As a result of the convention adopting the strong "civil rights" plank, regarded by the Alabamians and other Southerners as much more unacceptable than anticipated planks, together with nomination of President Truman, the former governor told this reporter:

"We've got to go home and study our situation and, in co-operation with other states, determine a policy for the South.

"We have been traditionally Democratic because of what the Democratic Party stood for. It seems to have abandoned those principles here. The South may, therefore, be forced to seek more congenial association."

By this, Sparks said, he doesn't mean that the South would go Republican, because he considers GOP political company not at all congenial.

It also was a dramatic moment for the 13 non-walkouters in the Alabama delegation who remained in the convention when Sen. Hill was handed the floor microphone by walkout Chairman Ellis. These on the evenly-divided delegation who opposed a walkout had wanted Hill chosen chairman.

Hill promptly yielded Alabama's top place on the roll call of states to Georgia for the nomination of Sen. Russell—the man the Dixie state delegates supported futilely but enthusiastically.

Birmingham, Ala.

"WE'RE GOING TO STAY in this convention and fight Harry Truman," declared Hill. They did. They not only supported the Georgian for president but also for vice president, well knowing he had no chance to win either place over the opposition of Mr. Truman and Kentucky Sen. Alben Barkley.

It had been Barkley who had revived the badly-sagging convention with his keynote speech. The final day's dramatic development climaxed by the walkout and nomination of standard bearers, gave the streamlined convention new life and vigor. Thurs.

The walkout, led by the Alabamians, had been delayed several hours because Permanent Chairman Sam Rayburn refused to recognize Ellis, Eugene Connor, John Mandeville and others of the walkout group who shouted to the chair and waved banners frantically. They had done this when the platform, with its greatly strengthened "civil rights" plank, had been adopted. Their pledges to the voters of the state were that they would walk out if the "civil rights" proposals were included in the party platform. Finally, after a recess, Ellis was recognized by the chair and he told the huge convention gathering: 7-15-48

"At this time, without hatred, without fear, but with disillusionment, we are carrying out our pledge to the people of Alabama. We bid you goodbye."

Ellis and the other walk-outers were on their way, bearing the Alabama convention banner and a state flag. A swarm of photographers and reporters had hovered around the delegation most of the day. They surged after them in a wild scramble toward the door.

Radio reporters grabbed several of them for network interviews. It was a big news story, whatever it may or may not mean to the South.

AS FOR THIS, Probate Judge Hardy Riddle, Talladega, delegation vice chairman, said: "I don't know how much good we can do with tactics we're using, but I do know the South has got to the point where it is receiving absolutely no consideration from the Democratic Party. Things are getting worse," Riddle asserted. "It has got where one district in Harlem has more influence with the party than all the Southern states." 7/15/48

State Sen. Graham Wright, also of Talladega, pointed out this was the second national party convention he had attended. He said he was becoming more convinced that results of these conventions were cut and dried not to give the South anything. The News

"I personally think it's the beginning of the end for the Democratic Party," said Wright.

Besides Ellis, Connor, Bonner, Boswell and Riddle and Wright, others who took a walk were Albert Stapp, Jess Edwards, Tom King, H. M. Abercrombie, John Mandeville, John Moore and Thomas H. Maxwell. 7-15-48

Atty. Gen. Albert Carmichael had delivered a seconding speech in behalf of Russell, whose record in Congress and in other endeavors was pointed to with pride. George Wallace, Clayton, Third District alternate, who was elevated to a regular place on the delegation because of the illness of L. A. Farmer, placed Sen. Russell's name in nomination for the vice presidency. In one of the convention's shortest speeches, Wallace described Russell as "the man who will see that the South will not be crucified on the cross of civil rights." Birmingham, Ala.

fully supplied in every particular. With this army of 500,000 the nation could deal with its enemy while the great civilian army was being trained." 7-15-48

Barkley, O'Mahoney and McCormack Entered

Times Picayune

(The Associated Press)

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, July 12.—Democrats set their national convention going today with oratorical thunderings against the Republicans and a scramble to find the right team to run against them.

Harry S. Truman will be half the team. New Orleans

The big question tonight was: Who will be put in harness to run alongside him? Wed.

The names of three men were openly entered in the contest—Sens. Alben Barkley of Kentucky and Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Rep. John W. McCormack of Massachusetts. A horde of other possibilities got mention.

(348)

It won't be Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas. A beckoning finger was pointed his way but he refused to get down off the bench, even at Mr. Truman's own request.

The convention cast Barkley in a starring role tonight, a role that put him in a strategic position to win the acclaim and a following among the hundreds of delegates.

Barkley Blasts GOP

For it was Barkley to whom Democrats assigned their convention keynote speech. And Barkley poured it on, as he has done in conventions of the past that held high a torch for Franklin D. Roosevelt, and as he has done from his position of leadership of Democratic forces in the Senate.

"Our claim upon the confidence of the people," he said, "rests upon a consistent, constructive and farsighted record of devotion to the people's welfare; a record which - rescued the American economy of free enterprise from a collapse we did not foster; a record which four times the American people have overwhelmingly endorsed."

Barkley lit into the GOP especially on its record in Congress. Wed. 7-13-48

"There is the record of things promised and not accomplished," he said. "There is the record of attempted sabotage of some of the greatest programs ever inaugurated by the American government."

The senator ladled out the expected praise for the New Deal, which he said the Republicans denounced in their convention speeches and then in their platform "hugged to their political bosom as if it were the child of their own loins."

'Wide Open,' Says Flynn

As the convention headed into its second session tonight, huddles in downtown hotels were credited with setting the stage for the choice of a running mate after Mr. Truman walks away with the presidential nomination along about Wednesday.

In those huddles were some of the men who supported Mr. Truman for second place four years ago.

Edward Flynn of New York, former Democratic national chairman, meandered through convention headquarters.

"The field is wide open, evidently," he remarked to newsmen.

Barkley was in the race because Gov. Earle C. Clements of Kentucky put him there. Clements said Barkley didn't want anyone to start a campaign for him but his name was going to be put in nomination just the same.

Clements claimed a lot of delegates wanted Barkley for vice-president.

McCormack in Contest

McCormack, who had been saying he was available, came right out with an announcement of his candidacy. He said he would withdraw only on request of Mr. Truman.

"There is a growing sentiment," he told a news conference, "that President Truman's running mate should be from the East. There's a strong sentiment I'm the man who would bring the greatest strength to the ticket." 7-13-48

McCormack said he had pledges of support from Rep. Clarence Cannon of Missouri, Rep. John W. Flannagan, Jr., of Virginia, Former Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson, and A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

O'Mahoney has been in the race ever since there was one. He is the only candidate with an official headquarters. And he has some strong support from the Mid-West and Far West. 7-13-48

But support began piling up today behind other men, too. Gov. William Preston Lane of Maryland, for instance.

'Wait and See' Attitude

But that first ballot for vice-president doesn't come until Wednesday or Thursday.

So delegation after delegation took a "wait and see" stand. They left it to Mr. Truman to call the signals. One prominent Democrat said he might do so in a telephone talk tonight with his lieutenants at the convention.

The president clearly was just as able to name a vice-presidential candidate as he was to run away with the presidential nomination for himself.

Yet anti-Truman forces refused to cave in completely beneath the Truman steamroller.

Rebelling Southerners kept insisting they would cast some votes for Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas for the presidential nomination. Laney was the man they picked in the early morning hours to carry their colors in opposition to Mr. Truman and his civil rights program. Jul 7-13-48

Other discontented Democrats, tag ends of collapsed efforts to shunt Douglas or Gen. Dwight Eisenhower to the White House, tried to whip up support for Senator Claude Pepper of Florida. Pepper agreed last night to run for them.

But nobody even pretended Laney or Pepper would get any farther than preventing a clean sweep for Mr. Truman on the first roll call.

Parading onto the speaker's platform today were some party regulars who swung into the first speeches of the convention.

Blast at Republicans

Mayor David Lawrence of Pittsburgh opened the convention, 43 minutes late. But he and some others gave the delegates something to cheer about as they came out swinging at the Republicans.

"High-tariff, special privilege, duck-the-taxes, beat-down-labor, forget-the-world Republicans," Lawrence roared. Delegates roared, too.

Senator Francis Myers of Pennsylvania said that the GOP picked "their best loser" in Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. History will repeat itself in November, Myers predicted, when the Democrats will lick Dewey again.

That was the general nature of the talks—except for a greeting from Mayor Bernard Samuel of Philadelphia. He's a Republican.

For the most part, the opening session was for organization purposes, for getting things started and for giving delegates something to do.

But many of them preferred to stay away from the hall entirely. And there were thousands of empty seats in the double-decked spectator galleries.

'No Reason for Despondency'

One reason was that the big show was playing under the main tent. The real convention maneuvers were taking place a mile or so away, at headquarters in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel and in hideouts of party big shots in other hotels.

In the convention auditorium and in the hotel conferences, there was nothing like the noise and excitement of the GOP meeting last month. This time there was no clash of rival personalities in a scramble for the presidential nomination.

The contrast was so noticeable that Paul V. McNutt felt called upon to tell the rest of the Indiana delegation:

"There is no reason for this apparent despondency. We must get out and fight."

Eight years ago, McNutt was the popular choice of the Democratic convention for vice-president. But Franklin D. Roosevelt gave the nod to Henry A. Wallace instead.

Platform Troubles

The Democrats were having platform troubles, too, because of that civil rights issue.

Some of the liberals in the party want to write in a plank promising the laws Mr. Truman has recommended against lynching, poll taxes and racial discrimination in employment.

The South says it will have none of that.

And both sides threatened to fight it out on the convention floor if they didn't get their way.

Whether the platform-makers could go down the middle and please both factions was a big question.

A small committee of seven finished a first draft of the platform early this morning. It was handed to a bigger committee of 18 for inspection. Then it goes to a still larger committee of 108, and finally to the convention itself.

As it left the hands of the seven-man committee, one member said the civil rights plank was planed to about the shape of the one in 1944. That was in such general language Southerners didn't have much objection to it.

Vice-President Issue

This time, there is doubt whether such language would prevent a battle by Northerners for something stronger.

The vice-presidential ruckus took on some of the aspects of a battle royal, too.

You could name practically any Democrat you ever heard of and find somebody saying kind words about him as a second-place possibility.

Some delegates were saying it would be a good idea to get away from possibly overpublicized contenders and center on a horse of a darker color for the race.

Springing up here and there were names like:

Paul Porter, former OPA administrator and former head of the federal communications commission; Wilson Wyatt, who used to be mayor of Louisville and federal housing administrator; former Sen. Sam Jackson of Indiana, Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing, Sen. Harley Kilgore of West Virginia.

Douglas Deals Self Out

A cabinet member told a reporter that one group of Truman aids sitting in on the convention likes Sen. Barkley or Governor Lane, either of whom would probably be acceptable to the South.

He said another group rather likes Ewing. This is the group, he said, that pushed Douglas along to the point where the job was offered to him.

Douglas dealt himself out first thing this morning.

The first word that he wouldn't take the vice-presidential nomination came from convention officials. At first it was anonymous. Then Publicity Director John Redding announced it.

Douglas followed through with a statement at Portland, Ore. He recalled that four years ago Franklin Roosevelt said both he and Mr. Truman would be acceptable running mates.

"I thought then, as I think now," the justice said, "that no person while a member of the supreme court, should seek political preferment.

'Definitely Not Available'

". . . I feel deeply that my greatest service to the nation at the present time is to remain on the supreme court. . . . And so I say definitely and finally that I am not available for any public office." 7-13-48

A Democrat in a position to have inside information told a reporter he understood Douglas had held off his refusal until just before the convention began because he was trying to find some way of running and staying on the bench at the same time.

This official represented Mr. Truman as being against that.

Mr. Truman's home state, Missouri, began talking about Governor Lane of Maryland. Chicago Democratic Chief Jacob M. Arvey said he "liked" Lane.

But Arvey and National Committeeman Edward J. Kelly of Illinois both agreed Barkley would be "all right."

Barkley spoke up for himself long enough to tell a reporter he wasn't a candidate. But friends said they were sure he could be drafted.

Group for Barkley

Senate colleagues spoke up for him. Senator Ernest W. McFarland of Arizona said he thought "it's Barkley" although he had no word from the White House. Senator Olin C. Johnston of South Carolina said personally he thought Barkley would do.

Johnston has been a leader of the Southern revolt against Mr. Truman.

Kentucky's governor and delegation chairman, Earle C. Clements, announced that Barkley's name definitely will be put in nomination. He said that will be done although the senator expressly had asked that the step not be taken.

But, said Clements in a statement: 7-13-48

"It is apparent that without any effort or campaign on his behalf, a large majority of the delegates to this convention not only desire but demand the nomination of Senator Barkley for the vice-presidency."

Governor Beauford Jester, chairman of the Texas delegation, said the state could find "no objections" to Barkley as they could to Douglas.

Pickets Protesting Army Jim-Crow March on Dems

(From Pittsburgh Courier Press Service)

PHILADELPHIA—A picket line, led by A. Philip Randolph, was thrown across the front of Convention Hall here just before the first session of the Democratic National Convention Monday of this week. The pickets carried signs protesting Army jim crow and urging the Democrats to take a strong stand against segregation in the armed services.

Mr. Randolph led a similar picket line during the Republican National Convention here last month. He is secretary of the Committee Against Jim Crow in Military Service and Training and is the originator of the projected civil disobedience movement in protest against racial discrimination in the Army.

Meanwhile, a new organization, growing out of the Committee Again Jim Crow, was formed to direct the civil disobedience campaign. It was organized following Congressional passage of draft legislation which carries no provision for the elimination of segregation.

Called the League for Non-Violent Civil Disobedience Against Military Segregation, this organization last week called upon Negro and white clergymen to set aside Sunday, July 25, as a Day of Prayer in behalf of all young men who violate the Selective Service law because of racial segregation. Mr. Randolph is chairman of the new organization. Bayard Rustin of the Fellowship of Reconciliation is executive secretary.

Texas, Swinging Round to Truman, Puts Squeeze On Arkansas Governor

Courier-Journal, Louisville, Ky.

Jul. 7-13-48

Laney Chides Mind Changers

By WILLIAM S. WHITE.

Special to The New York Times and The Courier-Journal.

Philadelphia, July 12.—The Texas delegation, the most powerful from the South, began tonight a counterattack against extreme Southern rebels intended to framment or destroy a possible Southern bolt against President Truman in November.

Asks Where Courage Is.

The Texas leaders, with the apparent support of a heavy majority of their associates, declined to promise Governor Ben Laney of Arkansas even so much as a token vote for the presidential nomination unless he publicly pledged that he wuold support Truman in November.

Governor Laney, in response to an extraordinary summons, went before the Texas group tonight to refuse to make such a promise. He declared he would not vote for Truman, and cried out, "Where is the courage of Texas?"

The Governor early this morning had been put forward as a "States'-rights" candidate by the wing standing irreconcilably—and hopelessly, so fas as the Democratic National Convention is concerned—against President Truman. His followers laid claim to full support only from three Southern delegations — Arkansas, Mississippi, and South Carolina —and desperately sought the help of the larger and more influential groups, mainly Texas.

Want Strong Demonstration.

They were fully prepared to concede privately that Truman would be nominated, but they wanted to make the strongest demonstration possible.

This was actually in pursuit of what has become the only real Southern aim now—a desperate effort to exercise pressure on the convention to get the softest possible civil-rights plan.

Laney appeared before the Texans at 8:35 p.m. to give a manifesto of his position.

For hours a Texas committee had been trying to find him, and when at length he arrived he told the Texans:

"I was a little hard to find, but it was not intentional. I don't have a thing in the world to hide. I've gone too far to try to dodge this issue and I have no inclination to dodge it. 7-13-48

'No Time to Quibble.'

"The time has come when some of you had better stand on your feet and say what you think. If I a mto have a creditable vote in the convention—and I am trying only to save a situation, a party, and a country—we need Texas.

"This s no time to quibble in small matters. The Democratic Party is on the ropes tonight. The Democratic 'leadership has so handled the situation that there is now no possible unification.

Column 5, back page, this section.

"You, yourself, don't believe in the things Harry Truman has advocated and will advocate."

Laney, a leader among Southern rebels who have threatened a rump convention in Birmingham, recalled with irony that Governor Beauford Jester of Texas, head of the Texas delegation, himself had participated in the early discussions that led to the Birmingham plan.

'Trying to Put Me On Spot.'

Jester remained silent and Laney went on, his voice rising and shaking in the hot, silent room:

"You are trying to put me on the spot. All right. You want me to tell you what I'm going to do. Well, I'll tell you.

"For my part I want nothing from the Democratic Party if I have got to comprdmise principle. Let us all examine our hearts and consciences and vote as they tell us.

Jul. 7-13-48

"I shall use every measure that is legal and proper in this fight. I am going through with it. Millions of Southerners are going through with it.

Texas' Position Strange.

"I am going to do it whether you vote for me or not."

Texas was in a strange position. Its delegation had indicated 100 per cent dissatisfaction with President Truman and its civil-rights program, but nevertheless was not willing to give any sort of aid or comfort to any who might bolt Truman in November.

The state, moreover, was in a tactical position of the greatest importance. Many among the more experienced Southern politicians had conceded all along that the South, even in offering a symbolic candidate in the convention against Truman, must be united to make the gesture very effective.

Civil Rights Victory Aided By D. C. Group

Washington Post

By a Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 14.—The District of Columbia's 12-member, six-vote delegation had a reason to cheer today when the Democratic Convention refused to compromise and backed up tre President's civil rights points.

The entire District delegation voted for Minneapolis Mayor Hubert Humphrey's spell-out civil rights points. Two members of the group figured prominently in the backstage strategy leading to the coup.

They were Joseph L. Rauh, jr., chairman of the national executive board of Americans for Democratic Action, and Tilford E. Dudley, an assistant director of CIO-PAC.

Rauh worked closely with Humphrey in some of the early planning, and both District representatives were present when a 12-State ADA caucus Tuesday night decided the resolution committee's compromise wasn't enough.

Thu. 7-15-48

As a result of the caucus, and later directions from his Minnesota delegation, Humphrey took his four-point demands to the Resolutions Committee and later to the convention.

The District, farthest south of any of the so-called northern liberal delegations supporting the change, played a role second only to Minnesota, said Dudley.

Dudley said ADA Leader Rauh was hte most active, but the entire District delegation backed him up.

A. L. Wheeler, another District delegate, said the District Democratic delegation has always plugged for civil rights just as it has pushed for District suffrage. In 1944, he said, they won on District suffrage but got a weaker civil rights plank than they wanted.

"We feel real proud tonight," said Wheeler. "We won on both counts."

Change---But Not Death

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA—As the Democratic Convention dragged through the dreadful, wet heat of a humid, steaming July day and night with adjournment probable at some hour well into Thursday morning, a few concrete results were apparent.

One was that the Party is going to be out of office for eight or 12 years because it is finished as it was. It is by no means dead. The Republican papers have scolded this Convention and lectured it, but it has had a lot of vitality for all its record of dullness. The Party is headed for some sort of reorganization. Exactly what it will be no one may see for sure in the heat and fury of this last, strength-sapping day. But it is not a dying party. It is a party in which there are deep issues and differences which, for the first time since 1856 and 1860, are being fought out and not appeased and compromised. The Democratic Party, always a curiously composed one of diverse elements, has had unity only when some strong man came along to cause the contending elements to compromise and dull the edges of their differences.

Looking at it now, one sees that the late Franklin D. Roosevelt had other aids to Party unity in addition to his own genius for politics and persuasion. He had the compelling need to join hands to fight a depression and a great war, as forces for unity.

Atlanta Constitution

Now, paradoxically, with the country prosperous and with more men and women working than ever before in the nation's history, there is no unity.

For the first time in the history of the post-Civil War Democratic Party, bitter and deep-seated issues, involving long-established customs and traditions, are being challenged.

Thurs. 7-15-48

The Republican Convention was dull. It's side-show of rival candidates was exciting with cheese and free soft drinks and bands and special songs and great rallies. But, its actual convention was dull. This convention has been exciting since it got under way, which was Tuesday. It has tenseness and fight. It is driving toward defeat but also toward reorganization. It will be back eight or 12 years from now. And with unity.

The floor fight on the minority move to expel the delegates from Mississippi who were seated by a narrow margin of three votes by the Credentials Committee, and the following demand of the industrial states to be on record against the Mississippians, was symbolic of the deeper issues which came up today for bitter debate and a hard and fast division. Symbolic, too, is the plank for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Law.

Rarely has any political convention had as much vitality. And also, rarely has one had so great a gulf driven between two factions. It is a gulf so wide and deep that some states float within it, like lost suns, belonging to neither of the two worlds, not yet ready or able to become fixed.

Thu. 7-15-48

So, one may say today with some assurance there will be Democratic defeat in November. That is no new deduction, but it is plainer now. Yet one now can see, also, that the Democratic Party has been in the process of change for some time and that it is going on to become a different party in which the urban centers will be its chief strength and interest. The proposal to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act will drive out many now in the Party. It is possible the rural regions, not merely of the South, but of the other regions as well, may leave it in the years ahead. But, in those years ahead, the two-party system seems sure of continuing and there will come a unified Democratic Party. Many of us will not like it. But it is coming. It will not be the Party of Cleveland, Wilson and Roosevelt, any more than the Party of their time was the Party of Van Buren, Taylor and Fillmore.

Already the oldest political party in the nation, the Democrats are not going to die. They are going to change, whether for better or worse, none may now say.

A Quiet Political Essay

Atlanta, Ga

Fri. 4-30-48

Certain straws in the political winds may be clutched and examined for signs. Two of them now are in the air. Both are significant.

In Alabama, where the fires of Southern revolt have been fanned the hardest by the same old anti-Roosevelt crowd so active against the President in 1940 and 1944, and against Sen. Hill in 1944, there seem to be signs of a slowing down.

Former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, speaking in Montgomery, has put up red stoplights on the Philadelphia Convention exits, where the more hotheaded of his contemporaries have been trying to install a green "go" system. (Gov. Folsom weeks ago put up his own stoplight.)

"This talk of bolting the convention," former Gov. Sparks said, "is foolish and impractical. Threatening to walk out of the convention is no way to block the Truman recommendations," he insisted, suggesting instead a fight in the platform committee and on the floor.

Reversal

Alabama's candidates for delegates have gone so far it will be difficult for them to reverse themselves. They are pledged to walk out, through a stoplight, if necessary.

The pity of it is, from the South's viewpoint, that we listened to the hotheads. Calm voices were, for the most part, afraid to speak for fear there would be those who would charge them with being "for" the Truman civil rights recommendations. So, the most impractical and the most illogical voices had the stage all to themselves, with results that now are plainly seen as impractical and harmful to the Southern position. Fri.

It is disturbingly comparable to the days of 1860, when the calm voices of the South went unheeded, and the hotheads pushed us into a war we might have avoided. 4-30-48

Now, the more calm voices are being heard. One may hope it is not too late.

Georgia

In this connection, it is worth noting that Georgia's committee course has been calm and intelligent. Chairman James Peters has run neither with the hare nor hounds. He has skillfully kept the lines tight against, one may assume, the usual pressure from those who always want to stage a runaway, even if they smash the buggy against a tree.

Georgia politicians, even of the present generation, remember that Tom Watson once bolted the party. The historic lesson of that titanic struggle in which Watson's great courage and political genius could not win, remain.

The Constitution

After

The national party may be bankrupt after November, but there will be a Democratic Party long after Mr. Truman and the present issues are settled and accepted.

All over the South politicians are beginning to think of that.

Georgia is not the only State that has been calm. North Carolina, Tennessee and Florida have been relatively calm, participating in conferences more or less experimentally. As in 1860, the worst and the most dangerously unsound leadership came most vocally from South Carolina and Florida. To these, in 1948, must be added Virginia. But, even there the Byrd machine had to water down its original proposals.

There likely will be four States which will have at least some delegates who will walk out of the convention if it adopts civil rights measures even comparable with those of 1944. Others will concentrate on defeating Truman. Decision as to withholding electors will come after the election in November.

Atlanta, Ga.

National

That second straw was an announcement by Georgia's junior Senator, the able Richard B. Russell, that he would seek to line up support for Georgia's favorite son, the senior Senator, Walter F. George. Fri. 4-30-48

Some time ago it was argued here that a mild George boom would inevitably develop. The Russell announcement means that the committee seeking to find another candidate to replace Truman, which group was led by Sen. Russell, has been unable to find one.

Sen. George, who has not sought to have his name placed before the convention, but who quite understandably will not forbid it, is likely to get support from a half dozen States, not all of them from the South, in the early balloting. Should the anti-Truman campaign gain real strength, as now does not appear likely, Sen. George would benefit from that.

It now appears, however, that Truman is more assured of the nomination than before, and he always has seemed the best bet, largely because, as the Russell announcement confirms, that careful search has revealed no other candidate strong enough to replace him nationally. But his defeat in November assumes even heavier proportions. For the Democrats these be doleful days. 4-30-48

Will the Storm Gather Force?

Fri. 7-16-48

PHILADELPHIA—(This is a dispatch that might be dropped overboard in a bottle to wash up on some of our Southern or Northern shores any time in the weeks or months hence and it may look just like one in any other bottles that might have been fished out of the sea in the last hundred years.)

It is written in a storm, not a storm at sea, but a storm on a convention floor. Angry men and women are shouting, almost snarling, at each other over an issue that still isn't settled and bobs up every so often first to plague, then to break up for a time, one of our great political parties.

It is the great issue of human rights which rises eternally in one form or another.

State placards are bobbing angrily, too, like life preservers clutched frantically by men and women tossed into a raging sea from a sinking ship, and the simile seems apt, for there is something reminiscent of a sinking ship in this episode here.

7-16-48

By the time this dispatch gets to its destination, even by our fast modern communication system, the storm now raging before the eyes of this reporter will have long since passed. The Democratic Party will have adopted its platform, the civil rights plank of which is the cause of this storm. It will have its candidates for President and Vice President in Harry S. Truman and Sen. Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky. Southerners will have hurled their last defiant rebel yell and a corps of workmen who live by their muscles honestly and not by their wits precariously like politicians will have cleaned away the debris, the posters, the campaign buttons, to make the hall ready for another convention which will nominate two more men for President and Vice President in a third party—to reveal again the turmoil and uncertainty of the times in which we live.

This great hall here has seen some history in the last few weeks as perspiring men and women have sat here in the heat under the lights. For the first time, because of television, they have done their work, made their speeches and listened to speeches, boiled up in enthusiasm and anger, lke actors on a Hollywood set—in public view. And that, of itself, is a piece of history.

Fri. 7-16-48

The Republicans were here first before the Democrats and the Henry Wallace third party comes next. The first and the last of these are not disturbed by the issue that is the cause of this storm here among the Democrats. Republicans settled it for themselves when Abraham Lincoln issued his emancipation proclamation on Jan. 1, 1863, midway of the War Between the States, and therefore they can give it lip service constantly, year after year, without objection. It is accepted, too, by the Henry Wallace party.

But Democrats are still tortured with it because of their Southern wing, even though, as a number of speakers here have pointed out, their party has accomplished much in the last 16 years to break down racial and religious discriminations through the influence of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

But Harry S. Truman went the more politic Franklin D. Roosevelt one better. He spelled it all out in very specific terms and asked Congress, bluntly, to make it the law of the land. So he raised up for himself the storm that rages about him here.

As we watch, the storm rises and then abates, and all in so short a time.

But the spectacle here is timeless, as timeless as the great fight for human rights. The scene is like something out of a history book, with only the costumes different. It might have been a convention in that troubled decade before the War Between the States when earnest men searched anxiously for compromise on an issue that won't be compromised. The same bitter words were said.

The Whig Party tried to compromise it, and withered away in the process. A new party was born and became strong because it would not compromise it, and that party since has ruled periodically for long stretches and seems now on the verge of returning to power again, though not, of course, only because of that issue.

The Democratic Party finally splintered off into three national conventions in 1860 and was not able to pull itself together for a long time afterward, for this is an issue that tears men apart so they cannot work together in peace.

Again the Southerners talk of another convention of their own—of going down to Birmingham.

Why don't they go to Montgomery where the Confederate States of America was created? The cycle would be complete.

DEMOCRATS DECIDE ON TRUMAN-BARKLEY TICKET IN PHILLY MEET

Vaughn Report Almost Ousts Revolting Mississippi Delegation

The Black Dispatch Okla.

BIRMINGHAM PARLEY CALLED SATURDAY

Sat. 7/24/48

PHILADELPHIA (Convention Hall)—Enraged Southerners, frantic because a majority of the delegates attending the Democratic National Convention voted down a state rights plank in the platform and commended the chief executive for his stand upon civil rights and nominated President Truman to succeed himself in office, called a seceding convention that convened in Birmingham, Ala., Saturday.

Take a Walk

All of the Mississippi delegation, led by Governor Fielding Wright, along with half of the Alabama delegation, left convention hall Wednesday following the overwhelming vote rejecting the civil rights proposal by delegate Dan Moody of Texas.

Negro Blasts Mississippians

The fireworks started Tuesday night when Attorney George L. Vaughn, Negro delegate from St. Louis, and a member of the credentials committee, was presented to the convention to offer a minority report for the credentials committee. The Vaughn report would have unseated the Mississippi delegation because of its pre-convention pledge to walk out of the convention if President Truman received the nomination.

Demand Roll Call By States

Noise and disorder broke out in the assembly when the full import of the Vaughn proposal leaked through to the delegation and unruly scenes broke out among the southern delegations. Temporary Chairman Barkley sought to declare the vote lost on a voice vote, but determined state delegations from the North and East halted the proceedings for almost half an hour until Barkley agreed to allow a record vote by states on the question of unseating Mississippi. Illinois, California and Michigan were pacified when allowed immediately to register their votes against offending Mississippi, and following the selection of Sam Raburn as permanent chairman, Barkley read a list of states voting against Mississippi, which barely missed being a majority for ouster.

Long Hark From Houston, Texas Shame

It was a bitter pill for Southerners to see a minority report presented by a Negro delegate almost win approval of a majority of the delegates, and convention delegates recalled it was a long hark from the day when Negroes attending the national Democratic convention in Houston, Texas, some twenty years ago were physically screened from the convention with hog-wire fence.

Dawson Speaks

The convention also heard a rip-snorting good speech from the congressman from Chicago's first district, William L. Dawson, Wednesday, which was evidence to all that the black man had his feet firmly planted in the Democratic organization and in the Philadelphia convention.

Support Civil Rights

Before the nomination of Truman and Barkeley, Democrats from the North, West and East used their strength to endorse President Truman's stand on civil rights and to down a proposal to adopt a plank endorsing state rights. Mayor Hubert H. Humphries, of Minneapolis, who led the fight for adoption of a resolution commending President Truman for his stand on civil liberties, received thunderous applause when he shouted, "The issue is not one of state rights but of human rights."

The resolution which was voted as a plank in the platform was bitter gall to the angry Southerners and resulted in the Mississippi and Alabama walkout, follows:

"We highly commend President Harry Truman for his courageous stand on the issue of civil rights.

"We call upon the congress to support our president in guaranteeing these basic and fundamental American principles—the right to full and equal political participation; the right to equal opportunity of employment; the right of security of persons, and the right of equal treatment in the service and defense of our nation."

Cecil Sims, of the Tennessee delegation, offered another state rights plank but it was shouted down. Sims, however, refused to leave the convention with the revolting Southerners.

Nominate Truman-Barkley

The convention Wednesday night, while President Truman and his presidential entourage sat in a wing of the convention hall, proceeded to nominate the present incumbent of the White House by a vote of 947½. Two hundred sixty-three votes were c. t by Southerners for Senator Richard Russell, of Georgia. It is presumed that Russell will be the choice of the Southerners at their convention Saturday.

Oklahoma Remains Liberal

An interesting sidelight on the convention proceedings came from Oklahoma; Kentucky, Maryland and Delaware, border states, refused to follow the lead of revolters and voted for President Truman. West Virginia also voted to support a Truman ticket. The nomination of Alban Barkley for vice president was unanimous.

How Negroes Were Rejected By Democrats

N.Y.

7-15-48

By Daily Worker Convention Bureau

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—Rep. William L. Dawson (D-Ill) spoke from the platform today as Democratic leaders made a feeble effort to repair the damage to party influence among the Negro people caused by the credentials committee report yesterday. But Dawson skirted carefully around the issue of civil rights. 7-15-48

Devoting one sentence in his 2,000-word speech to this question, the Illinois Negro Congressman said President Truman had "courageously and unequivocally advocated . . . to assure to every citizen the rights guaranteed by our Constitution, that freedom, liberty and security in life and property and the right to work and the right to vote, are the sacred heritage of every person."

7-15-48

One other Negro appeared on the platform today, Rev. Marshall L. Shepard, pastor of the Mount Olivet Tabernacle Baptist Church of Philadelphia, who delivered the opening prayer.

When Dawson came to the podium, there was a short demonstration by the Illinois delegation. The Southerners stayed in their seats and ohter delegations were content to clap briefly.

When he concluded, California, New York and Minnesota joined in a demonstration.

34d

But this could not atone for the "gentlemen's agreement" by which Democratci "Liberals" and old regulars railroaded through the convention the Credentials Committee report seating the White Supremacy delegations from the South.

Rep. Mary Norton (D-NJ) chairman of the Credentials Committee, delivered the committee report, rejecting the protests offered by White and Negro Southerners against the seating of the South Carolina, Virginia and Mississippi delegations. At this point, George Vaughan, Msisouri Negro leader and member of the credentials committee, came to the platform to offer a minority report.

Vaughan limited himself to challenging the credentials report on only one delegation, that of Mississippi. He explained that in this contest, the committee vote was 15 to 11 and he felt there was a better chance of winning. However, in his speech, Vaughan went beyond the legal technicalities involved in the Mississippi issue and demanded recognition by the party of the rights of the Negro people in the South.

7-15-48

There was heckling from the Southern delegates and here and there on the floor there were brief fist fights.

BARKLEY RAILROADS VOTE

As soon as Vaughan concluded, Sen. Alben Barkley (D-Ky), who presided, rapped his gavel and put the issue to a voice vote. It was difficult to tell whether the ayes or the noes were louder but Barkley announced the majority report had carried. Immediately there was turmoil on the floor. Former Mayor Ed Kelly of Chicago said the Illinois delegation wanted to be on record as supporting the minority report. 7-15-48

Barkley tried to proceed to the next business but all over the floor there were shouts of delegations clamoring to be heard. At length he consented to permit the delegations in opposition to be recorded.

When the names were all in, it was clear that the opposition had 503 votes definitely. These included Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Connecticut, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, Washington, Wisconsin, District of Columbia and California. Had there been a roll call, the majority report would have been defeated.

But Barkley, irritably made the admission that there had been an agreement among members of the credentials committee that there would be no roll call on the minority report. In other words, leaders of the delegation now demanding to go on the record as opposed to the seating of the White Supremacy groups, had agreed not to make any kind of fight which could have won.

None of the so-called Liberal leaders took the floor to speak in support of Vaughan's minority report. Newsmen who observed the fracas commented that had Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis, Jimmy Roosevelt of California, or Mayor O'Dwyer of New York spoken up, victory would have been virtually certain. 7-15-48

A few minutes later, the convention voted by voice vote to support the Rules Committee report which refused to restore the old two-thirds rule under which the Solid South formerly held the balance of power in the party convention.

Second Walkout of Southern Democrats the First In 1860, Led to Election of Lincoln!

34

Philadelphia. — (ANP) — Tonight's walkout of Dixie delegates at the Democratic convention was sump'n, but the really colossal walkout of the party's history came 88 years ago.

The Democrats met at Charleston, S. C. in that ominous year of 1860.

They split apart with a crash so shattering that the brand-new Republican party easily elected its very first President, name of Lincoln, and the Democrats didn't get back into power for 24 years.

Then, as today, the feud was between Democrats of the North and of the South. Then, as today, the fight had to do with racial issues. It was over the question of whether to extend slavery.

At Charleston, Southern Democrats wanted the platform to say that a slave owner could go into any new territory of the West and be fully protected by the Federal government in his constitutional right to own slaves.

The Resolutions Committee upheld this view. But a minority report was presented to the convention—just like today. The minority report ignored the slavery issue. July 7-12-48

After a terrific fight, the minority report was adopted. Eight Southern delegations walked out. The party was so shaken that it adjourned without nominating any candidates.

Later it met again at Baltimore. Three more Southern states bolted. The remaining delegates at Baltimore nominated Douglas for the presidency.

Douglas believed that the people of each territory should decide for themselves whether to allow slavery.

The bolting Southerners held a convention at Richmond and nominated John C. Breckenride, of Kentucky.

The Republican party was solidly united under Abraham Lincoln and although he didn't get a majority of the popular vote, he was elevated to the White House and an immortal place in history.

Mississippi, Half Of Alabama Quit

By Willard Shelton
STAR Convention Bureau

CONVENTION HALL, Philadelphia, July 14—The Democratic national convention tonight nominated Harry S. Truman for a full presidential term after 35 delegates from Alabama and Mississippi bolted the session in angry protest against the civil rights program adopted this afternoon.

Handy Ellis, chairman of the Alabama delegation, announced the bolt as Alabama's name was called on the roll call for nomination of presidential candidates.

Speaking for 13 members of the 26-member Alabama delegation and all 22 Mississippi delegates, Ellis dramatically declared that his state would "never vote Republican, never vote for Truman, and never accept the civil rights program.

"We therefore bid you goodbye," he said. 7-15-48

The convention reconvened for its final uproarious session only 15 minutes late. The climax was delayed as Gov. Herbert B. Maw of Utah and Sen. Brien McMahon of Connecticut went through the paces of their scheduled speeches. McMahon uttered an appeal for international ~~control of~~ atomic energy and urged that the "Iron Curtain" of the Soviet Union could be broken if our people continued to recognize the dire necessity of an agreement.

Preface to Explosion

The explosion followed. McMahon's atomic energy theme seemed an appropriate preface.

Sen. Lister Hill, leader of the 13 Alabama delegates who refused to bolt, yielded to Georgia for the purpose of nominating a Georgia candidate against Truman—Sen. Richard B. Russell.

Russell's name was offered by Charles J. Bloch, vice chairman of the Georgia delegation, who studded his speech with warnings that, although they had not walked out, Georgia's Democrats were determined that "the South will no longer be the whipping boy of the Democratic Party."

July 7-15-48

The Band Plays Dixie

"You shall not crucify the South," Bloch hoarsly warned, "upon the cross of civil rights."

In the tumultuous 22-minute domonstration which followed, the band played Dixie and Confederate flags waved in the air as South Carolina, Texas, Arkansas, and other southern state placards were paraded through the aisles behind the standard of Georgia.

Gov. Phil M. Donnelly of Missouri next placed Truman's name in nomination as Arkansas yielded its place on the roll call in support of the President.

Resolution Carries

The long-smoldering revolt reached its climax this afternoon as the convention, amid scenes of uproar and indescribable confusion, smashed through a resolution strengthening the civil rights plank of the platform to demand congressional action on a fair employment practice law, racial segregation in the armed services, lynchings and poll taxes.

The resolution, offered by Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis, carried by the narrow margin of 651½ to 582½ on a roll call vote demanded by John H. Shelley, chairman of the California delegation. But it set off an explosion which ended with "Bull" Conner, a member of the Alabama delegation, roaring loudly for recognition as Permanent Chairman Sam Rayburn of Texas smashed through a motion to recess until 6:30.

'Walking's Too Slow

"I think it's a rotten thing," Conner shouted into a radio chain's microphone as reporters and cameramen surged about the angry, arm-waving Alabamans. "We wanted just a few seconds to tell the convention that we're on our way home." 7-15-48

"We're coming back here tonight, and we'll get recognition, and we'll tell them that we won't walk—walking's too slow. We're going to fly out."

"Why, they don't let Indians vote out in some of the Western States. We can't go home and face our people when they put a plank like this in the platform."

~~Graham Wright~~, another delegate, shouted loudly that Rayburn, the Texan, was a traitor to the South.

Handy Ellis, chairman of the Alabama delegation and former lieutenant governor of that State, vainly tried to use the floor microphone to get Rayburn's attention, but the mike apparently was dead. And though Conner's voice was plainly audible in the press seats alongside the platform, Rayburn refused to hear it.

Reported Turned Off

Leslie Biffle, sergeant-at-arms of the convention, declined to confirm a report that the floor microphones had been turned off from the platform. 7-15-48

"There was a lot of noise and confusion just then," Biffle said blandly. "We couldn't hear very well up here."

The convention began calmly this morning at 11:30—half an hour after schedule—but proceedings promptly warmed up as James A. Roosevelt of California took the rostrum for an unscheduled speech and got an ovation as he denounced the Taft-Hartley law.

Roosevelt, who was close to political limbo a few days ago because of his participation in the Eisenhower boom, was cheered back to the rostrum after his speech.

Cummings Speaks

In swift succession other speakers followed—A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen; Sen. Scott W. Lucas of Illinois; Rep. William Dawson of Illinois, and Homer Cummings of Connecticut, former attorney general who tried to push through Roosevelt's "court packing" plan 11 long years ago.

Whitney who praised Truman's vetoes of Republican-sponsored legislation, did not refer to the fact that the tax and Taft-Hartley laws could not have been passed over Truman's vetoes without the help of Southern Democratic representatives and senators.

At 1:50 Sen. Francis J. Myers of Pennsylvania came to the rostrum to present the platform which had been hammered out—largely in carefully-guarded secret sessions of a seven-man "drafting" committee—in three days of labor.

Substitutes Presented

Everything went calmly as Myers droned out the report, but the fireworks exploded in technicolor as the civil rights fight began.

In quick succession the Southern "States' Righters" presented two substitute resolutions which would have had the effect of repudiating Truman's civil rights program. The first proposal was beaten so badly on a roll call that the second was dropped with merely a voice vote.

At 3:55 the real fight began with the roll call on Humphrey's substitute to strengthen the civil rights declaration. The vote teetered back and forth, and each State's vote was greeted with cheers from whichever side was favored. 7-15-48

Mountain States Vote

The vote was tied at 63 to 63; it was tied again at 194 to 194. The Mountain States of Arizona, Idaho, Montana threw the bulk of their votes to the Southerners.

Missouri and Rhode Island voted unanimously against the Humphrey resolution—a clear indication that President Truman and National Committee Chairman J. Howard McGrath did not want to push the "States' Righters" beyond their endurance.

Pepper Calls For Two-thirds Rule's Revival

Herald Tribune

New York N.Y.

In Block-Truman Move, He Suggests Return to It for First 3 Ballots

July 7-13-48

By David McConnell

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, in a last-minute "block-Truman" move, challenged the Democratic National Convention today to return to limited use of the two-thirds rule for selecting the party's presidential nominee.

Senator Pepper, now out to get the nomination for himself, proposed that a two-thirds vote be required to nominate on the first three ballots, returning to a simple majority for nomination on the fourth ballot.

Recalling that the two- thirds rule was abolished by the cenvention over Southern protests in 1936, Senator Pepper said he did not favor complete return to the former method, but he predicted that the Convention Rules Committee might sponsor a proposal along lines he suggested. He asserted that if "President Truman is not nominated on the first ballot he never will be." 7-13-48

Senator Pepper emphasized his own "liberalism," at a press conference in which he attacked the Truman leadership in the Democratic party as "not standing for liberal and progressive government." He left no doubt that he felt the two-thirds rule would give both liberal and conservative anti-Truman elements an opportunity to block the President's nomination.

Asserting that it is "obvious President Truman cannot get unity" in the party, the Senator said he does not believe "the present leadership trusts an open convention." He said that a group of Federal employees were sent here by President Truman to "blitz this convention by putting the steam and power of the government of the United States behind the present leadership."

"They dare not let the delegates choose the nominees," Senator Pepper said.

Senator Pepper said he had "serious doubts" that Mr. Truman would win on the first ballot.

He said the Truman administration had "bungled" and had made the Democratic party "cease to be the people's party." He added, however, that he would support the nominee of the convention in the November election. 7-13-48

"Will you say the same things in the campaign if President Truman is nominated?" Senator Pepper was asked.

"I've tried to be careful not to say things I will have to swallow," he replied. "But I am not going to stultify my integrity by saying the Democratic party leadership is better than it is."

Senator Pepper was asked to state his stand on a strong civil rights plank in the party's platform. He said he favored handling civil rights along lines used by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. 7-13-48

He repeated previous assertions that a compromise should be sought between the "idealistic and practical on civil rights." Referring to President Truman's demands for a strong plank, Senator Pepper said he would "not make a political football of the problem, but handle it with the idea of getting something done."

Senator Pepper continued to refuse to name backers of his candidacy, other than to say he had conferred with representatives from numerous states, with Jack Kroll, of the Congress of Industrial Organizations Political Action Committee, and with American Federation of Labor representatives.

Discussing his Southern support, Senator Pepper said many of his own Florida delegation were pledged to the candidacy of Governor Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi. He said he felt they would swing to him after the first ballot. Asked if he considered Governor Wright a "liberal," the Senator replied, "No." 7-13-48

13 Alabamans, Mississippi Quit; Sen. Russell Put In Nomination

Washington Post

Thu. 7-15-48

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 14.—A wildly-enthusiastic Democratic National Convention was preparing tonight to nominate President Harry S. Truman for a full, four-year term.

Thereafter the convention was to nominate Senator Alben W. Barkley for Vice President.

But before this Mr. Truman was to make what was expected to be a rip-snorting speech of acceptance.

In advance of the balloting, Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas withdrew as a candidate. The Southern foes of Mr. Truman had planned to rally to Laney, who last winter said that the Chief Executive was "politically, a dead Missouri mule."

The first man placed in nomination at tonight's session, was Senator Richard Russell of Georgia, offered as a "States' rights" candidate.

Thirteen Alabamans Walk Out

Just before this, as the night's session opened, 13 of the Alabama delegates took a walk from Convention Hall, their leader carrying a Confederate battle flag.

The Mississippi delegates, angered as the Alabamans were, by the liberal civil rights plank adopted by the convention, also walked out.

Gov. Phil M. Donnelly of Missouri placed Mr. Truman in nomination and touched off an uproarious 40-minute demonstration.

President Truman arrived in Philadelphia at 9:20 and went immediately to Convention Hall. He remained in the office of National Chairman J. Howard McGrath while the oratory was on in advance of the actual balloting.

Laney Explains Withdrawal

Governor Laney of Arkansas had not, of course, expected to defeat Mr. Truman for the nomination. His candidacy was supposed to serve merely as a rallying point for the embittered Southerners.

Laney, in withdrawing, said he could not permit his name to be submitted to the convention in view of the civil rights plank which liberal Northern forces hammered into the platform.

He suggested that the Arkansas delegates give their votes to Senator Russell. Washington Post

Hall Is Crowded

Convention Hall was crowded for the first itme when permanent Chairman Rayburn called tonight's session to order.

Rayburn had hardly rapped his gavel when Handy Ellis, chairman of the Alabama delegation, arose on a point of personal privilege. He explained that Alabama, in its Democratic primary election, chose 11 presidential electors who were under instructinos never to vote for a Republican and never to vote for Harry S. Truman.

He explained further that, in that primary 13 of Alabama's 26 delegates to the Democratic National Convention were under instructions to take a walk if the convention adopted a civil rights plank in line with Mr. Truman's ideas.

He stated, therefore, that the 13 deleagtes were under the "painful necessity" of leaving the arena. A roar of mingled cheer sand boos—the cheers coming from other Dixie deleagtes but the much louder boos coming from the Northerners and from the galleryites—greeted Ellis' statement. Thu. 7-15-4

Carry Confederate Flag

Ellis and his dissenters marched from the hall with a Confederate battle flag.

They tried to tie it to the Alabama standard, but one of the remaining Alabama delegates hung on to it.

With the departure of Ellis, Senator Lister Hill took over the chairmanship of the Alabama delegation. This remnant was likewise opposed to Mr. Truman, but was not in favor of a "walk."

Hill yielded to Georgia and that State sent Charles J. Bloch of Macon to the rostrum to put in nomination the name of Senator Russell for President.

Bolch termed President Truman's civil rights program a violation of the constitutional guarantees of States rights. In a paraphrase of William Jennings Bryan's famous "cross of gold speech," he said, "you shall not crucify the South on civil rights."

South's Votes Stressed

"The South," he concluded, "is no longer going to be the whipping boy of the Democratic Party and you will learn that without the votes of the South you cannot elect a President of the United States."

He said that if it hadn's been for the South four years ago, Henr Wallace would be sitting in the White House today.

As Bloch finished, the band struck up Dixie, rebel yells arose, and delegates began marching through the aisles carrying the standards of Tennessee, Alabama, Texas, South Carolina, Florida and Georgia.

One delegate waved the State flag of Arkansas.

A man in the gallery shot off a pistol, using blank cartridges.

Truman Forces Take Hand

The Truman forces staged a demonstration of their own during the Dixie uproar, and this angered old Sam Rayburn. He rapped his gavel, ordered that the Southern forces be allowed to blow off steam in their own way, and once again the band struck up Dixie.

The Russell demonstration lasted about 15 minutes.

Arizona yielded to Missouri, and that State's tall, gray-haired Governor, Phil M. Donnelly, strode to the rostrum to put Mr. Truman in nomination.

Governor Donnelly said that the Chief Executive had "earned the undying gratitude of the Nation." He described his fellow Missourian as "a man of the people."

"He understands the problems and speaks the language of the average man and woman," Donnelly said.

The Governor drew cheers when he said that Mr. Truman was "the first President of the United States who is a member of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars."

He said that the Nation, after 16 years of Democratic rule, "is enjoying the greatest prosperity in its history" and has "assumed a world position never enjoyed before."

Governor Donnelly concluded his speech at 9:20. The inevitable happened. First, the band struck up the Missouri Waltz. Delegates poured out of their chairs, bearing State standards aloft. Sirens, cowbells, shouts blended in a wild outburst of sound. Thu. 7-15-48

Placard Hits GOP

A magnificent Liberty Bell, made up of red, white and blue blossoms, was carried up to the platform. To add to the riot of color, an Indian in full war regalia popped on the scene, waving a placard of President Truman.

To such old tunes as "Happy Days Are Here Again" and "East Side, West Side," the delegates paraded around the hall, yelling and sweating.

One of the placards in the parade said, "Stop Stalin, Back Truman." Another said, "Win With Truman, Foe of Privilege." Still another read, "Not Peace in Our Time, But Peace in All Time."

The most striking placard bore a picture of former United States Senator Grundy of Pennsylvania, an arch Republican.

The legend said, "On With Truman, No Grundy Retreat."

This was a crack at those who clinched the Republican nomination for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey a few weeks back. It was the conservative Grundy forces in the Pennsylvania delegation who came out for the New Yorker and started the stampede for him.

All during tonight's demonstration, many of the Southern delegates remained in their seats, grimly holding on to their State standards lest some Truman zealot snatch them awav.

Terms Action Unfair; Mrs. Coots Denies Data To National Committee

Sat. 4-17-48

By The Associated Press

A state senator protested Friday the use of State Democratic Party funds to advertise delegate candidates who have agreed to walk out of the Democratic National Convention.

"This does not seem," said Senator Joseph N. Langan at Mobile, "to be either fair or democratic to use the funds raised by and contributed by other Democrats, who are seeking nomination and election on the Democratic Party ticket to be used against them in this campaign." The Advertiser

Former Gov. Chauncey Sparks made the same criticism in a talk Thursday before the Anniston Kiwanis Club. Montgomery, Ala.

Ark. Negro Democrats Plan To Take Seats Of Whites Who 'Walk'

Memphis World
Memphis, Tenn

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(ANP)—The Arkansas Democratic delegation to the National Democratic Party convention in Philadelphia this summer may include Negroes if any white members walk out in protest of President Truman's civil rights program.

Whites, hostile to Negroes and civil rights legislation, are enraged by the "walk in and take over any vacated seats" instructions of the Arkansas Negro Democrats at an executive committee meeting last week. 4-9-48

The colored group plans to send delegates from each congressional district of the state and two delegates-at-large to the national convention. Each delegate has been instructed to take the place of any white representative who walks out. Memphis World

ANSWER TO CONFERENCE

These plans were made in answer to a recent southern governors' conference whicsh advocated that the South walk out of the convention if the party adopts any of the President's civil rights planks. Memphis, Tenn

The southerners then plan to hold a new party convention somewhere else. They aim to fight against any of the President's civil rights proposals, especially the one banning race segregation. Fri. 4-9-48

Negro delegates have no orders outside of taking the places of whites who walk out.

ATLANTANS ON CONVENTION:

Atlanta Constitution

Blue--But Sorta Proud

Fri. 7-16-48

By MARJORY SMITH

Atlanta's man-on-the-street—who sat up 'way past his bedtime by the radio listening to Democratic National Convention shenanigans—is just mild about Harry; he's sorta proud of Georgia and native son Dick Russell, but he's singing the Democratic Blues.

L. A. MURRAY

"I'm Still a Democrat"

REV. O. WITHROW

"Slim Chance for Democrats"

That's the consensus of a sidewalk poll conducted by The Atlanta Constitution after the Convention shouting was over.

L. A. Murray, railway clerk, of 129 Lucile Ave., College Park, yesterday afternoon summed up many Georgians' opinions: "We Democrats have a mighty slim chance in the coming election. There were just too many factions at that Philadelphia meet!"

"I'm still a Democrat!" insisted the Rev. O. J. Withrow, of Milledgeville. "It's too bad some of those Southern delegates don't feel the same way. Truman can't win unless we are united."

Georgia delegates' role in the Convention pleased—and in some cases surprised—the "folks at home." The majority of persons polled thought Mississippi and Alabama delegates "acted foolishly" in walking out.

MRS. J. BEASLEY

"I Won't Vote for Truman"

MISS E. DOWDA

"I Still Like Truman"

But a pretty young housewife, Mrs. Jack Beasley, of 66 Howard St., S. E., declared militantly: "All the Southern States should have walked out with them! It makes me furious the way they're forcing the Truman civil rights plank on us. Guess I'll have to turn Republican — I certainly won't vote for Truman."

"I like Truman," was the dissenting statement of Miss Earline Dowda, retired clerical worker, of 114 Thompson Ave., East Point.

Dabney Manning, of 185 Seventeenth St., N. E., department store employee, voiced the pride of many Georgians in Sen. Richard B. Russell's nomination. "Although it was a lost cause, it was thrilling to hear the demonstration for Russell," he said. "But I think Truman still has a chance. In the final analysis, I think most Southerners will vote the Democratic ticket."

DABNEY MANNING

Most Southerners Will Vote Dem."

TED H. MORGAN

"No Southern Vote for Truman

Disagreeing with Manning was Ted H. Morgan, Civil Aeronautics Administration employee, of Forest Park.

"It's hard to say what the rebellious Democrats will do," Morgan pondered, "but it's a sure thing they won't vote for Truman. If they hadn't split, the party would have had an excellent chance with the Truman-Barkley ticket. I hate to see it this way. . . ."

Fri. 7-16-48

W. B. Arnold, of 351 South Bend St., S. E., an assistant buyer, thought "walking" Mississippians and Alabamans "behaved like little kids playing cowboy and Indian." "A national convention should be run in a businesslike manner," he insisted, "even though the Southerners had a real grievance."

MRS. C. M. FRASER

"It Was Spirited and Interesting"

W. B. ARNOLD

"Like Kids Playing Cowboys"

The Democrats put on a better show than the Republicans, most persons polled insisted. "It was awfully spirited and interesting; I wish I could have been there to see the Confederate flag go up," sighed Mrs. C. M. Fraser, housewife, of 1449 Belmont Ave., S. W.

A native Belgian and a pretty Atlanta college girl both shook their heads over the "confusion" of the Democratic Convention.

"I understood Sen. Russell would rather not have had his name used, and although I was proud to hear other States seconding Georgia's nomination, I think the Democrats should get together," said Miss Beverly Dobbs, of 650 Bonaventure Ave., N. E.

Retired Prof. Gustave Jassee, visiting Atlanta relatives at 1755 Williams Mill Rd., N. E., thought his foreign background explained it—but he echoed native Georgians with:

"Politics here is too much for me—I don't understand it!"

The Delegate Mixup

The failure of State Democratic Chairman McCorvey, on the basis of complete unofficial returns, to win election as a delegate-at-large to the national convention affords additional evidence of the paradoxes and confusions in the primary campaign just ended.

The "walkout" issue dominated the delegate and elector races. Eleven electors were elected pledged to oppose the Democratic presidential nominee, Mr. Truman or anybody else, if he runs on a platform including an unacceptable civil rights plank. The pledge calls for opposition to Mr. Truman in any case.

Birmingham News

Mr. McCorvey, a leader in the pledge movement, was chosen as an elector but defeated for delegate. Sen. Hill ran first, former Gov. Sparks second in the delegate-at-large race. They opposed the pledge.

There now seems to be some question whether there will be any walkout from the convention even if Mr. Truman is nominated. A civil rights plank so generalized as to be acceptable to Alabama Democrats may be adopted. In that case, if Mr. Truman is nominated, what then?

Sat. 6-5-48

Seven of Alabama's delegates have definitely opposed the walkout pledge; five are uncommitted. Some of these, or all, may hold that they have commitments to remain within the convention. In view of the fact that they have been endorsed by the voters, they would have strong grounds for resisting a unit rule that would force them to walk out. If there is no unit rule and a part of the delegation remains in the convention, would the other delegates walk out if they are dissatisfied with the convention's action on the platform and nomination?

In view of such facts as that majorities were given in the first primary to Sen. Hill and Mr. Sparks and that Mr. Carmichael, a vigorous opponent of the walkout pledge, won the eighth delegate-at-large place over Mr. McCorvey, there seems room for question as to whether the majority of voters would want a general walkout.

6-5-48

It seems to us that it is clear that other matters, as of personality and organization, figured pretty largely in the outcome.

Perhaps the most accurate interpretation of the results would be to hold that they authorize the "walk-out" delegates to go as far as seems advisable in protesting any convention action.

But even that would leave the successful anti-pledge delegates with a mandate for remaining in the convention.

Birmingham News

It is all very mixed up and the outcome is highly problematical.

The situation emphasizes the complications that would be involved in breaking with the national party after having participated in its processes to such an advanced point as entering its convention.

There has been some suggestion that some delegates might, under certain conditions, remain in the convention simply as "observers" but that, too, would have its obvious drawbacks.

The convention itself will have to supply the answers as to what will finally come out of the confusion.

6-5-48

What will happen in the electoral college also waits for answer on important events yet to come.

A. N. Fields

The Defender

PHIL Harris, the nationally known band leader, whose belief about the South and its "fried chicken and bacon grease" is in deep contrast to what the eminent H. L. Mencken says in the Baltimore Sun.

Just listen to this: "The gallant Confederates who attempted a raid upon the late Democratic National Convention got a bad licking on the floor, but that licking did not dispose of them, nor even seriously punish them. What ails them now is a double handicap, both halves of it of southern origin. The first is to be found in the fact that when they got home all the worst frauds in the South rushed up to kiss them and have since hung about their necks. The second half springs out of the general Northern assumption, unhappily well supported by recent history, that whatever originates in the South is held idiotic, and hardly deserves to be heard.

Sat 8-28-48

"That assumption is bitterly resented by enlightened southerners but the record is the record. The South, for years past, has been a sewer of imbecility. It has supported every major aberration, whether political or social, that has afflicted the country, and it has supported most of them with a degree of enthusiasm bordering in the delirious. I name the Bryan madness. I name prohibition. I name Fundamentalism. I name the New Deal. I name anti-Al Smith and Huey Long uproars. I name two wars to make the world safe for democracy.

Chicago Def.

"But there is no need to labor the list, for it would be hard to think of any lunacy that doesn't belong on it. Time was when the South perhaps more than any other section of the country, was fertile in ideas, but even more fertile in first rate men. But at least since the '80s, nine-tenths of the so-called ideas that it has produced have been silly, and nine-tenths of the leaders shabby and preposterous fellows. When the last of its War Between the States died it went underground, intellectually speaking, and there it has remained ever since, entertaining the civilized world with such frightful burlesques of civilization as the Scopes trial, the Leo Frank lynching and the share-the-wealth hubbub.

"The result today is that the Dixiecrat movement is getting a great deal less sober attention than it deserves. It looks, from across the Potomac and Ohio, like nothing more than a pestilence of Longs, Bilbos, Tillmans, Bleases, Talmadges and Pappy O'Daniels. It is, in fact, nothing of the sort, whatever the excrescences that now burden it. It is fundamentally quite as serious in purpose, and quite as rational, as any other regional movement that has appeared in recent years, and some of its leaders are worthy of the highest respect. Certainly it would be absurd to dismiss such men as Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, and former Dan Moody of Texas, as windbags of common sort. They are men of intelligence and they are men of honor and when they take to the bush it is safe to assume that they have a genuine grievance.

"The colored brother, it seems to me, is hardly more than a bystander in the combat, though he will be injured, no matter what the issue. If the embattled Confederates throw Truman and company off, he will see a halt in the process of liberation that has been going on for some years, with the best class of Southerners supporting it. And if the damnyankee politicians, with their eyes upon the Harlem vote, push their drastic "reforms" through, he will be the chief victim of the ensuing revival of Reconstruction.

"It is this threat of another dismal dose of Reconstruction that chiefly alarms the intelligent Southerners. They are painfully aware of what went on in the '70s, and they are naturally fearful of a repetition, with Northerner jobholders, most of them dishonest and nearly all of them jackasses, substituted for the carpetbaggers of the first canto. They believe that they have some civil rights, too, and they are resolved not only to protest those that remain but to regain those that have been already lost to New Deal totalitarianism. They hope to do it peacefully by an appeal to Article X of the Bill of Rights, but if that appeal fails they are willing to try stronger medicines.

"I must confess that I sympathize with them. despite my life long devotion to exposing their deficiencies. It must be manifest that if the whole program of the Yankee messiahs by the Force Bill of 1890 out of the Communist Manifesto, is put through with any vigor, life will become almost impossible in large areas of the South, and a third Bull Run will begin casting its shadows before.

Sat 8-28-48

But the position of the intelligent southerners, as I have observed, is greatly weakened by the stupidity of the South as a whole. Having supported the New Deal violently for sixteen years, and profited enormously by its reckless looting of the North, including Maryland, it can't complain now that the North is preparing to give it a poisonous dose out of the same black bottle. It is impossible to play the idiot for years on end and then suddenly turn Aristotle. It is not possible to wallow in the buncombe of Long, Bilbo, Pepper, Lister Hill, O'Daniel and the like until the stomachs of the north of the Potomac begin to turn and then appeal to reason behind a facade of Thurmonds, Moodys and Harry Byrds.

The South had its chance to come for intelligence a long while ago. Instead it turned to Bryan, Tom Watson, Prohibition, Fundamentalism and the Ku Klux Klan. It is now paying a devastating penalty. Its spavined and bedraggled chickens are coming home to roost."

Thus speaks Mr. Mencken.

BETTER VISION AND CHARTS

Montgomery Advertiser

Gov. Folsom yesterday acted as predicted—he declined to pledge that he would take a walk in the convention no matter what.

The Advertiser regrets to see that the Alabama revolt has this past week lost some of its effectiveness. It will encourage the lame duck in Washington to believe that there was more bark than bite in the rebellion.

Sun. 4-11-4

The State Democratic Executive Committee, it may be seen with a look over the shoulder, proceeded rashly. It called upon all delegate candidates to vow that they would quit the convention when it looked like Truman or his Civil Disturbance project.

Montgomery Ala.

Immediately four candidates for delegate-at-large — Senator Hill, Atty. Gen. Carmichael, Chauncey Sparks, Charles Dobbins—rebelled within the rebellion. They were against everything the Committee was, but they weren't signing any blank checks.

Six out of seven candidates for delegate in this congressional district likewise bucked.

It appeared likely then that Alabama could not send a delegation unanimously pledged to take a walk. The subsequent action in concert by Folsom makes it virtually certain that no such delegation will go to Philadelphia.

Probably even those who might at the time be inclined to walk out would not do so in order to remain and keep an eye on the rump element.

4-11-48

ALABAMA newspapers in many cases were quick to indorse the Committee's demand for a pledge, but the refusal of such men as Chauncey Sparks—an unrelenting enemy of Truman—seems to have given some a second thought.

The Selma Times-Journal said of the "revolt within a revolt":

> . . . The Times-Journal is skeptical about the political soundness of commitments thus far in advance to bolt the convention without fighting to the last, bitter gasp to regain Southern domination of party affairs. . . . The goal of Democrats of Alabama now should be to send as strong a delegation to the convention as possible, with instructions to fight hard and long to achieve Southern objectives without disruption of the national party. . . .

The Birmingham Age-Herald:

Montgomery Advertiser

> . . . There are those, however, who think that an easy solution is to be found in promising three months ahead of time to bolt the party convention if things don't go to suit them and promising now not to support the party's nominee nine months hence if it happens to be one man. It is not an easy cure for a sore finger to cut off one's arm.

The Lee County Bulletin viewed the Committee's action in a sinister light:

Ala.

> The reactionaries had a field day in Montgomery Monday. . . . Action by the Committee boiled down to this: all candidates for delegate have been called on to walk out from the Philadelphia convention even before balloting on the possible nominees. In other words, if the Southern delegations lose their fight to tone down the President's civil rights position ,that is to be a signal for a walkout. It matters not to them that Mr. Truman might be discarded and a candidate entirely acceptable to the majority of Southern voters might be nominated. . . . They clearly want the bolt to come before the balloting on candidates. . . .

NONE of these three views accords precisely with The Advertiser's view of the Committee action. The Committee did not overestimate the smouldering rage among Alabamians, but it underestimated the reflex reluctance of Democratic officeholders to divorce the party, vehicle of their careers.

Sun. 4-11-48

But if we are to have any success in purging Truman and asserting ourselves in Philadelphia, we cannot afford to swing without connecting. Further failures will make the national leadership think of Senator Claghorn instead of that pregnant shibboleth of another day, "Don't Tread On Me."

FOLSOM made an attractive suggestion in declaring that if the convention's platform and-or nominee is unacceptable to Alabama, he will foster an "elected convention" to set the future course.

Presumably a special session of the legislature will be required to authorize such an election.

The least it can do is to direct the 11 presidential electors where to deliver the favor of Alabama's 300,000 to 400,000 votes. That would extirpate one major uncertainty of the revolt.

It is, however, far from an answer to the indicated circumstance. Such a convention contemplates a fourth party candidate from the South.

But on the present face of things it is unreasonable to expect that we can throw the election into the House of Representatives. It must be remembered that Roosevelt would have been elected all four times without a single vote from the South. Presumably that will be true of the Republican Party in November if Truman is the nominee. 4-11-48

What in the end, then, will be the South's net accomplishment in denying Truman the South's electoral vote (that is, those states that don't vote Republican, as North Carolina may do)?

We will have disciplined the hapless Harry. But in the next four years of a Republican President and Congress, what will have happened to Civil Disturbance legislation?

We need rebel leaders with better vision and charts.

Angry Southerners Throw Support To Russell Of Georgia In Protest Of Democrats' Racial Program

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA, July 14. — Rebellious delegates from Alabama and Mississippi stomped out of the Democratic National Convention Wednesday night with state flags flaunting defiance of those who stayed behind and nominated Harry S. Truman.

The angered South followed up the walkout—a protest against the convention's strong new civil rights stand—by putting Senator Richard Russell of Georgia in nomination for the presidency, ahead of Mr. Truman.

Memphis, Tenn.

President Truman was nominated by Gov. Phil Donnelly of Missouri, who called him a "soldier, patriot and statesman whose splendid courage never faltered in war or in peace."

The Southerners knew they couldn't stop the President from being nominated on the first ballot. But they organized to make their civil rights protest as vigorous as they could as a prelude to what looked like a wide North-South split. 7-15-48

35 Southerners Bolt

Mr. Truman was on the way from Washington to accept the nomination. And for his running mate, the choice was Senator Alben W. Barkley from border-state eKntucky.

The South was enraged from a bad beating it took from the North in a furious civil rights fight, a fight over such things as lynching, poll taxes and racial discrimination in jobs, which the South says are purely state problems.

In protest, all of Mississippi's 22 delegates, and 13 of Alabama's 26 packed up and left. Those who stayed started lining up behind Russell.

Charles J. Bloch, vice chairman of the Georgia delegation, put Russell in nomination as "one of Georgia's most distinguished sons."

But mostly he hit at the strong indorsement of President Truman's civil rights program which Northerners jammed into the platform early Wednesday.

Georgia Won't Walk

Bloch said Georgia wouldn't bolt. But when the convention adjourns, he said:

"We shall be sitting there opposing the nomination of any candidate, be he the President of the United States or not, who advocates openly or tacitly such proposals as have been made here today in the platform of this party."

The half of the Alabama delegation that decided to stick things out gave way to Georgia so Russell's name could be put in nomination ahead of all others.

That was after the Mississippians had fought their way behind 13 Alabama delegates out the back door of the hall, hooted and booed by most of the contingents that stayed and applauded by others from the South that had had similar yearnings to bolt.

It was quiet enough when the call of states for nominating speeches was ordered. Alabama was first on the list.

Chairman Handy Ellis informed the convention that "we are faced with the necessity of carrying out our pledges to the people of the state of Alabama, not to cast Alabama's votes for:

A Republican.

Anyone standing on a civil rights plank such as the convention adopted Wednesday.

"Good Riddance" Shouted

So, he said:

"Thirteen of the delegates and all but three of the alternates will proceed to walk out of this convention and report to the Democratic Party of Alabama."

He was authorized to say Mississippi was tagging along.

"I bid you goodby," he said with a bow. 7-15-48

PHILADELPHIA, July 14— In 1936, the Rev. Marshall L. Shepard of Philadelphia, Negro pastor of the Mount Olivet Tabernacle Baptist Church, offered the invocation at the Democratic National Convention here and Senator Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith of South Carolina, "white supremacy" champion, walked out in protest. Thurs. 7-15-48

"Cotton Ed" died a few years ago, but the Rev. Mr. Shepard offered the opening prayer here again today. 7-14-48

Reminded of the incident today, the pastor said, "if 'Cotton Ed' walks out of here again today, I'm going with him."

Go Down Fighting

The Southerners went down fighting every inch of the way for states' rights.

Chairman Sam Rayburn of Texas hammered through a recess and denied the 13 Alabama delegates an opportunity to walk out.

The delegates were standing on their chairs waving the Alabama standard and an Alabama flag as they yelled at the top of their voices in a futile effort to gain recognition. 7-15-48

Denied recognition to make a statement announcing that they were taking a walk the Alabamians announced to the swarm of newspaper and radio men clustered around their seats that they would walk out of the night session which most of them did.

Northern Leaders Pour Salt In Wounds By Approving Even Stronger Civil Rights Plank Than Was Originally Proposed—Sillers, Sims Are Leaders

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—The States' Rights Southern group suffered a double setback Wednesday when the Democratic National Convention not only turned down the States' Rights proposals, but also adopted a strong spelled out Civil Rights platform plank.

Failure to get the States' Rights proposals was not unexpected even to those most active in the movement. That vote—and it was a lopsided one—had been obvious ever since the convention started its deliberations. But adoption of the strong Civil Rights plank came as something of a surprise for even after the roll call began on the proposal the Southerners were assured by Senator Francis Meyers of Pennsylvania that his group would stand for the Civil Rights plank approved by the Platform Committee Tuesday night. However, when Pennsylvania's name was called its 74 votes were cast for the stronger antiSouth version.

SOUTHERNERS SPLIT

Majority Stay in Seats After Floor Defeat on Issue of Rights

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES

PHILADELPHIA, July 14—The entire Mississippi delegation of twenty-two and thirteen of the twenty-six from the Alabama delegation walked out of the Democratic National Convention tonight in protest against President Truman's nomination and his civil rights program.

They stalked straight down the center aisle—Mississippi in the lead and the thirteen Alabamans following in close rank and carrying head-high the Alabama state flag—and into the pouring rain outside.

They walked through a vast, rolling wave of boos from the galleries and from among many of the "regular" delegations. There were some cheers also. But these were very nearly lost in the din, as the delegates strode forward.

Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, the convention chairman, at length ended the demonstration of hostility toward the departed Southern extremists by shouting that he was waiting to recognize Senator Lister Hill, head of that part of the Alabama delegation that kept its seat in the hall.

Alabama Yields to Georgia

Senator Hill, without preamble, yielded to Georgia so that its chairman, Charles Bloch, could make a nominating speech, of courtesy and Southern protest, for Senator Richard Russell of Georgia for the Presidential designation. Mr. Hill was joined by eleven other Alabamans in staying with the convention. One delegate was absent. 7-15-48

This tactic of using Senator Russell as the symbol of their anged had been adopted only shortly beforehand by the Southern old guard by necessity after Governor Ben Laney of Arkansas had withdrawn as their anti-Truman "states rights" candidate.

Governor Laney, in contrast to Senator Russell, had been making a serious campaign as a candidate, in attempting to typify and bring together Southern resentment against the President. The Arkansan had claimed earlier that he would get perhaps 150 votes of the convention's 1234.

Governor Laney's retirement, which he attributed to an unwillingness even to appear to stand for a little while on the civil rights plank just adopted, was accompanied by new plans among the Southern militants for a rump convention in Birmingham, Ala.

Wide Revolt Not Indicated

Such a meeting, it was said among the dissident leaders, certainly would be held; the only questions were just where and when.

The nature of its prospective action was still wholly in doubt. At all events, there was no indicated assurance of any large-scale Southern rebellion against the Democratic ticket in November. The strong pull of party loyalty was at work in thhe convention, despite the spectacular gesture of Alabama and Mississippi. 7-15-48

While the delegation of one Southern state and half of another bolted the convention, the delegations of the nine other states of the South stayed firmly in place, in spite of all their anger on the civil rights issue, and these included the largest of the mall, Texas, with fifty votes, and others which also were more politically influential than either Alabama or Mississippi. Thurs. 7-15-48

Senator Russell's name was put before the convention by Mr. Block with the declaration that the Georgia delegation was staying in the convention and would still be there when it came to an end.

Nevertheless, he shouted that the Georgia delegation so far as it was concerned "would not support" the president "or any other man who stands on the platform that has been adopted here."

Alabama, however, is the only Southern state where a November bolt against the president's election seems clearly foreshadowed. The electors there have been instructed not to vote for him.

Mandy Ellis, chairman of the Alabama delegation, recalled this fact before he led the walkout of the thirteen. He got the floor on a demand of "personal privilege" having failed earlier to get recognition. His 12 rebellious colleagues and he, he declared, had been pledged to walk out.

"We will proceed to do so," he shouted.

"I am also authorized to state," he struggled onward against the heavy sound of the boos being hurled at him, "that the Mississippi delegation is joining us."

Hostility Shown Previously

The Alabama group and Mississippi, before bolting the convention, had taken the lead also in earlier demonstrations of hostility against the President and the civil rights plan.

The far more politically important delegations, such as Texas and Tennessee and Virginia and North Carolina, and a majority of all from the South, sat cooly beneath their standards as they fought and lost the last major Southern engagement.

Alabama Ready to Bolt

This was a supreme effort, hopeless from the very start, to soften the platform on civil rights and then to prevent the acual hardening of hat plan that soon was ordered by vote of the convention floor. Thurs. 7-15-48

Once this was over, the South was through as an effective influence in shaping the work and results of the convention.

Half of the delegation of Alabama, the first State on the roll call, had prepared carefully for this moment, intending to walk out dramatically, but the maneuver was broken by a fellow Southerner, Chairman Rayburn.

The adoption of the platform had come simply by voice vote and Mr. Rayburn, well aware of what was afoot, then refused, as convention chairman, to consider any proposal save on to recess for an hour or so.

This was made and approved while the Alabama standard was being waved violently to and fro in an effort to obtain recognition.

It would in any event have been too late for the scheduled walkout by thirteen of the twenty-six Alabama delegates on the civil rights issue, but they had wanted at least to declare their intention to leave the convention.

The Southerners had come to the convention hall today in a strange mixture of moods ranging from defiance through concern and sometimes into sadness. They were united in violent opposition to the civil rights plan and almost all of one mind in their objections to President Truman.

Majority Against Revolt

But some were speaking of a final bolt and of actually deserting the party in November, while the great majority was cautioning firmly against this political equivalent in the modern Democratic party of the shots that fell upon Fort Sumter.

Anti-Walkout Delegates Ask McGrath Aid

The great hall was filled with their dilemma and their frustrations, and the galleries here in philadelphia were not sympathetic to them. 7-15-48

Now and again, in the debate on the civil rights program, a Southerner would rise to declare that what the majority was doing would mean "dissolution" in the South of a party that had stood together for the most part through all the storms that had blown across nearly a hundred years.

His fellow Southerners, sitting down below the platform, would applaud him, some of them with vehemence but more of them in thoughtfulness, as they looked back upon a long political tradition that had come hard and firm out of the days of the Reconstruction.

All through the Southern delegations men talked gravely among themselves and, in more than one they asked one another if it was really true that an era of unity was ending for the Democratic party. 7-15-48

The debate typified one of the oldest divisions in American political belief, the division between the strict construction of the Constitution historically insisted upon by the South and the spirit of change so often demanded in the West and North.

PHILADELPHIA, July 10—Alabama delegates opposing a walkout late Saturday sought the aid of Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath in filling the state delegation, if the walkout-pledged group decided to abandon the convention.

7-11-48

At the same time they asked the party's chieftain to suggest a method by which Alabama voters could support the nominee of the Democratic National Convention, who is certain to be President Truman.

All of the state's 11 presidential elector nominees are pledged to vote against Truman in the electoral college. Chairman McGrath, who conferred with Fifth District Delegates Roy D. McCord and Rep. E. L. Roberts, both of Gadsden, in his Bellevue-Straford Hotel headquarters, told them:

1. There apparently is no way for Alabama voters to support the convention nominee, under the laws of that state.

2. That the convention would not attempt to read the walkout-pledged delegates out of the convention, but would promptly seat them.

3. If they walk out, then the convention would aid the non-walkouters in filling the delegation, should an expected 13-13 deadlock result in Alabama's 26-member delegation.

Sun. [redacted]

Deadlock Looms

7-11-48

SUCH A DEADLOCK appeared a certainty, with Third District Delegate L. A. Farmer, Dothan, unable to attend the convention because of illness and Rep. George Wallace, Jr., Clayton, No. 1 alternate in that district, expected to take his place.

Farmer favors a walkout and Wallace opposes this method of combating Truman and his "civil rights" program.

With all members present, the walkout-pledged group has a 14 to 12 majority over non-walkouters and those uncommitted. All five of the uncommitted delegates were sent to line up with those opposing a walkout. The addition of Wallace will make it a tie.

The conference with Chairman McGrath came almost simultaneously with a Southwide caucus of states' rights forces in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, attended by Col. Marion M. Rushton, Montgomery, Democratic national committeeman, and Robert T. Goodwyn, Jr., also of Montgomery, one of Arkansas Gov. Ben Laney's campaign committee, seeking to block Truman and his "civil rights" program.

This caucus was called by Laney, Gov. Tuck, Virginia and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, South Carolina, and other states rights leaders planning to hold a separate convention in Birmingham to nominate a presidential ticket in opposition to Truman and his running mate as well as oppose the Republican team of Dewey and Warren.

7-11-48

Among others attending the anti-Truman states rights huddle were Jim Peters, head of the Georgia delegation: Judge Merritt Gibson, Longview, Tex., and other representatives of the Arkansas, Mississippi, Texas, Oklahoma, Alabama and Florida contingents.

Douglas Picked?

WHILE ALABAMA delegates and some of the other Southerners still flirted with a plan to line up behind Melville Broughton, former governor of North Carolina and recently nominated to the U. S. Senate from that state, indications were that Truman forces had picked Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas for second place on the presidential ticket.

Sen. Lister Hill and Former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, as well as all other Alabama delegates on hand, declared themselves emphatically against Justice Douglas for any place on the ticket.

Consensus among Alabama delegates was that if the national Democratic Party definitely wanted to split the South completely away from the party, a sure way to do it would be for the convention to choose Douglas to run with Truman.

Presidential Fight All Over But Shouting

Birmingham News

Birmingham, Ala.

BY DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

PHILADELPHIA, July 10—(AP)—Democrats trooped to town Saturday to hand Harry Truman the presidential banner which Franklin D. Roosevelt carried to four straight victories.

The Democratic presidential race was all over except for going through the formal motions of nominating Mr. Truman at the party convention starting Monday.

But the Democrats still have to pick a vice presidential candidate. And the talk was strong Saturday night for Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath said he would keep hands off any effort to shove Douglas into second place on the ticket.

Sun. 7-11-48

Still to be hammered together, too, is the platform on which the candidates will stand to battle it out with the Republican team of Thomas E. Dewey and Earl Warren.

* * *

Nothing To Fight About

THERE WASN'T MUCH whoopla as delegates swarmed in from all points of the compass. But then there were hardly any good fights to stir up excitment.

A stop-Truman campaign had collapsed almost completely, even though a few of its leaders refused to admit it and kept up a hunt for somebody else to put in nomination for president.

One key anti-Truman man, James Roosevelt, even got into trouble with his own California delegation for promoting the now dead drive to draft Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Some of the Californians wanted to rebuke the son of the late president publicly. But a maneuver for that purpose at a state caucus was ruled out of order.

7-11-48

Another stop-Truman man, Sen. Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina, quietly abandoned his plan to lay before the Democratic National Committee a resolution demanding that Mr. Truman retire from the presidential derby.

* * *

Over By Wednesday?

McGRATH TOLD A NEWS conference the convention might be all over by Wednesday. That depends partly on whether Southerners stir up a fight on the convention floor over the civil rights-racial issues.

Mr. Truman may come to the convention before it quits, McGrath said. But right now, he said, the president's inclination is to accept the nomination formally in a speech at his home town, Independence, Mo., perhaps 30 days after the convention is over.

The president, McGrath said, has not decided whom he would like for a running mate. The choice will be determined largely by Mr. Truman's desires.

Earlier today the chatter centered around Sen. Scott Lucas, of Illinois, with mention of a dozen others. Then it switched to Douglas—who said again at his Oregon home that he was not a candidate for president but didn't mention second place.

To Southerners who have battled Mr. Truman, Douglas would be just as unacceptable, either as a presidential or vice presidential nominee.

Sun. 7-11-48

There was talk that maybe Douglas would be forced on the Southerners whethey they liked him or not.

* * *

Walk Threatened

SOME OF THE DIXIE DELEGATES shopped around in backstage conferences for people they might back both for first and second choice on the ticket.

Some delegations have threatened to take a walk if Mr. Truman gets the presidential nomination or the party adopts a civil rights platform plank objectionable to the South.

They even have laid plans for a separate convention of their own in Birmingham later on.

Alabama Delegate Roy D. McCord said his state would use its strategic place on the roll call to nominate "some Democrat other than Truman." He said he would do it himself if nobody else did. Alabama is first on the state list.

Ben Laney, governor of Arkansas, told a reporter he favors Sen. Alben Barkley of Kentucky for president.

Some of Deep South delegates spoke also about House Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn of Texas.

But Barkley and Rayburn will have key roles and key speeches in the convention, speeches in which they can't very well avoid saying nice things about Mr. Truman.

The South was heard from in another way today when the Democratic National Committee threw out a protest against seating the South Carolina delegation.

Roosevelt Flayed

THE BIGGEST FUSS of the day was at California headquarters.

Delegate John P. McEnery said it was a "damnable disgrace" that James Roosevelt had tried to swing the Truman-instructed delegation to Eisenhower.

He was ruled out of order once on a motion demanding that Roosevelt hand in his resignation as the man California has chosen as its next national committeeman.

McEnery tried again. This time the motion was seconded by Will Rogers, Jr., former congressman and son of the late humorist. And this time the delegation voted 40 to 7 to take no action.

HAMILTON LISTS REASONS

Wed. 7-14-48

From The Commercial Appeal Democratic Convention Bureau

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—The Mississippi delegation to the Democratic National Convention came within one vote of not being seated.

That is how close the Rev. Charles Hamilton of Aberdeen came to succeeding in his fight to keep the Mississippians from taking part in the convention proceedings.

7-14-48

Negro Plans Minority Report

And the negro delegate, George L. Vaughn of Missouri who led the antiMississippi fight as a member of the Credentials Committee said he will offer a minority report when the committee makes its report to the convention. Mr. Hamilton and Vaughn based their fight on the claim that the action of the Mississippi convention in adopting the anti-civil rights and antiTruman resolutions took the delegates out of the Democratic Party.

The Mississippi delegation's case was fought by Weaver Gore, that state's member of the Credentials Committee.

His refusal in the meeting to pledge that the Mississippi electors will support the nominees of this convention gave Mr. Hamilton his opportunity.

And he was ready with a three-page, closely spaced, list of reasons why hec laimed the delegation should not be seated. These were: (1) It is not Democratic, (2) It did not vote Democratic in 1944, (3) It was not selected by Democrats, (4) It was not elected in a democratic way, (5) It does not intend to vote Democratic this year, (6) It does not represent the peopleo f Mississippi, (7) It cannot have a right to be seated in ac onvention whose nominees it refuses to support, and (8) The contesting delegation is pledged to support the nominees of this convention.

Gore Leaves Meeting

Mr. Gore said later he "got the impression" that he was being asked to leave the meeting room and walked out.

When Representative Mary Norton (D., N.J.) called for the vote on the Mississippi case it resulted in a 12 to 12 tie. She declined to break the tie. A scout was sent out to find Mr. Gore and bring him back post-haste. As soon as he returned, Mr. Gore moved to reconsider the previous vote and his motion carried 13 to 12. By the same vote the committee then voted to seat the Mississippians.

Vaughn announced to reporters the meeting broke up that his minority rport would be signed by the 12 who voted against seating the group.

Hamilton's Meeting Unknown In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss., July 13.—(AP)—Mississippi officials here Tuesday disclaimed knowledge of any meeting on which Charles Hamilton of Aberdeen bases a claim to a seat in the Democratic National Convention.

In Philadelphia, Hamilton urged the Credentials Committee of the Democratic convention to unseat Mississippi's delegation headed by Gov. Fielding Wright unless it pledged to support nominees of the party.

Hamilton ruged that he and his delegation be seated.

Wright and his delegation are pledged to walk out of the convention if it nominates President Truman. They have voted to support the candidacy of Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas, states' rights champion.

Wed. 7-14-48

Declining to make public the names of his delegates, Hamilton told the Credentials Committee the delegation would support the party nominee, regardless fo who he would be.

Hamilton said his delegation was selected at a meeting after the Mississippi Democratic Convention which named the Wright delegation. He said delegates representing a majority of the state's counties attended his meeting.

But in Jackson, capitol newsmen and state officials said they had not heard of the reported meeting until they read about it in Philadelphia dispatches Tuesday.

Lieut. Gov. Sam Lumpkin, who is acting chief executive, Atty. Gen. Breek Rice and Secretary of State Heber Ladner all said they had never heard of the meeting described by Hamilton to the Credentials Committee

Civil-Rights Stand Hit By Alabama And Mississippi

Thu. 7-15-48

From Wire Dispatches.

Philadelphia, July 14.—Rebellious delegates from Alabama and Mississippi stomped out of the Democratic National Convention tonight with State flags flaunting defiance of those who stayed behind to nominate Harry S. Truman. Thu. 7-15-48

The angered South followed up the walkout—a protest against the convention's strong new civil-rights stand—by putting Senator Richard B. Russell of Georgia in nomination for the Presidency ahead of President Truman.

Beating Enrages South.

They knew they couldn't stop the President from being nominated on the first ballot. But they organized to make their civil-rights protest as vigorous as they could as a prelude to what looked like a wide North-South split.

Other pictures, stories and articles on the Democratic Convention are on Page 2, Editorial and Op Ed pages, and Page 2, Section 2.

The South was enraged from a bad beating it took from the North in a furious civil-rights fight, a fight over such things as lynching, poll taxes, and racial discrimination in jobs, which the South says are purely State problems.

In protest, all Mississippi's 22 delegates and 13 of Alabama's 26 packed up and left. Those who stayed started lining up behind Russell.

Charles J. Bloch, vice-chairman of the Georgia delegation put Russell in nomination as "one of Georgia's most distinguished sons."

Says Georgia Won't Bolt.

But mostly he hit at the strong indorsement of Truman's civil-rights program which Northerners jammed into the platform today.

His hands trembling as he clasped the speaker's stand, Bloch thundered:

"You shall not crucify the South on a cross of civil rights."

Bloch said Georgia wouldn't bolt. But when the convention adjourns, he said:

"We shall be sitting there opposing the nomination of any candidate, be he the President of the United States or not, who advocates openly or tacitly such proposals as have been made here today in the platform of this party." Thu. 7-15-48

Recalls Their Pledges.

The half of the Alabama delegation that decided to stick things out gave way to Georgia so Russell's name could be put in nomination ahead of all others.

That was after the Mississippians had fought their way behind 13 Alabama delegates out the back door of the hall, hooted and booed by most of the contingents that stayed and applauded by others from the South that had had similar yearnings to bolt.

It was quiet enough when the call of states for nominating speeches was ordered. Alabama was first on the list.

Chairman Handy Ellis informed the convention that the state delegates were faced with the necessity of carrying out their pledges to the people of the State of Alabama, not to cast Alabama's votes for:

A Republican.

Harry S. Truman.

Anyone standing on a civil-rights plank such as the convention adopted today.

Calls States'-Rights Meeting.

So, he said:

"Thirteen of the delegates and all but three of the alternates will proceed to walk out of this convention and report to the Democratic Party of Alabama."

He was authorized to say Mississippi was tagging along.

"I bid you good-by," he said with a bow.

Standing in the rain outside Convention Hall, Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi told an army of reporters that "in all probability" the bolters will wind up in Birmingham for a convention of their own. Then they could nominate some Southerner for the Presidency at a rump session.

Later Governor Fielding Wright of Mississippi formally called for the meeting in Birmingham Saturday to designate a "States'-rights" candidate for President to oppose Truman.

"The Mississippi delegation is on its way to Birmingham," he told a reporter. "There will be a good many other states represented."

He said the Birmingham conference would suggest a man for the individual Southern States to nominate for President. The meeting will write a States'-rights platform, he said.

W. W. Wright, cochairman with Governor Wright of the Southern States'-rights committee, joined in the announcement.

Before the take-a-walk crowd pushed its way through the packed middle aisle, a Wisconsin delegate yelled:

"Good riddance! We'll win in November without you."

Says South's Votes Needed.

"The hell you will," Ellis yelled back. "Harry Truman won't get $5.50 from the white people in Georgia to help his campaign."

Bloch was applauded when he said, "We are not bolting."

He launched into a speech on States' rights. Throughout the first part of his speech he dealt strictly with the issue—and barely mentioned the can[illegible] he was nominating.

"The South is no longer going to be the whipping boy of the Democratic Party," Bloch shouted.

"And you know—and if you don't know you'll learn it now—the Democrats can't elect a President without the votes of the South."

As the sweat rolled off his face, he cried:

"You shall not crucify the South on the cross of civil rights.

"If it were not for the South, Henry Wallace would be sitting in the White House today."

Band Plays 'Dixie.'

Not until near the end did he launch into the typical "I-give-you-the-man-who" nominating speech.

Then started the parade. Alabama's standard was there. So was Florida's, South Carolina's, Tennessee's, Virginia's, Georgia's, Arkansas', Texas' . . .

One great handicap under which the marchers labored: the band sat silent. And then it took the hint—direct from Democratic Chairman McGrath, Truman's manager—and blared forth with "Dixie."

A Confederate flag was waved to keep time with the music.

But the Northern delegates were not all idle. Truman's picture sprang up everywhere.

Firecrackers crackled, cowbells were banged, and, over and over, and faster and faster, the band played "Dixie."

New Signs Appear.

Georgia's delegation stayed, but nominated Senator Russell to oppose Truman.

Somebody came down front and raised the flag of the Confederacy.

All kinds of new signs suddenly appeared. One carried by a South Carolina delegate said: "Let's send Harry back to the farm."

There was considerable mild struggling on the floor. Truman delegates tried to impede the Southern demonstrators.

Convention Chairman Sam Rayburn finally mixed in. By dint of hammering, he shut off the demonstration after 20 minutes.

They're Determined To Go If Platform Isn't Acceptable

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—Efforts to get the Alabama walkout-pledged delegates to stay in the Democratic National Convention and support Arkansas Gov. Ben Laney against President Truman failed today.

At a caucus called by Chairman Handy Ellis, walkout group members decided definitely they would go through with plans to abandon the convention if the party platform plank on "civil rights" is objectionable to the South, as they expect it to be. Strong pressure had been exerted on the 13 walkouters in the 26-member delegation to stay in the convention and vote for Laney, picked by the Southern states rights revolt leaders as anti-Truman candidate for president.

HOWEVER, the walkout delegates were dubious of remaining in the convention after adoption, possiblyy tonight, of what they expect to be a "civil rights" plank unfavorable to the South. They pledged in their election campaigns to take a walk, if this was not acceptable.

The Arkansas delegation wants Alabama to yield to that state to place Laney's name in nomination, but non-walkout members opposed this plan. In fact, Fifth District Delegate Roy McCord, Gadsden, reiterated that he was going to nominate Sen. Richard B. Russell, Georgia "favorite son" presidential aspirant, to oppose Truman. McCord has a right to do this.

While Jim Peters, head of the Georgia delegation, is friendly to the states-righters, the Cracker state delegation apparently is not going to play ball with Laney's backers, among whom is Alabama Democratic National Committeeman Marion Rushton.

Rushton, [illegible] former Alabama Gov. Frank Dixon on the Laney States Rights Campaign Committee, was instrumental in picking the Arkansas governor as a convention opponent of Truman for the nomination. Both Rushton and Robert T. Goodwyn, Jr., Montgomery, the other Alabama member of the States Rights Anti-Truman Campaign Committee who is attending the convention, want the Alabama walkout delegates to remain in the convention now and vote for Laney.

AN INFORMED SOURCE said that the Georgians definitely would not participate in the states rights convention to be held in Birmingham Saturday when a Southern presidential ticket will be nominated.

Planners of the Birmingham convention have said they expect 15 states to participate in that convention, but present indications here are that the main supporters of this meeting will be Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina and Alabama.

34d

Both Gov. Laney and Mississippi Gov. Fielding L. Wright were proposed as likely nominees at Birmingham, but Wright bowed out of consideration. It is apparent now that Gov. Laney, whose name will be placed in nomination in Philadelphia, will be named by the states-righters Saturday to head the Southern ticket.

South Carolina Gov. Strom Thurmond has released delegates of that state who had been pledged to him, so they can support Laney.

Alabamians, after a tumultous caucus, at which the walkouters gained control by a one-vote margin and elected Ellis chairman, sweltered through two convention sessions yesterday as this dull and drab party powwow got under way.

THIS CAUCUS, marked by sharp verbal exchanges between members of opposing factions and heated debate, at first was closed to the press and public by Acting Chairman Rushton, who, in his capacity as national committeeman, had called the meeting. But the caucus was opened later upon the insistence of delegation members, called out and urged to do so by members of the press, including publishers and editors of Alabama newspapers and this reporter.

Before Rushton ordered the meeting closed at its beginning, R. B. Chandler, publisher of the Mobile Press and Register; James E. Mills, editor of The Birmingham Post, and this reporter insisted that it be kept open. Rushton refused and shouted at an Associated Press photographer to get out. Furthermore, the acting chairman had a chair placed against the door inside the caucus chamber and directed an alternate to stop any person who attempted to enter.

Other press service and newspaper men here, wide-eyed at the closing of what was supposed to be a public meeting, were amazed, with one reporter asking sarcastically if sessions of the Alabama Legislature were closed or left open to the public.

J. Miller Bonner, Camden, delegate-at-large, and E. C. (Bud) Boswell, Geneva, Third District, who were placed on the platform and resolutions committee, were helping draft a minority report opposing inclusion of a "civil rights" plank. Former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, who has been serving on a convention subcommittee engaged in drafting a platform, has sought to knock out or minimize the "civil rights" proposals recommended by Truman.

Senator Rips Into G.O.P., Warns South

Courier-Journal

Louisville, Ky.

The Courier-Journal Convention Bureau.

Philadelphia, July 12.—The banner of the Roosevelt New Deal was unfurled anew tonight by Alben W. Barkley. The Kentucky senator, delivering the Democratic National Convention's keynote speech, waved that banner defiantly in the face of the victory-confident Republican Party.

Jul. 7-13-48

He waved it in the face of the conservative wing of his own party. He went down the line for the New Deal all the way from the defense of bureaucrats to a warning to his Southern colleagues that they cannot hope forever to deny the Negroes of their section the full enjoyment of civil rights.

Slases At G.O.P. Record.

It was a fighting party speech which Barkley delivered to the convention delegates. He slashed unmercifully at the Republican Party's record during the 1½ years it has controlled Congress.

He taunted the Republicans, calling upon them to say which of the New Deal legislation they are willing to admit publicly they want to repeal. Then he charged them with trying to emasculate the New Deal in secret while paying lip service to its achievements.

In belligerent mood, Barkley told the delegates that their party's record for 16 years is one they should boast about, not one for which they should apologize.

'What Is This Whipping Boy?'

He reminded them that practically every speaker at the recent Republican convention denounced the New Deal. "What is this whipping boy," he asked, "which Republican speech makers use for their lamentations at every convention and on every platform?"

Answering his own rhetorical question, he listed item by item the achievements of the New Deal. Among them he listed a farm program "which has increased farm income by 800 per cent"; a soil-conservation program; the rural electrification program; the development of power dams such as the T.V.A., Grand Coulee, and the St. Lawrence Waterway; the Wagner Labor Relations Act; the Minimum Wage Law; the reciprocal trade program; the federal insurance of bank deposits; the federal housing program; the good-neighbor policy in South America.

'Spray Forest With Froth.'

"Let us ask," Barkley said, "and let the American people ask, those who spray this forest of superb accomplishment with the froth of their vindictive lips—which tree will they cut down with their mighty ax or their puny hatchet?"

Though the Republicans are unwilling to make public attack upon these New Deal achievements, Barkley said, they tried, during the last session of Congress, to scuttle many of them.

His indictment of the recent Congress was as sweeping as anything President Truman delivered during his recent tour of the West.

7-13-48

That Congress tried, Barkley said, to destroy the Rural Electrification Administration by denying it adequate funds for its extension to the farmers of the nation.

It destroyed in part, he said, the Wagner Labor Relations Act by enacting the Taft-Hartley Labor Law. That statute, Barkley said, is a full-fledged attack upon the labor act for which a majority of Democrats in Congress voted. The Taft-Hartley Law, he said, "had its inception in a desire to destroy the right of American labor to organize."

The Republicans lacked the courage, Barkley said, to repeal the Soil Conservation Act. But, he declared, they sought to destroy it by denying it the funds necessary for its administration.

The Kentuckian excoriated the Republican Congressional majority for its refusal to enact a public housing program. He blistered it for refusing to pass legislation to provide federal funds to help the states solve their school problems. He denounced it for curtailing the social-security program after having promised to expand social security to include more workers.

7-13-48

He indicted the Republicans for failing to increase the minimum wage level. He laid directly at their feet the responsibility for rising prices because they refused to enact the inflation controls requested by Truman.

Barkley charged them with wanting to go back to the log-rolling days of tariff making because they emasculated Cordel Hull's reciprocal trade program by extending it for only one year and putting Congressional check-reins upon it.

Treading carefully upon the foreign-policy question, Barkley gave full credit to certain Republican leaders, particularly Senator Arthur Vandenberg, for whole-hearted co-operation with the Truman Administration in the Marshall plan and other foreign-policy decisions.

Fears Isolationism.

But he reminded the convention that the Republican leadership in the House shows every sign of returning to its normal isolationism when it tried to whittle away the European Recovery Program.

His choicest invective Barkley saved for the recent Republican convention, which nominated Thomas E. Dewey and Earl Warren. He pointed out that the decisive voice in putting Dewey over was Joseph R. Grundy, the high-tariff advocate from Pennsylvania. He pointed out that, as his reward for putting Dewey over, Grundy was allowed to select the new Republican national chairman.

Barkley did not call the name of the new chairman, who is Representative Hugh D. Scott, Jr., but he quoted him as saying, in 1943:

"It is time for the Republicans to take over. We are the best stock. We are the people who represent the real grit, brains, and backbone of America."

Gives Reminder to South.

To his fellow Democrats in the South who are angry about the Truman civil-rights program Barkley issued a reminder that they are the political heirs of Thomas Jefferson.

"Jefferson declared," said Barkley, "that all men are equal. The equality which he proclaimed was equality in the right to enjoy the blessings of free government, in which they may participate and to which they have given their consent. . . .

"No true follower of Jefferson is at liberty to withhold from our own people, or the people of the world, the hope that they may enjoy that life, that liberty, and the pursuit of happiness upon which our own and all free institutions have been founded and must be founded throughout the world."

7-13-48

Urges Party to Progress.

"Surely the great Democratic Party, assembled here in the shadow of the historic hall where Jefferson wrote these things, cannot foreswear its obligation to march forward on the highway of human advancement."

It was a speech full of phrases such as have made Barkley a figure of legend both in Senate debate and upon the stump in Kentucky. Defending the New Deal from the attacks made upon bureaucrats, he said:

"A bureaucrat is a Democrat who holds some office that a Republican wants. The only sort of house cleaning you will get in Washington, in the event of a Republican victory next November, will be a change in the political complexion of those who hold the offices."

Taunts Republicans.

Taunting the Republicans because they still cringe before the political power of Franklin D. Roosevelt's name, he said:

"That man rests in the peaceful atmosphere of a quiet grave at Hyde Park. Some Republican orators of questionable taste seem to fear his spirit now as they feared the force of his personality when alive."

The opening session this morning was more than a half hour late in starting, and was devoted to 2 hours of oratory extolling the Democratic New Deal and denouncing the Republicans.

The principal speakers were Seator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, Senator Francis J. Myers of Pennsylvania, and Mayor David L. Lawrence of Pittsburgh.

Myers described the coming presidential campaign as a "two-front war" against the "reactionary, dominantly isolationist Republican right" and the "totalitarian Communist left."

Nominated 'Best Loser.'

The Pennsylvanian said the Republicans repeated history in this same hall three weeks ago by nominating "their best loser," Thomas E. Dewey.

The Democrats will repeat history in November, he predicted, by beating Dewey again.

McGrath, the party's national chairman, said the Democrats have provided a "record and a heritage of solid, constructive, progressive achievement in government that are unmatched in the history of our own or any other nation."

By contrast, he said, the Republicans have a record of "negativism, obstruction, and retrogression" during the past two years to go with their "dismal history of the 1920s."

Lawrence Slaps at Grundy.

Lawrence, welcoming the delegates to Pennsylvania, said Dewey was the choice of a convention dominated by Grundy.

The new G.O.P. national chairman, Representative Scott, is a "Grundy creature," Lawrence continued, and "sits in that chairmanship as a trustee for the Grundy interests in the Dewey deal."

"He will protect the high-tariff, special-privilege duck-the-taxes, beat-down-labor, forget-the-world Republicans—the dominant element in the Republican Party," Lawrence said.

'Rebels' Outline Plans To Kill Party in South

Atlanta Constitution

PHILADELPHIA, July 15—(AP)—A number of angered Dixie Democrats outlined intentions today to take the South out of the Party it has supported solidly for 75 years.

Gov. Fielding H. Wright, of Mississippi, called a meeting of all States-rights Democrats for Birmingham Saturday. There the leaders of the Southern anti-Truman movement will recommend that the Southern electoral vote be given to a man named this weekend.

The Southerners contend that the anti-discrimination proposals in the Party platform, which echoes President Truman's own Civil Rights program, invade States' rights. Fri. 7-16-48

After the Mississippi delegation and half of Alabama's walked out of the Convention, Southerners fought with grim determination the admittedly hopeless fight against Mr. Truman's nomination. For the most part they sat unsmiling through the demonstration for the President.

The 11 Alabama electors, named May 4 in a State primary, are committed against Mr. Truman or any other nominee who endorsed the anti-lynching, anti-segregation and Fair Employment Practices program of the President.

In addition to Alabama and Mississippi, representatives from Texas, Arkansas, Florida and South Carolina have announced they will go to Birmingham. All these states, in bitter opposition to the Convention majority, stood solidly against the Civil Rights platform plank and against Mr. Truman's nomination.

Alabama's delegates split on the walkout question. But those delegates who remained on the Convention floor fought the President to the finish on his nomination.

They also voted unanimously against suspension of the rules to allow unanimous nomination of Sen. Barkley for Vice President. But their protest went unheard.

The Birmingham gathering will resemble in some ways the Southern rebellion in 1860 at Charleston, S. C., and Baltimore. The deep South delegates withdrew from the regular convention, nominated a candidate of their own, and split the party vote that Fall.

Lincoln's election as the first Republican President followed, and Southern States seceded to set the stage for the War Between the States.

Since the war, the South has been the symbol of party regularity.

Tenn. Democrats Won't Instruct

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 15—(UP)—The Tennessee Democratic Convention voted Thursday to send an uninstructed delegation to the National Convention in Philadelphia. At the same time, the Convention turned down a stronglyworded resolution condemning President Truman. Fri.

Caucus Repeats Intention to Bolt Convention

Times-Picayune

(The Associated Press)

Philadelphia, June 11—Mississippi's 22-vote delegation to the Democratic convention reiterated today its intention to walk out if an unsatisfactory states' rights plank is adopted or President Truman is nominated.

New Orleans

Today's was the state's first caucus for the convention, opening Monday. Delegates already have instructions from the Mississippi Democratic convention to vote as a unit.

Gov. Fielding Wright, supported by some Southern delegates for the presidential nomination, was formally elected chairman of the delegation. He was nominated by T. H. Henry of Columbus.

Walter Sillars of Rosedale was named vice-chairman and Ed Lewis of Jackson, secretary.

Senators Eastland and Stennis of Mississippi attended the caucus. Reporters were barred.

Governor Wright told newspapermen later the delegation still is unanimous in its decision to walk out of the convention if an unsatisfactory state's rights planks is adopted, or if President Truman is the party's nominee.

While none wished to be quoted by name, the delegates generally agreed privately that President Truman will be nominated on the first ballot and that the civil rights plank will be as strong or stronger than the one to which they objected [illegible]

Platform Asks Repeal Of Taft Act

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.
Wed. 7-14-48

By the United Press

Philadelphia, July 13.—The Democratic convention's resolutions committee tonight adopted a "middle-of-the-road" civil-rights plank which it hoped rebellious Southerners would accept without a fight.

But the committee still faced an attempt by Dixie Democrats to write in a strong States'-rights plank. The Southerners were demanding such a declaration to offset the civil-rights program.

Committee action came after the rejection of an attempt by Mayor Hubert Humphreys of Minneapolis to write an even stronger civil-rights program.

Southerners Rebuffed, Too.

Humphreys wanted to pledge the Democratic Party to the support of federal legislation to guarantee "personal safety from the brutal crime of lynching and mob violence," equal opportunity in employment, full and free political participation, and equal treatment in the armed forces.

Senator Scott W. Lucas of Illinois told reporters the Humphreys amendment was beaten by an "overwhelming" majority. He said the vote was followed by the rebuff of the Dixie attempt to weaken the civil-rights declaration. 7-14-48

Former Governor Dan Moody of Texas then offered the states'-rights amendment to the platform, Lucas said. It was taken under consideration.

Labor Plank Approved.

Earlier the committee approved a plank calling for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and agreed to planks pledging action to control soaring living costs and to back up with dollars the nation's promise to help European recovery.

The "middle-of-the-road" civil-rights plank says:

"The Democratic Party is responsible for the great civil rights gains made in recent years in eliminating unfair and illegal discrimination based on race, creed or color.

"The Democratic Party commits itself to continuing its effort to eradicate all racial, religious and economic discrimination.

"We again state our belief that racial and religious minorities must have the right to live, the right to work, the right to vote, the full and equal protection of the law, on a basis of equality with all citizens as guaranteed by the Constitution.

The Courier-Journal

Tidelands Plank Defeated.

"We again call on Congress to exercise its full authority to the limits of the Constitution to assure and protect these rights."

The Southern attempt to weaken the declaration was an amendment to eliminate the last paragraph. Humphreys offered his amendment as a substitute for the same language.

The committee killed a proposed plank to assert federal control over the oil-rich tidelands. It reportedly was argued that the Supreme Court had settled the issue.

Louisville, Ky

Assert Act Has Failed.

"We advocate the repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act," the labor plank said. "It was enacted by the Republican 80th Congress over the President's veto. It has failed."

Wed

A majority of the Democrats in Congress voted with the Republicans to override President Truman's veto of that legislation.

7-14-48

Other stories, articles, and pictures on the convention are on Page 2, the Editorial and Op Ed Pages, and Pages 1, 2, and 6 of Section 2.

The Democratic plank on labor—which, like the rest of the platform, is subject to a vote by the full convention—stated that under the Taft-Hartley Law the number of labor-management disputes has increased.

"It has encouraged litigation in labor disputes and undermined the established American policy of collective bargaining," the plank read.

"Recent decisions by the courts prove that the act was so poorly drawn that its application is uncertain and that it is probably, in some provisions, unconstitutional.

The Courier-Journal

Substitute Rules Urged.

In place of the Taft-Hartley Law the platform committee advocated "such legislation as is desirable to establish a just body of rules to assure free and effective collective bargaining, to determine in the public interest the rights of employees and employers, to reduce to a minimum their conflict of interest, and to enable unions to keep their membership free from communistic influences."

The committee also approved planks:

1. Pledging continued support for the United Nations and efforts to bring about curtailment of the big-power veto.
2. Advocating maintenance of an "adequate" Army, Navy, and Air Force "to protect the nation's vital interest and to assure our security against aggression."
3. Pledging a "sound humanitarian administration" of the Marshall plan for European recovery.

Louisville, Ky.

Aid to Israel Pledged.

4. Reaffirming U. S. recognition to the State of Israel with a pledge of "appropriate aid" to the new Jewish state in developing its economy and resources; favoring revision of the arms embargo to accord to Israel "the right of self-defense."

Wed.

5. Pledging enactment of comprehensive housing legislation, including provision for slum clearance and low-rent housing; calling for continuation of rent control until adequate housing is provided. 7-14-48
6. Promising continuation of "those sound fiscal policies which under Democratic leadership have brought about a balanced budget" and a $28,000,000,000 debt reduction since the war's end.
7. Favoring reduction of taxes—"whenever it is possible to do so without unbalancing the nation's economy"—especially for low-income families.

30 Candidates Ready To Walk At Convention

Publicity Is Scheduled In Face Of Protests; 26 Opposed To Action

MOBILE, ALA.—Thirty candidates for delegate Saturday night were pledged to walk out on the Democratic national convention if it adopts any part of the Truman civil right program.

State Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey announced their names and prepared in the face of protests from some anti-walk outers to give wide publicity to their stand. 4-18-48

Ranged against the 30 pledge signers were 26 candidates who refused to endorse it. Robert W. Gwin of Birmingham was the last addition to the group opposed to the move. Twenty-eight candidates remain uncommitted.

Twenty-six delegates will be elected this year, two from each Congressional district and eight from the state at large.

McCorvey listed no pledge signers from the second and fifth districts, and only one from the eighth Congressional district.

Lists Electors

McCorvey also gave the names of the 21 out of 28 candidates for presidential elector pledged to cast their votes for a Southern Democrat, if the national convention renominates Truman for President or adopts an "anti-Southern" platform.

McCorvey said in a statement accompanying the names of the pledge signers that the elected delegates will be expected "to go to the Democratic national convention and to stay there and fight to the last ditch against the adoption of a so-called civil rights plank in the party platform."

The Advertiser

"If the convention steam-rollers the delegates from the South and adopts such a plank in the Democratic platform, then the damage is done," he said.

"Gain Nothing"

"We gain nothing by wrangling over the nomination of a candidate because regardless of who is nominated he will have to run on the so-called civil rights platform pledged to impose diabolical and unthinkable measures on the South.

Montgomery, Ala

"If this happens, the Democratic party of Alabama will be unable this year to affiliate itself with the National Democratic party as we have done in former years and our delegates will have 'to take a walk.'"

McCorvey said most of the delegates would no doubt be unwilling to participate in balloting for a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president, "when they know in advance that they would not support any nominee running on such a platform, regardless of who such nominee might be."

Termed Necessary

McCorvey said the pledge was necessary to help the Democratic Party in Alabama counties where Republican opposition is strong.

Georgian Hopes For Delegates To Nat'l Convention

Sun. 7-18-48

By MARK HYMAN

PHILADELPHIA — (ANP)—Over two thirds of the Negro delegates and alternates to the Democratic National Convention were present at Philadelphia's fashionable Pyramid Club last week and had an old time party rally, going down the line for Harry S. Truman for the next President of the United States.

There were "Shag" Taylor, affectionately called by Congressman William Dawson, "the mayor of Boston"; old time Democratic William L. Hueston from Washington, and with him was young Edward Williams who was attending his second convention. Joseph Brown, state senator from Michigan, and delegate to the convention, told Chairman Dawson and the other delegates that Michigan was going all out for Truman. With him from Michigan were William Booker, delegate, and alternates Harold Bledsoe, Charles W. Jones, and Mrs. Geneva Cassey. Thomas Corum, president elector from the Wolverine state and assistant sergeant-at-arms at the convention, was with the delegation.

VARIED REPRESENTATIVES

Also at the old-time Democrat pep meeting were the Rev. Russell Clayton, pastor of a non-denominational church in Los Angeles and delegates; Mrs. Mildred Casey, delegate from Chicago, the only Negro woman in the history of Illinois to attend a Democratic convention as a delegate; Sen. C. C. Wimbish, from the first congressional district of Illinois, alternate; Maj. James McClendon, second district, alternate, and Willard Townsend, labor leader, and delegate at large from Illinois, alternate; Lt. Col. Kenneth Campbell alternate.

Chicago was further represented by Charles Skyles, representative from the fifth senatorial district; James C. Martin, district leader from Chicago's 28th ward, and Robert H. Miller, elector from the first congressional district. He is also public relations man for the district.

From Maryland came William B. Dixon, president of the famous Monumental Democratic club of Baltimore; New York's Democratic leader Joe Ford was on hand, jovially identified with Tammany Hall by the other delegates; George R Ragland, of Oklahoma City. He is public relations man for Langston university and state supervisor of the Universal Life Insurance company; Andrew M. Bradley, alternate delegate at large from Harrisburg, Pa., and Charles Baker, honorary seargent-at-arms from Philadelphia. Both are state auditors. The Rev. Marshall Shepard, recorder of deeds in the District of Columbia and famous clergyman, was on hand to lend the spiritual side to the dynamic meeting.

Sun. 7-18-48

SEES GA. DELEGATES

Elmer Motzee, fom St. Louis, an ever ready defender of Truman, and Atty. George Vaughn, of Missouri, nationally known for his fight in the restrictive covenant cases, sparked the meeting with strong pro-Truman speeches while Atty. Austin Walden, of Atlanta, defense counsel in the Ingram case, expressed his hopes for the future when Georgia could send Negro delegates to the national convention. Felix Payne, "the man who knew Truman before the President was big enough to be a senator," was called on by Dawson. He insisted that Truman was a man who kept his word. George Murray of the CIO said the union was solidly behind the President.

Ohio was represented at the informal gathering by Granville Reed, delegate. California came in with its second Negro delegate, Mrs Sylura Barron of San Diego.

There were no differences of option as to what Truman meant to the Negro Democrats of the country. And as the white Democrats floundered about the city, looking vainly for a leader in preference of the civil rights advocate President, Negro delegates from all over the country were agreed [illegible] it was Harry Truman.

Lautier Says Use of Wrong Procedure Cost S.C. Progressives Convention Seats This Time

Mon. 7-24-48

By LOUIS LAUTIER

PHILADELPHIA (NNPA) — Southern Democrats are cornered over the race issue, out of which they have made political capital ever since the Civil War.

Although the delegates of the regular Democratic Party in South Carolina were seated in the Democratic national convention, Southerners were definitely put on notice that the Democratic Party in the South no longer is a white man's party.

The convention seats of U.S Senators Olin D. Johnston and Burnet R. Maybank, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond and 17 other advocates of white supremacy were challenged by two groups—one white and the other colored — both basing their contests on the exclusion of colored Democrats.

Attempt to Evade Ruling

It was Senator Johnston, who, while Governor of South Carolina, hit upon the scheme to disfranchise colored voters by repealing all laws on the South Carolina statute books pertaining to primary elections.

After the U.S. Supreme Court held in the Texas primary case that colored voters could not legally be barred from voting in Democratic primaries because of their color, Governor Johnston summoned the South Carolina Legislature to carry out his nefarious scheme.

Mon.

Repeal of South Carolina's primary laws left regulation of party affairs entirely up to the State Democratic Executive Committee. Party rules restricted voting in primaries to white Democrats. So throughout the State, clubs, corresponding to ward organizations in free election States, were organized.

7-24-48

The South Carolina Democratic party took the position that colored people had no more right to vote in Democratic primaries than they have "to vote in the election of officer of the Forest Lake Country Club or for the officers of the Colonial Dames of America."

Told to Rejoin Union

Judge J. Waties Waring of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern district of South Carolina, in 1947 enjoined party officials from excluding qualified colored voters from registering and voting, declaring that it was "time for South Carolina to rejoin the union."

After this decision, the South Carolina Democratic party decided to permit colored Democrats to vote in primaries if they degraded themselves by taking an oath saying they believed in racial segregation. They were still barred from the clubs.

Since they could not belong to "clubs," they were barred from participating in county, district and State conventions. They organized the Progressive Democratic Party and held their own conventions. At Philadelphia they asked for 8 of the 20 seats allotted to South Carolina Democrats on the basis of the ratio of colored people in the total population of the State.

Mon.

Hatch Proposal Ignored

On the promise that the Democratic credentials committee had no precedent by which to go, Senator Carl Hatch of New Mexico proposed, and the committee adopted, a rule for the guidance of State Conventions which would forbid discrimination in the election of delegates on account of race, color or religion.

Whether this rule was proposed to the convention's Rules Committee was not learned, but that committee did not report it to the convention and, consequently, no action was taken.

7-24-48

Nevertheless, in the light of this contest case and the fact that a number of Southern States sent colored "observers" to Philadelphia, it will be interesting to watch developments four years.

Could Have Forced Issue

The colored Democrats in South Carolina should have followed a different procedure and elected delegates to the regular Democratic county, district and State conventions, filed credentials and presented contests at these conventions, and then brought their contest to Philadelphia.

If they had done so, the situation for Senators Johnston and Maybank and Governor Thurmond would have been far more embarrassing and the credentials committee and the convention itself might have been forced to decide the issue on its merits.

AL SMITH, IN '32, TOOK FAMOUS 'WALK'

Nearing Democratic Convention Reminds of Past Political Rows

Constitution — Atlanta, Ga.

(34d)

Sun. 7-11-48

The widely publicized threat that delegates of a number of Southern States would bolt from the Democratic Convention if Truman is chosen as the Party's candidate for President, and/or the platform carries his stand on the civil rights issue may result in that action and again it may not.

A political sensation two months ago, comment and speculation were subdued by the President's transcontinental Western tour, but in the deep South hostility to Truman was augmented by the foes of his civil rights pronouncement. With the Democratic Convention date nearing, the Party is faced with a problem that is fraught with possible disaster if compromise fails. 7-11-48

The nation-wide interest developed by the threatened revolt, plus high blood pressure worry of political leaders, serves to recall several historic "take-a-walk" incidents that have occurred in connection with past presidential conventions of both political parties.

In 1896 when the GOP platform came out flatly in favor of the gold standard, Henry M. Teller, the "silver" United States Senator from Colorado, tearfully told the convention he would have to desert the Party. Whereat Mark Hanna, the GOP poobah of the period, who promoted McKinley's nomination and was principally responsible for the gold plank in the platform, said: "Let him go; we won't miss him."

BULL MOOSE UPRISING

Teddy Roosevelt fought harder at the Republican Convention in Chicago, Ill., in 1912, than he did in the Cuban War, and when he lost the nomination to William Howard Taft, he and his partisans fled from the convention hall, formed the Bull Moose Rough Riders, wrecked the GOP and insured Wilson's election.

Alfred E. Smith's famous quip: "I'll just take a walk," signalized his departure from the Democratic Convention in Chicago in 1932 when the fourth ballot of that memorabble assemblage disclosed that the Party would not nominate for the presidency the man whose candidacy in 1928 split the Solid South for the first time since the end of "reconstruction" had made it a 13-State Democratic stronghold, choosing instead Franklin D. Roosevelt, who broke all precedents for renomination and re-election.

This year's threat to Democratic party harmony has all the features of the rift that occurred in 1860 when the Convention met in Charleston, S. C., on April 23, to nominate a candidate to oppose Lincoln for the Presidency. United States Sen. Stephen A. Douglas, of Illinois, was the outstanding candidate, and he could command a majority vote of the Convention, but was far short of the two-thirds required for nomination. Trouble started at once over a clause in the platform, Douglas insisting on his plan of handling the slavery issue, while the Southern delegates were equally insistent on a plank which embodied the ideas of Jefferson Davis. After a week of acrimonious debate, the Douglas partisans forced a vote and won their point 165 to 138. The delegates from Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, South Carolina, Florida, Arkansas and Georgia left the wrangling assembly, and after a caucus, decided to hold a Convention of the Southern States in Richmond, Va.

DOUGLAS NOMINATED

The Douglas partisans, together with the delegates from Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky and California, continued the Charleston Convention, and after 57 ballots, with Douglas unable to muster the necessary two-thirds of the remaining delegates, adjourned to meet in Baltimore June 16. Minus the delegates from the above-mentioned seven States, and the seven original bolters, the Douglas partisans, calling their assembly the Democratic party, nominated Douglas, with a platform carrying his ideas on the redhot issue of the time. Herschel V. Johnson, of Georgia, was nominated as his running mate. 7-11-48

The seceding delegates from 14 States, meeting in Richmond, formed the Southern Democratic party, adopted a platform embodying Davis' plank on the slavery issue and nominated John C. Breckenridge, of Kentucky, as its candidate for President, and Joseph Lane, of Oregon, for Vice President. To complicate matters, a coterie of well-meaning individuals, who desired to pour oil on the troubled political waters, got together and formed the Conservative Democratic party, nominating John Bell, of Tennessee, as its candidate for President, with a "straddle" plank on the slavery issue. This effort to harmonize the Northern and Southern divisions of the party was of no avail—the party was hopelessly split, and Lincoln's election made certain.

Will political party history repeat itself in Philadelphia when the Democrats meet in convention in "the City of Brotherly Love"? Will there be another "take a walk" by one or more eminent Democrats, or a bolt of the Dixiecrat delegates? That is a problem that is sprouting gray hairs on the domes of many leaders of the party as they seek a compromise solution that will restore party harmony.

Irrespective of whether the party meets in amity or discord, when the Democrats assemble in the same Philadelphia convention hall where the Republicans met June 21, not a GOP trace will be left—not even an echo of fervid orations, hilarious demonstrations and general pandemonium will roost in the rafters of the great building. Every corner has been carefully swept, the walls and seats thoroughly sprayed with political DDT—nothing left untouched but the electric, telephone and telegraph wires, and their voltage is believed "hot" enough to have become purified of any noxious Republican doctrines they transmitted. 7-11-48

The Democrats will eat, so trainloads of provender have been stored and more is on the way, while refreshment establishments have cut down on the Scotch and rye, but boosted the supplies of bourbon. Some have added a judicious quantity of "cawn." Republican banners have been whisked away and with Democratic insignia entwined with the nation's red, white and blue, Philadelphia is ready for the Democrats' saturnalia of hysterical, every four-years patriotic fervor.

The Dove of Peace, with an olive branch in her beak, will hover over the perspiring assembly as the convention opens in accordance with the time-honored program. A band will play "The Star-Spangled Banner," a distinguished clergyman will ask Divine guidance, a beautiful and gifted soprano will sing "My Country 'Tis of Three," and an outstanding Democratic leader will "point with pride and view with alarm" in the keynote address.

GOOD-BY PEACE

As the thunder of applause dies out following his peroration, the Dove of Peace will flit out of the hall, for the convention will immediately be compelled to consider the four-point program announced by the so-called Dixiecrats. Briefly summarized, it calls for State control on all features of civil rights, and refusal to vote for President Truman or any other candidate holding similar views expressed by him. The program announced carries an element of compromise, also a threat to "take a walk."

In contrast with the Republican Convention, with its several outstanding prospects for the nomination as presidential candidate, including a number of favorite son hopefuls, the Democrats meet, as in the past three conventions, with only one avowed aspirant for the honor of leading the party. Several outstanding Democrats, such Bailey and Connally, have been mentioned as prospective "dark horses," and any of them, as well as several others, would be acceptable to the Dixiecrats. Should several of these party leaders be offered in opposition to Truman it is possible that there might occur a battle of ballots similar to what occurred in Democratic Conventions of the past.

A memorable event was the 53 ballot scrimmage that occurred in Baltimore at the 1912 Democratic Convention, every one starting with a fog-horn voice announcing: "Alabama casts 24 votes for Oscar Underwood." After a Sunday recess, William Jennings Bryan, finally convinced that he could not obtain a fourth chance at the Presidency, gave Nebraska's vote to Woodrow Wilson, thus ending the cherished ambition of Missouri's Champ Clark to be the nominee of his party in a year when the nomination mean certainty of election.

In 1920, the year the GOP nominated Warren Harding and Calvin Coolidge, William G. McAdoo, of California, and Gov. James M. Cox, of Ohio, ran neck and neck for the presidential nomination for 35 ballots before the tide began to turn in favor of Cox. But it required 44 roll calls to put the Ohio Governor in the race against his fellow Ohio newspaperman.

The 10-day battle between McAdoo and Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, in 1924 set a record for political conventions of recent times. The fight was hot, the weather hotter, and in New York's Madison Square Garden wearied politicians and thrill-enhanced spectators were packed like sardines in a tin box, with perspiration substituting for olive oil.

For 70 roll calls McAdoo could not top 500 votes, and Smith could not gain above 350. Meanwhile, John W. Davis, prominent New York lawyer, plugged along with less than 100. The 71st showed McAdoo losing, but the votes were scattered among a number of "tryout" possibilities. 7-11-48

When none of these gained strength, a switch was made to Davis on the 90th. He gained votes on every successive ballot, but it took the 103rd to end the marathon contest so harrassed delegates could terminate mounting hotel bills and head for home.

"Peace—it's wonderful!"

Stand Results in Watering Down of Proposals

Times Picayune

Thurs. 7-15-48

BY PAUL WOOTON

(The Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

Philadelphia, July 14.—As Southern delegates were prepared to make an issue over states' rights on the basis of the plank recommended by the platform committee, the overriding of the committee and the insertion of a drastic anti-states' rights plank causes no change of their original objectives.

The vote has had the effect of widening the breach between the South and the Truman Democrats, but it was fully apparent before the vote this afternoon that the South was prepared to precipitate a showdown on the whole question of party policy toward states' rights.

Unquestionably the platform committee would have put a stiffer plank in its recommendation had not delegates from the South convinced members that the consequences would be serious. As a result, the radical proposals were watered down as much as possible. However, the so-called middle-of-the-road plank was not more acceptable to the great majority of the Southern delegates than was the amendment proposed by Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey of Minneapolis.

Thurs. 7-15-48

It is difficult for Southerners to understand why the wording proposed by minority members of the platform committee should be objected to so strongly, or why there should be any hesitation on the part of the Democratic party to go on record saying that the states should be left free from federal interference in the exercise of rights guaranteed to them by the constitution.

Responsible for Move

The left-wing element is strong in the California delegation present at this convention. It was those members of that delegation who were responsible at last night's session for the demonstration of hostility when the Mississippi delegation was seated.

Californians would have objected to the plank vociferously if it had been made specific and had referred to Negroes and Japanese. California wants no federal interference with the way it handles its Japanese problem.

In the committee Mayor Humphrey was enraged when the plank recommended by the majority left out reference to segregation, lynching, fair employment practices and poll taxes. He insisted from the first that all those matters be spelled out and that all general terms be dropped.

George D. Kells, Democratic chairman for Illinois, insisted that civil rights is the most important issue before the country and that no concessions should be made in the plan to call upon Congress to enact laws to abolish segregation, to punish lynching and to specify compulsory employment practices.

Short Paragraph Asked

It is a curious development in politics when the party of Jefferson rides roughshod over the carefully defined principles under which the states and the federal government were to have their separate fields of power and permitted activities. How that party could shout down the insertion in its platform of the proposals of Mississippi's Walter Sillers is hard to understand. Mr. Sillers did not ask for a change in the language which the committee had recommended. His only request was that a short paragraph be inserted in the platform.

He spoke eloquenly to the convention today in support of that addition. It is worth repeating:

> "The several states shall exercise, free from federal interference or encroachment by legislation, directive or otherwise, all the rights and powers reserved to them by the constitution, among which is the power to provide by law for the qualifications of electors, conduct of elections, regulation of employment practices, segregation, and define crimes committed within their borders and prescribe penalties therefor."

There no longer is doubt in the minds of Southern delegates that the Democratic party will be the left wing party of the future. Many believe that today's action makes certain a fusion with the Wallace forces prior to election.

Despite the intensity of the feeling of Southern delegates in their attitude toward Mr. Truman, no disposition to vote for Governor Dewey is in evidence. In fact, they think less of Governor Dewey than they do of Mr. Truman. Unless they nominate someone else for whom to vote, it will be a choice between two evils, they say. They are glad, however, that they have been forced to take this action when the South cannot be blamed for having made possible the election of Gov. Dewey. This break has come at a time when the Democratic party was headed for inevitable defeat. That is the opinion of objective observers who have been in attendance at this convention and at the Republican conclave three weeks ago.

Three Reasons Given

What these observers have difficulty in understanding is the lack of confidence in Mr. Truman. He certainly has done everything in his words, his messages, and his vetoes that those to the left of center have wanted. It is true that he has not succeeded in making his suggestions effective, but his followers should not blame him because it was Congress which has thwarted him.

Three reasons are given why Truman is certain to lose: People do not care for alibis. They want achievement. The public feels that a change toward clearer-cut policies and firmer administration is overdue. Truman lacks popular appeal. There is plenty of evidence that the people are willing to forget Roosevelt II and his New Deal and go back to Roosevelt I and revive the square deal. They seem to feel that is what is needed both at home and abroad.

This convention has made such an outcome all the more certain.

The platform committee seemed to have lacked courage to recommend further invasion of the exclusive jurisdiction of the states in denying them control of the tidelands. No reference was made to the St. Lawrence seaway, but adequate appropriations for flood control were supported. The 80th Congress was accused of cruelty and false economy in denying emergency relief in connection with recent floods.

Southern members were glad to see the platform committee come out against discriminatory transportation charges and in favor of the repeal of discriminatory taxes on oleomargarine.

The plank advocating federal aid for education did not include the proposal urged upon the committee that the aid for schools be limited to states which do not practice segregation.

Pleased With Trade Plank

Southern members of the platform committee are pleased with the plank on reciprocal trade agreements and with the foreign policy plank. At one point in the platform a last minute thought was written in after the draft was completed. It was: "We pledge continued economic co-operation for the countries of the Western Hemisphere."

A California member of the credentials committe arrived late when the committee was deadlocked 12 to 12 over the seating of the Mississippi delegtaion. The result was about to be announced, but he was given a minute to decide how he would vote. He whispered to Mrs. Dorothy Vredenburgh, who was acting as secretary of the meeting, to ask how Chairman McGrath would want him to vote.

Mrs. Vredenburgh, a Mississippian, said Mr. McGrath would like to see the Mississippi delegation seated, so the California member broke the deadlock and paved the way for the final 15 to 11 vote which came a few minutes later. Now the delegate is in bad with his left wing associates on the California delegation. At the time he did not know California had any particular interest in the contest.

As a result of the hearing before the credentials committee in the matter of seating the Mississippi delegation a proposed new rule has been laid before the national committee. This would preclude the seating of any delegation which states in advance that it will not be bound by the action taken by a majority of the delegates. There was no pussy-footing when the Mississippians appeared before the credentials committee. They made it very clear they had no intention of supporting Mr. Truman or any platform that failed to recognize the party's obligation to respect state sovereignty.

Negroes Help Open Demo Convention

PHILADELPHIA—(A N P)—Miss Carol Brice, luscious brown contralto, singing the Star Spangled Banner Tuesday morning; the Rev. Marshall L. Shepard, pastor of Mt. Olivet Baptist Church, delivering the morning prayers Wednesday, and Congressman William L. Dawson, active as assistant to the chairman, represented the outward and visible signs of Negro participation as the Democratic convention got down to business here, in Convention hall.

Wed 7-14-48

Less under the floodlight but in historic position was Mrs. Mildred Casey, of Chicago, reputably the first Negro woman ever to be a full-fledged delegate at a national political convention.

No complete list of the delegates was available as the convention opened and it is not known how many Negroes are included. Noticed so far have been Andrew Bradley from Harrisburg, Pa.; and Alexander Moorehead, chairman of the municipal council of St. Croix, Virgin Islands, USA. The Virgin Islands has four delegates.

Should Democrats Emerge With Slight Victory in Election

By RALPH McGILL.

PHILADELPHIA, July 15—Southern leaders holding over here today for the meeting of the National Committee and also those getting out on late trains, are mapping continuation of the fight against the man nominated early Thursday morning by the Democratic Convention.

They are aware of the fact that the South was badly defeated in this Convention. The further bitter truth of it is that there is no sympathy for the Southern position and the disposition on the part of the dominant wing is to let the South stew in its own juice.

But, the Southern leaders believe they have one effective weapon left. They plan to organize a block of electoral college votes to be withheld after the November election. They believe they can develop a block of between 60 and 70 such votes. If the election should prove to be a close Democratic victory, they could withhold them and defeat Truman or exact from him and the Party concessions that they want.

Fri. 7-16-48

Only the thoughtless ones will be rushing off to Birmingham and the proposed rump convention there. Such a convention is meaningless and futile. In fact, such a convention will further damage the South. The South needs to know, to help its understanding, that the actions of the Mississippi delegation, those of Alabama and some of the wild and reckless utterances from Louisiana, did not help the South's cause. The pity of it was that Cecil Sims, the Tennessee delegate who stated the cause for the Volunteer State, could not have been the chief spokesman for the South. The position on State's Rights is not necessarily a demagogic one. It is an old plank in the Democratic Party. A great many persons sincerely believe in centralization of Federal power and fear the steady increase of it in the past several years. There is much to be said for it. And it can be said with dignity and honor.

But what we had here as the loudest voice of the South were the wild and reckless and usually ridiculous statements by the Mississippians and some from Alabama, South Carolina and Louisiana. They made no sense. The Convention crowds laughed at them. They were often so preposterous as to embarrass even their own members. They hurt the South.

Georgia did a fine job. Charlie Bloch cannot be too highly praised for the dignified and eloquent manner in which he handled the Georgia protest support of Senator Richard B. Russell. Chairman James Peters handled the delegation well and Georgia did not disgrace or hurt the South. It is to be hoped that Georgia will stay out of the Birmingham meeting. If the State does decide to participate in the group planning to withhold the electoral votes, that is a matter for the State to decide. There is no value in attending any of the self-promotional ventures by other States such as Arkansas and Mississippi staged here, only to crawl at the last moment after they had squeezed all publicity possible out of it.

If the Democrats should emerge with a slight victory withholding of electoral votes, however unethical it may be, would be effective.

Fri. 7-16-1948

What is important for the South to realize is that they really did have rammed down their throats the planks to which they objected It was done deliberately and after due consideration by the Eastern, Western and Middle Western Party leaders who determined to their own satisfaction at least their only chance of victory lay in putting such a program into effect.

McCorvey Declares Platform Heads Convention Business

The Advertiser, Montgomery, Ala.

Sun. 4-11-48

By ATTICUS MULLIN

(List of delegate candidates and their stand on "walkout" pledge will be found on page 8-A).

Gessner McCorvey, chairman of the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee, points out to Jeff Beeland, candidate for delegate to the national convention from the Second District, that the first important business of the convention will be writing a platform, and that the nomination of a president and vice-president will come last.

McCorvey's telegram to Beeland was in answer to one from the latter. McCorvey had queried Beeland, as the committee directed him to do, in an effort to ascertain whether Beeland would stay in the convention in the event a platform was written which was unacceptable to the South. Beeland had answered the query that he would stay in the convention. Then Beeland queried McCorvey, who is also a candidate for delegate, in the following telegram:

"If elected do you intend to walk before you exert your ability in assisting to write a suitable platform? Answer 'yes' or 'no'. Do you intend to walk before you oppose the nomination of Truman and cast your vote for a suitable Democrat? Answer 'yes' or 'no'."

His Reply

To this telegram McCorvey replied as follows: The Advertiser

"Replying to your telegram requesting a yes or no answer to two questions, I beg to advise that, of course, I have absolutely no intention of walking from the convention before exerting every effort to assist in writing a suitable platform. I have been advocating this throughout all the states and urging Democrats in other sections of the country to join us in writing a platform that I and other Southerners can stand on. My answer to your first question is therefore absolutely no. Montgomery, Ala.

"To your second question I will state that if the Philadelphia convention follows the usual practice of writing a platform before nominating a candidate and the convention then writes a platform containing the damnable, obnoxious, and unthinkable provisions of the program of Harry S. Truman I certainly will walk out of the convention without staying there to oppose the nomination of Truman or anyone else, because I would not be willing to participate in balloting for any candidate when I was unwilling to support any candidate running on such a platform. Sun 4-11-48

"Assuming the platform is written before nominations come up my answer to your second question is therefore absolutely yes. I trust this makes my position clear and unmistakable but if this telegram leaves you in doubt as to where I stand, please call on me further. Best regards.

"Signed,

"McCorvey."

To Fight Platform

McCorvey's reply is clear that he will fight a platform which he regards as insulting the South but if such a platform is written he will not stay in the convention to ballot upon a candidate who will, of course, have to espouse that platform, no matter who that candidate is.

McCorvey told The Advertiser, by long distance, that at 2 p.m., Saturday, nine candidates for delegate at large had siginifed their intention of walking out of the convention "if the damnable and obnoxious", as he called it, civil rights plank was inserted in the platform. The Advertiser

Support Stand

Word also came to The Advertiser that a large number of Democrats from five counties lunched at the Demopolis Inn Friday with Winston Withers, as chairman, and by unanimous vote endorsed the action of the state committee in Montgomery last Monday favoring both candidates for delegates and electors pledging themselves not to stay in the convention and take anything thrown at them in the platform. They asked the voters of the state to cast their ballots only for men on the list of 22 for elector who have said they would not vote for Truman or anybody like him or upon his platform. Probate Judges Bob Greene, of Hale, Claiborne Blanton, of Dallas, and R. J. Westbrook, of Marengo, attended the meeting.

It was learned from Mobile Saturday afternoon that the voters of the Second and Fifth Districts will not have the opportunity of choosing a district delegate who will walk out if the South is forced to swallow a Truman civil rights platform. No candidate for delegate from either of these districts, in answer to the state committee's query, was willing to walk out if the platform was obnoxious to Alabama and the South. Sun 4-11-48

Delegate Candidates Now Stand 28 To 25

The Advertiser

MOBILE, ALA.— (AP) —Alabama's candidates for delegate to the National Democratic Convention were split almost down the middle, Saturday, on whether to walk out if any part of Truman's civil rights program is adopted.

The name of Gov. Folsom, a favorite son candidate for the party's presidential nomination, headed the anti-walkout list.

State Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey said that of 84 candidates for delegate, 28 have signed the state executive committee's walkout pledge, and 25 refused to sign the statement.

He said he would not close his books on the 21 who had not replied by noon today.

Gov. Folsom wrote McCorvey that he would fight the Truman civil rights program and oppose the president's renomination at the Philadelphia convention next July. But he said he would not take a walk.

Instead, he said that if the convention adopts a platform unsatisfactory to state Democrats, he proposes to call "an elected convention of Alabama Democracy" to set the future course of the state party.

Folsom referred to the president's program as a "national police state (civil rights) plank. The parentheses are his. Sun

McCorvey and Representative E. C. Boswell, of Geneva, author of the Boswell Amendment, were two of the most outspoken advocates of a walkout should the convention adopt an "anti-Southern" platform. 4-11-48

McCorvey said any other course for him would be "dishonorable."

Boswell said he would take no further part in the convention if it "yields to the domination of New York's East Side and Harlem, Chicago's First Ward, and Kansas City's machine," by adopting an anti-segregation plank.

Ranged with Gov. Folsom were Attorney General Albert A. Carmichael, former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, and U. S. Senator Lister Hill. Montgomery, Ala

Like Folsom, they denounced Truman's civil rights proposals as infringements on state's rights.

Walker County Group Flays Committee Plan

The Advertiser

JASPER, ALA. — (AP) — By a unanimous vote Saturday the Walker County Democratic Executive Committee condemned the state executive committee's recent resolution calling for walkout pledges from delegate candidates to the National Democratic Convention.

The county committe meeting here characterized the state group's resolution adopted at a special meeting last Monday as "an attempt to deny the right of the people of Alabama to exercise their franchise at the polls." Montgomery, Ala.

The state committe had asked candidates to pledge that they would walk out of the national conventions should it adopt any part of President Truman's civil rights program. Sun

The Walker County group, on the other hand, urged delegates to remain at the convention and "seek a candidate and program acceptable to the Democrats of the south." 4-11-48

The Walker County committee declared in a resolution that "the proper place and the only place to win a victory against the civil rights program is at the national convention."

The committee urged Alabama delegates to join with those of other states in an "agggressive and fearless fight against the civil rights program within the Democratic Party."

Kelly and Arvey Go Into Illinois Eclipse

Herald Tribune

PHILADELPHIA, July 14 (AP).—Ben Adamowski's star rose today on the Illinois Democratic horizon, apparently with a Truman-Kennelly blessing. The Kelly-Arvey leadership seemed eclipsed at least temporarily.

Mr. Adamawski, forty-one, a Chicago Polish leader who was an oratorical sensation in the Illinois Legislature when only twenty-three, was chosen to give the state's convention seconding speech for Mr. Truman's Presidential nomination.

Jacob M. Arvey, Chicago party chief, and Edward J. Kelly, Illinois National Committeeman and former Chicago Mayor, were not consulted in the selection. Mr. Adamowski said they didn't even know he went to Washington Monday to tell Mr. Truman at the White House "how things are in Illinois." Thu. 7-15-48

The development, some delegation members said, indicates that Messrs. Kelly and Arvey have lost popularity with the White House for tarrying so long in boarding the Truman-Barkley bandwagon.

Although Mr. Arvey was reported on the way out as Cook County chairman after the November election, Mr. Adamowski said he isn't aiming for the job. He told a reporter he will remain as corporation counsel under Mayor Martin H. Kennelly.

Mayor Kennelly denied any part in the caucus maneuvering yesterday which resulted in Mr. Adamowski's selection by unanimous voice vote.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.

SITTING in the convention hall Tuesday morning we read the Monday editorial in The Alabama Journal. Editor Cash Stanley wrote:

"Today in Alabama we are to hold our breath and see how representative government functions.

"Our cause is in the hands of those we have duly elected and sent to Philadelphia to speak and act for us . . . We chose some of our very ablest men to go and speak for us and act for us. They are our representatives and we are trusting them to represent us accurately, ably, unselfishly and patriotically . . ."

Editor Stanley, that genteel and knowing tribune of Black Belt anxieties and hopes, would find himself in a somber and crestfallen mood had he been here to witness the Southern and Alabama effort to articulate and implement its position. We have no doubt that Mr. Stanley would be considerably and perhaps gravely disappointed in the performance of Southern leaders and the Alabama delegation.

In confident expectation of concurrence by any observer here, we pass the sorrowing judgment that the Southern performance here has been painfully unimpressive.

And here we would like to say with all possible emphasis that this is not fashioned as a harsh and captious judgment. For it has not been demonstrated that there is any avenue of escape from the South's steel dilemma.

Thus we are saying that judgment of the failure to find relief for the South's oppressive circumstances should be made sparingly by all who themselves are unable to blaze a wilderness trail. But the effort so far of the states' rights entente and the Alabama delegation has been most unimpressive.

Wed 7-14-48

SUNDAY several hundred Southerners met in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel to make a historic break with the National Democratic Party, our Southern mother, and go it alone as in the days of Lincoln and Bryan.

Gov. Laney of Arkansas and Gov. Thurmond of South Carolina were the dominant leaders, but that was due to some extent to default. Other governors were studiedly inconspicuous. The senators and congressmen were everywhere except in the crystal ballroom of the hotel.

It fell to the lot of Laney and Thurmond to state the South's case. Their voices, countenances and cases for the South went out on television and radio.

It was a fine opportunity to render the clarion call, to give sound to a fierce tocsin, to cleave the convention ear with reason and passion.

But far from arresting the convention's attention, these speakers—neither a commanding or even a stimulating figure—failed even to stir those Southerners to whom they spoke. If Southern people were not stirred, what hope could there be of inflaming Northerners and Westerners?

Midway of the proceeding we saw William J. Primm, of Montgomery, who is National Chairman Howard McGrath's assistant and presumably in attendance as a McGrath sentinel, leave the meeting. It is difficult to believe that Primm would have left the states' rights parley had it been impressive.

Montgomery Advertiser

When it was all over we were left speculating on the poverty of leadership. Hitherto no Yancey voice has roared for the South. There was no Calhoun fire in this Philadelphia parley.

7-14-48 Advertiser

Where were the Southern leaders, the men with the ability to articulate an impressive and historic case? The South and its Virginia womb had supplied the men to create and fashion the mightiest state in the world's history and had subsequently given it its most powerful presidents.

Where were their heirs and assigns that day? Certainly Gov. Thurmond, standing there trying to explain FEPC as partly a communist device, was not of that strain. He couldn't even fire a South Carolinian.

Montgomery Ala.

THE events of the sessions of the Alabama delegation have been previously described. They may be summed up by saying that some members of the delegation are remarking a sense of shame.

All have told Alabama that this is a deadly time for "Southern civilization." Against that supposed crisis occured a spectacle of petulant jockeying for position in the 1950 senatorial and governatorial elections. In talking to them, one gets the impression that many members desire to walk out of the convention regardless of platform concessions. Some doubtless would be disappointed if deprived of a walk motive.

All is frustration and depression for all members of the party, North and South.

The acute melancholy of the situation was intensified when Senator Alben Barkley struck his reverberating keynote. He marshalled the towering case for the Roosevelt reforms and accomplishments. He contrasted it with the stagnation and inaction of the Republicans. It was an able exposition of a great case. They gave Barkley an impassioned half hour ovation, forgetting for a moment their attendance at a wake.

It was at that time so vivid—for want of a leader a great army is marching to the rear to be cut to ribbons. Even now, an adequate leader could take the Democratic case—the suffocation of the world's greatest depression and the winning of the world's greatest war—to the people with shattering effect. If only there were but a leader standing beside the Democratic standard.—G. C. H.

Leaders Refuse Even Token Vote to Arkansas After He Says He Won't Back President

New York N.Y.

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12—The Texas delegation, the most powerful from the South, began tonight a counter-attack against extreme Southern rebels intended to fragment or destroy a possible Southern bolt against President Truman in November.

The Texas leaders, with the apparent support of a heavy majority of their associates, declined to promise to Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas even so much as a token vote for the Presidential nomination unless he publicly pledged that he would support Mr. Truman in November.

Governor Laney, in response to an extraordinary summons, went before the delegation tonight to refuse to make such a promise. He declared he would not vote for Mr. Truman and cried out: "Where is the courage of Texas?"

The Governor had been put forward early this morning as a "state's rights" candidate by the wing standing irreconcilably—and hopelessly, so far as the Democratic National Convention is concerned—against President Truman His followers laid claim to full support only from three Southern delegations—Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina—and desperately sought the help of the larger and more influential groups, mainly Texas.

Truman Victory Conceded

They were fully prepared to concede privately that Mr. Truman would be nominated at all events, but they wanted to make the strongest possible demonstration.

New York Times

This was actually in pursuit of what has become the only real Southern aim now—a desperate effort to exercise pressure on the convention to get the softest possible civil-rights plan.

Governor Laney appeared before the Texans, in an intent and sweaty room, at 8:35 P. M. to give a manifesto on his position.

For hours a Texas committee had been trying to find him and when at length he arrived he told the Texans:

"I was a little hard to find, but it was not intentional. I don't have a thing in the world to hide. I've gone too far to try to dodge this issue and I have no inclination to dodge it.

Wed 7-13-48

"The time has come when some of you had better stand on your feet and say what you think. If I am to have a creditable vote in the convention—and I am trying only to save a situation, a party and a country—we need Texas.

"No Time to Quibble"

"This is no time to quibble in small matters. The Democratic party is on the ropes tonight. The Democratic leadership has so handled the situation that there is now no possible unification.

"You yourself don't believe in the things Harry Truman has advocated and will advocate."

Governor Laney, a leader among Southern rebels who have threatened a rump convention in Birmingham, Ala., recalled with irony that Gov. Beauford Jester, head of the Texas delegation, himself had participated in the early discussions that led to the Birmingham plan.

New York N.Y.

Mr. Jester remained silent and Governor Laney went on, his voice rising and shaking in the hot, silent room:

"You are trying to put me on the spot. All right. You want me to tell you what I'm going to do. Well, I'll tell you.

"For my part, I want nothing from the Democratic party if I have got to compromise principle. Let us all examine our hearts and consciences and vote as they tell us.

"I shall use every measure that is legal and proper in this fight. I am going through with it. Millions of Southerners are going through with it.

"I am going to do it whether you vote for me or not."

State's Position Strange

Texas was in a strange position. Its delegation had indicated 100 per cent dissatisfaction with President Truman and his civil-rights program but nevertheless was not willing to give any sort of aid or comfort to any who might bolt Mr. Truman in November.

The state, moreover, was in a

Aubrey Williams Assures Democrats That Civil Rights Won't Cost Southern Votes

New York Age

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Aubrey Williams, former national youth administrator under the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt told Democratic leaders here on Friday that they would not lose Southern voters by supporting President Truman's civil-rights program.

Later on during his talk, when the former NYA, who is from Montgomery, Ala., said it was mainly Southern Democratic leaders who opposed the Truman's program, the fireworks began.

7-17-48

A former governor of Alabama, Chauncey Sparks, then replied in turn that Williams was only speaking for himself, and his words should carry no weight.

State Legislator Charles E. Sheppard of Florida in the wake of Williams accusation then said:

Sat 7-17-48

"We do not propose to tolerate any further interference in states rights in the South. We and the Negro understand each other. We don't want any Federal bayonets forcing him down our throats."

Liberals Hold Rump Civil-Rights Talks

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Philadelphia, July 11.—Platform committee supporters of President Truman's civil-rights program decided at a rump session today to carry their fight to the convention floor. Many Dixie delegates promptly threatened to walk out of the convention if they succeed.

Ask Repeal of Taft Law.

Representative Celler of New York announced that "a rump meeting of liberals" from the platform-writing subcommittee had organized to present a substitute civil-rights plank to the convention if the committee does not present language backing Truman's program. The Truman proposals call for antilynch, anti-poll tax, fair-employment, and antidiscriminaion legislation.

Among those attending the meeting, Celler said, were himself, Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey, Jr., of Minneapolis, Mrs. Esther Murray of California, William Ritchie of Nebraska, and former Senator Hugh B. Mitchell of Washington—all platform committee members. 7-13-48

Celler said the rump meeting also discussed platform planks that would call for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Labor Law, federal aid to education, a federal housing program, and a revision of the arms embargo to permit shipment of arms to the new state of Israel.

Says It'll Be 'New Deal.'

Senator Myers of Pennsylvania, platform chairman, told a news conference, "I think the platform will follow generally in outline the philosophy of the New Deal and the Roosevelt program and the Truman program."

He said it in general would advocate what Truman has advocated in his messages to Congress, but he declined to say how specific it will get on civil rights.

Myers told the reporters he had not heard of the rump meeting and said "there has nothing happened so far that would justify a rump session." Mon. 7-13-48

Talks With Clifford.

Cellar had complained that all the members of the 108-member platform committee, except the writing group, are "being kept in the dark" on what is going on.

Myers said the small group is only getting some words together for the larger group to work on and revamp as it sees fit.

He said the drafting group which labored nearly all last night probably would work throughout tonight in an effort to produce a preliminary document by tomorrow.

When reporters asked if Truman had submitted platform suggestions in writing, Myers said, "I'm getting suggestions from everywhere." He said he had talked with Clark Clifford, White House counsel. 7-12-48

Adds to Committee.

Myers announced he had increased from five to seven the membership of the group drawing the first draft of the platform.

Former Governor Chauncey Sparks of Alabama and Senator Green of Rhode Island were added. Other members are Myers, Senator Lucas of Illinois, Philip S. Perlman of Maryland, Mrs. Florence M. Lynch of Iowa, and Dan Moody, former Texas Governor. 7-12-48

A C.I.O.-Political Action Committee spokesman said delegates to the convention who are members of the C.I.O. should support in the convention a move to substitute a strong civil-rights plank, if such a plank is not presented by the platform committee.

'Can't Slap South.'

While the party rift on civil rights appeared to be widening, the element of compromise still showed itself.

Ritchie told reporters he attended the rump meeting, but "I did not go so far as the others in insisting upon the details of the President's civil-rights program. I told them that we cannot slap the South in the face."

The Nebraskan said the group was in unison in urging a plank to permit arms shipments to Israel. 7-12-48

The outlook for a slam-bang convention floor fight widened as ex-Governor Moody issued a statement declaring "so-called civil-rights" advocates aim "to take the South through a new Reconstruction Era—this time by federal law rather than federal bayonets."

"The issue of civil rights has been presented on the basis of conditions that do not exist," he said. "The people of the South are as much opposed to mob violence as the people of the North are opposed to riots and gang wars among rival criminal elements in the populous centers of the North and East.

"The only difference is that we in the South have been more effective in putting a stop to mob violence in the South than our equally well intentioned good citizens of the North have been in curbing gang violence there."

Meanwhile, some of the platform-writing group despaired of harmony efforts as they returned to a secret huddle after working until 3:30 this morning.

Mississippi May Walk Out.

One source said the group tentatively had approved a restatement of the 1944 racial plank that recognized that "racial and religious minorities have the right to live, develop and vote equally with all citizens and share the rights that are guaranteed by our constitution."

This may be accompanied by a declaration against federal interference with State's rights.

Governor Fielding Wright of Mississippi told reporters his delegation is unanimous in its decision to walk out of the convention if and unsatisfactory State's rights or civil-rights plank is adopted.

Georgia's platform committee members were urged to present in the convention a substitute plank if the proposed civil-rights declaration is unsatisfactory to the South.

Not all Southerners were unhappy, however, at the idea of adopting the 1944 civil-rights plank. 7-12-48

George D. Key, Oklahoma City, member of the platform committee, predicted the 1944 language would be used again and added that he believes it would be satisfactory to the uninstructed Oklahoma delegation as well as to the similarly unbound Texas group.

Half of Alabama Delegates Leave; Russell's Name in Convention, Hall, Philadelphia, July 14.—President Truman was placed in nomination at the Democratic national convention tonight as "a soldier, patriot and statesman, whose splendid courage has never faltered in war or in peace."

Gov. Phil M. Donnelly of Missouri asked the convention to nominate Mr. Truman to succeed himself as a president "who is today leading this nation to a new and greater destiny."

34d Thurs.

(The Associated Press)

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, July 14.—Mississippi's delegation and half of Alabama's walked out of the Democratic convention tonight, angry over its adoption of a strong "civil rights" platform plank. 7-15-48

Handy Ellis, chairman of the Alabama delegation, announced the walkout move. He said 13 of Alabama's 26 delegates were leaving and 23 of the 26 alternates. Mississippi's 30 delegates—with 22 votes—followed the Alabama walkers.

Senator Eastland of Mississippi told reporters that "in all probability" the protesters will hold a convention in Birmingham.

The purpose would be to name a Southern Democrat as a presidential candidate.

'Will of People,' Says Ellis

Telling the convention "good-bye," Ellis said that Alabama electors were under pledge that they would never cast their votes for Harry S. Truman.

Further, he said, the Alabama delegation to the convention was under pledge to walkout of a convention which had adopted a civil rights platform such as this convention had. He said all but three Alabamans were leaving.

Ellis said his group left—"without hatred, without anger, but with sorrow that we are faced with the necessity of carrying out the will of the people of Alabama."

Then a Mississippi delegate got up and said Mississippi wouldn't stay either.

"We bid you good-bye," he added and turned toward the door.

As members of the Mississippi and Alabama delegations went down the aisles, other delegates held Truman signs in front of them, delaying their exit.

Some of the crowd booed—others cheered—as the Southerners fought their way out of the hall.

An Alabama flag, red on a field of white, was taken from the bunting around the balconies and carried out by the departing delegates. The Times-Picayune

Ellis made his announcement when Alabama was called in the roll to nominate a presidential candidate. New Orleans, La.

Alabama Yields to Georgia

Senator Lister Hill was one of the Alabamians who stayed as the walkout came in the evening session. He announced Alabama was yielding its alphabet-top place in the roll call to Georgia so that state could nominate Senator Richard B. Russell to oppose Truman. Thurs.

Charles J. Block of Macon, Ga., put up Russell's name.

He said Georgia delegates intended to stay in the convention until it adjourned, but would never back anyone who favors the civil rights program that President Truman advocates.

Block told the convention that when Southerners demanded "states' rights" they were only asking what was guaranteed to them in the constitution. That document, he noted, reserves to the states all powers not expressly granted to the federal government. 7-15-48

'Good Riddance' Cry

Gov. Fielding Wright and Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi, led their delegation out of the hall. At the head of the Alabama bolters were Ellis and Eugene Conner, Birmingham police commissioner. Thurs.

"Good riddance," shouted a delegate from Wisconsin to the departing delegation. "We'll win in November without you."

"The hell you will," shouted Ellis. "Harry Truman won't get $5.50 from the white people in Georgia to help his campaign."

When the bolters reached the front door of the hall some one grabbed the Mississippi banner and tore it from the pole.

It was raining outside, but that made no difference to the Southerners.

They let out rebel yells. They said they were "on the way to Birmingham."

Earlier the North battered the South in a furious civil rights fight and the Democratic national convention tonight rushed through more preliminaries to nominating Harry S. Truman for the presidency.

Truman on Way

President Truman himself left Washington by special train to come here to accept the honor and watch the convention go on to pick Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky as his running mate.

And the Southerners who stayed in the convention, most of them equally enraged, swiftly began lining up behind Senator Richard Russell of Georgia for the presidential nomination — in place of Mr. Truman.

This was admittedly no more than a protest gesture but the Southerners were bound and determined to make it a strong one.

Texas promised its 50 votes to Russel. Virginia came through with its 26. South Carolina declared for Russel. And the part of the Alabama delegation that wasn't walking out signed up for him.

Senator Hill of Alabama yielded to Georgia to that the Peach state could put its own man's name in nomination — before the name of Mr. Truman.

Dixie was fighting mad over a strong endorsement of the president's civil rights program nailed into the 1948 party platform by a sledge-hammer drive from the North during the morning session.

Several speakers said the convention was watching at least a partial smashup of the Democratic party. Robert Figg, a South Carolinian on the platform committee, called it "the funeral of the Democratic party."

The struggle was over an old but flaming issue—racial and civil rights, and President Truman's stand against lynchings, poll taxes and racial discrimination in employment, The South said those were things that should be left to the states.

The committee that drafted the platform proposed that the party commit itself to continuing efforts to "eradicate all racial, religious and economic discrimination."

Truman Stand Backed

Northerners said that wasn't enough, that there should be specific backing for the Truman program. The North had the votes and the North had its way.

Twice it beat back attempts from the South to make the platform say, in effect, that racial and similar problems are for the states to handle and for the federal government to keep hands off.

And then the voting power of the North hammered into the platform a declaration that:

"We highly commend President Harry Truman for his courageous stand on the issue of civil rights.

"We call upon the Congress to support our president in guaranteeing these basic and fundamental American principles—the right of full and equal political participation; the right to equal opportunity of employment; the right of security of person, and the right of equal treatment in the service and defense of the nation."

State by state the roll was called on that. In number, more states were against it than for it. But the big delegations from the populous North put it over.

Wisconsin clinched it with 24 votes that moved the total to 625½. Only 618 were needed.

The final count was 651½ to 582½.

Southern Bid Overwhelmed

That was fairly close. But it was a lopsided 925 to 309 against a Southern bid to squeeze into the platform a declaration that the states "have the right to control their internal affairs and enforce police regulations" within the "limitations imposed by the 14th and 15th amendments to the constitution."

Chairman Sam Rayburn banged the convention into a recess with Eugene Conner of Alabama yelling himself purple in the face demanding a chance to talk.

The Birmingham police commissioner wanted to announce that half of the state's 26-member delegation was bolting the convention. He told a reporter it would do just that when the recess was over.

"It was rotten, this adjournment," Conner stormed at an unheeding Rayburn.

He said the 13 bolters would come back later only to announce their action.

"We are on the way out," Conner said. "We are not going to walk out—we're going to fly out."

But Sen. Lister Hill of Alabama quietly remarked: "I'm not walking."

Gov. Beauford H. Jester of Texas told a reporter the action of the platform was unfortunate and:

"I believe the party has lost its sense of balance in order to get votes. Texas will string along although we don't like it."

But from parts of the South came rumblings of plans for a separate convention to pick a candidate and platform. And here tonight various Southern states were saying grimly they would try to nominate almost anyone but Mr. Truman.

During the afternoon, Louisiana had agreed to go for Governor Earl K. Long, brother of the late "Kingfish" Huey.

Georgia said it was backing Sen. Richard Russell.

It looked as if the anti-Truman protest vote might line up behind the Georgia senator after Governor Ben Laney of Arkansas withdrew as a Southern candidate. Laney said he just couldn't run on any platform with a civil rights plank like the one okayed today.

Predicts 'Dissolution'

Of course, he wasn't going to get the nomination and he knew it. But it all pointed up what Cecil Sims of Tennessee told the convention during the hour-long debate that preceded the defeats for the South and adoption of the platform.

"If we are defeated," the states' rights champion solemnly told the delegates, "then I say to you, you are witnessing here today the dissolution of the Democratic party."

And at another point he warned that the decision on states' rights "will determine whether or not the Democratic party is to be destroyed in the South."

The debate at times was as hot as the steam-bath interior of the big auditorium. Yet even for this long-smouldering, highly advertised party fight, large chunks of the second gallery were vacant.

Up there it was hotter than the 90-odd degrees beside the speakers' platform.

It was former Congressman Andrew Biemiller who submitted formally to the convention the Northern plank on civil rights. But it was young Hubert Humphrey, Minneapolis mayor, who sent the convention into a riotous demonstration that made the result of the vote obvious ahead of time.

'New Emancipation'

Well-built, dark-haired, clad in blue, Humphrey spoke with fervor that brought the sweat pouring from his face and splattering onto the stand before him.

He said the fight for civil rights was 172 years late. He was proud that Harry Truman had the courage to utter a "new emancipation proclamation."

"There's no room for "double standards in American politics," he thundered.

"The time has come," he said, "for Democrats to get out of the shadow of states' rights and walk forthrightly into the bright sunshine of human rights."

There were other speakers for and against, many of them. Some were applauded and booed, cheered and jeered, all at the same time.

And simmering and seething underneath all the outpouring of words, or erupting into occasional riotous yells, was the evidence of tempers that brought on one of the greatest battles in party history.

Before the climactic, bare-fisted scrap began, the convention went through a show of oratorical harmony for a while.

The Truman forces controlling the convention brought James Roosevelt to the speaker's stand in an obvious effort at wound-binding. It was the son of the late president who led a futile attempt to place the party presidential emblem in the hands of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

"And speaking as one of those who made the fight, and I believe for all of us," Roosevelt said, "may I say, so that it can never be forgotten, that we are good Democrats, we are Democrats with ideals, we shall fight the good fight, we shall support the nominees of the Democratic party from top to bottom."

Tremendous Hand

Delegates gave the balding, grinning leader of the California delegation a tremendous hand. Californians clambered onto their chairs and whooped it up for "Jimmy."

The platform finally was hammered together in this morning's early hours by a 108-member committee which staged its own preview of the civil rights scrap.

On the convention floor today, the Democrats put on their only speaker from the ranks of labor. And it was a moment of drama when A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway trainmen, took over the microphone.

For it was Al Whitney who, only last year, was threatening to pour millions of union funds into a fight to defeat Mr. Truman—because the president had stepped in to stop a strike. Whitney was on the other side of the fence today.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—Democracy with a small "d" pounded on the door of the Democratic National Convention today but it couldn't get in. The Credentials Committee voted 25 to 2 to seat the regular white-supremacy delegation from South Carolina. Two contesting delegations of Negro and white citizens of the same state were barred from the convention. White-supremacy delegates from Virginia and Mississippi also were okayed by the committee despite contests by anti-Jimcrow forces.

34d

This was a victory for Gov. Strom Thurmond and Sen. Olin Johnston, leaders of the so-called Southern revolt against the civil rights movement within the party. Earlier Thurmond defied the convention's credentials committee.

"If you seat any of these people (not members of his group) we will walk out of this convention," Thurmond shouted. To a Negro member of the credentials committee, George Vaughan of Missouri, who had asked him a question, Thurmond stormed: "I'm not answering you anything."

Wed. 7-14-48

WALLACE-BAITING

A few minutes later, Emmet Cunningham, president of the National Council of Negro Democrats, commented pointedly on the threats of the Southerners to "take a walk."

"Remember the Negroes in the North," he told the credentials group. "We have some walking shoes, too."

The remark did not set well with several members of the committee. One of them, Owen Voight of Indiana, insisted on asking each witness if he were a member of Wallace's Third Party movement. In each case the answer was no. Most of those who appeared to contest the seating of delegations from South Carolina, Virginia and Mississippi, came as loyal members of the Democratic Party who believed that somehow the party could be returned to the principles of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

In fighting for these principles, white Southerners from South Carolina argued for the seating of Negro delegates and the expulsion of the white-supremacy crowd from the convention.

Witnesses who appeared today to challenge regular state delegations included:

- Elliot Fletcher, of Leesville, S. C., president of the Citizens Democratic faction, who headed a delegation which included three Negroes.
- A. J. Clements Jr., of Columbia, S.C., representing the Progressive Democratic Party, who demanded the seating of eight Negroes as regular delegates.
- Martin Hutchinson, of Richmond, Va., an anti-Byrd Democrat who insisted that Virginia delegates not be seated unless they pledged support to the Democratic nominee in November.
- Charles Hamilton, of Aberdeen, Miss., who charged the Mississippi delegation not only was made up of prospective "bolsters" but represented that clique which "stirred up racial hatred for political purposes, something we resent very much in Mississippi."

No Halfway Measures Wanted, Leaders Tell Committee Working on Planks in Platform

By RUBY SMITH

PHILADELPHIA

A warning that colored voters might "cry a plague on both" the Republicans and the Democrats, and "flock to a new third party" was one of many handed Resolutions Committee of the Democratic National Convention Thursday morning during its civil rights hearing on the roof of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

The walk-out threat was voiced by Hope R. Stevens, attorney, speaking on behalf of the National Non-Partisan Committee for the Passage of Civil Rights Legislation. who insisted that "you (Democrats) must either be for freedom or against it; for civil rights or Jim Crow."

An earlier witness, Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, said his organization respectfully, but firmly insisted that "the Democratic Platform Committee can include nothing less than the full recommendations of the President's Committee on Civil Rights."

He urged the Convention's endorsement without equivocation of the entire program "and especially those provisions to suppress lynching and mob violence, to ban the poll tax as a voting requirement, to afford equality of job opportunity, and to abolish discrimination and segregation in the armed services, education, and transportation."

White then introduced Dr. Channing H. Tobias, who served on President Truman's Civil Rights Committee, and who is chairman of the Social Action Committee of the CME Church.

"The issue is simple," Dr. Tobias said. "As Wendell Willkie said, the Constitution makes no provisions for first and second class citizens. . . . We are not disposed to look with indifference upon the fact that we are singled out for discrimination in the armed forces . . . .If there is not freedom for all, there is not freedom at all."

Further demands for "an unequivocal statement" on the issue was made by Elmer W. Henderson, newly name director of the American Council on Human Rights.

He urged the Democratic Party to promise to use its full resources on both the administrative and legislative branches of the Government" to see that every form of discrimination because of race, religion or national origin is removed from American life."

Sat.

George Marshall and the Rev. Ulas H. Mays, speaking for the Civil Rights Congress added their warning demands to the session.

They urged: 7-17-48

Repeal of the Taft-Hartley Law; revocation of President Truman's "loyalty" order, withdrawal of all injunctions now pending against trade unions, immediate dissolution of the House Committee on Un-American Activities;

The enactment of strong anti-lynch legislation, outlawing of Jim-Crow and segregation, enactment of permanent FEPC, elimination of segregation and Jim-Crow in the Armed Forces, and enactment of Federal anti-poll tax legislation.

"Our primary aim," Roy Wilkins, chairman of executive committee of the National Council for a Permanent FEPC, told the Committee, "and that which is subscribed to by all of our supporters, is the enactment by the Congress of fair employment legislation."

He warned that if the committee adopted the "meaningless language" of the 1944 platform, it will confess that the Democratic Party is giving "only lip service" to American Democracy, and that in this critical time in the life of our nation and the world, "the Democratic Party is unable to recognize the issues at stake or muster the courage for a decision in this fateful hour."

Equally urgent in their pleas for Civil Rights legislation were William J. Woolston, attorney, representing the American Civil Liberties Union; Mrs. Adeline Mahaney, of the Teachers' Union of Philadelphia, CIO; and Edgar Brown, director of the National Negro Council.

Members Duck Issue

The civil rights issue was left until the last by members of the resolutions committee who decided to pass over the issue rather than have a lengthy discussion.

According to Sen. Francis J. Myers, committee chairman, there had been some "conversation" in the drafting committee about civil rights, but nothing had been reduced to writing. 7-17-48

Senator Myers declared he had heard nothing about threats of Dixie delegates to walk out of the convention over the civil rights issue or of plans of the liberals, led by Rep. Emanuel Celler of New York, to fight to the last ditch, on the convention floor, if necessary, for a strong civil rights plank. The Afro-American

Specific Platform Promised

Asked whether the telegram sent by Mayor O'Dwyer of New York to President Truman and Senator McGrath, indorsing Mr. Truman's civil rights program, had come to his attention. Senator Myers said it had.

The Democratic platform, he predicted, will be much more specific than the Republican platform. He said the Democratic platform will set forth the Roosevelt-Truman doctrine. Baltimore, Md.

Members of the drafting committee were Sentor Myers, Senator John J. Sparkman of Alabama, Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, mittee were Senator Myers, Senator Green of Rhode Island, Mrs. Lynch of Iowa, and former Governor Moody of Texas. 7-17-48

Truman No FDR, Frances Perkins Sadly Admits

Louisville Courier Jour. 7-13-48

PHILADELPHIA, July 12. — (INS) — Frances Perkins sadly told the Democratic National Convention tonight that "we have to face life as it is."

She admitted that Harry S. Truman is no Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Perkins, former Secretary of Labor and first woman ever to serve in a President's Cabinet declared:

"There are thousands of people all over the country who would like to duplicate the candidate of 1932, but we have to face life as it is.

"There is no duplicate in this, or any other party."

Miss Perkins refrained from predicting the result of next November's elections.

She made convention history of a kind by speaking a kind word for the GOP.

Miss Perkins acknowledged that the Republicans should be regarded as "also manifesting truth and a desire for service."

Rebecca West, Doing Election Research on Visit to the Williams-Beau Jack Fight, Finds a Clew to Combating Red Propaganda Against U. S.

342

By Rebecca West

PHILADELPHIA, July 13. — Some of us who are correspondents covering the Democratic Convention felt it our duty to acquaint ourselves with the minds of the people who are going to vote for the President next fall, and therefore felt it a matter of conscience to attend the big fight on Monday night. That is our story and we will stick to it.

It was a lovely evening from start to finish. From the car park we walked down a pleasant little street with trees in it, where some colored families were living. The shades had not been pulled down and the people inside showed up like figures on a lighted stage.

In one room, a girl was dancing to the radio all by herself with a certain graceful, wistful frenzy, and it seemed strange that one who so loved to dance should not be out dancing to a good band with a good partner.

We left that mystery to solve itself and went over to the stadium, and there it was, the little square of bright light in the center of the great arena of darkness dimly patterned with thousands and thousands of faces. Round the square of bright light were sitting the sports writers, who are the gravest-looking set of men I know. Compared to them our House of Lords is a raffish bunch, though maybe our ecclesiastical conferences presided over by the Archbishop of Canterbury match them in solemnity.

But sports writers have indeed something to look grave about. They are given more space and given it more regularly than almost any other class of newspaper writers, and if a man is given that much opportunity to write he is apt to get an itch to write well. But sports writers always have to write against time. Most of them beat this handicap, but it is a handicap. Thus, they cultivate an art under difficulties, while keeping their senses on a bird-dog level of keenness and maintaining and constantly adding to a knowledge of several complicated sporting techniques and of the vast and ever-changing population of the sporting worlds. No wonder.

They look as if they were dedicated to harder and higher things than the rest of us. If the question is raised whether their effort is directed toward a worthy object, I would say that it was. The big fight between Beau Jack and Ike Williams, which was so good that the sports writers dropped their solemnity and their faces flashed with pleasure, was a demonstration not only of the beauty of human anatomy but also of the beauty of the human brain. It was a demonstration of the primal virtue; courage: does not take one very far, but one cannot start at all without it.

Each fighter had worked out the formula which was composed by the other fighter's strength and skill, and had worked out an answer to it. Moreover, it was a beautifully controlled and civilized fight of a kind which I always admire, because I cannot imagine myself being hit very hard by any one or hitting any one very hard without getting angry. If one is in the book-writing business one knows that a crowd which follows such a demonstration of human qualities with the complete understanding of it which is revealed in their applause, they have gone through an experience which is the rough equivalent of reading a very good book indeed.

It struck me as I left the arena that it was interesting to hear a crowd largely white, registering its enjoyment of such an experience which had been provided for them by two colored men. I thought of the civil rights issue, and I thought of it again when we went down the little street and passed the house where the shades were up and we had seen the girl dancing alone. Now we saw the reason why she had stayed at home. She had a young baby in her arms and was giving it a bottle with the prim, hospital-nurse movements of the modern young mother.

She had not gone dancing because she was a responsible person who shouldered her obligations as responsible people do, of whatever race. The reason that the colored fighters and this colored young mother impressed me was that they represented a phase of American life which is continuously lied about in Communist propaganda against the United States distributed in Europe and elsewhere.

There is a steady presentation of the relations between white and colored Americans which is dishonoring to both in every publication which is under Communist influence. The Negroes are represented as a simple, almost brutish people who are helpless under the conditions which are imposed on them by white Americans, and white Americans are represented as taking no interest in Negroes except when they organize parties to lynch them.

Americans would be startled if they knew just how much space was devoted in French publications alone to articles which represent lynching as a frequent and widespread feature of American life. The existence of such Negroes as these acclaimed fighters and this highly civilized young mother could not possibly be deduced from these articles.

It would be agreeable if the civil rights issue were handled in a way that would discredit this propaganda, for it does nobody any good. Even Negroes who feel that they have a great deal still to fight for gain nothing by having the fact of the amazing flowering of their race during the last twenty-five years ignored.

Vice Presidential Spot Still Wide Open—Convention To Begin Tomorrow

Sun. 7-11-48

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL
Associated Press Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—The Democratic clans, after feuding fiercely for months, closed ranks almost solidly Saturday night behind Harry Truman for President.

Only the antiTruman Southerners kept up gestures of opposition to nominating the President for a full four-year term.

Meanwhile, the vice presidential contest remained wide open for the national convention beginning Monday and ending, it may be, as early as Wednesday.

Douglas Turns It Down

First the running mate swing was toward Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois. Then it moved toward Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, and then toward Senators C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky.

Douglas said in Oregon that he would not quit the bench for the vice presidential nomination.

But there wasn't any doubt about the presidential nominee. The Democrats are going to place in the willing hands of Mr. Truman the banner Franklin D. Roosevelt carried to four victories in a row.

If any clincher was needed, the eldest son of the late F. D. R. supplied it. James Roosevelt announced Saturday night he was canceling a caucus he had called with the idea of lining up power behind Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for president.

Up to that point there had been some suggestions that the caucus might go on anyway, to look over other possibilities than the general. Eisenhower knocked the props from under the campaign for him with a statement Friday that he wouldn't accept the nomination under any terms.

The Commercial Appeal

MidWesterners Back Truman

A bigger huddle of MidWesterners—from 13 states with around a fifth of the 1234 convention votes—agreed unanimously to back Mr. Truman. Heads of 12 of the 13 Farm Belt delegations then voted also to push O'Mahoney for vice president. Iowa wouldn't go along with that.

O'Mahoney is the only vice presidential possibility out in the open. He has set up a campaign headquarters here.

But the talk for Douglas still was strong Saturday night. Chicago Democratic Chief Jacob M. Arvey and Illinois State Chairman George D. Kells put in plugs for him. Kells said also, however, that Lucas would be a fine compromise.

Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath said he was keeping hands off any effort to boom Douglas. Memphis Tenn.

Both McGrath and Leslie L. Biffle said so far as they knew, Mr. Truman had not deciced whom he would prefer for a running mate.

Biffle for Barkley

Biffle is a close friend of the President and convention sergeant-at-arms. Sun. 7-11-48

"Personally," Biffle declared, "I am for Senator Barkley. He would make a fine candidate. But that doesn't mean the Administration is supporting Barkley."

There wasn't much whoopla as delegates swarmed in from all points of the compass. But then there were hardly any good fights to stir up excitement. The Commercial Appeal

The biggest fuss of the day was at California headquarters.

Delegate John P. McEnery said it was a "damnable lisgrace" that James Roosevelt had tried to swing the Truman-instructed delegation to Eisenhower.

348

He was ruled out of order once on a motion demanding that Roosevelt hand in his resignation as the man California has chosen as its next national committeeman.

McEnery tried again. This time the motion was seconded by Will Rogers Jr., former congressman and son of the late humorist. And this time the delegation voted 40 to 7 to take no action.

Johnston Abandons Fight

Another stop-Truman man, Senator Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina, quietly abandoned his plan to lay before the Democratic National Committee a resolution demanding that Mr. Truman retire from the presidential derby and leave the field clear for General Ike. Memphis, Tenn.

The National Committee threw out a protest against seating the South Carolina delegation. The protest had come from the South Carolina Progressive (negro) Democratic Party. It had complained that negroes had no part in precinct meetings which named delegates to county and state conventions. The regular delegation was seated on the motion of Senator Johnston. Sun. 7-11-48

For most delegates invading Philadelphiai there wasn't much to do. All the customary convention trappings were on display. Philadelphia exhibited the same "welcome delegates" signs it had put up with impartial foresight for the Republican Convention last month.

Philadelphia Decorated

It still showed banners and flags and lights in profusion.

But there were no rival camps for presidential car- -tes with bands, blazing lights, free refreshments, campaign buttons. You could even navigate the lobby of the convention headquarters hotel and board an elevator without fighting a mob. Sun.

But there in the lobby, beaming at the folks who meandered by, was an eight by 10-foot picture of a smiling Harry S. Truman.

McGrath said the convention might be all over by Wednesday. That depends partly on whether Southerners stir up a fight on the convention floor over the civil rights-racial issues. 7-11-48

Mr. Truman may come to the convention before it quits, McGrath said. But right now, he said, the President's inclination is to accept the nomination formally in a speech at his home town, Independence, Mo., perhaps 30 days after the convention is over.

Dixie Defeated In Two-Thirds Rule Appeal

The Constitution

Atlanta, Ga.

CONVENTION HALL, Philadelphia, July 13—(UP)—The Democratic Convention rolled into the cleanup stage tonight. The nomination of the Truman-Barkley ticket and at least a patchwork settlement of the Negro rights dispute practically are assured.

Adjournment is scheduled for tomorrow night. Wed.

The meeting tonight opened with a 40-minute memorial tribute to the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, with New York's Mayor O'Dwyer presiding. 7-14-48

The convention seated the anti-Truman Mississippi delegation tonight, although a Negro delegate from President Truman's home State demanded it be barred.

The convention upheld the recommendation of the Credentials Committee by a voice vote.

The convention first howled down a minority report submitted by George Vaughn, of St. Louis. The Negro delegate, a member of the Credentials Committee, based his demand for refusing the so-called "regular" delegation of Mississippi the right to the convention floor on anti-Truman resolutions adopted by the Mississippi State Democratic convention.

The convention also accepted the recommendations of its Credentials Committee to seat anti-Truman South Carolina and Virginia delegations.

The convention howled down a Southern demand for a return to the two-thirds voting rule for Presidential and Vice Presidential nominations.

It approved continuation of the rule requiring only a simple majority of the total convention votes to nominate the ticket. This conformed with a majority report of the convention's Committee on Rules. The Constitution

Before this, it shouted down a minority report filed by six Southern States to reinstate the two-thirds requirement which was enforced by the Democrats until Franklin D. Roosevelt was chosen for his second term in 1936.

The return to the two-thirds rule was asked in a minority report submitted by Georgia, South Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi, Kansas and Texas. It was presented by Wright Morrow, of the Texas delegation. Atlanta, Ga.

Sen. Barkley, of Kentucky, whom President Truman accepted this morning as his Vice Presidential running mate, stepped down as temporary convention chairman and Rep. Rayburn, of Texas, took over. Wed.

Rayburn prompty cut loose with an old-fashioned political address calculated to blister the hides of the opposition. He denounced the Republicans' Dewey-Warren ticket as the product of a GOP convention bossed by former U. S. Sen. Grundy, of Pennsylvania. 7-14-48

The slogan of the recent Republican convention was "clear it with Grundy," said Rayburn. He predicted that "high tariff Grundy" would insist on killing the reciprocal trade program if the Republicans win in November.

He blasted Wallace's Third Party movement as "the front whitch masks the Communist Party."

Rep. Douglas, of California, picked up where Rayburn left off. She charged the Republicans at their recent convention here "danced on the grave of a dead President" instead of trying to choose their best candidate.

"The Democratic Party has been the majority party for 16 years. For God's sake let's act like it!" Rayburn pleaded.

Rayburn called Gov. Dewey and Warren, the Republican nominees, "false fronts for the traditional party of privilege."

And he declared the American people "will not let Henry Wallace exploit their yearning for peace" or follow him "into the slaughterhouse of war and Communism." The Constitution

With one of the oratorical flourishes for which he is famed, Reyburn declared:

"We are the party of the common man and the American people know it. Atlanta, Ga.

"On the right threatens the front of privilege.

"On the left threatens the Pied Piper of Politburo." Wed.

But the American people, he said, "will once again follow the middle way, our Democratic tradition of the American dream."

"For five sweltering days," Mrs. Douglas said in her prepared speech, the GOP convention "danced on the grave of a dead president." 7-14-48

"The opposition would have us believe that the dominant figure at their recent convention was their presidential nominee; in fact, they would like to believe that themselves. The dominant figure of that convention was Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and the American people know it."

The Republicans, she said, "shivered in the fear that the philosophy of Franklin Delano Roosevelt still lives in the hearts of the American people. Their fear was well founded."

Chairman J. Howard McGrath, of the National Committee, announced tonight that the Democratic Convention will adjourn tomorrow night.

He said President Truman will attend the closing session.

Tomorrow's meeting, McGrath announced, will start at 10 a. m. (EST), and will continue without halt until ended.

Truman And The Democratic Party

THE business of the Democratic convention is to prepare the party so that it can be the effective opposition. That is extremely important business, which can be done all the better if the leaders and bosses put out of their minds the notion that they can defeat Dewey and Warren by a political stunt—as, for example, a draft of General Eisenhower led by President Truman himself.

No doubt they will feel they must pretend that they are going to win the presidency, though, as a matter of fact, they would actually do better in the election if they were frank about it, admitted that their time is up and that it is the turn of the Republicans and asked for support on the ground that the country needs a strong opposition party. There must be a very considerable number of voters who would, in view of the record of the Republicans in the House, vote Democratic to strengthen the opposition but would not take the risk of prolonging the Truman Administration.

THERE is a serious possibility that the Democratic Party may not be able to be the effective opposition. As things are now the Southern Democrats, the New Dealers, the big urban bosses, and the Henry Wallace Democrats are all determined to wrest the control of the party from Truman and to get power for themselves in the local elections. The net result may well be such a Republican landslide, not merely a decisive Republican victory, that the Democratic Party in the House would be reduced to a negligible and discordant minority of Southern Democrats and of Northern Democrats from a few districts in a few of the biggest cities. This would be bad for the Democratic Party and bad for the country. 7-12-48

Not even Governor Dewey himself could really want to win so overwhelmingly. Opposition is essential in the American system. If the Democratic Party is devastated in most of the pivotal states, the White House will find it very difficult to lead. and to keep discipline within, the unwieldy Republican majority in Congress.

THIS dangerous tendency toward the disintegration of the Democratic Party will be aggravated if Mr. Truman is nominated and if the party machinery is used by him to wage a sharp struggle in the election. For the controlling fact in the present situation is that none of the important and divergent factions wants him to win the election and, therefore, to renew his grip upon the party machinery.

The tendency to disintegration might be arrested if, though Truman were nominated, the convention took away from him and his cronies the control of the party and of the campaign. But Mr. Truman is not likely to accept the role of a candidate whom his party has nominated but does not wish to elect. The Commercial Appeal

The real solution is not to nominate Truman. In itself replacing Truman would not reunite immediately the discordant factions. But it would prevent them from becoming even more discordant, and it would permit them to reunite eventually. For while they cannot reunite if there is a risk that they might win the presidency and have to act on the many issues about which they disagree, once it is recognized that they will not be governing the country, the issues that divide them will lose their heat and urgency. The Democrats can be united as an opposition party, not as a party which might have to govern. Memphis, Tenn

IF NOT Truman, then who could and should it be? Certainly not Eisenhower, not only for the reasons which he has stated but also because the one role he is most clearly not in a position to fill is that of leader of the opposition. The opposition can be led efficiently only by a Democratic politician who has a sure seat in Congress and a thorough knowledge of the machinery of the government, of legislative issues and procedure, and of the Democratic Party. In fact the opposition cannot be led by some one who is not a member of Congress.

THE BEST solution would therefore, seem to be the nomination of a senator who commands the respect of all the factions and will in any event be the actual leader of the Democratic opposition in Congress. Is not that man Senator Barkley of Kentucky?

His nomination would be a frank and honest acceptance of the realities of the political situation—that the Democrats are not out to win the presidency but to survive as the national party of opposition, to be critical, vigilant but good-humored about the return of the Republicans and the rise of Dewey. 7-12-48

SINCE there would be no chance of Senator Barkley's election to the presidency, the questions do not arise which would otherwise have to be asked about his age and his experience in executive office. It is enough that he is a most experienced legislator, a seasoned politician, and so well liked and so generally trusted that he could more readily than any one else be the mediator and harmonizer which the party so greatly needs.

He would obviously not be a candidate for the nomination four or eight years hence when the Democrats may again be serious contenders. Therefore, during this period of Democratic retirement, when the party will be reorganizing, recovering, and above all rejuvenating itself, he will not stand in the way of the new men who, as governors of states or as senators and congressmen, will be proving their availability. Mem.

THE MOST serious practical objection to this solution of the Democratic problem is that it may be too reasonable for a party which is so torn by factionalism, so passionate in its prejudices, that most of the factions will prefer to rule or to ruin the party's future.

Pride and stubbornness, which Mr. Truman might think is honor, may cause him to insist on exerting the power, which any President has, to force his own nomination against the manifest will of his party. In this he may be assisted by the wishful thinkers among his opponents who cling to the illusion that somehow, perhaps with Douglas, they can not only remove Truman but also win the presidency for themselves.

Truman Approves Barkley for Ticket

Senator's Decision Due Today

By ROBERT L. RIGGS
Staff Correspondent, The Courier-Journal.

Courier-Journal

Philadelphia, July 13.—This is Alben W. Barkley's hour in the history of the Democratic Party. The nomination for the Vice-Presidency is his just as soon as he says he will take it. The odds are heavy that the bigger prize, the presidential nomination, would be his if he would go after it. Barkley is waiting until tomorrow to announce his decision about the vice-presidential nomination. 7-14-48

Not too enthusiastically, and certainly not fulsomely, President Truman gave the sign today that he would accept the Kentucky senator as his running mate. He thus put his seal of approval on an action it was apparent the delegates were going to take with or without the President's consent. Louisville Ky.

Forced to Put Brakes On.

So fast has the Barkley movement been rolling since his keynote speech last night that the Kentucky convention delegates have been forced to put the brakes on it. All day, delegations from other states visited Kentucky headquarters at the Adelphia Hotel, urging them to get behind a proposal to give Barkley not the vice-presidential nomination, but the presidential spot.

This was a project which appealed to the Kentuckians, but they dared not encourage it. They knew Barkley's loyalty would cause him to forbid a move against the titular head of the party.

They also feared such a move, if it backfired, might put Barkley in the position of having to refuse second-place nomination. 7-14-48

Barkley Enjoys It All.

As for Barkley, he was the most relaxed man in the convention. He wouldn't say yes and he wouldn't say no to the demand that he accept the vice-presidential nomination, though there was little doubt he would end up by saying yes. Louisville Ky.

The 70-year-old Kentuckian was enjoying to the full the repeated demands that he go on the ticket. Twice before he had sought the place in vain. This time, when he has no personal longing for it, it has been dumped in his lap.

Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, the national committee's chairman, gave the word that Truman—who has maintained complete silence on Barkley for three days—would "welcome" him on the ticket.

The first question asked of McGrath at his morning press conference was: "Has there been any decision on the vice-presidential nomination?"

McGrath, a deliberate speaker, meditated for 2 or 3 minutes, then said. "If the Democratic convention sees fit to nominate Senator Barkley, President Truman will be most happy to welcome him."

Aware that up to today Truman, has had no conversation with Barkley since June 3, a reporter asked:

"Has the President talked to Senator Barkley?"

"I'm pretty sure he has," McGrath replied.

"Does the President's statement to you constitute an indorsement of Barkley?"

"No," said McGrath. "The President did not foreclose any other candidate and he will accept any decision this convention makes."

Chosen By Convention.

Thus Truman has not selected Barkley in the sense that those in the No. 1 spot usually pick their running mates. There was a time, a few days ago, when Barkley was in the mood to refuse the nomination unless Truman asked for him specifically.

But since that time it has been gratifying to him to see the convention turn to him without any prodding from the White House. He can truthfully say he is one vice-presidential nominee chosen by the convention delegates themselves. The Courier-Journal

While McGrath was correct in saying Truman called Barkley this morning, the President apparently did not make the call to persuade the Kentuckian to take second place.

Left Choice to Committee.

Louisville Ky.

Truman told Barkley he was calling to congratulate him on his keynote address. Then he told the Kentuckian he had not realized that Barkley was interested in the vice-presidential nomination. Wed. 7-14-48

Barkley assured him he was not interested in the post. The President further explained that he had left the question of a running mate to an informal committee of five. That group, he said, had decided Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas would be the best selection.

But with Douglas unwilling to run, Truman said he would be glad to have Barkley on the ticket, especially since the convention showed so strongly, during last night's demonstration, that they wanted him.

Still Barkley made no commitment.

If Barkley's Chosen, He'll Inform Barkley

Philadelphia, July 13 (AP)—If Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky is nominated as President Truman's running mate who do you think will tell Barkley?

Senator Barkley.

A list of proposed committee assignments drawn up by the Democratic National Committee today listed Barkley as "chairman of the committee to notify the vice-presidential nominee."

Might Win Senate Control.

The only inducement for Barkley to go on a ticket that seems doomed to defeat is that his presence there would help the Democratic Party save something from the wreck.

With him as the vice-presidential nominee the Democrats might hope to carry Kentucky, West Virginia, and Oklahoma, where Senate seats now held by Republicans are at stake.

Barkley might help the Democratic Governor of Wyoming win the Senate seat held by a Republican. He might help Paul Douglas defeat Republican Senator C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois. He might, in fact, help the Democrats win back control of the Senate even though they should lose the White House.

Wed.
7-14-48

Hasn't Made Up Mind.

That's the argument Senate colleagues have used on Barkley to get him to take a job he did not seek. Barkley's attitude toward the vice-presidential nomination was summarized by McGrath at his press conference when he quoted Barkley as having said to him: "Howard, I did not come here as a candidate. I do not know if I am now a candidate."

Shortly after McGrath's press conference, Barkley said to reporters:

"I don't want to be evasive about it, but I've got to make up my mind whether I will accept the nomination under any conditions.

"The President merely called me to congratulate me on my keynote speech. I don't want to quote the President, but the Vice-Presidency was not mentioned. I am not going to make any statements on the subject while I am temporary chairman of this convention. After I get out from that job, I will have something to say."

Pepper Gets Out of Race For Presidential Nomination

The Courier-Journal

From Wire Dispatches.

Philadelphia, July 13.—Rivals hopped out of the way of the Truman-Barkley ticket today.

Senator Claude Pepper of Florida gave up his 2-day-old boomlet for the presidential nomination.

Louisville, Ky.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming pulled to the side in the vice-presidential race and swung aboard the Barkley bandwagon as it thundered by. O'Mahoney announced he was releasing to Senator Barkley the "hundreds of delegates who have been supporting me."

7-14-48

Representative John W. McCormack of Massachusetts let it be known that he would follow O'Mahoney whenever Barkley agreed to become President Truman's running mate.

Heaves Bricks At Truman.

Pepper, stepping out of the race, spoke gravely of what he called the "spliintering of the Democratic Party . . . which is about to be consummated in the convention."

All in one statement, Pepper called for party unity, heaved bricks at Truman and the Republicans, and pledged himself to support and work for the convention nominees.

Wed.

In the presidential contest a few sore spots still bothered the convention.

7-14-48

Governor Ben Laney of Arkansas still is the candidate of the anti-Truman Southerners who don't like the way the President feels about lynching, poll taxes, and racial discrimination on jobs.

Laney has 92 votes behind him from Texas, Mississippi, and South Carolina, plus another 22 from Texas, Mississippi, and South Carolina, plus another 22 from his own state marked "probable."

7-14-48

And Georgia's 28 votes will be cast for the Peach State's own Senator Russell, Chairman James S. Peters announced today.

Ten Alabama delegates have said they would put Russell's name before the convention.

Senator William Fulbright of Arkansas said the protest votes against Truman might total 200.

Anti-Trumanites Win Skirmish, Lose Battle

The Courier-Journal

Seat Mississippi Delegation But Fail In Effort to Restore Two-Thirds Rule

Louisville, Ky.
Wed. 7-14-48

The Courier-Journal Convention Bureau.

Philadelphia, July 13.—Anti-Truman Southerners won a skirmish but lost a battle tonight in the Democratic National Convention. In a roaring struggle that often approached the brawl stage, the delegates fought out the Negro question on two front

On one front the Southerners won convention seats for a Mississippi delegation which is pledged to walk out of the hall if Harry S. Truman is nominated.

On the othre and major front, the forces from Dixie were rebuffed in a strong attempt to put back the two-thirds rule which was abolished in 1936. Instead of reviving the two-thirds rule, the convention voted to continue to require that only a majority vote be required for the nomination of presidential and vice-presidential candidates.

Boos and Shouts Resound.

Most of the noise and shouting arose over the relatively minor question of seating the Mississippi delegation. There were no boos and angry shouts throughout that debate.

The credentials-committee majority, headed by Rpresentative Mary T. Norton, New Jersey, had recommened that the Mississippi delegation be seated despite the fact it is instructed not to abide by decision of the convention unless the nominees denounced Truman's civil-rights program.

Challenging the committee report was a Negro member of that body, delegate George L. Vaughn of St. Louis. Amid both cheers and boos, Vaughn declared, "There is nothing in President Truman's civil-rights program but what is in the Constitution of the United States."

Wed. 7-14-48

Hall Thrown Into Confusion.

At that point, up jumped a delegate from Florida, shouting, "Take him down, take him down." This threw the hall into some moments of confusion, but Vaughn continued, apparently unruffled.

Wed.

When temporary chairman Alben W. Barkley asked the convention to say whether it wanted to adopt Vaughn's minority report, the noes obviously were louder than the ayes, and the Kentucky senator ruled the regular Mississippi delegation would be seated.

7-14-48

The greatest uproar arose because several states wanted the record to show that they had voted against seating the anti-civil-rights delegation. Among them were Illinois, New York, Iowa, Michigan, Washington, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and the District of Columbia.

The Courier-Journal

Barkley Yields to Demands.

When Barkley tried to proceed with convention business without having acknowledged all those states' demands, they refused to let him continue. He finally agreed that every state that wanted to be recorded against the Mississippi delegation should have that privilege.

So aroused were the delegates by this time on the emotional question of Negro rights that Barkley called on the convention police to clear the middle aisle before he took up the quarrel over the two-thirds rule.

This rule for 100 years gave the South a veto over the nomination of candidates. It was abolished in 1936 at the behest of Bennett Champ Clark, whose father lost the presidential nomination in 1912 because of the two-thirds requirement.

Louisville, Ky.

Texan Leads Rules Fight.

Wright Morrow, national committeeman-elect from Texas, led the fight for restoration of the rule. He was supported by Robert Elliott, national committeeman-elect from Georgia. Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing, and chief patronage dispenser for the Truman Administration, led the fight against restoring the rule.

"The two-thirds rule was good enough for Andrew Jackson, for Grover Cleveland, for Woodrow Wilson. and for Franklin D. Roosevelt," Elliott said. "It still is good enough for us."

Opposing restoration of the rule, Ewing argued that it had almost wrecked the Democratic Party.

South's Motive Questioned.

"The two-thirds rule means rule by one third," Ewing said, "and that is not democracy. I don't know if the two-thirds rule would appease the South. I don't think the two-thirds rule is what is bothering the South."

The noes obviously were in the majority when the question of adopting the minority report was adopted, and the two-thirds rule was put back in its grave for at least four years more.

First-Ballot Nominations Assured as City Chiefs Join Bandwagon Rush

Herald Tribune
New York, N.Y.

By Bert Andrews

Wed. 7-14-48

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—The Democratic National Convention prepared today for its crowning event—the acceptance speech at the convention tomorrow night of President Truman—after a nod from the White House had made it certain that the President's running mate will be Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky.

With the Truman administration forces so completely in control that first-ballot nominations are assured for the President and the Senator, the only major controversy remaining was that relating to the platform.

If the civil rights plank is acceptable to rebellious Southerners, a floor fight will be averted and the convention will be speeded up so the delegates can get out of Philadelphia and its heat after tomorrow night's session, a day ahead of schedule.

7-14-48

Wind-Up May Be Delayed

If the plank is such as to keep the Southern revolt churning, there may be hours of oratory that will delay the wind-up until Thursday.

As the delegates met tonight in Convention Hall to hear a memorial program in honor of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt and the dead of World War II, and addresses by Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, the convention's permanent chairman, and Representatives Helen Gahagan Douglas, of California, and Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, they were left without much to argue about on the question of candidates.

New York, N.Y.

Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, who had been a very willing candidate for President for just forty-eight hours, accepted the inevitable and withdrew today, saying he would support the nominees of the convention even though he thought the present leadership of the party "has proven incapable of holding the party together."

Tribune.

However, the Georgia delegation offered the dissident Southerners some one to rally about if they wanted to by saying its would nominate Senator Richard B. Russell, of Georgia, for President tomorrow evening and give him the state's twenty-eight votes on the first ballot. Governor Ben Laney, of Arkansas, candidate of another group of Senators, said he hadn't decided yet whether actively to oppose the President.

Barkley Opposition Fades

The prospects of any real opposition to Senator Barkley for second place faded just about as fast as the opposition to President Truman did.

Senator J. Howard McGrath, of Rhode Island, National Chairman, killed the hopes of the Barkley foes by announcing that President Truman will be "most happy to welcome" the seventy-year-old Senator as his running mate.

Senator McGrath's statement came soon after the disclosure that President Truman will come to Philadelphia tomorrow by plane if the weather is good and by train if it isn't, and that he will make his acceptance speech from an outline and notes, not from a prepared text. A time mentioned for the President's arrival was 9:30 p. m.

South Held Facing Tough Democratic Civil Rights Plank

PHILADELPHIA, July 10—It's all here. The plastic donkey over the main entrance to the Bellevue Stratford, National Democratic headquarters; the kids passing out Douglas buttons; the fellow in the jeep who won't give up on Eisenhower; the characters in their trick uniforms and Sam Crawford, from El Dorado, Ark., who stands in the lobby and blows plaintive blasts from his fox horn which will soon have all the hounds of Pennsylvania baying. In fact, if some of them do not chase a fox right down Broad Street before the rosy-tinted dawn comes tiptoeing over the building tops, it will be a very great surprise. There are no pictures of rival candidates about the place. There is just one of Harry Truman. It is eight by ten feet and it is a good one. He is going to be it. In more ways than one.

34d Convention

I ran into an old friend, Mr. Cecil Sims, an eminent lawyer and Democrat from Nashville, Ten-o-see, who was the only Southerner called here to be on the platform consultation committee. Mr. Sims, who is a brother of Mr. Tom Sims, who does Popeye the Sailor Man, got one of those urgent telegrams saying be here at once.

Mr. Sims leaped from his bed, flung on his garments and hurried to the airport and got a plane at 5 a. m.

7-11-48

When he hurried into the meeting, still chewing his late breakfast, a fellow said, "Come on in, brother, this is open to anybody." Mr. Sims just sat there and finally a fellow came around and said, "What, are you an expert on?"

The Constitution

"Sitting," said Mr. Sims. He said that he kept sitting and after awhile a man came over and said, "We like to keep in touch with our experts. Where are you staying and what is your name?"

"My name's Sims and I am staying somewhere between here and Washington at the Tracy Hotel."

Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. Sims said the man went away and finally came back and said, "Mr. Tracy, don't you worry. We will send you out to the Sims Hotel in a taxicab." Mr. Sims said that the man did not look at all like B. O. Plenty, but at these political conventions you never can tell. Mr. Sims is to be elected Chairman of the Tennessee delegation, but he will decline and suggest Mr. Phil Whitaker, of Chattanooga. After that, Mr. Sims hopes to get a hotel room somewhere closer than 40th Street, where he now is at the Tracy.

Atlanta, Ga. 7-11-48

Mr. Sims says he just sat there, but from what he gathered the South is in for a tough plank on civil rights. That is what he thinks if the plank is written by the experts by whom he was surrounded. He says they apparently are tired of fooling around with the South and if the South wants to walk out, it can. He also said they will write a plank giving arms to the new nation of Israel.

Mr. Sims was calm, as an expert on sitting should be, but he is resigned.

The Constitution

With this sad intelligence, I went over to the California caucus. It was hot in the room where they were and some of the boys were hot under the collar before they went in. They were feuding with James Roosevelt. One of those feuding was Will Rogers, Jr., son of the humorist who died in an air crash up in Alaska. They tried to get a resolution denouncing James Roosevelt, but lost. They then managed to commit the delegation to Mr. Truman.

When that was done in Room 462 in the Ben Franklin, I trudged on down to Room 252, where the Southern caucus, called by the revolting Democrats from Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina, were gathered.

The Constitution

I sat down and took out note paper, just like a movie reporter, but a gentleman said he wanted me to be on my honor not to print anything I heard.

So, I smiled and said I was after news and had hurried out to get it, and thanked him kindly and left. When it was over I asked four or five who were there and they told me about it. That proved me to be one of those efficiency experts, because while they were talking off the record, I went and sat in on an interview with Jacob M. Arvey, of the Cook County, Ill., organizations, of which, more later.

Sun. 7-11-48

The revolting delegates from Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina were joined by one man from Florida, two from Texas, one from Louisiana, and a half dozen from Alabama.

The Constitution

They were unhappy, they didn't know what to do. They debated a while and the one revolting delegate said he wanted them to agree on a candidate.

They talked about Sen. Richard B. Russell, of Georgia, and about Gov. Fielding Wright, of Mississippi. They were going at this hard and heavy when all of a sudden a lean and very hot delegate from Louisiana got up and said profanely:

Atlanta, Ga.

"Men, what in the name of hell are we talking about? We are agreed that if the platform is offensive to us we will walk out and yet here we are trying to select a candidate to run on that platform."

34d

This threw the great minds assembled into consternation and confusion but they rallied and decided not to nominate anybody.

They talked a long time about walking out. They reached no decision. They don't want to walk out, and I will wager they don't despite all the fine oratory about it. They will, I will wager, simply say, "I pass" when they are called, but they will not walk out.

They will hold a Birmingham convention to form a Southern party, they said, if Truman is nominated. There were those who told me the companies interested in the Tidelands oil would put up any amount needed for such a convention.

Sun.

They finally ended up by naming three committees. They will report at another caucus on Sunday afternoon. There is a committee to work out an agenda for the Sunday caucus. There is another to recommend a leader for the caucus. And a third will report on plans and suggestions for the proposed Birmingham rump convention of the revolting delegates.

7-11-48

James Peters, of Georgia, who was not present, was named on the agenda committee. If I had stayed I would not have been able to present this world-shaking news and I also would not have been able to report what the Cook County, Illinois, leader, Jake Avery, said in a press conference. Boiled down it came to this:

"I believe in a government which is interested in the people and their problems. It is just as easy to elect good people as bad people.

"I was for General Eisenhower because he seemed to me to be the one man in the nation most of the Republicans and most of the Democrats wanted. He was the man the American people wanted. I believe the rest of the world would have been brought closer to peace by him and I think other nations would have had more respect for us. So, I wanted him. That's all there was to it.

The Constitution

"It is true that I believed that would help out state tickets. The way I look at it, the crowd behind Dewey is at heart coldly reactionary and isolationist. They give lip service to another attitude. If he is swept into office he will take with him a lot of reactionary and isolationist Republican Congressmen. That won't be good for the country. It is important to get good state tickets elected. So I had that in mind."

7-11-48

Atlanta, Ga.

He impressed me very favorably. It was the first time I had ever seen him. He didn't look at all like the typical political boss.

Just as I was about to close this up, a friend came panting in with the Pepper story. The Americans for Democratic Action, having lost Eisenhower and Douglas, have started a boom for Claud Pepper, one-time Red Pepper, of Florida.

7-11-48

This was bad news to Sen. Spessard Holland, of Florida, and Gov. Millard Caldwell. Acute pains. They had been trying to bring the belting elements of their delegation back in line on a plea of State unity. The Pepper report spilt it wide open. Pepper hasn't a chance to be named Vice President. And he was one of the worst candidates to throw into a situation wherein the political healers were trying to bring about a closing of wounds and ranks. It is a boom busted before it begins, but it is trouble.

34d

Well, anyhow, if a man is as old as his legs, I am pretty dadblamed old, and if Sam Crawford hasn't got the room next to mine and doesn't blow in a pack of fox hounds, I am aiming to get some sleep. There will be more tomorrow.

Sun. 7-11-48

After The Convention

PHILADELPHIA, July 15

AFTER the convention here in Philadelphia the facts and implications begin to grow clearer. The South is faced with a political urgency now that demands axe-stroke action. And it's important that the action of the convention be fully understood.

One thing above all must be understood by Alabamians. It must be remembered. And that is that the writing of that unbearable plank providing for a phase No. 2 of Reconstruction was the work and will of the rank and file members of the Democratic Party.

We Alabamians, in our traditional and ancient attachment to the party, would wish to believe that it was a cynical and opportunistic political device of the vote-craving party leadership.

34d

But that it emphatically was not. It is entirely the reverse of that.

The mocking fact is that President Truman, National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, and the others upon whom Southern wrath and bitterness have cascaded were actually the advocates of a watered down, appeasing plank.

It was the common people of the convention—that is, the delegates representing a cross section of the party—that vehemently overrode Truman and scornfully voted the plank.

THE plain and indisputable fact is that Truman-McGrath and Co. have been trying to appease the South for some weeks.

For example, there was the appointment of William J. Primm, Jr., of Alabama, as special assistant to McGrath. Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky was chosen keynoter and Congressman Sam Rayburn of Texas was made permanent chairman of the convention. Examples might be multiplied.

And finally, as Chauncey Sparks will tell you, the platform committee offered the South a comparatively watered-down civil rights plank. Certainly it was no worse than the 1944 platform which caused no stir with Roosevelt standing upon it. And most certainly it was toothless compared with the sabre-toothed plank that the convention finally adopted.

McGrath even went so far, it is competently reported, as to offer the South restoration of the two-thirds rule in conventions if it would accept the watered-down plank.

Alabama and associate states declined this even-steven compromise and went on to prosecute the war with a walk-out.

The answer was a crushing defeat by the rank and file of the Democratic Party.

On the basis of this undisputable array of remarkable facts, you could argue that McGrath and Alabama were overruled.

WE ARE now in this position. We threatened to leave the party. The answer was an inflamed "Get the hell out then and good riddance."

Furthermore, we have got to recognize that the Southern border states voted against the deep South.

All of this has got to be understood and understood well, before we can intelligently seek our wilderness path.

We have an idea that in Alabama there will be some distracting agitation and opportunistic thrusting between the Ellis-Hill factions over the act of walking and non-walking.

No Alabamian should allow himself to be bamboozled with an empty, aimless controversy over that.

The enormous fact is that the rank and file of the Democratic Party is unsympathetic and intolerant of Southern viewpoint.

In a choice between the Southern electoral votes and the Negro power balance votes of the North, the convention found its choice easy.

THE compromise rejected. The all-out plank adopted. It is entirely understandable that Truman moved swiftly to interpret the convention's act as a mandate for him to capitalize the situation. He therefore summoned a special session of Congress.

Thus the issue of civil rights is maturing ahead of any predicted schedule.

We shall have the spectacle of a Republican Party with a comparatively mild civil rights plank and a Democratic Party with the strongest possible civil rights plank.

In this one regard and on paper at least, the Republican and Democratic Parties have swapped the roles they assumed in Civil War days.

The presidential campaign then will open in Congress this month. Truman will dare the Republican Congress, with doubtful states in the balance, not to enact the Democratic Party's civil rights plank. The pressures for enactment will undoubtedly be greater than ever in the past.

It seems this afternoon in Philadelphia that Alabama and some, but not all, Southern states are homeless.—

Prayer Of Rev. Marshall Shepard At Demo Convention

340 Journal & Guide

Norfolk, Va.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—(ANP)—The Rev. Marshall Shephard, recorder of deeds in Washington, mounted the speaker's platform at Convention Hall in Philadelphia to pray for the second time before this convention in this city.

The last time Shephard prayed here before the Democratic convention in 1940, Sen. "Cotton Ed" Smith, of South Carolina, walked from the convention as the minister began. Sat. 7-24-48

In a brief and stirring prayer, Rev. Shephard said:

"O, Lord, our God, how excellent is Thy name in all the earth. Thou has been our dwelling place in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth or ever Thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting Thou art God.

Norfolk, Va.

"Thy love divine hath led us in the past. In this free land by Thee our lot is cast. Be Thou our ruler, guardian, guide and stay. Thy word our law, Thy path our chosen way.

"We thank Thee that Thou doth inspire the hearts of men and direct the affair of men and of nations. May we of this convention avail ourselves to this leadership of spirit that will enable us to do that which is well pleasing in Thy sight. We pray for our country that we may be worthy of the great responsibility of leadership that is ours in a world that gropes for peace and freedom. We pray for our leaders in these crucial days that are upon us. We pray for the President of the United States and for his family. Sat.

"All men may be as brethren own.
Yet dare at need to stand alone.
Through Jesus Christ our Lord,
Amen." 7-24-48

Democrats 'Ban' Lily-Whites From Future Conventions

BY JOHN H. McCRAY

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—The Credentials Committee of the National Democratic Committee adopted a regulation here Tuesday, by which delegates from no state or territory will be recognized or certified if it be proven that they were elected or selectd by a machinery not accessible to citizens of all races, colors and creeds.

The Committee's action came after it had voted 24-2 against seating either the Progressive, or the Citizen Democrats of South Carolina, both of whom had filed a vigorous complaint against the South Carolina Regulars, led by Governor J Strom Thurmond.

SOUGHT IN 1944 7-25-48

The committee ruling, sought as far back as 1944 by Progressive Democrats, does not mean that all-white delegations from states and territories having large non-white populations are ruled out; it means simply that such states and territories cannot again elect delegates from an all-white or all-Negro organization and have these recognized, if contested.

Some two and one-half hours were used by the committee to settle the South Carolina case, key and pivotal issue in the entire convention. One member of the committee told me that the vote came after Senator Olin D. Johnston mis-informed the committee into thinking that the Elmore vs. Rice case was still in court, which was not fact. A second problem the committee decided against was seating our delegation on a proportional plea.

"If the Progressive Democrats and Citizen Democrats had just come before the committee as a single group," he said, "I have not the slightest doubt that they would have been seated over the others. The Committee was extremely sympathetic but was without precedent or legal support on the basis of what Senator Johnston (also a committee member) told us about the Elmore case."

Columbia, S.C.

PAIRED WITH MISSISSIPPI

From the credentials committee, the South Carolina case went before the convention Tuesday night in a minority report, made by assistant state attorney General George L. Vaughn of St. Louis, Mo., who used the all-white contest from Mississippi as focal point. This report was defeated on a voice vote, which it is generally stated, was other than what the presiding officer ruled it to be.

Attorney Vaughn electrified the convention in his presentation and several fist fights between northern and southern whites dotted the fever hot meeting. However, it set the stage for the stronger civil rights plank which was adopted the following day on a roll call, and which forced the Mississippi and a part of the Alabama delegations to stalk out.

SOUTH CAROLINA STAYS

South Carolina, pledged to walk out if President Truman were renominated or a civil rights plank was adopted, failed to take the walk. A reliable source explained to me that Governor Thurmond wanted to lead his charges out behind Alabama and Mississippi, but was restrained by the advice of Sen. Johnston, who allegedly advised that to bolt in 1948 meant to be locked out in 1952. After a caucus, the delegates sided with Senator Johnston. Sun. 7-25-48

Mr. Johnston allegedly also pointed out that were the seated group to bolt, the Citizen and Progressive Democrats, who were still around, could easily walk in, fill the seats, and win by default recognition in the convention.

MISSISSIPPI WALK CERTAIN IF CIVIL RIGHTS IS ISSUE

Some Delegates of Other States May Follow

New Orleans, La.

BY EDGAR POE

(The Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

Philadelphia, July 10.—A "walkout" of the Democratic national convention early next week by some Southern delegates appears certain this afternoon. Sun

This is in the face of conflicting statements being put out by some higherups of the party that the "rebels" are swinging behind President Truman who apparently will be nominated on the first ballot. 7-11-48

Gov. Wright said Mississippi is not even willing to accept the 1944 civil rights plank.

Governor Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi, titular head of the party in that state, said flatly this afternoon that Mississippi delegates would walk out if "thev" insisted on "rewriting or embellishing the 1944 civil rights plank." That proposal, which President Truman followed up in February of this year by sending his now famous civil rights message to Congress, vowed that the Democratic party believes that "racial and religious minorities have the right to live, develop and vote equaly. . ."

Dixie Caucus Today

Meantime, it is noted by many longtime political observers here that this preconvention thus far is perhaps one of the strangest and quietest since the party was founded by Thomas Jefferson.

All eyes Sunday afternoon will be on the Southern caucus of Dixie leaders at the Franklin hotel. The question of a general walkout of the convention and other strategy of the "Confederate" states will be mapped at the huddle. Although it appears certain that Mississippi will take a "walkout" at the convention, just how many other states will follow remained in doubt.

Many Alabama, Florida, South Carolina and Arkansas delegates are likely to follow Mississippi.

Louisiana, despite some dissatisfaction, is expected to go along with President Truman and the vice-presidential nominee. Times-Picayune

Alabama delegates arriving in Philadelphia this morning said that when the roll call takes place they expect to nominate someone other than President Truman. Roy D. McCord of Gadsden said he expected to make a nominating speech if none of the other solidly Alabama anti-Truman delegates did not prepare to make one.

For Separate Convention

Governor Wright said without equivocation that Mississippians were ready to go to Birmingham for a separate convention if the platform bore any civil rights issues. That the platform will carry at least as much as the 1944 declaration is a certainty, according to Sen. J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, national chairman.

A close-knit meeting of Southern anti-Truman leaders from Dixie went into a huddle at the Benjamin Franklin hotel this afternoon. They were mapping their strategy. Their idea in case of an exodus of Southern delegates from the convention hall is "not to wait too long, not to leave too early."

There was a report current that the platform may be held up until after the president and vice-president are nominated. If this is done, it could assertedly cause the Southerners some "inconvenience." New Orleans, La.

Favor Sharp Action

Sen. John McClellan of Arkansas said this afternoon that several of the delegates of his state are in a mood for sharp action designed to pave the way for more recognition in party circles. 7-11-48 The Arkansas delegates will caucus following the arrival of the delegates headed by Gov. Ben Laney, a "states' rights" Democrat.

Sen. Alben W. Barklev of Kentucky, who will be the temporary convention chairman, arrived at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel this afternoon. Told that some delegates were booming him for vice-presidential nomination, he laughed, saying: "They boom me for something every four years."

Former Gov. Keen Johnson of Kentucky during the day had a whole series of huddles with party spokesmen trying to "bust" the balloon that is being sent up for Associate Justice William O. Douglas of the supreme court for the No. 2 post.

Mr. Johnson told them that if the jurist, who was appointed to the bench by President Roosevelt, is nominated, it will be "a near-calamity to the party." He said it would be a bad thing, and that he did not believe the South would stand for it. At the same time he expressed the belief that Kentucky, "as it now stands, will be in the Democratic column" in the November 2 general election.

Southern Group Will Not Accept Proposed Plank With Federal Action Threatened

LOUISIANA FOR LONG

Other Southern States Join Plan To Cast 1st Ballot Votes Against Truman

(By The Associated Press)

The resolution presented by the southern states calling for the inclusion of a "states' rights" plank in the platform of the Democratic Party was overwhelmingly voted down at 2:00 p. m. A total of 925 votes were registered against the proposal. Only 618 "nays" were necessary for its defeat.

Philadelphia.—The Democratic Convention is locked in a battle over the civil rights plank in the proposed party platform. It is a fight that party leaders had striven desperately to head off.

The platform was read to the convention by the platform committee chairman, Senator Francis Myers of Pennsylvania. But the Southerners, headed by Dan Moody of Texas and Chauncey Sparks of Alabama, both former governors, are demanding a clear-cut States' Rights amendment to bar any federal action on such things as anti-lynch laws.

As the argument raged on, Louisiana joined the group of southern states announcing first-ballot choices for candidates othor than President Truman. The Louisiana delegation decided to cast its first ballot for Gov. Earl Long, brother of the late Huey Long. Enterprise Journal

Truman Will Make Speech

However, President Truman's nomination seems assured, once the platform battle is ended. Arrangements have been made for the president to come to the convention hall to deliver his acceptance speech either late tonight or tomorrow.

Delegates to the Democratic National Convention are knuckling down to a marathon session that may last without recess until Thursday. McComb, Miss.

They have been told that the whole agenda must be completed without a break and that includes several speeches, adoption of a platform and nominations for president and vice-president. The delegates began arriving even before the fifth session got under way in the heavy humidity of convention hall. 7-14-48

Before the convention was called to order the Alabama delegation voted unanimously to use its first place on the roll call to make certain that Mr. Truman's name is not the first placed in nomination. Rebel growls came from Virginia—which voted to support Senator Barkley or Senator Russell of Georgia for the presidential nomination. Arkansas also held a caucus, pledging its 22 votes to its Governor Ben Laney to head the ticket.

Tennessee For Barkley

The Tennessee delegation has thrown its support to Senator Barkley. It decided not to vote for the nomination of Mr. Truman. Enterprise Journal

Today's session was opened with an invocation by a negro pastor, Rev. Marshall Shapard of Philadelphia. The band played "Darktown Strutters' Ball," which struck some of the spectators as an odd choice for a convention which might very well blow up over the long and bitter argument on civil rights. McComb, Miss. Wed.

Later, a blonde singer, Valerie Haggerty of Philadelphia, sang "My Hero" from the operetta "The Chocolate Soldier." 7-14-48

Dixie Group Set To Choose Their Own Candidate

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — Revolt flared up from the South and parts of the North Sunday—but the Truman-for-President bandwagon rolled on with hardly a jolt.

And the Democratic high command opened the door wide to Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas for the vice presidential nomination. But Douglas wasn't talking and the race stayed wide open.

These were the top developments as the party's national convention got ready to open Monday.

Senator Claude Pepper of Florida added spice to the hitherto dullish proceedings by proclaiming that he was bowing to a draft and would run against Mr. Truman for the presidential nomination. There were few votes behind him.

Third Candidate

Rebelious Southerners threatened to pick a third candidate, or even to run a man of their own against Mr. Truman and Republican Thomas E. Dewey in November.

The Advertiser

They hollered their approval of caucus jabs at the President and his civil rights program, and then they decided to let a committee see what can be done about selecting a Dixie standard bearer in the next day or two.

But Southern leaders were saying what nearly everybody else was — that Mr. Truman is going to be nominated on the convention's first ballot.

Already Done

Americans for Democratic Action gave up on Justice Douglas for the presidential nomination. They were late, because most delegates had done so long before.

Montgomery, Ala.

ADA Chairman Leon Henderson announced that "we will accede" to Douglas' wishes that ADA stop its drive for him. Henderson said the organization hopes the justice now "will make himself available" for the vice presidential spot.

7-12-48

And Sunday night Douglas looked like as good a bet as anyone, and a better bet than most, for second place on the ticket.

Top men in the party and convention were flirting with the idea of Douglas for vice president. But the justice himself was being coy and having "no comment."

Mon.

The Pepper people moved into a headquarters once used by the backers of the abortive boom for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. They pulled down Eisenhower's picture but left up the signs saying "People's Choice for President."

Most Leftish

A seven member committee of Democrats who wanted somebody other than Mr. Truman announced late Sunday they had settled on the Florida senator who has the reputation of being one of the most leftish men in the party.

The committee included William Ritchie, Nebraska state chairman; Joseph M. Baird of New York; Harry Carlson, New Hampshire national committeeman; William W. Shayne of Florida; Robert George, Kansas; Joseph DeSilva, California, and August Scholle, Michigan.

Then Pepper turned up with his "I accept" pronouncement at a news conference in his new headquarters.

Seated at a table behind a battery of microphones, his pretty wife beside him, the senator said he came to Philadelphia with the belief "the one man to lead this nation was Dwight D. Eisenhower."

Mon 7-12-48

But since Eisenhower refused to be drafted, Pepper said:

Justice Declines To Quit High Court

Barkley and O'Mahoney Are Both Put Forward for Vice-Presidency

Herald Tribune

New York, N.Y.

By Bert Andrews

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—The stop-Truman drive faded into nothingness today as Associate Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court, last major hope of the would-be stoppers, all but eliminated himself from the 1948 Democratic political picture.

Sun.

At La Grande, Ore., Justice Douglas said: "I am not a candidate, have not been a candidate and do not plan to be a candidate. I do not plan to resign from the Supreme Court."

7-11-48

Justice Douglas said he wanted it made clear that he had exerted no effort to obtain either the Presidential or Vice-Presidential nomination when the Democratic National Convention opens here on Monday. He said he plans to release the Oregon delegation early next week. It was bound to vote for him for the Vice-Presidential nomination when he topped other write-in names in the primary with 5,635 votes.

Justice Douglas indicated he would issue another statement if circumstances made it necessary. The inference reporters drew was that it would be stronger.

Only Three Problems Left

Herald Tribune

With President Truman assured of a first-ballot nomination, the national convention is left with only three problems of any importance to cope with after sessions begin.

New York, N.Y.

The remaining matters, which will have to be stretched over three and possibly four days, are:

Not long after Justice Douglas's action, Leslie Biffle, secretary of the Senate Demorcatic Policy Committee, predicted that Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, would be Mr. Truman's running mate. He said he believed the Kentuckian would be acceptable to the President and would "certainly" be placed in nomination. Mr. Biffle observed that Senator Barkley would give "great strength" to the ticket. The Barkley choice others said, might appease Southerners who oppose Mr. Truman.

Right on top of Mr. Biffle's prediction came Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, with word that his name would be tossed in for the Vice-Presidency by Governor Lester C. Hunt, of Wyoming.

Sun.

1. Selection of a Vice-Presidential candidate. This race is still "wide open," according to Senator J. Howard McGrath, of Rhode Island, national chairman. However, President Truman will probably decide by Wednesday what man he'd like to see get second place.

7-11-48

2. Wording of the controversial civil rights plank in the platform—the plank that will have to contain assurances of states' rights if rebellious Southerners are to be mollified.

3. How to head off an anti-Truman demonstration or walkout by the states' rights advocates if the platform doesn't suit them.

Truman Plans Uncertain

On this point, Senator McGrath said President Truman is presently leaning toward having a notification ceremony at Independence, Mo., in about thirty days, rather than making an acceptance speech here. Senator McGrath said the President's attitude was tentative and subject to change. Some of the President's advisers favor the Independence ceremony plan, since it would eliminate all possibility of the President being the personal target of an "anti" outbreak in Convention Hall here.

"Isn't one reason for suggesting the Independence plan the fact that the President is fearful of an unfriendly reception?" a reporter asked Senator McGrath at a press conference.

"I don't think that is even a factor in his thinking," Senator McGrath replied. "We talked over the acceptance problem a week ago and at that time he was thinking in terms of Independence."

"Don't you think the convention needs a lift such as might be provided by the President's appearance here?" another reporter asked.

Herald Tribune

Senator McGrath joined in the mass laugh that followed, thus concurring with the reporters who are unanimously agreed that the convention is in the doldrums even before its opening and that any sort of lift would be welcome.

Most of the slim chances that had remained for arousing excitement and fervor disappeared as the evidence grew stronger and stronger that there will be a first ballot nomination for President Truman on Wednesday night.

Some of the anti-Trumanites still huffed and puffed but their efforts weren't strong enough even to threaten to blow the Truman house down.

New York, N.Y.

For one thing, a caucus of Truman foes scheduled for tonight was called off because of the positive "no" from General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, now president of Columbia University, the one man around whom the Truman enemies wanted to rally.

James Roosevelt Gives In

James Roosevelt, arriving with the fifty-four-ote California group, was the last to give in. He said the caucus wouldn't be held. Later there was a tidy little fight within the California delegation.

Sun.

John P. McEnery, delegation vice-chairman, moved at the caucus that Mr. Roosevelt be discharged from his post as chairman, charging he had cast President Truman in "disrepute and disgrace" and had weakened the President in California and the nation by joining the "stoppers." The motion was tabled by a vote of 40 to 7. Mr. Roosevelt "passed." Another motion to support President Truman was withdrawn. The delegation decided to think things over until another caucus at 9 a.m. Monday.

7-11-48

On another front, Senator Olin D. Johnston, of South Carolina, changed his mind about presenting a resolution to the national committee asking President Truman to withdraw as a candidate. Senator Johnston, who had been strong for General Eisenhower, would have no part of the campaign to get the nomination for Justice Douglas. He said South Carolina would nominate its own candidate.

"South Carolina cannot vote for President Truman," Senator Johnston said, renewing his criticism of President Truman's ten-point civil rights program. "I don't know about the rest of the South, but we hope that other states will follow along with us. I don't know how it will be done, but we've got to find a candidate."

One man who still hoped against hope to stop President Truman with Justice Douglas was Leon Henderson, president of Americans for Democratic Action. He said, after a meeting of his executive, but before Justice Douglas made his announcement:

"The situation is unchanged. We propose to continue our fight for Justice Douglas."

Senator McGrath, at his press conference, said the convention might end Wednesday night, despite the fact it is scheduled to go through Thursday. He said the controlling factor will be the time it takes to discuss the platform and the number of men placed in nomination for Vice-President.

"Will President Truman express a preference for Vice-President?" Senator McGrath was asked.

"I would rather say that up to now he has not expressed a preference," Senator McGrath said.

All Senator McGrath would say about Justice Douglas was that the jurist had asked him some time ago to use influence against a Vice-Presidential boom. Senator McGrath told reporters he would not do that, any more than he would use his influence to get someone to place Justice Douglas or anyone else in nomination.

Herald Tribune

Doubts Douglas Proposal

"I don't think Justice Douglas will be placed in nomination unless he consents," Senator McGrath said.

New York, N.Y.

However, Edward J. Flynn, National Committeeman from New York, said to reporters: "I'd bet a dollar that if anybody could talk Douglas into taking it, the convention would nominate him." That also was prior to the announcement from Oregon.

Many names figured in the Vice-Presidential talk.

7-11-48

Clinton P. Anderson, former Secretary of Agriculture, was reported to have told friends that President Truman told him a day or so ago that he favored three men. They were Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts; Eenator Scott W. Lucas, of Illinois, and Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming.

Sun.

Other names mentioned for the job included Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky; Senator Millard F. Tydings, of Maryland: Governor Mon C. Wallgren, of Washington; Governor William Preston Lane of Maryland and Robert C. Wagner jr., son of the senior Senator from New York.

Southerners Set To Choose Leader Today

Convention Requested To Leave Civil Rights Legislation To State

Mon. 7-12-48

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — A rebel band of southern Democrats threatened Sunday night to run a candidate of their cwn in the November presidential election.

Shouting opposition to President Truman's civil rights program, the southerners also called on the Democratic national convention to adopt platform leaving civil rights legislation to the states.

But their meeting broke up without naming any standard-bearer — either to oppose Mr. Truman for the Democratic nomination, as a protest gesture, or to run against the President, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Henry A. Wallace in November.

To Name Man

Marion Rushton, Democratic national committeeman from Alabama, said a committee now at work would pick a Dixie candidate within the next 24 or 36 hours. The Advertiser

And Arkansas Governor Ben Laney told the Southerners they would be called together again before the convention opens at 10:30 a.m., EST, Monday.

James Roosevelt, son of the late President and a leader in the California Democratic delegation, attended the meeting but took no active part. He said he was there "as an observer."

Roosevelt sat with Senator Olin Johnston of South Carolina, a leader in the recent anti-Truman drive. Montgomery, Ala.

Johnston, like Roosevelt, supported Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the nomination until Eisenhower emphatically withdrew. Mon. 7-12-48

After Sunday night's session Governor Laney told reporters that some of the Southern delegations "may walk out" when, as they and everyone else expects, President Truman is nominated. He said it is undecided whether the Arkansas delegation may or may not quit the convention.

Wild Cheers

Meeting in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, the Southerners responded with rebel yells of approval when Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina said they should unite behind a candidate of their own.

"We must defeat any man who has attempted to stab the South in the back as has Harry S. Truman," Thurmond told a protest meeting attended by about 400 persons in the Banjamin Franklin Hotel.

Senator John McClellan, of Arkansas, said national convention delegates from at least 12 states south of the Mason-Dixon Line were among those attending. Dixie leaders conceded that Mr. Truman's first ballot nomination can not prevented. But they went ahead with the meeting as a demonstration against the president's civil rights program, which they are bitterly opposed to including in the party's 1948 platform. The Advertiser

Gov. Ben Laney, of Arkansas, presiding, said the caucus was called to "register our protests."

Amid cheers and stamping of feet, Laney declared:

"We are a States' Rights group.

"We do not come here with any abuse. We come regretting that such a meeting is necessary."

From somewhere in the crowd came the shout: "But it is necessary." Montgomery, Ala.

Charles Sheppard, an alternate delegate from Saint Augustine, Fla., told the caucus he was "in sympathy with everything Gov. Laney said." Mon.

J. O. Emmerich, of Mississippi, was elected secretary of the caucus. 7-12-48

The Southerners approved a resolution calling for a platform leaving enactment of any civil rights legislation to the states.

Specifically, it recommended the following plank:

"The Democratic party reaffirms and pledges strict adherence to those fundamental principles of constitutional government laid down by Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the party, private initiative.

"And the party declares that the several states shall exercise, free from federal interference or encroachment by legislation, directive or otherwise, all the rights and powers reserved to them by the Constitution, among which is the power to provide by law for the qualifications of electors, conduct of elections, regulation of employment practices, segregation, and to define crimes committed within their borders and prescribe penalties therefore."

... The resolution pledges Southern members of the platform committee to work for adoption of this pank by the committee itself.

If they should fail within the committee, the Southerners are directed to file a minority report bringing the dispute to the convention floor. 7-12-48

Signs Of Democratic Virility

BY ERNEST K. LINDLEY

WHEN ITS NATIONAL CONVENTION OPENED, the Democratic party seemed to be afflicted with defeatism, disintegration and all the ailments of old age. As it unfolded, many signs of virility appeared. Among these were: Sun. 7-18-48

1. The excellent speeches of a number of younger Democrats, such as James Roosevelt and Helen Gahagan Douglas. If the speeches which were well written but not so well delivered are added, the score of the Democratic convention rises far above that of the Republican convention. There were only two good major speeches at the Republican convention: Hoover's and Dewey's. There were a few good shorter speeches, such as Sen. Baldwin's and Gov. Warren's brief acceptance of the vice presidential nomination. In both conventions, the sententious platitudes of the ordinary run of politicians were plentiful. But in freshness, forward thought, and sincerity in talking of public affairs, the speakers at the Democratic convention registered many more points than those at the Republican convention.

2. Recognition that we live in the age of nuclear fission. Atomic energy is not mentioned in the Republican platform. It evoked two planks in the Democratic platform. It was scarcely mentioned at the Republican convention. It was frequently alluded to in the major Democratic speeches. Birmingham, Ala.

Civil Rights Fight

3. THE FIGHT OVER CIVIL RIGHTS. It was ironic that the convention managers close to Truman exerted their influence in behalf of the so-called compromise approved in the resolutions committee. This compromise was more favorable to civil rights than the 1944 platform of the party, and the efforts of the Southern states to soften it and to add a states' rights plank was beaten, three to one. But then the stronger plank, advocated by the Americans for Democratic Action, was written into the platform by an open vote in full convention. To obtain this ringing endorsement of Truman's stand on civil rights, the rebels had to defeat the Truman managers, who were willing to meet the South part-way in the hope of saving electoral votes for the national ticket. The Northern city "bosses" fell into line. They dared not vote for anything but the strongest civil rights plank offered. But they were not in any way responsible for the initiative taken by the ADA liberals. They simply fell in line behind more aggressive leadership.

5. President Truman's fighting speech and audacity in calling Congress into special session. The convention saw a new Truman—not merely a nice, friendly man but a scrapper. His familiar remark to his friends, "I am not a quitter," took on a different meaning. He left the feeling that, even though he is the underdog in this campaign, he has enough energy and courage to make a good fight.

WhiteHouse Draft Reported Sent to Conveniton, but Committee Avoids Issue

Sat. 7-10-48

By David McConnell

PHILADELPHIA, July 9.—Senator J. Howard McGrath, of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, called today on the Resolutions Committee for the Democratic National Convention to indorse President Truman's civil rights program in the 1948 party platform.

Amid reports that a proposed plank has been drafted at the White House and sent here for consideration, members of the committee continued during day-long public hearings studiously to avoid any questioning of proponents of a strong plank.

Privately it was predicted that such committee members as Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey jr., of Minneapolis, would insist on a plank with bite to it. The Democratic candidate for the Senate in Minnesota this year, Mayor Humphrey favors the President's proposal to eliminate the poll tax, pass an anti-lynch law and anti-Jim Crow legislation, as well as a fair employment act. 7-10-48

If Northern members succeed in pushing through a strong civil rights plank, it was freely predicted that Southern committee members would file a minority report and seek to throw the issue before the convention when it opens Monday. If a weak plank is put forth, committee members such as Mayor Humphrey, former Governor Maurice Tobin, of Massachusetts, and former Senator Hugh B. Mitchell, of Washington, would have to voice minority protests to protect their standings in home communities.

Mr. McGrath touched off the simmering North-South dispute over civil rights at a press conference this afternoon when he replied to questions that he would like to see President Truman's program included in the platform.

Doesn't Expect Walk-Out

Asked if he felt Mississippi would walk out on the convention if a strong plank were included, the National Chairman asserted: "I don't expect Mississippi to walk out. I don't expect any state to walk out." Herald Tribune

He added that he expected "to get a platform the Southerners will not walk out on," and expressed hope that the final draft would be one meeting with general approval. New York, N.Y.

While the civil rights question was kept well underground by the eighteen members of the committee, the lengthy hearings today heard demands that the 1948 platform include a plank calling for modification of the American arms embargo so that military supplies could be shipped to Israel. Sat.

Judge Louis E. Levinthal, of the Philadelphia Common Pleas Court and former president of the Zionist Organization of America, appeared to request the Democrats to stand for de jure recognition of Israel. He called for modification of the arms embargo on grounds that the Arabs are aggressors in the current fighting in Israel, while the Jews deserve aid as defenders. 7-10-48

Cites "Traditional Policy"

He asked the Democrats in their platform to reaffirm the party's "traditional policy" by declaring support of Israel in taking "its rightful place in the United Nations and in safeguarding its political independence and territorial integrity within the boundaries defined by the U. N. decision of Nov. 29, 1947."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, appeared before the committee to denounce the Republican-controlled 80th Congress and assert, "I coud be arrested for what I thing of the last session of Congress."

Mr. Green, who has declined to address the convention when it opens Monday, opened a half-hour statement with a denunciation of the Taft-Hartley act and, under questioning by committee members, asserted that he feared the Republicans intended to strengthen the "anti-labor" portions of the act if they win control of Congress again in November. 7-10-48

Convention Requested To Leave Civil Rights Legislation To State

Mon. 7-12-48

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — A rebel band of southern Democrats threatened Sunday night to run a candidate of their cwn in the November presidential election.

Shouting opposition to President Truman's civil rights program, the southerners also called on the Democratic national convention to adopt platform leaving civil rights legislation to the states.

But their meeting broke up without naming any standard-bearer — either to oppose Mr. Truman for the Democratic nomination, as a protest gesture, or to run against the President, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Henry A. Wallace in November.

To Name Man

Marion Rushton, Democratic national committeeman from Alabama, said a committee now at work would pick a Dixie candidate within the next 24 or 36 hours. The Advertiser

And Arkansas Governor Ben Laney told the Southerners they would be called together again before the convention opens at 10:30 a.m., EST, Monday.

James Roosevelt, son of the late President and a leader in the California Democratic delegation, attended the meeting but took no active part. He said he was there "as an observer."

Roosevelt sat with Senator Olin Johnston of South Carolina, a leader in the recent anti-Truman drive. Montgomery, Ala.

Johnston, like Roosevelt, supported Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the nomination until Eisenhower emphatically withdrew. Mon. 7-12-48

After Sunday night's session Governor Laney told reporters that some of the Southern delegations "may walk out" when, as they and everyone else expects, President Truman is nominated. He said it is undecided whether the Arkansas delegation may or may not quit the convention.

Wild Cheers

Meeting in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, the Southerners responded with rebel yells of approval when Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina said they should unite behind a candidate of their own.

"We must defeat any man who has attempted to stab the South in the back as has Harry S. Truman," Thurmond told a protest meeting attended by about 400 persons in the Banjamin Franklin Hotel.

Senator John McClellan, of Arkansas, said national convention delegates from at least 12 states south of the Mason-Dixon Line were among those attending. Dixie leaders conceded that Mr. Truman's first ballot nomination can not prevented. But they went ahead with the meeting as a demonstration against the president's civil rights program, which they are bitterly opposed to including in the party's 1948 platform. The Advertiser

Gov. Ben Laney, of Arkansas, presiding, said the caucus was called to "register our protests."

Amid cheers and stamping of feet, Laney declared:

"We are a States' Rights group.

"We do not come here with any abuse. We come regretting that such a meeting is necessary."

From somewhere in the crowd came the shout: "But it is necessary." Montgomery, Ala.

Charles Sheppard, an alternate delegate from Saint Augustine, Fla., told the caucus he was "in sympathy with everything Gov. Laney said." Mon.

J. O. Emmerich, of Mississippi, was elected secretary of the caucus. 7-12-48

The Southerners approved a resolution calling for a platform leaving enactment of any civil rights legislation to the states.

Specifically, it recommended the following plank:

"The Democratic party reaffirms and pledges strict adherence to those fundamental principles of constitutional government laid down by Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the party, private initiative.

"And the party declares that the several states shall exercise, free from federal interference or encroachment by legislation, directive or otherwise, all the rights and powers reserved to them by the Constitution, among which is the power to provide by law for the qualifications of electors, conduct of elections, regulation of employment practices, segregation, and to define crimes committed within their borders and prescribe penalties therefore."

... The resolution pledges Southern members of the platform committee to work for adoption of this pank by the committee itself.

If they should fail within the committee, the Southerners are directed to file a minority report bringing the dispute to the convention floor. 7-12-48

Signs Of Democratic Virility

BY ERNEST K. LINDLEY

WHEN ITS NATIONAL CONVENTION OPENED, the Democratic party seemed to be afflicted with defeatism, disintegration and all the ailments of old age. As it unfolded, many signs of virility appeared. Among these were: Sun. 7-18-48

1. The excellent speeches of a number of younger Democrats, such as James Roosevelt and Helen Gahagan Douglas. If the speeches which were well written but not so well delivered are added, the score of the Democratic convention rises far above that of the Republican convention. There were only two good major speeches at the Republican convention: Hoover's and Dewey's. There were a few good shorter speeches, such as Sen. Baldwin's and Gov. Warren's brief acceptance of the vice presidential nomination. In both conventions, the sententious platitudes of the ordinary run of politicians were plentiful. But in freshness, forward thought, and sincerity in talking of public affairs, the speakers at the Democratic convention registered many more points than those at the Republican convention.

2. Recognition that we live in the age of nuclear fission. Atomic energy is not mentioned in the Republican platform. It evoked two planks in the Democratic platform. It was scarcely mentioned at the Republican convention. It was frequently alluded to in the major Democratic speeches. Birmingham, Ala.

Civil Rights Fight

3. THE FIGHT OVER CIVIL RIGHTS. It was ironic that the convention managers close to Truman exerted their influence in behalf of the so-called compromise approved in the resolutions committee. This compromise was more favorable to civil rights than the 1944 platform of the party, and the efforts of the Southern states to soften it and to add a states' rights plank was beaten, three to one. But then the stronger plank, advocated by the Americans for Democratic Action, was written into the platform by an open vote in full convention. Asks Check or Inflation

Mr. Green also asked for a Democratic plank urging a strong voluntary program to check inflation by calling into consultation a "co-operating committee of business men, labor, agricultural and other groups to develop a joint plan."

Herald Tribune

He said the A. F. of L. favors strengthening the U. N. by abolishing the veto power of the five permanent members of the Security Council and substituting majority rule on all matters within the council's jurisdiction. Mr. Green also condemned universal military training in peace time as a "breeder of war," and called for "vigorous prosecution" of the European Recovery Program. He asked for a $1 minimum hourly wage and assailed Congress for cutting functions of the Department of Labor by its removal of the Conciliation Service, the Children's Bureau and administration of Federal Workmen's Compensation.

Leon Henderson, appearing as chairman of Americans for Democratic Action, told the committee his organization indorsed President Truman's requests for a strong civil rights plank. He asserted that Americans are turning toward recognition "of the evil or segregation and discrimination in our society."

"We condemn," he said, "the retrogression which has characterized the conduct of the 80th Congress with respect to civil liberties, the infringement of the political rights of labor unions, the revival of the old evil of the labor injunction, which has been accomplished in the Taft-Hartley law, and the unconstitutional assault on freedom of speech attempted in the Mundt-Nixon bill."

Ickes Speaks on Oil

During the morning session, Harold L. Ickes, former secretary of the Interior, told the committee that one platform plank should urge the Federal government to hold all tide lands and set up oil reserves to support educational institutions. He criticized the Republican plank, which urged restoring tideland oil properties to the states, as an "Achilles heel."

Herald Tribune

"It is utterly worthless to give property to people who don't need it," he said. "We ought to educate our children. We ought not to compete with Russia to see who can have the most illiterates."

A delegation of women headed by Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, of Pennsylvania, Republican leader, spoke for more than an hour urging a strong equal-rights plank.

Meanwhile, a tentative draft of a plank on atomic energy has been prepared by officials in Washington for prior approval by Senator Brien W. McMahon, Democrat, of Connecticut, and later by the Resolutions Committee. In preliminary form, it follows:

Sat

"Through the foresight and bold leadership of the Democratic Administration, atomic bombs were produced in time to shorten the war decisively and save tens of thousands of American lives.

"After the war the Democratic Administration and a Democratic Congress met the challenge of the revolutionary new discovery by passing the McMahon Act. Faithful to the American tradition, that act established efficient, nonpartisan civilian direction of our atomic energy program under conditions fostering private enterprises and free scientific inquiry; atomic weapons of improve design have been produced and successfully tested in effective collaboration with the armed forces thus maintainin gour pre-eminence in their manufacture and use; the development of atomic energy for peaceful purposes has greatly advanced; and the by-products of atomic energy have been made widely available for the benefit of science and industry.

"These achievements have been attained despite Republican efforts to deprive our atomic energy program of ssential funds and to inject partisan political considerations into the choice of men responsible for our atomic security.

New York, N.Y.

Baruch Proposals

"Sponsored and supported by the Democratic Administration, the Baruch proposals to the United Nations placed before the world a plan for the international control of atomic energy to prevent its use for destructive purposes and as a major step toward control and reduction of all armaments. These proposals attracted the support of the vast majority of nations of the world and have firmly established the moral leadership of the United States in the cause of peace.

"The Republican party asserts that in these times the occasion is piled high with difficulty and we must rise with the occasion. As our case is new, so we must think anew and act anew."

"The Democratic party alone has a record of thought and action equal to the occasion of atomic energy, equal to the determination of the American people that our nation shall use this new force to strengthen our security and to enrich the lives of men everywhere.

"We reaffirm the policy of the Democratic party:

Sat.

"To continue non-partisan, civilian administration of atomic energy.

7-10-48

"To promote the development of atomic energy for peaceful purposes through private enterprise and free scientific inquiry.

"To maintain the superiority of the United States in atomic weapons while continuing unremittingly the efforts in the United Nations to bring about the ultimate adoption of the Baruch proposals; and

"To lead the way to a program of reduction and eventful abolition of all armaments under effective, enforceable international safeguards."

Hearing Held On Protests Of Two Groups

The Record

Columbia, S.C.

Citizens Party, Negroes Out

Tues. 7-13-48

By HENRY CAUTHEN

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—The credentials committee of the Democratic National convention early this afternoon voted again to seat the delegates of the regular Democratic party in South Carolina.

The decision came after a long hearing at which two other groups from South Carolina vigorously sought to be seated. One was the body of delegates representing the Citizens Democratic party, headed by Dr. L. A. Fletcher, of Leesville, and the other was the Progressive (Negro) Democratic party's group of delegates.

Following the hearing, the credentials committee went into executive session, even pulling the curtains on the glass doors leading into the meeting room at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel.

The regulars, whose chairman is Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, heard themselves attacked as "illegal" and "not representative" of the majority in South Carolina. Then they read their own record. An hour and a half later, the committee voted to seat the regulars.

The hearing was one not without its tensions, including the refusal of Governor Thurmond as he completed his statement to answer a question by a Negro member of the credentials committee, George L. Vaughan, who is assistant secretary general of the state of Missouri.

Won't Answer

"I will answer you nothing," Thurmond declared and moved on to his seat.

The Record

Just prior to that, Thurmond, answering a question from a committee member as to what his position would be on the plea of A. J. Clement, Jr., of Charleston, representing the Progressive Democratic (Negro) party that the Progressives be given eight of South Carolina's twenty seats in the convention, had said:

"If they (the Progressives) are seated, we will walk out of this convention."

Columbia, S.C.

A few minutes later, Senator Olin D. Johnston, of South Carolina, a member of the committee, in answering a question put by Vaughan, the Negro member, said:

Tues. 7-13-48

"I have no doubt that other Southern delegations would not like that." Johnston had said that in the event the Negroes were given the proportional representation of eight seats South Carolina would caucus and "decide it."

With Mrs. Mary T. Norton, member of the National House of Representatives presiding, the committee first heard Dr. L. A. Fletcher, of Leesville, S. C., urge the seating of his delegates of the Citizens Democratic party of South Carolina.

Says Group Has Support

Dr. Fletcher told the committee that his group had the support of church and labor segments of the South Carolina population.

"South Carolina stands today at a crossroads. The question is who will tell who what to do."

He said his group was contesting the seating of the regular Democratic group on two grounds: (1) That the regulars are an all-white group and (2) That they have thrown at us a thought-control voting oath, in which we are compelled to support a segregation.

"We stand here today and say they don't represent the true sentiment in South Carolina" Fletcher said.

The Record

Fletcher said the regular delegation was illegally constituted and at this moment facing court action in South Carolina.

He was followed by David Baker, of Columbia, whose appeal to the committee for the seating of the citizens delegation was along the same lines.

Columbia, S.C.

"We claim the regulars have bolted the party by its actions," he said, and went on to maintain that his group represented the rural Democrats of the state. He said "reactionaries" rule politics in South Carolina.

Tues.

Then, with many Negroes present, and sitting on one side of the room, came the petition of the Progressive (Negro) Democrats, presented by A. J. Clement, Jr., of Charleston, who had been the keynoter at the Progressives' state convention in Columbia.

7-13-48

Want To Be Regulars

"We have the highest desire to be regular Democrats, but they have denied this to us," Clement said.

He then outlined his party's plea for "proportional representation on South Carolina's delegation—eight of the twenty seats in the convention.

Clement then went into the "charges" his party has against the regular Democrats.

First, he told the committee that the regulars' delegates had been elected illegally. Then he said the regulars do not, in fact, represent a majority of the people of South Carolina. He added here that "our delegates here are backed by our people," apparently meaning the Negro people of the nation, since he pointed to Negro strength in "key" states.

Clement then said his party had followed the "pattern" of the national party in holding precinct meetings, county conventions and the state convention. He reminded the committee that at Chicago four years ago the national party had told the Progressives to form an organization meeting the requirements of the national party's pattern.

7-13-48

He then cited this new adherence to pattern, and the Waring court decree, followed by its affirmation by higher courts.

Then Clements charged that officers of the regulars had "brazenly" gotten around the new law in their rules of 1948. He said a majority of the white persons in South Carolina do not favor this situation.

Quotes Waring

Senator Johnston, Clement said, had "erroneously" told the national committee that Negroes can vote in South Carolina. He spoke of "court-decision-evaders." And quoted from the Waring opinion.

Answering questions of committeemen, he said thirty-seven counties were represented at the Progressives' state convention. Answering another question' he said his party was open to all races.

Here Senator Johnston sought to show that the Progressives were in the position of actually being another party, seeking to get into the Democrtaic party.

Clement admitted his party had entered a candidate for the Senate against Senator Johnson, but declared that only as his party now functions could it function at all, since the regulars will not accept Negroes as members.

John McCray, of Columbia, editor of the Lighthouse and Informer, then spoke for the Progressives, citing the Waring court opinion as being "in our favor." He read from the regulars' rules their requirements for membership in the party and voting.

The Record

States Case

It was then that Governor Thurmond rose to state the case of the regulars. He read from the records on the party to show it represented the whole state, had been duly formed and administered from precinct meetings on up through all the required processes.

"No state in the union has been truer to the Democratic party than has South Carolina." he declared.

"Now regularly-elected delegates constitute the real representatives of the people of the state," he added.

Columbia, S.C.

Replying to Dr. Fletcher's and Mr. Baker's contentions that the citizens' Democratic party really represents the church and labor groups of the state, Thurmond said "this is mere poppycock."

Tues.

"Nobody in South Carolina contested the delegates elected to this convention," he told the committee. "We feel we are the proper delegates.

7-13-48

As to the Waring decision, Thurmond said all the issues in that case have not yet been settled. "We are following the decision of the court," he testified.

Would Walk Out

Just here Thurmond answering a question on the Progressives' plea for eight seats, said South Carolina would walk out if the eight Negroes were seated. Later, answering questions of a Negro reporter, he said, "I would recommend that we walk out if such would be the result—that is, if the Negroes were seated."

Senator Johnson rose here and pointed to the traditional recognition of the delegates of the regulars from South Carolina year in and year out. Johnston quetsioned the whole validity of the pro rata idea of the Progressives.

"Can we say that in New York so many seats shall go to the Italians" he asked.

Tues.

Johnston then defined the responsibility of the credentials committee in this situation. "It is the committee's duty to pass on the credentials — and nothing else. All else is not relevant or within the scope of this committee," he declared.

7-13-48

The meeting was held on the nineteenth floor of the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, as nearby rooms buzzed with a meeting of the platform committee and a full dress press conference held by Chairman Howard McGrath of the national committee.

Here was South Carolina, high above this old city, in a swank hotal, fighting it out over an old issue. It was the old fight all over again in new surroundings—and before a new jury.

The Negro press was heavily represented by reporters and cameramen. Two delegates from Hawaii were spectators.

A Break In the Wave Of Southern Revolt

34D

The Courier-Journal

IT LOOKS now as if the do-or-die Southern rebellion against the leadership of the Democratic Party has been stopped in its tracks. Texas Democrats have voted to go along with the party's nominee whoever he is, meaning whether he is HARRY S. TRUMAN or anybody else. This action follows a similar course taken last week by the North Carolina Democratic convention.

Louisville, Ky.

Here is a change in the pattern of suicidal intent, which appeared a few months ago as likely to spread over the Solid South. It is the acceptance of a new pattern, based on determination to fight out the issue of civil rights legislation, as well as the issue of nominating Mr. TRUMAN, within the party itself.

These two important States thus have answered the hotheads of Mississippi, South Carolina, Arkansas and Alabama, who talk of throwing their electoral votes against the old party's ticket if they lose in Philadelphia.

Thurs. 5-27-48

Of course, the Texas and North Carolina delegations, like others from the old Confederate States, will go to the national convention with their fighting clothes on. They will demand a plank declaring for States' Rights and against the President's proposal of laws against lynching, poll taxes, discrimination in jobs and segregation in public carriers. They probably will vote for other nominees than TRUMAN, although they are not instructed to do so. At least in the case of Texas, they will work to restore the old rule for two-thirds majority for nominations, which went out in 1936. But it will be a fight among Democrats.

It means a decision to stick with the party, which after all is the only decision for and by Democrats that has any meaning. On the face of their declarations, the so-called States' Rights Democrats who met May 10 in Jackson, Mississippi, were obviously groping for a solution that wasn't there. They insisted on staying in the traditional party while announcing an intention of getting out of it, nominating their own candidates and opposing the national Democratic ticket, if the latter includes President TRUMAN or anybody with a like mind on civil rights. It is plain that they cannot do both. They must be either Democrats or followers of a fourth party. They would commit a moral fraud by binding their electors to vote against Democratic candidates in the electoral college; and at that they could not absolve themselves of the charge of bolting.

North Carolina and Texas followed the more courageous course. They accepted a fight on a point of principle (both showing that they dislike the civil-rights proposal as much as Mississippians and South Carolinians). But they refused to rig the fight in advance by entering the combat only on their own terms. As Democrats, the convention members decided to remain Democrats, rather than cling to the title while repudiating its obligations.

Tennessee Democrats Reject Sharp Slap At President

Montgomery, Ala. Fri. 4-16-48

NASHVILLE, TENN. —(AP)— The Tennessee State Democratic Convention rejected a sharply-worded anti-Truman resolution Thursday in favor of a milder one leaving delegates to the national convention in Philadelphia uninstructed on the presidential nomination.

4-16-48

The convention, meeting in musty old Ryman Auditorium here, adopted the resolution on a voice vote after an hour of debate. The resolution instructs the delegation of 40 to vote as a unit at Philadelphia.

The action of the convention, which was closely divided on the anti-Truman measure, was a defeat for Shelby County (Memphis) Democratic Leader E. H. Crump, whose county delegation of more than 400 supported it.

The convention, however, selected Crump—who has announced his opposition to Truman both in the national convention and the general election—as one of 16 delegates at large to the July 12 national confab.

The anti-Truman resolution, presented by Roane Waring of Memphis, a former national commander of the American Legion, as the minority report of four members of a 10-man resolutions committee. The resolution would have pledged delegates against Truman in the convention and pledged the party's presidential electors to vote against him.

It would have put the state party on record as saying "we shall never cast our votes for him, but, on the contrary, will vote for a true Democrat representing the best interests of the people of Tennessee, the South and the nation."

The Advertiser

Waring, who as resolutions committee chairman announced both the majority and minority reports, insisted on adoption of the minority resolution after attacking the President and his 10-point civil rights program.

He declared the national party head "does not represent the true Democratic Party" and that he had "forfeited" his right for consideration as a Democrat. "For such a man I have the most supreme contempt," Waring added.

The convention went on record opposing Mr. Truman's civil rights program and the proposed FEPC bill. It pledged the state's delegation to fight for restoration of the two-thirds rule.

Tennessee's 40 delegates at Philadelphia will cast a total of 28 votes.

Walkout Weakness

Thurs

From the beginning it was evident that the movement in behalf of obtaining all-out anti-Truman and conditional convention walkout pledges from Democratic delegate and elector candidates in Alabama was very poorly thought out. That realization now seems to be broadening steadily. It will not be surprising if the whole movement ends in collapse.

Many candidates refused to give such pledges from the start. Some are now withdrawing them, which they can do in good faith so long as the voters to whom they are responsible are fully informed of their changed positions. It is probable that there will be more withdrawals as the weakness of the pledge movement becomes increasingly manifest.

Birmingham, Ala

Advocates of this anti-Truman program never did make clear to the people just what they had in mind themselves. Many apparently were not themselves clear. Was Mr. Truman to be opposed as against any other candidate, Democratic or Republican?

Was opposition to the civil rights proposals of the president to be best served by a course which might take many Southerners out of the Democratic Party and into the Republican Party?

4-22-48

In the first heat of opposition to the Truman proposals and in the growing criticism which the president had evoked in other respects, many were swift and ardent to center on an extremist plan. Some had their own special purposes. Some long have been deeply opposed to the general spirit and to many of the endeavors which have marked the national administration under Democratic leadership for the last 15 years. This seemed to some of these the great opportunity to gain control of party leadership in some of our Southern states.

* * *

The hope of nominating Gen. Eisenhower as the Democratic presidential candidate was put at the head of this revolt movement. But Gen. Eisenhower has refused to respond. There still seems little chance that he will. Moreover, many are now wondering just what his views are on the Truman civil rights proposals.

The News

Questions began piling up. Suppose the choice was between Truman and Douglas in the Democratic convention, for example. Would opponents of the civil rights proposals prefer Douglas to Truman on this count? Suppose the choice in the national election was between Truman and Dewey. Or Truman and Taft. Would Mr. Truman be the worst conceivable choice?

Birmingham, Ala

Many Southern Democrats, strongly opposed to the civil rights program advanced by the president, nevertheless have realized that for them he would be preferable over other conceivable choices.

Thurs.

Besides, it has become plainer that the chances of blocking the nomination of the president are decreasing. Sentiment in his behalf seems to be now somewhat on the upswing again.

4-22-48

The ineffectiveness of scattered "walkouts" is obvious. There won't be solid walkouts by state delegations. There may be none at all.

Two Borderline Dixie Men To Direct Democratic Parley

Montgomery, Ala.

PHILADELPHIA.—Two borderline Southerners were chosen Thursday to direct the Democratic national convention.

But Senator J. Howard McGrath, the party's national chairman, insisted the selections were not desgned to appease Dixie Democrats revolting against President Trumn's civil rights program.

The 16-member executive committee of the Democratic National Committe chose Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky as keynoter or temporary chairman and Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, for the permanent chairmanship.

5-21-48

A short time later, Barkley said in Washington, "I appreciate the honor, which comes to me wholly unexpected. I'll do the best job I can."

Rayburn said he considers it "a high honor, and I shall accept the post."

McGrath termed Barkley and Rayburn "very liberal men who supported in every way the program of President Roosevelt and Truman. Recognition is due both for long and valiant service to the Democratic Party."

Barkley has taken no stand on the controversial civil rights program but in his capacity as minority leader in the Senate has been a staunch supporter of the administration.

He was keynoter of the 1932 and 1936 conventions, served as permanent chairman of the 1940 conclave and in 1944 placed President Roosevelt's name in nomination.

Rayburn, former speaker of the House and now minority leader of that body, has come out against the civil rights program but has not been vigorous in his objections. He has had no previous high convention post.

McGrath came from the two-hour meeting to speak with newsmen. He said Mr. Truman's election prospects were not discussed at the meeting but that the committee members had talked them over privately.

Regarding the President's chances of re-election, McGrath said "I am the greatest optimist in the United States when it comes to that."

1944 PLANK HELD 'NOT ACCEPTABLE'

The Times-Picayune
New Orleans, La.

'It Goes Too Far,' Says Governor Wright

Tues. 7-13-48

BY PAUL WOOTON
(The Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

Philadelphia, June 12.—In the hope of placating the South the platform committee is said to be bringing out a civil rights plank that goes no further than did that in the 1944 platform.

This brought the immediate rejoinder from Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi that whatever mistakes the long-suffering South may have made in the past in regard to this matter it intends no longer to temporize with it.

"The 1944 plank will not be acceptable," Gov. Wright declared. "It went too far then and it goes too far now."

To create the impression that the South is acquiescing in a proposal that would undermine the sovereignty of the state, he is convinced, is unprincipled, even if it is intended only as a gesture.

Sillers' Proposal

If questions of civil rights could be discussed on their merits at this convention, it would be difficult to establish, it is pointed out, that the proposed platform plank, drafted by Walter Sillers of Mississippi is not in accord with the constitution.

The Sillers' plank, which was laid before the Southern caucus, reads as follows: "The several states shall exercise free from federal interference or encroachment by legislation, directive or otherwise, all the rights and powers reserved to them by the constitution, among which is the power to provide by law for the qualifications of electors, conduct of elections, regulation of employment practices, segregation, and define crimes committed within their borders and prescribe penalties therefor."

Contrasted with the Sillers' proposal is the plank advocated by Leon Henderson, head of the organization known as Americans for Democratic Action.

ADA for Strong FEPC

That plank says these are the necessary steps to achieve the goal of maximum liberty:

A. Abolition of the poll tax through federal and state laws.

B. The enactment of a strong federal fair employment practices act. The Times Picayune

C. The enactment of a federal anti-lynching law. 7-13-48

D. Vigorous enforcement of existing civil rights legislation.

E. Abolition of segregation and discrimination based on race, color or creed in the federal service and in the armed forces.

F. Maintenance of fair procedures and legal safeguards in loyalty investigations in the federal government, and abolition of the present House un-American activities committee as a proved threat to freedom of political opinion. New Orleans, La.

G. Rejection of proposals to outlaw any political party however abhorrent its activities may be. We favor systematic and constitutional procedures to reveal the source of funds and sponsorship of all political groups without discrimination.

Free Trade Unions

H. Reaffirmation of the rights of free trade unions proclaimed in the Wagner act and repeal of punitive legislation against labor unions, including the Taft-Hartley law. The Times Picayune

The plank that will be evolved by the convention may not go as far as does Mr. Henderson, but it will bear no resemblance to that of Mr. Sillers. New Orleans La.

The fundamental objection being made by Southerners to the Henderson plan is that it is a plan for circumventing the constitution. If the constitutional conditions as to the rights of the states have become outmoded, the procedures provided for amendment should be put in motion. Tues.

The reason that is not undertaken is because Mr. Henderson and those who think like him know that the individual states are not ready to vote away their sovereignty. As a consequence, Mr. Henderson proposes to take away those rights by majority votes in Congress, where political expediency would influence the vote. 7-13-48

Tennessee Joins Campaign To Pit Arkansan Against Truman As Protest

Memphis, Tenn.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—The states' rights "revolt" became a full-fledged Truman states' rights protest movement Monday as headquarters opened for Gov. Laney of Arkansas, the group's candidate for President. Tues. 7-13-48

By Monday night, indications were that Governor Laney, who has played a leading part in the movement since its birth last January, would receive close to 200 votes on the first ballot.

Tennessee Backs Laney

Tennessee joined the parade by pledging its 28 votes to the states' rights candidate on the first ballot "at least."

Other votes will come from Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina, with a smattering from Texas, Louisiana, Florida and other Southern states. Tues.

Although headquarters was opened in the Betsy Ross Room of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel with Deane Allen, Little Rock publicity man, in charge and pretty girls much in evidence, the leaders of the movement still were not attempting to fool themselves into believing Governor Laney can win the nomination. It becomes more obvious each hour that President Truman will win the nomination for a try at another term in the White House. 7-13-48

"Ours is a protest candidate and a protest vote," Oliver Emmerich, director of the states' rights group, said Monday night. "We are going to make a strong protest against President Truman and the policies he has advocated. We are sure our candidate will get a surprisingly large vote but we are not making any victory claims."

Thurmond Is Peeved

The Commercial Appeal

Governor Laney emerged as the presidential choice of the Southerners at 1:30 Monday morning after an hour-long meeting of the committee named to pick a candidate. Taking part in the meeting were Governor Laney, Governor Wright of Mississippi and Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, along with members of the committee. Memphis, Tenn.

Reports seeping out of the meeting were that Governor Thurmond was "burned up" because he was by-passed in favor of Governor Laney. Reports were that members of the Selection Committee felt Governor Laney had been so closely identified with the movement that he would serve as a ready rallying point for those delegates who do not want President Truman. Tues. 7-13-48

No one seems to be interested in the candidacy of Senator Claude (Red) Pepper of Florida, who Sunday night became the willing candidate of the Congress for Industrial Organization, or Leon Henderson, former Office of Price Administration head and now chairman of the Americans for Democratic Action.

Reports were that the committee offered to make Governor Thurmond its vice presidential candidate, but that he promptly turned the offer down. The result was that the group tentatively agreed not to offer a vice presidential candidate but to concentrate its efforts behind Governor Laney.

However, the South Carolina delegation, at Governor Thurmond's own suggestion, agreed to "go along" with other Southern delegations in supporting Governor Laney.

Governor Thurmond said he would be "glad" to release the delegates from their pledges to him.

Meanwhile the fight to get a straightforward states rights plank into the party platform continued to share limelight with the fight against President Truman.

The first convention session was hardly underway before Cecil Sims, Nashville attorney and principal Tennessee advocate for a strong states rights plank, received word that the Platform Subcommittee was planning to hold a "secret" meeting at an address on Rittenhouse Square. Mr. Sims immediately turned his seat over to his alternate and "lit out" for the secret meeting. Tues.

A meeting of the full Platform Committee was scheduled for 4 Monday afternoon on the 18th floor of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, but after hundreds of delegates and reporters had sat sweltering for a half hour, the word was passed along that the meeting had been postponed until 10 a.m. Tuesday. There was no explanation for the postponement, although it was reported that the committeel eaders were loath to meet the states rights question head-on, and still were hoping to work out a compromise acceptable to both the Southern states rights group and the factions demanding a detailed spelling out of President Truman's civil rights program. 7-13-48

McClellan Due to Speak

Mr. Sims ~~and~~ Senator John McClellan of Arkansas were on hand for the meeting, prepared to offer the states rightsp lank and fight vigorously for its adoption.

Mr. Sims has been designated by the Southern group to present the states rightsp lank as a minority report when the platform cocmes up on the convention floor for adoption. This is expected to precipitate about the hottest fight of the entire convention.

Senator McClellan is expected to make the speech nominating Governor Laney. He is expected to hold his speech to about 10 minutest and devote practically all of it to a strong, straightforward presentation of the South's states rights stand in an effort to get across to the country that the South's fight is not based on an antinegro feeling.

Talk of Southern delegates taking a walk when they lose their fight to get a state's rights plank in the platform was being soft pedaled Monday. But leaders of the movement still called attention to the fact that instructions given Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina delegations made it imperative for them to walk out when the convention turns down their state's rights proposal.

The Commercial Appeal

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—(AP)—Chairman W. H. Talbot of Louisiana's delegation to the Democratic National Convention said Monday "we want to see the party platform" before deciding how to vote for a presidential nominatee.

"After the platform comes out, I'll take the matter up with the delegation," Talbot said. "If the platform is not satisfactory we may go for Governor Laney."

Memphis, Tenn.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—(AP)—The Virginia delegation to the Democratic Convention appeared Monday night to be lining up behind the presidential candidacy of Governor Laney of Arkansas, although there was no official action. Tues. 7-13-48

Governor William M. Tuck, delegation chairman, said it is "the natural assumption" that the Old Dominion's 26 votes will be cast for the Arkansas chief executive if he has substantial support from other Southern states.

Platform Makers Busy On Soft Worded Note To Southerners

Tues, 7-6-48

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—(SNS) — The 1948 Democratic platform which being worded for submission so delegates attending the Democratic National Convention here in Philadelphia, July 23, reveals that the Southerners' anger and indignation over President Harry S. Truman's civil rights program seems to be paying off dividends that will result in a compromise platform.

The boiling furor over the program had caused threats by the Southern wing of the party to walk out if a strong platform on civil rights was adopted. Truman supporters in responsible quarters have indicated that one or two concessions would be made towards meeting the Southerners' demands so as to have party solidarity in the forthcoming presidential race.

The platform writers are temporizing on the platform. They are vaguely wording the platform so that it will read little different from the 1944 Democratic plank, which Southerners have agreed would be acceptable to them.

Full hearings on the Democratic Platform begin in Philadelphia, Wednesday, July 7. It is possible that the group after hearing the arguments for a strong plank on the civil rights question will simply restate the 1944 aims which declared for racial and religious minorities the right to live, develop and vote equally with all citizens and share the rights guaranteed by the Constitution. Daily World

The Democrats will compromise on the "States Rights" issue. Southern Democrats through years of successful fighting of civil rights or racial issues, have based their opposition against such measure on the grounds that such programs intruded upon the sovereign rights and traditions of the individual states. These Democrats have argued the constitutionality of civil rights program and have used this strategy and technique to defeat them via the filibuster route.

No Second Georgia Delegation

The Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

By the end of the week President Harry S. Truman will have enough delegates pledged to him to give him the nomination.

That has a Georgia, and a Southern, impact.

It means first of all that by the week's end, or thereabouts, authority for the delegation will be taken from National Committeeman E. D. Rivers and assigned to the legally-constituted party committee headed by James Peters.

Tues.

It likely will be said they were never blocked. But they were.

There were two reasons for it. Mr. Rivers is the national committeeman and the directives go to the committeeman of each State in what is routine practice.

6-8-48

Also, there were those in the national party setup who wanted to hold on to the possibility of a second delegation headed by the national committeeman if such votes were needed to nominate Harry Truman.

Policy It needs to be said that at all times the minority of the national party committee was against such a policy. Those closest to Harry Truman were against it. Those who wanted it have never had any aid from Harry Truman with their plan. It was at all times a plan urged only by a minority in the national committee.

Once Truman has enough votes pledged to give him the nomination, the ground will be cut from beneath the feet of the minority faction which was urging that a second Georgia delegation be formed around National Committeeman Rivers. It will be unnecessary and the full authority soon will be in the hands of the Georgia committee, where it always has legally and properly belonged. Tues. 6-8-48

Delegates There are 1,234 votes in the Democratic convention. That means 618 are needed to nominate. President Truman last week was pledged the Southern delegation from Maryland, and the delegations from California, South Dakota and Massachusetts.

He needs only 21 more pledged votes to be assured of the nomination.

This week he is expected to gain 26 votes in Minnesota, 20 in Connecticut, 24 in Oklahoma, 12 in Colorado, six in the District of Columbia and 26 in Kentucky, after a likely first ballot in compliment to Kentucky's loyal Senator and Democratic stalwart, Alben Barkley. The Constitution

This will give him 93 votes above the necessary number. So, it safely may be assumed that he will, by the weekend, be sure of nomination. Other pledges will be added in the weeks ahead.

Only a declaration that he would not run would stop the nomination. Some have felt he might encounter much disappointment on his Western trip and would declare himself out. He has stirred up trouble in Nebraska, but otherwise his reception seems to be good. Gov. Donnelly, of Missouri, has been selected to put him in nomination, so again, we may be sure he will run.

Revolt Therefore, a bit earlier than had been anticipated, the Southern revolt may be written off. It had begun to dwindle anyhow, not because the South likes Harry Truman, since it does not. And not because of any lessening of the opposition to the President's proposals. There still is great anger because of them. Atlanta, Ga.

Two things doomed the revolt from the beginning.

Absentee The first was that it was in the control of politicians who are owned, with but few exceptions, by absentee landlords in the East who were bent on again trying to destroy the Democratic Party. Therefore, it never became a real Southern revolt, and was directionless, save in that it was anti-Truman.

Secondly, it was doomed by the fact that there was no place for the revolt to go. It is bad thinking which says that if we will some year vote the Republican ticket we will thereby set up a second party and make the national party seek us out. That is wishful thinking, and erroneous thinking. The Republicans can set up a party in the South, which they have never done, and many Southerners will join them. But just voting the Republican ticket, without a Republican party in the Southern States, is an empty, meaningless gesture, in so far as the future is concerned.

Therefore, even in the South, the revolt is dwindling. There will be opposition to Truman. But most of the Southern States properly will support the nominees of the party, including Mr. Truman. The Democrats who wish to remain Democrats must stay in the party and fight within it. If we ever lose the two-party system then indeed will the republic fall on evil days.

Sam Rayburn, of Texas, has been appointed permanent Chairman of the Democratic Convention at Philadelphia.

Sen. Barkley is a faithful, able man who has carried more burdens for the Democratic Party than any man in it. Former House Speaker Rayburn also is a burden carrier of many years' standing.

Atlanta, Ga.

Their appointment gives hope to the anti-Truman forces, who will be seeking all sorts of parliamentary rulings in an effort to harass the Truman organization.

Neither has been called to the White House in months.

The late Franklin Roosevelt used to call them almost daily. Contrary to reports, Roosevelt did want to hear the bad news along with the good.

Sat. 5-22-48

But, Harry Truman has ignored Rayburn for more than six months and Barkley almost as long. Both are hurt by it. Rayburn is angry. He also is burning with a blue flame about some of the changes made by the President, notably those in the Civilian Aviation Board.

They will dominate the convention.

Truman President Truman is going to make a swing to the West. It is a vote-getting trip. But Harry Truman is a smart observer. If he encounters disappointments, as he will, he might give serious consideration to finding some way to avoid running. This is not considered likely, as he will see mostly those who want him to run and he will not hear the whole story. Nevertheless, Washington conversations always get around to this possibility—that President Truman might come home very discouraged and seek to have Gen. Dwight Eisenhower or Gen. George Marshall run in his place. Sat. 5-22-48

At the White House the reporters who see the President often, share a mutual regard for him. They like him as a person. They think he has been badly handled and advised, but that he still has a chance to be elected. They think, though, this would require the best political management that could be organized from the best political craftsmen in the nation. And the Democrats can't get them.

Walk There are many former stalwarts in the party who are planning to take a walk. They cannot go against Truman, but they feel he has sold them down the river in his policy of trying to win Wall Street, or the group usually covered by that phrase, and still hold labor and the independents. Many others are going to vote the ticket, but will have little to say.

Typical of this sort of attitude is a story about which Washington laughs today. The Constitution

Trenchant Thurman Arnold was sitting with a group in a cocktail room when the GOP National Chairman, Carrol Reese, came by.

"Hello, Carroll, are you aiming to elect a Republican this year?" he asked.

Atlanta, Ga. Sat.

"Why, yes, we are, Thurman," he said, smiling happily.

"You fellows had better be careful. You might lose control of the executive if you do," cracked Arnold. 5-22-48

VP No one has come forward with any positive suggestion as to whom will be chosen as the Vice President. President Truman will have the choice. Presidents always have had the right of accepting or denying their VP associate on the ticket.

No one is seeking the position. It is likely that the trip West will produce a Vice Presidential choice. The proper selection from a State where votes are needed would help a lot. Sat.

The Southern revolt isn't taken too seriously. It has more of a nuisance value than anything else. If Harry Truman is to win he must win by carrying the big States, such as New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, and so on. If he carries them he can win without the Southern States. For example, Mr. Roosevelt would have won all four times if he had not received a single Southern State electoral vote. If he is to lose, the Southern defection can only serve to make the defeat more emphatic. 5-22-48

Meanwhile, the Republicans occupy the center of the stage with an embarrassing number of candidates. California's Warren, Michigan's Vandenberg and Massachusetts' Joe Martin are the ones most often mentioned as the nominee, with Sen. Vandenberg currently the most favored.

Can George Do It?

The News Birmingham Sat.

The anti-Truman Democrats of the South, still searching for an available candidate around whom to rally, appear now to be shifting attention to Sen. Walter F. George, of Georgia. Mississippi's Gov. Fielding L. Wright has proposed Sen. George as the man to offer at the convention and, if Truman is nominated, the man to receive anti-Truman electoral votes from the South. The idea is seconded by Sen. Johnston, of South Carolina.

Sat.

This suggestion reveals anew a fundemental element in the revolt. The rebellion did not start with a statement by President Truman based on a report of a committee. Its roots are much deeper. It is, at least in some of its aspects, anti-New Deal, anti-Roosevelt, anti-liberal, anti-progressive. The president's advocacy of federal legislation on some civil rights issues is used by many of the "revolters" as a peg on which to hang opposition to liberal policies of the national Democratic Party. 5-8-48

Sen. George has been a standard-bearer for Southern Democratic conservatism for many years. He was that when President Roosevelt made the ill-starred and ill-advised attempt to defeat him for reelection in 1938. He is still that.

Apparently the bolters are having difficulty finding a positive course. As the nominee of the Democratic Party, Sen. George is pretty much out of the question. It is doubtful if he could carry any states outside the South. He is now 70 years of age. With all of his abilities and good qualities and his reputation of never having lost a political race in 41 years of public life, he is not the liberal leader and thinker needed by the Democrats if they are to have a chance to succeed. Let it not be forgotten that the Democrats have never won the presidency since Civil War days except with a liberal candidate.

Sen. George, therefore, is a stopgap. He is a makeshift. He is somebody the revolters can put up, first in an effort to

If Harry Truman is to win he must win by carrying the big States, such as New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, and so on. If he carries them he can win without the Southern States. For example, Mr. Roosevelt would have won all four times if he had not received a single Southern State electoral vote. If he is to lose, the Southern defection can only serve to make the defeat more emphatic.

5-22-48

Meanwhile, the Republicans occupy the center of the stage with an embarrassing number of candidates. California's Warren, Michigan's Vandenberg and Massachusetts' Joe Martin are the ones most often mentioned as the nominee, with Sen. Vandenberg currently the most favored.

Can George Do It?

The News Birmingham Ala.

The anti-Truman Democrats of the South, still searching for an available candidate around whom to rally, appear now to be shifting attention to Sen. Walter F. George, of Georgia. Mississippi's Gov. Fielding L. Wright has proposed Sen. George as the man to offer at the convention and, if Truman is nominated, the man to receive anti-Truman electoral votes from the South. The idea is seconded by Sen. Johnston, of South Carolina.

Sat.

This suggestion reveals anew a fundemental element in the revolt. The rebellion did not start with a statement by President Truman based on a report of a committee. Its roots are much deeper. It is, at least in some of its aspects, anti-New Deal, anti-Roosevelt, anti-liberal, anti-progressive. The president's advocacy of federal legislation on some civil rights issues is used by many of the "revolters" as a peg on which to hang opposition to liberal policies of the national Democratic Party.

5-8-48

Sen. George has been a standard-bearer for Southern Democratic conservatism for many years. He was that when President Roosevelt made the ill-starred and ill-advised attempt to defeat him for reelection in 1938. He is still that.

Apparently the bolters are having difficulty finding a positive course. As the nominee of the Democratic Party, Sen. George is pretty much out of the question. It is doubtful if he could carry any states outside the South. He is now 70 years of age. With all of his abilities and good qualities and his reputation of never having lost a political race in 41 years of public life, he is not the liberal leader and thinker needed by the Democrats if they are to have a chance to succeed. Let it not be forgotten that the Democrats have never won the presidency since Civil War days except with a liberal candidate.

Sen. George, therefore, is a stopgap. He is a makeshift. He is somebody the revolters can put up, first in an effort to defeat the nomination of Truman and, second, in their plan to prevent a majority in the electoral college and thus throw the choice for president into the House of Representatives. The News

Incidentally, what the House would do is a subject for interesting speculation. The constitution says that in case of a failure of a majority of the electoral college to agree, the House is to act "immediately" in the selection of a president. That would imply that the present House of Representatives would choose, in that event, the next president. Birmingham, Ala.

Under the constitution, each state has only one vote in the House in such a contingency. In present House delegations, 29 states have Republican majorities, and two states, Montana and Utah, are evenly divided. This leaves Democrats only 17 states they could count on in the choice of a president. It is asking almost for a miracle to expect that enough Republican states would join any dissident Democratic ones to elect the latter's choice. And miracles don't happen often, if ever, in the political world.

The Democrats could not win, nationally, with Sen. George or a conservative like him. The movement to support him is a gesture of defiance that is doomed to failure. For if the South is to be heard in national Democratic circles, it cannot succeed by following a line contrary to the liberal principles of the party. George, in that respect, could be nothing more than a leader of a lost cause, a standard-bearer for forlorn hopes. Sat 5-8-48

Party Unity Is Sought In Civil Rights Fight; Wallace Danger Cited

4-16-48

By GEOFFREY BIRT
Alabama Journal Writer

ANNISTON, Ala. — Former Governor Chauncey Sparks Thursday made a call for unity in the Democratic party in Alabama to fight against the Truman so-called civil rights proposals in the National Convention at Philadelphia in July.

Criticizing recent acts by the State Democratic Executive Committee, he warned them they were in danger of "turning over the Democratic party in the State to pollywogs and mugwumps."

Sparks was speaking to the Kiwanis Club in Anniston. Alabama's ex-governor said he noticed that those men who were leading the campaign to get delegates to pledge themselves to bolting the convention were the same as "those pollywogs who bolted the party in 1928."

Asks Crusade

Sparks said that instead of deciding to bolt the convention if the civil rights program is written into the national platform—"before ever they get to Philadelphia—all Southern delegates should stand united in a crusade against the 'obnoxious proposals' and fight them as they were successfully fought in 1944. The

"They want me to tuck my tail between my legs and run when they whip me," said Sparks, "and I want to stay in that convention again and fight." Later he added: "If I lose, and only then, I will turn round and seek another course." Advertiser

Sparks saw something else he thought was sinister in the "bolt" move. Montgomery, Ala.

Sees Smoke Screen

He said he knew there were people in Alabama who are holding a smoke screen for Henry Wallace and asked, "Are we going to let that happen?" Fri.

Sparks also made this remark: "While you and I and other good Democrats are fighting a pillow fight among ourselves, there is someone else—and you know who I mean—who is walking in and taking charge of the political destinies of this State of Alabama. If you want that to happen then go on and make your delegates pledge themselves to bolt the convention. 4-16-48

THE PASSING THRONG
BY ATTICUS MULLIN

The Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

Traveling extensively over South Alebama in the last two weeks, I have been struck by the utter confusion the voters are in with the election just two weeks in the future. Tues.

The confusion, I find, is caused by lack of information on the part of the voters as to the stand taken by the various candidates for delegates at large to the Democratic National Convention and for Presidential elector. It is true that 21 candidates for Presidential elector have said they would not cast their vote for Truman in the electoral college. But the voters don't seem to have a list of these men. 4-20-48

The confusion relative to delegate at large is worse than it is for presidential elector. If things continue as they are now and the voters are not educated as to the stand of each candidate for delegate at large, the candidate for delegate whose name begins with the first letters of the alphabet will have all the advantage. Candidates for delegate at large will have their names placed on the ballot in alphabetical order. This will not only favor those whose names come early but will also work to the advantage of the most widely known candidates against those less well known in spite of the fact that the voters will not know on election day just how these better known candidates stand.

Effect of States Rights Group's Talk of Separate Convention Is Topic of Politicians

Wed 5-12-48

By JOHN N. POPHAM
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JACKSON, Miss., May 11—Politicians were busy today trying to evaluate the regional effect of the first convention of Southern Democrats who are openly hostile to the national administration and are threatening political reprisals.

Adopting the title of States Rights Democrats, they assembled in the City Auditorium here yesterday. After four hours of oratory they unanimously approved a resolution calling for a separate convention on July 17 if the Democratic National Convention opening on July 12 renominates President Truman or fails to repudiate his civil rights program.

Generally, feeling today was that the plan to call a separate convention for the avowed purpose of "taking appropriate action" had, in effect, set up the machinery for another party and the nomination of a Presidential candidate "acceptable to the South." Wed.

There were strong indications that this latest development would result in a reluctance on the part of most Southerners to join forces with the States Rights Democrats, largely because of the traditional sympathy of the South for the Democratic party. 5-12-48

There was no mistaking the sincerity and enthusiasm of the Mississippi, South Carolina and Alabama delegations despite Georgia's refusal to approve any action that would lead to a bolt. The political effects of the Tennessee, Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Florida delegations were minimized today. There was no floor space allotted to Kentucky at the convention and no delegates purporting to represent Virginia and North Carolina were present when the resolutions were voted upon. Wed

From enthusiastic and lukewarm groups alike it was apparent that President Truman was personally unpopular with all political shadings in the South. Every time Mr. Truman's name was mentioned with criticism the audience rose to its feet with cheers, stomps and old-fashioned rebel yells.

Three Governors, Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi, Ben T. Laney of Arkansas and J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, were the principal speakers. There was considerable discussion and praise today from all groups for the address of Governor Thurmond. His talk was being described as an excellent presentation of the historical viewpoint of the Southerner who subscribes to the segregation precept of equal but separate facilities for the races. 5-12-48

Revolt Pledge Doubt Is Growing

It seems plainly evident that doubt is growing—at least the expression of it is growing—in connection with the campaign to pledge in advance candidates for Democratic presidential elector and convention delegate. Birmingham, Ala. Perhaps there has been a much deeper and widespread doubt all along than many had anticipated. Perhaps there never was as much sentiment in favor of convention walk-out and anti-Truman pledges as advocates of such action have sought to make out. 5-13-48

The action of the Walker County Democratic Executive Committee in voting unanimously to condemn the resolution calling for the pledges adopted by the State Executive Committee gave new encouragement and impetus to those Democrats who share the viewpoint that such commitments are highly inadvisable. Tues

Democrats who take this position generally join in strong opposition to President Truman's civil rights proposals. They, too, seem for the most part opposed to the nomination of Mr. Truman. But they see no warrant for the state committee's action in seeking to obtain pledges to walk out of the Democratic convention if any part of the civil rights program is adopted and to fight President Truman's election to the end.

Of course these Democrats are seeing much more clearly than the pledge proponents what might be the consequences of such action. They see that nothing will be gained in behalf of their civil and state's rights view by walking out of the convention and by flat commitments to vote against President Truman under any circumstances that may develop. The News

The Walker County Committee interpreted the state committee's resolution as an attempt "to deny the right of the people of Alabama to exercise their franchise at the polls."

Suppose, for instance, that all candidates for delegate and elector were to make such pledges. What opportunity would there be under such conditions for Democratic voters who wish to fight for their convictions within the party, accepting its decisions when they have been regularly reached, to express their views? As things now stand, they can vote for candidates who oppose blanket pledges. Birmingham, Ala.

Sen. Hill, Gov. Folsom, former Gov. Sparks are among those leaders who have taken a stand against walkout pledges. The wisdom of this stand becomes the clearer as emotions subside somewhat and as implications of an extremist revolt become clearer. Tues. 4-13-48

This Is the Third Revolt!

Atlanta, Ga

Mon. 4-12-48

In its history there have been two revolts within the Democratic Party before the purely symptomatic one of today.

One was in 1860 when, employing almost the exact phrases and arguments of today, the Southern wing of the Party withdrew from the Northern wing and, forming a Southern party, held its own disastrous convention.

The second was the agrarian revolt in the 80s, extending on over into the 90s, and it was a revolt with hair on its chest. It grew into the Populist Party attempt to wrest control of the Party from Eastern industrial and financial interests, and it was a brass-knucks try which had the Democratic Party on the ropes two or three times.

In 1928 the Democratic National Committee strained the feudal loyalty a little too much by nominating a Catholic for President. The fact that he also was from wicked New York City, wore a brown derby and was in favor of honest drinking was an added strain. Indeed, it was so much of a strain that the voters in Texas, Florida, Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee gave majorities to the Republican nominee, Herbert Hoover. But this was not really a revolt, but a protest.

Today The present great anger against President Truman is, as I have said, symptomatic of the ever-present fear and nervousness in a one-party system. Also, it has no place to go. It is caught in a psychological trap. The frustration of being so caught has some of the captives so desperate they are seeking to get out by gnawing off the political leg by which they are held. But once out, there still won't be any place to go. 4-12-48

That explains why the revolt, which started off with the President's civil rights proposals as its objective, soon turned into an unreasoning, bitterly personal fight against Harry S. Truman himself. The Constitution Mon.

The more reasoning Democratic leaders, while angry with the President because of what they believe to be his awkward timing and stating of the proposals, caution against going outside the Party and are determined to go to the Convention at Philadelphia with favorite sons or with uninstructed delegates. They know that to unseat Harry S. Truman as the Party's nominee would be a greater confession of weakness than Truman himself, but they have had little influence. Atlanta, Ga.

History Also, the practical politicians had come to see that history had caught up with the United States and, in so doing, had caught up with the South and the Democratic Party. With a great war just concluded against human repression and the Nazi philosophy of the superman, it no longer is possible to avoid a serious discussion and at least to begin implementation of neglected human rights.

The Democratic Party politicians in the South who can see past 1890, and there are many such, also know the Democratic Party can't become a conservative party. The Republicans long ago built a better mousetrap.

There isn't much chance to elect Truman. But to drop him will not merely help the Republicans. It also will help Henry Wallace. And Southerners know what to expect from Henry.

Certainly, around neither Wallace nor any Republican in the White House will there be anyone to voice the fears, hopes and faiths of the Southern Democrats. That is why the fury against Truman is so great. Mon. 4-12-48

Facts What the ones who keep up most of the hollering and resoluting will not admit is that the President in his message to Congress rejected the more extreme proposals save for the real core of the present revolt, the unpopular and dubiously constitutional Fair Employment Practices Committee, and suggested the people themselves deal with these problems and that Federal legislation should only reluctantly follow their failure to act. In the message he recommended no overturning of segregation except where the Supreme Court already had ordered it in the field of interstate travel. He did not directly oppose segregation but "the inequalities arising from segregation." And every honest Southerner must admit that one reason for the present dilemma is that the segregation policy has been largely a fiction in so far as the promised equalities within it of education, health, housing and travel are concerned. The Constitution

Defeat of President Truman for the nomination would throw the Party toward the conservative right. Once there, it would be in competition with the most conservative wing of the Republican Party and could not long survive. It would serve, also, to push some of labor and most of the liberals not into Henry Wallace's party but in the direction of it. Atlanta, Ga.

Dilemma That would, if carried on to its logical conclusion produce something in this country we have never yet had—a choice between the extremes of left and right. Once this nation destroys the liberal middle way, which is a balance of power between the two extremes, the feeling is, among the thoughtful politicians and citizens in the South, that not only will the Democratic Party be destroyed, but that the South and the nation will be imperiled by a political problem which today plagues most of that part of Europe which still is allowed a choice. Mon. 4-12-48

So, 'midst the rockets' red glare and the bombs bursting in air, by no means everyone in the South is looking to see if the Confederate Flag is still there, even though they honor that flag sincerely.

A goodly number in the South are trying to see where they are at, so to speak. And, also to determine what is the best course for the South and the Party. Being mad with Mr. Truman isn't enough—however inadequate he may be.

Democrats Split on Strategy For Presidential Campaign

The Times New York, N.Y.

Wed. 7-14-48

One Faction Declares That Inevitable Defeat Calls for Plan Aimed at 1952 Chances

By JAMES RESTON

Special to The f

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—The Democrats are divided not only on candidates and on the principles of government, but on the strategy of the whole Presidential campaign.

Few of them think they can win against the Republicans in November. There is, however, a basic difference between those who think that, defeat being inevitable, the Democratic party should begin laying the basis for the 1952 campaign now, and those who want to fight the present campaign along traditional lines on contemporary issues.

There are not many politicians who think about any campaign but the one at hand. Those who do, however, think the Democrats should be putting new and younger men forward, particularly for the Vice Presidency and the Congressional seats, and projecting their programs toward the future along more liberal lines.

Some of those who feel this way think, for example, that party strategy should be directed now toward the 1950 race for the governorship of New York, and that Justice Robert Jackson of that state should be considered here for the Vice Presidential nomination with a view to the 1950 race in New York. 7-14-48

If Gov. Thomas E. Dewey is elected in November, his New York job will go to Joe R. Hanley, the 72-year-old Lieutenant Governor. The Democrats will then, according to this thesis, be in a good position to recapture control of the most powerful state in the union in the 1950 gubernatorial race, and should be thinking of that job in terms of a man who can be the party's candidate in the Presidential campaign of 1952. Wed.

The groundwork for such a campaign, however, should, they feel, be laid now. Looking to 1952, by which time the problem of the country may not be in inflation, but deflation, and not high wages and prices but unemployment, the argument is that the Democrats should go down now with the New Deal banners flying, not only defending the Roosevelt-Truman record, but making their policies more liberal than ever before.

Those who oppose this strategy suggest an alternate thesis, which is this:

1. Let the Republicans assume victory if they like, but let's don't count ourselves out too soon. Things look bad now, but a number of things can be made to happen between now and November.

2. The President has staged two comebacks in the past three years and may very well stage another. He has been treated so badly by members of his own party that many people are already rallying again to his support, and sympathy can be an extremely potent factor in any Presidential campaign.

3. More important, Mr. Truman has a few cards he can play himself. Specifically, he can—and he is being strongly urged by some of his closest advisers—to call the Republican-dominated Congress back to Washington to deal with some of the unfinished business and implement some of the promises in their platform.

There are certain dangers in such a call to Congress, but the Republicans would be more embarrassed by such a call than the Democrats. After an unhappy fight over civil liberties, the President could force the issue on housing, education, prices and other issues on which the Republicans are as deeply divided as the Democrats are on civil rights. Wed.

4. This might, these Democrats argue, change the whole nature of the campaign, pitch it more on issues than on personalities, and dramatize the fact that what is at stake is not only a change of men in the White House but a change of parties throughout the Government. The Times

To carry out this strategy, these advisers feel, it is necessary to maintain as much unity as possible in the party, make concessions on the platform, and accept Senator Barkley as the Vice Presidential nominee. New York, N.Y.

The latter argument is no doubt prevailing, but the problem of getting a strong Democratic opposition in Congress and preparing a way back in 1950 and 1952 remains. That is why even some of those who have the greatest respect for Senator Barkley and recognize his abilities as an opposition leader in Congress would have liked to see the fight for the Vice Presidency centering around not Justice Douglas, who is from a weak state politically, but around Justice Jackson of New York. 7-14-48

Democrats Seat S. C. Regulars

Negro Group Is Rejected

Sat. 7-10-48

PHILADELPHIA, July 10—(UP)—The Democratic National committee quickly tossed out a contest over South Carolina delegates today and voted to seat the delegation picked by the regular party organization.

The rejected group was composed of Negroes.

Chairman J. Howard McGrath announced at the committee meeting that there was a contest and appointed a subcommittee headed by Frank McHale of Indiana to hear the dispute over which group to seat for the national convention.

Sen. Olin D. Johnston, national committeeman from South Carolina, immediately asked "Who's contesting?" He said he would like to settle the issue at once if the rival group was not present.

McGrath told him the challenge came from a group identifying itself as the "Progressive Democratic party," which was said to be a Negro delegation. He asked if John H. McCray, head of that delegation, was present and heard no response.

Johnston then moved that the delegation chosen by the regular Democratic state convention be recognized. Sat. 7-10-48

McHale told the committee that the rival delegates were contesting "on the theory that they were barred from voting" for delegates. He added that the convention must accept delegates certified by "proper officials" and that the regular delegation was certified properly.

No Grounds For Seating

Hence there would be no grounds for seating another delegation, he said.

McHale seconded Johnston's motion and the committee adopted it without dissent.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Meanwhile, members of the state delegation began arriving by train and automobile. The largest number of delegates, however, will not arrive until a short time before the delegation caucus called by state Democratic Chairman William P. Baskin for noon tomorrow.

Delegates, most of whom will be quartered at the Lorraince hotel on North Broad street, found the South Carolina Palmetto and Crescent state flag flying jauntily from an eighth floor flagstaff there.

The flag had been requested for this purpose by the hotel management.

The Hawaiian delegation and parts of the Georgia and Tennessee delegations also will be at the Lorraine.

Governor Expected

Governor and Mrs. J. Strom Thurmond were expected in before noon from New York, where they have been since Thursday.

Thurmond issued a statement yesterday calling on President Truman to withdraw his candidacy for nomination.

Walden Reports On Democratic Nat'l Confab

Alertness To Safeguard Vote Heritage Urged

BY C. LAMAR WEAVER

President Truman's Civil Rights proposals were hailed here Friday night as a new day for minorities in America— an emancipation not only for Negroes, but for whites as well.

This acclaim was vigorously pronounced by Attorney A. T. Walden, President of the Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic clubs, in a spirited mass meeting on Civil Rights at Wheat Street Baptist Church.

Approximately 300 citizens were rejuvinated by the rally in which several speakers painted pictures of a political renaissance looming for Negroes in the South.

Attorney Walden had attended the recent Democratic convention in Philadelphia as an interested representative of his organization. His vivid picturization of the convention, especially the accounts of the relentless fight and sweeping victory of the approved civil rights plank in the party's platform, sent a spark of renewed hope throughout his audience.

COUNSELLED 7-25-48

He explained that although he was not an official party delegate at the convention, he was accepted cordially by the committee which drew up the civil rights plank. He modestly admitted that the committee on several occasions sought his advice in drawing up the civil rights plank which was finally embodied in the platform and approved by a majority vote.

The liberals were the spark plug of the convention, Walden declared. It was their indomitable spirit which literally set the convention afire. He said that it was this determination of Northern, Eastern and Western delegates that spelled defeat for opposing States Righters of the South.

Negroes played an important part in the convention, the speaker averred, explaining that they were among delegates from the Northern Eastern and Western states.

Extolling the President's acceptance address as a masterpiece of oratory in behelf of the common man, Walden praised President Truman for his forthrightness in sticking by his Civil Rights guns.

"No other president has shown more moral courage and backbone in such matters as Truman," he declared. 7-25-48

TIRED OF DISGRACE

The liberal movement of the party showed that the people of the North, East and West were tired of the South disgracing the nation and they had to be shown that the Civil War was over, he said determinedly.

Atty Waldn looked with disdain upon any attempt by Negroes to abridge the laws of the nation. His remark was ostensibly leveled at A. Philip Randolph's advocacy calling for Negroes to refuse joining a jim crow Army.

"All the progress the Negro has gained has been through the enforcement of Federal laws," Walden asserted.. "As such, they must never attempt to buck it," he cautioned. 7-25-48

(The speaker termed the South's pattern of second-class-citizenship for Negroes the weakest link in the nation's security.

C. A. Scott, of the Atlanta World and President of the local chapter of the Negro democratic organization, served as chairman at the meeting. He said the time has come for the U. S. Constitution to mean more than mere words and that it must function for all American citizens. The movement of time calls for absolute freedom of all peoples of the world, he added. The editor leveled an attacking barrage against the evils of those who would deprive the Negro of his right to vote. He expressed the opinion that Negroes must be alert at all times to safeguard this sacred democratic principle. 7-25-48

TO AROUSE CONCERN

Warren R. Cochrane, Executive Secretary of the Butler Street YMCA told the audience that "no person can afford not to be interested" in the political trend of the times. He said the meeting at hand was conducted to create an aroused concern among Negroes to rally to their political freedom. The purpose of the meeting was not to tell one how he should vote, he explained. In light of the Federal ruling which opened the Southern Democratic primaries to Negroes, Mr. Cochrane declared it to be expedient that Negroes integrate themselves into the Democratic party. Allegiance to any other party would jeopardize that privilege and make them liable to wholesale purging, he warned.

Rev. A. L. Brewster, of Dublin, Ga. a member of the organization and described as a statewide organizer of local chapters, rocked his audience jubilantly as he championed the Negro's right to vote as a true religious concept. The Negroes must carry the fight for full equality, he stressed, while reminding his audience that they must "prove to the world they would no longer be contented with taking a back seat." The minister implored that every Negro should be a Democrat.

Friday's meeting was the first in a series planned by the Negro Political group.

Truman Lieutenants Hope For a Truly Liberal Party

Philadelphia, July 12.—President Truman's lieutenants at this convention would like to build around a corps of common-sense liberals a party of the ~~Democratic~~ center. freed of the crackpot left and the reactionary right.

They are being bitterly opposed by party leaders who would like to hold together for one more round the disintegrating Roosevelt coalition which now is united only by a common interest in the rewards of political office and the privileges of power.

This is the central struggle of which the platform fight and the vice presidential contest are separate aspects.

34d

Southern Bolt Ignored

The President's spokesmen would like to win in 1948, if possible; they are ready to lose if necessary. In any case, they want no concessions to the "white supremacy" Southern tories or the lunatic fringe of Northern radicals.

The President's efforts to get Associate Justice William O. Douglas to take the Vice Presidency nomination disclosed plainly his indifference to the threats of a Southern bolt.

So far as the Trumanites are concerned, the Southern tories can walk out if they want to do it. They will not beg them to come back. Let them walk into oblivion and leave the way open for more progressive Southern Democrats.

Historic Possibilities

The attitude toward the "Northern Bilbos" of the left who demagogue about "Heaven before breakfast" social and economic plans is about the same.

If the Truman aides who are now in control have their way, this party convention may produce some choices of action that will be historic in the record of American political party affairs.

The choice they would have this convention make might be as decisive on the immediate fortunes of the Democratic Party as the choice that the party made in 1860 when it split three ways over the slavery issue. Tues, 7-13-48

The broken pieces of the pre-Civil war party could not be put back together again for a generation. When finally these pieces were reassembled, the reconstructed Humpty-Dumpty was once more a coalition of irreconcilable sectional and class minorities bound together by opposition to the Republican Party rather than by identity of interest.

24d

Dependent on Leadership

Periodically, great personal leadership has bound this restless coalition together for a term of power. In office the party has always moved toward disintegration. American parties in office generally have tended to divide into right and left wings. But the Democratic Party always has had horizontal as well as vertical splits. The sectional divisions have made the doctrinal divisions more irreconcilable and the ideological divisions have made sectional compromise more difficult. 7-13-48

The forces that were behind the Douglas for Vice President drive are fed up with the party's split personality. They would like to act at this convention to end the intolerable drain that has been put on the party's leadership resources by the incessant internal conflict.

To make a clean break with the extreme right and the extreme left would be an act of great political courage. Whether it would be an act of great political wisdom would remain to be seen. It might be as suicidal as the Douglas and Breckenridge split of 1860.

~~Lust-for-Office Factor~~

The Past

Lust for office is the most powerful cement of political parties. It has bound into transient unity many diverse elements. The temptation to try to do it again is very great. Washington, D.C.

The practical and historic virtues of such a program have been urged upon the President and his lieutenants here in Philadelphia. They have been urged to appease the South and prompted to conciliate the left. They are against it.

This is how they have reasoned it out. Tues, 7-13-48

Any American political party that would stand for the things that the Southern anti-Truman forces stand for could not now, or in the foreseeable future carry a State outside the South, they say. Moreover, they think such a party, in another generation, might not be able to carry even the South. They are convinced that the demonstration that the Bourbon South has conducted here in Philadelphia is the last gasp of Southern reaction.

Bolt Might Be Salutary

They are persuaded that the appeals to race prejudice, sectional bias, emotional hallucinations and provincial depravity that have marked such gatherings as the "States' Rights" caucus brand the current crop of cracker leaders as the vestigial remnants of a dead political past. They feel certain that it is only the charitable indulgence of these leaders by the Democratic party of the North that has kept them in power. If these leaders bolt, it may be a good thing.

Their bolt, the party leaders feel sure, will be followed by their elimination from public life—just as the 1928 bolt was followed by the wholesale exodus of Southern politicians who had outlived their usefulness. Tues

In any case, the Truman men believe that the Democratic Party has never needed the South to win the elections in which the South might have been decisive.

The Roosevelt Administration was not dependent on the electoral votes of the South, they point out. Yet, in order to get them, it helped keep in power Southern politicians whose social and economic views have put the Democratic Party in jeopardy in Northern industrial centers. 7-13-48

To yield to the Southern anti-Truman faction, they contend, would be to perpetuate in office men who are now a generation behind their people, to maintain at points where they can imperil the Democratic Party's appeal to common-sense liberals, Southerners who have had a rule or ruin attitude toward the pary for decades. The Past

This new Democratic leadership has steeled itelf to grasp a nettle that no previous Democratic Administration has dared touch with fire tongs. Washington, D.C.

It is not an act of foolhardy recklessness. They have contemplated the cost of a Southern walkout. They do not think they are too high a price to pay to rid the Democratic Party of an incubus that has been a handicap in the past and that is likely, in the more liberal future, to be a fatal drag on the party. Tues,

The bitterness of some of the party chieftains must be almost as great as the rancor that accompanied the historic split on the slavery issue. The President's aides are fed up with reactionaries they have been compelled to court in the South and apologize for in the North. They are not only ready to run the risk of losing the Rankins and Wrights and Thurmonds and Talmadges. They hope to so manage the Democratic Party as not to run the risk of keeping them. 7-13-48

They are about as impatient with it. They do not hope to get the New Party associates of Henry Wallace back in 1948 or thereafter. They have written them off. They are ready to write off some pseudo liberals along with them. One of the men who are trying to shape the new Democratic machine put it this way: "Liberals," he said, "are men who seek to achieve all that is possible for the good of the great masses of the people, by all practical political means of conciliation, compromise and accommodation."

"Demogogues," he contended, "are those who are indifferent to practical results and intent upon holding up for popular approval objectives that clearly are impossible of achievement." The kind of liberalism to which this particular spokesman would like to commit the Democratic Party is a liberalism of solid achievement in the public good, pursued quitely and effectively with a minimum of sound and fury.

Position of Labor Unions

The "self-serving" position of the labor unions has disillusioned these party leaders about the relation of union chiefs to political organization. It is felt that organized labor has a vital stake in the gains that the Democratic Party has fought for in the last 16 years. Yet, the Democratic leadership knows that many of these union chiefs have been busily preparing for a transfer of power by maneuvers designed to protect vested positions as labor bosses, whatever the consequence in terms of the social and economic philosophy of a Republican regime. Tues,

As the new leaders see it, a party of the Democratic center is going to have to count on an appeal over the heads of the Southern politicians to the sense and liberalism of the Southern people, and over the heads of the labor politicians to the sound sense of the working masses of the North.

Can such a party win in 1948?

Some of them think so. Many think it can not. 7-13-48

The President is the first to believe that win, lose or draw, this is the way the fight must be conducted. He has been seeking a liberal vice presidential candidate whose reputation and record would make it clear that a different kind of Democratic Party is in the making. He courts no compromise that expediency might dictate.

Planning for ~~a Future~~

The Past

Many officials of the Democratic committee see eye to eye with Harry Truman. They are ready to go down the line. They are not dismayed. They will be sorry if some of their friends abandon the party for right or left splinters. But they do not intend to be influenced by sentimental weakness.

This Democratic leadership is out to give the party something more than an election victory in 1948. It is determined to give it a future—whatever happens in the present.

If the party that came into office in 1933 gets rid of its extreme left and its extreme right the middle residue may not be big enough to constitute a majority. It is a mark of the realism of these party managers that they realize this and have the courage to face it. They hope, however, that a broadening center in the political structure will make the middle into a majority in time. The Past

They are trying to start here in Philadelphia a party of the middle way. They have no appetite for muddling through another election with a quarreling alliance of incompatible faction stretching clear across the political scale. They would like to have the party make a "great decision" at Philadelphia. Washington, D.C.

Decision Would Be Bold

At any rate, it would be a bold decision. It might give to this Philadelphia convention a brighter place in history than any observer would have dared predict two days ago. It was then just a gloom-infested conclave distinguished only by the melancholy of politicians overfed on political favor sadly approaching the imminent loss of their prerogatives.

In the light of such a decision, the whole funeral scene would take on another aspect. The grim certainty that an old political party is dying here would be relieved by the bare prospect that a new political party was being born here. Tues, 7-13-48

The nomination of Justice Douglas for Vice President would have signalized the triumph of the venturesome group that is ready to lay the foundations of a new Democratic Party here in Philadelphia. They appeared to have the power to enforce this choice over the bitterest sort of opposition by dissenters. But Douglas turned them down. The Douglas rejection did not come, however, until President Truman had disclosed that he is bold enough to attempt this course and that he has on his side powerful leaders who are prepared to cut the party loose from past encumberances.

The President, in this episode, emerged as collaborating architect in a design for a new middle-of-the-road Democratic Party.

Sat 7-17-48

These delegations were not elected in State primaries and could not contest the white delegations from these two States. However, they were on hand in case the white delegations bolted the convention over the civil rights issue, in which case they planned to take the seats and protect President Truman's civil rights program.

The Alabama delegation, headed by Emory Jackson of Birmingham, included A. D. Shores, L. Catis, Mrs. Lucille Douglas, N. Judge King, James Fields, E. B. Cal

The South and the Issue of States' Rights

N.Y. Times Tues. 7/20/48

By ARTHUR KROCK

WASHINGTON, July 19—There were delegates to the recent Democratic National Convention from the former Confederate states and from other sections who attended the party gathering of 1932 in a similar capacity. In both conventions a states' rights issue was posed over which there was division. Survivors of 1932 who voted both times on the same side may claim consistency in their position on this historic and disputed doctrine, but the prevalence of the unit rule makes it impossible to determine how many were Southerners.

A strong minority of the Southern Democrats at the 1932 convention were Federalists on the issue which divided that gathering—national prohibition and its Federal enforcement through the Volstead Act. In 1948 the Federalist minority of 1932 disappeared on the new point in dispute—the right of the central government to supervene the police powers of the states and to outlaw local provisions for racial segregation, etc.

The fact that the language of the Constitution and legal precedents support the position taken by the Southern Democrats against the legality of some sections of the President's "civil rights" program does not alter other facts. These are that the same language and precedents could be, and were, cited against the act by which national prohibition was enforced in the states, and that the prohibition amendment itself was repugnant to the long-standing states' rights principle. Therefore the conclusion cannot be denied that the nature of the intended abuse of this principle, and not the principle itself, is the true cause of the explosion.

Tues. 7/20/48

At the 1932 convention, over the protest of some of Mr. Roosevelt's Southern spokesmen, a majority of the platform committee voted for a plank that called for outright repeal of the national prohibition amendment. It also urged "immediate modification of the Volstead Act." The minority, represented by Cordell Hull, proposed a plank which omitted mention of the Volstead Act and merely proposed that the question of repealing the amendment be submitted to the people without recommendation.

Speaking for the majority, Alfred E. Smith said among other things:

> Since when has it become any violation of fundamental Democratic party creed to declare emphatically in favor of the rights of the states?

Tues. 7/20/48

This is how the states of the former Confederacy voted on the attempt of the majority to restore to the states all power over the liquor traffic:

For the Al Smith plank—Alabama, 3; Arkansas, 5; Florida, 13; Georgia, 0; Louisiana, 17; Mississippi, 0; North Carolina, 8; South Carolina, 18; Tennessee, 18; Texas, 46; Virginia, 11; a total of 139.

Against the Al Smith plank—Alabama, 21; Arkansas, 13; Florida, 1; Georgia, 28; Mississippi, 20; Louisiana, 3; North Carolina, 18; South Carolina, 0; Tennessee, 6; Texas, 0; Virginia, 13, a total of 117.

Last week at Philadelphia the Southern Democrats, through former Governor Moody of Texas, sought to add to the platform a reassertion of the states' rights principle, declaring that, subject only to the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution, "the power to regulate and control local affairs and act in the exercise of the police power" was reserved to the several states and is a tenet of Democratic faith. On this the states of the former Confederacy voted as follows:

Tues. 7/20/48

For—Alabama, 26; Arkansas, 22; Florida, 20; Georgia, 28; Louisiana, 24; Mississippi, 22; North Carolina, 32; South Carolina, 20; Tennessee, 28; Texas, 50; Virginia, 26, which represented the unanimous votes of all these delegations, a total of 298.

The application of the principle of states' rights in this instance struck at a far more acute problem than prohibition. In the South, especially prohibition was privately violated by its public advocates. But local observance and approval of the Southern laws and customs affecting the social status of the Negro are general. This accounts for the fact that, though Governor Smith and Mr. Moody similarly stated the basic issue, there was a Federalist group in the South on the previous occasion and none last week.

As a majority, however, the Southern Democrats were consistent on both votes, and any members of it who were delegates to both conventions have that very rare distinction in American politics.

The same cannot be said of the Democrats of Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi and North Carolina, whose delegations cast all or most of their votes against the 1932 states' rights plank which Al Smith so eloquently advocated. And a further demonstration of how much more the application of the principle means in the South than the principle itself were the walkouts of the Mississippi delegation and a majority of those from Alabama, after last week's convention called for legislation in detail of the President's "civil rights" program.

This comparison of 1932 with 1948 writes an explanatory footnote to the revolt of the Southern Democrats against the party ticket and platform this year. The exclusion of the Negro as such from his political rights and guarantees is disappearing; the poll-tax in many states disenfranchises numerous white citizens, and rarely is lynching condoned, even in the most backward localities. But to the South segregation is an essential barrier against amalgamation of the races. And the only visible source of materials to maintain that barrier is the doctrine of states' rights.

BERSERK

EDITOR, The Advertiser: Your charge in Thursday's Advertiser that I am notoriously berserk in political philosophy does not disturb me.

My political philosophy is that our delegates should attend the Philadelphia Convention, and if that convention insults the South, dishonors our ancestors and betrays our race by adopting a plank in the platform advocating Truman's civil rights program our delegates should walk out, come home and report to the Democrats of Alabama through the State Executive Committee who should ascertain the sentiments and wishes of the Democrats of Alabama and make them known. The electors would then endeavor to comply with the wishes of the Democrats of Alabama. If that be berserk political philosophy make the most of it.

Montgomery Advertiser 4-11-48

What I do resent is your attempt to associate me with a liquor salesman by virtue of "a Poole-Folsom campaign deal" and "a political gent who drove Folsom's sound wagon" in his first political campaign for governor. These two candidates did not sign a pledge not to vote for Truman or any one sharing his views on civil rights. They are not aligned with me politically or otherwise. I am trying to make it my business to see that no candidate who is free to vote for Truman or his civil rights program ever sees the convention hall.

It does not make any great difference whether I am elected or defeated. It is important that the 11 electors pledged to vote against Truman and all others sharing his views on civil rights be elected.

The reason it gives you "goose flesh" to think that I might play a leading part in the distribution of this state's electoral vote is because you know if I have anything to do with it the votes will be cast in such way as to insure the preservation of white supremacy. You have been praised and lauded by Negroes, Negrophiles and equalitarians until it is difficult sometimes to understand why The Advertiser is any longer circulated among white people.

Montgomery Ala.

Your charge that the revolt is weakend is the most ludicrous piece of propaganda that has ever disgraced the columns of The Advertiser. If Alabama wants delegates that will sit in a convention that might nominate a Negro for vice president and take any other insult that may be tendered the South, all it has to do is follow the leadership of The Advertiser.

The most certain way for the South to renew its influence in the councils of the nation is to send a delegation to Philadelphia who will make it known that we can't be kicked around. Of course, The Advertiser would like to have a bunch of politicians who can be manipulated and kicked around because it would give The Advertiser a chance to get in on the kicking.

Georgia Senator Is Put in Nomination as a Protest by South

New York N.Y.
Thurs 7-15-48

By W. H. LAWRENCE
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA, July 14—President Harry S. Truman was placed in nomination for a full four-year term tonight amid scenes of wild tumult in a strife-ridden Democratic National Convention from which thirty-five angry Mississippi and Alabama delegates already had bolted.

His selection on the first ballot was assured and the President had arrived in Philadelphia from Washington to deliver his acceptance speech before the convention.

The only opposing candidate for the nomination was Senator Richard B. Russell of Georgia, who was to receive the votes of the non-bolting Southern delegates. These delegates, while equally dissatisfied with the President's nomination and the party's strong civil-rights platform pledge, decided to remain "regular" in the convention and party. 7-15-48

Teeth Voted Into Plank

Party leaders, acting on behalf of the President, had sought to mollify the South by restricting the civil rights platform pledge to a generality, but the delegates, sparked by ex-New Dealers who had the support of big city machine bosses, insisted and won a floor fight for a plank with real teeth in it. Their margin was narrow—651½ to 582½—but earlier they had overwhelmingly rejected Southern demands for a state's rights plank by a vote of 925 to 309.

The platform was so strong that Governor Ben Laney of Arkansas, who had planned to have his name presented as a candidate for President, said he could not accept the platform. He and his Arkansas delegation did not leave the convention, however.

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky was slated to be the vice presidential nominee. He was the overwhelming favorite among delegates and the White House capitulated to their demonstrated attitude after trying and failing to persuade Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas to take a place on the ticket.

Senator Barkley also was to deliver his acceptance speech before the convention.

Walkout Is Dramatic

The Southern walkout was dramatic, coming as it did just as Sam Rayburn of Texas, permanent chairman, ordered the roll call of states for the Presidential nomination, but it lacked the numbers and spirit that Southern politicians had predicted. 7-15-48

Loud boos followed the mass walkout by all of the Mississippi delegates and alternates, and half the Alabama group. And they had the bad luck, too, to walk from this steamy, hot convention into a pouring rainstorm.

ADA Spearheads Fight

New Dealers, organized under the auspices of the Americans for Democratic Action, led the fight to expand the civil rights pledge and got the votes to put it over from Northern big city machines which realize they must hold the Negro vote if their state and local tickets are not to go down in defeat in the prospective Republican landslide this November.

What the convention did was to make specific the directive to Congress to carry out President Truman's civil rights program—but the manner in which it was done could not have failed to displease the President because it created additional hostility in the South, increased the prospects of a convention bolt and thus defeated the harmony moves which the Administration has initiated in recent days.

The President's lieutenants here had sought a milder, more generalized declaration.

Specifically, the convention directed Democrats in Congress to guarantee "these basic and fundamental rights: (1) the right of of full and equal political participation, (2) the right to equal opportunity of employment, (3) the right of security of person, (4) and the right of equal treatment in the service and defense of our nation." 7-15-48

In the fifty-eight-minute debate covering the civil rights and states' rights minority reports, the issue of race relations, as such, was never tackled. Thurs.

Southern orators warned that a failure to reaffirm the constitutional rights of the states was essential to Southern confidence in and support of the party.

Cheers and Some Boos

The Northern bloc, through Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis as its principal spokesman, said that the country was 172 years behind the times in meeting the issue of equality. Mayor Humphrey won loud cheers and a scattering of boos for his praise of President Truman's "courage in issuing a new emancipation proclamation" and his assertion that "it is time for the Democratic party to get out of the shadow of states' rights and walk forthrightly in the bright sunshine of human rights."

Lacking either band or organ music, which were kept silent by the control of Southerners in authority on the main platform, delegates led by the ADA group nevertheless staged a long demonstration for Mayor Humphreys when he closed his speech and kept it going for nearly ten minutes.

The delegates, who had sweltered listlessly through two and one-half days of campaign oratory while waiting for the real business of the convention, adoption of the platform and nomination of candidates, were spoiling for a fight when the preliminaries for the day finally were completed.

The galleries, crowded for the first time, were in general agreement with Northern demands for stronger civil rights measures and joined in cheering the domonstrations on the floor. 7-15-48

The debate was less torrid than might have been expected and nobody waved the flag of "white supremacy," although Southerners warned earnestly that if the states' rights amendment were rejected "you are voting down the Constitution of the United States."

CIVIL RIGHTS RIFT FLARES AT LAST

Southern Backer of Move Sharply Answered

Philadelphia, July 9.—The fight over civil rights within the Democratic party finally exploded into the open tonight when a southerner, Aubrey Williams, told Democratic leaders they would not lose Southern voters by supporting President Truman's civil rights program.

Southern members of the Democratic platform drafting committee had kept calm and silent while Northern Negroes demanded that the party platform contain the president's proposals for laws against lynching, poll taxes, and discrimination in employment.

But when Wiliams, who is from Montgomery, Ala., and former national youth administrator, said that it was mainly Southern Democratic leaders who oppose the Truman program—and not the people—the fireworks broke loose.

Sparks, Shepperd Answer

Former Alabama Governor Chauncey Sparks snapped that Williams represents nobody but himself and should not carry any weight. Sat. 7-10-48

Charles E. Shepperd, Florida state legislator from St. Augustine, declared heatedly:

"We do not propose to tolerate any further interference in states rights in the South. We and the Negro understand each other. We don't want any federal bayonets forcing him down our throats.

Williams, who now publishes the Southern Farmer and is president of the Alabama Farmer's Union, said the white people "brutalize every decent instinct of mankind" when they keep the Negro in an inferior position.

Sparks shot back:

"When you use the word brutalize I think you are going a little too far."

Blast Republicans

Earlier two Roosevelt New Dealers let loose a blistering attack on the GOP and urged the Democratic party to pledge government curbs on living costs and to save rich oil resources for the people.

The first, Wartime Price Administrator Leon Henderson, termed inflation a Republican-made "time-bomb" under prosperity and told Democratic platform drafters they should pledge immediate action to avert another round of price and wage increases.

He called for price, allocation, inventory and credit controls.

The second, former Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes, using sarcastic tones reminiscent of political battles of the thirties, charged the Republican party would "give away" vast underwater oil resources and "enhance the riches of the Rockefellers and Pews."

Appearance of Henderson and Ikes featured final hearings of a 18-member resolutions subcommittee of the party's national convention opening Monday. Tomorrow a five-man subgroup will get down to the task of writing a draft of the party's 1948 statement of principles. Another Truman policy came under attack. A spokesman for the American council for a Democratic Greece told the subcommittee that the "Truman Doctrine" in Greece should be abandoned.

Asks Armes for Israel

Further, the American Zionist council pleaded for a modification of present embargo on shipments of arms to Israel. Louis E. Levinthal of Philadelphia, spokesman for the council, said Israel "must be enabled to defend itself" against new attacks by the Arabs.

Henderson's proposal for government controls to curb inflation ran counter to recommendations offered by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Green urged a voluntary attack on prices by industry, labor, agriculture and other economic groups under sponsorship of the government. He suggested that the president's board of economic advisers consult with committees representing these groups in development of a "joint program."

In contrast, James Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, urged government economic controls.

However, like Carey, Green demanded repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor act, terming it a "complete failure."

Even Grant Left Them Their Horses

New York

By ARTHUR KROCK

PHILADELPHIA, July 14—The South arrived today at its second Appomattox. The non-Southern majority in the Democratic National Convention first rejected its proposed reassertion in the platform of the principle of states' rights and then specifically endorsed the Federal "civil rights" legislative program of President Truman.

This double defeat was followed by surrender on the part of most of the delegations from the states of the old Confederacy in so far as that is represented by not walking out of the convention. But since, unlike General Grant at Appomattox, the Northerners today did not even leave the Southern leaders with their side-arms and their horses, some of the latter are predicting a guerrilla war in the South against the party ticket that will cost it from twenty-five to seventy-five electors in that section.

The "Civil Rights" Compromise

The "civil rights" plank as presented by the platform committee was an effort to hold in line all the disputing elements on this issue. It generally endorsed the full extension of such rights and "called on Congress" to assure them within "constitutional limits." This was to enable the Northern and Western politicians to go home and claim that the plank ratified the President's ten-point program for Congress on this reasoning: Mr. Truman obviously holds that his program is constitutional for Congress to legislate; otherwise he would not have "called" on it to do so.

But the authors of the plank, acting by direction of the President and the Administration—as the second roll-call plainly revealed—carefully excluded mention of any of the measures urged by Mr. Truman. This was to enable the Southern politicians to go home and claim that his program remained unendorsed. 7-15-48

The Southern Amendment

It was the usual slick political compromise of principle, the usual expedient of seeming to face both ways. But why urge a "call on Congress," the Southerners demanded, unless Federal legislation was intended in general and the President's program in particular? On their construction of the rights reserved to the states in the Constitution, Congress could legally do no more than pass resolutions on the subject, not laws. Hence they offered their amendment that reasserted the principle of states' rights. And this, as opposing orators truly said, would wholly nullify the rest of the plank, which would be plain to the most primitive intellect.

On that ground the amendment was overwhelmingly beaten, not even a third of the convention voting in its favor. This imperiled a walkout by one or two Southern delegations if they carried out their threats. But it offered hope that the rest would remain regular and could maintain the strength of their organizations at home.

Coup of the A. D. A.

It was at this point that the Americans for Democratic action seized their opportunity. They had been badly beaten in their effort to nominate for President a substitute for Mr. Truman and to get a Vice Presidential candidate of their choice. But by offering a specific plank on "civil rights" they believed they could force the large delegations in the East and Middle West to support it.

That happened. It became a question for the New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Illinois politicians whether, as they thought, to assure the loss of their organizations as well as of their states by opposing the A.D.A. amendment, which the Administration implored them to do, or save their local interests at the expense of the national ticket in the South.

They answered the question by voting for the specific amendment. The Administration leaders, fleeing from the deep blue sea toward the devil and then reversing their direction, could muster only a minority against the amendment, even with the aid of the South.

Thurs. 7-15-48

Ironies of Politics

As the clerk called the roll of states a Confederate flag hung from the balcony to his right. But this was not the only irony of the occasion. A sharper barb was supplied when the delegation from the President's home state, Missouri, voted with the Administration against an amendment that began as follows: "We highly commend President Harry Truman for his courageous stand on the issue of civil rights. We call upon Congress to support our President in guaranteeing these basic and fundamental rights." And it named the key legislative items he had urged upon Congress.

With Missouri, the Administration was able only to control the bulk of the votes from these states outside the South: Arizona, Colorado, Delaware, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Utah and West Virginia.

Cynical politics was never better served than today. The President's spokesmen tried to reject specific endorsement of him and his program in an effort to prevent total revolt in the South. The spokesmen for the majority of the Southern leaders, by prefacing their amendment with the assurance that they would stay in the party, made it plain their "fight" was only for home consumption, since that pledge obviously doomed their amendment. And Kentucky, where in 1798 Jefferson's famous states' rights resolutions were proclaimed, voted against the assertion of the principle today.

Party Turns Its Back

Commercial Appeal

Memphis, Tenn.

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA.—The Democratic Party turned its back on States' Rights Wednesday. Smarting under the refusal of the Platform Committee to include a States' Rights plank, delegations from the South were defeated in an attempt to get indorsement from the convention. Then a coalition of Eastern and MidWestern states put through a resolution approving the TRUMAN program and the rout was complete.

Tenn.

Southern dissenters insist they are going ahead with plans for the Birmingham meeting Saturday, but they are going to have difficulty breathing life into States' Rights as an issue. Within their own ranks there are many who oppose creation of a fourth party. The lack of enthusiasm for their cause evidenced at the convention of the party that so long kept alive the illusion of States' Rights was hardly encouraging.

Thu. 7-15-48

It was not the end of an era. It was more like finally recognizing a condition that had existed since the New Deal took over. The liberal elements were in control and they overrode the compromisers who thought to pacify the States' Righters with the same double talk that was used in the 1944 platform. They are going all out with TRUMAN.

The Big Paradox of the Party Conventions

Times Times

By ANNE O'HARE McCORMICK

The setting, the music, the script and the pattern were so much alike that a spectator falling asleep in the Republican convention and waking up in the Democratic could not tell the difference. There was the same tropical atmosphere, the same effect of static in the stale political oratory that nobody listened to, the same restless shuffling among the delegates, the same thumping and whistling and parades of cardboard faces. The Republicans were more complacent and less contentious, at least on the floor. The Democrats arrived in the slough of despond, but in the melting pot of contact and friction they worked themselves up at the end into a mood as cocky as that of their rivals.

The delegates looked alike, as they do at all American conventions. There were more foreign accents, more Southern accents (perhaps for the last time) among the Democrats. Apart from the South, they were predominantly a city crowd. The Republicans were more upstate, Middle West, small-town. Women were more prominent among the Democrats and youth among the Republicans. But each gathering was a mixture of all the strains, sections, classes and shades of opinion that make both parties typical of the fluid society of the United States.

Doctrines and Differences

To look at the representatives of the two parties in close sequence is to understand why the American two-party system mystifies the foreign observer. These are not parties as he understands them, united by one doctrine. They are composites of a dozen parties, united in a way by lack of doctrine, so that the Republicans may easily become the advocates of states' rights as the Democrats abandon them. The secession of the South would only complete the picture of almost identical twins, since a South split into two parties would become more like the rest of the country. Even the divisions are similar; in point of stability there is little to choose between the omnibus which carries the Old South and the newer citizens of the big cities and the combination of Old Guard and Young Republicans.

Sat 7-17-48

Nevertheless there are differences—of outlook, emphasis, temper and background. There is the great difference between "ins" and "outs," between the party that stands on its record and the party that runs on its promises. The distinction showed up in the conventions and the platforms as clearly as the similarities. On paper both parties advocate the same things, but on nearly every issue the Democrats go farther than the Republicans. On foreign policy, for instance, both support the United Nations and curtailment of the veto, but the Democrats advocate a loan for the construction of a United Nations headquarters, and not only give full backing for the Marshall Plan but adopt a phrase the Republicans omitted and propose to "implement with appropriations the commitments which are made in this nation's foreign program." The Republicans pledge support of the "system of reciprocal trade," but the Democrats promise full restoration of the Hull program. On the other hand, the Republicans are for a "military manpower act," while the Democrats confine themselves to advocating "adequate" armed force.

The paradox of the conventions was that practically all the discussion of foreign policy took place in the Republican session. For the first time in the memory of most convention-goers, foreign policy was not an issue among the Democrats. Except in rhetorical periods, international affairs were hardly mentioned in Philadelphia this week. The platform glorified the party record in this field, took all the credit, indeed, for the bipartisan policy, but that was the end of it. In his militant acceptance address Mr. Truman concentrated on domestic to the exclusion of outside events, and so did the convention.

7-17-48

Civil Rights and Foreign Policy

The only hot issue for the Democrats was domestic. The historic decision they took on civil rights, which rang the bell on states' rights as a party slogan, absorbed all their attention. It marked a parting of the ways for the Democrats, a divorce of incompatibles which may not be final, since the rebels have nowhere else to go, but which foreshadows changes in party alignments that cannot yet be measured.

That human rights was an impassioned issue is not strange. In no roundabout way it linked the convention with the great conflict that divides the world. But there was no explicit recognition of the connection among the angry delegates, North or South. This does not imply, however, that the party has receded from its traditional position as the internationalist party. On the contrary, the Republicans fought over their foreign policy plank because it was strongly opposed by the residual isolationists, and the Democrats did not debate theirs because it roused no opposition. Democrats are unified on foreign policy. As the party responsible for leading the country through the greatest transition of our history, its course is charted. It cannot retreat.

And reality dictates that the Democrats cannot digress into partisan politics when the transition is in its most dangerous phase. The world war is on; and many observers who watched the convention close with a revival of party spirit, inspired by the President's fighting speech, were troubled by the vista it opened of an embittered campaign, staged under the resounding dome of the Capitol, which would exaggerate the differences between the parties at the one moment when it is essential that they appear and act as all-American as they really are.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES

DES MOINES, Iowa., April 11—Midwestern Democratic leaders resolved today to recommend that the delegations from thirteen states vote as a unit of the Democratic National Convention. While the action is not binding on the states, it represents a strong opinion that the time has come to serve notice of the unit voting potential of the Midwestern states as a protective measure. Mon. 4-12-48

Coupled with a re-endorsement of President Truman, the unit voting resolution serves notice that the Midwestern leaders are willing to go along with the President as the party candidate, but on their own terms.

The resolution also was directed at the rebel Southern Democrats who meet tomorrow and Tuesday in Atlanta. Greetings to the Southerners urged them to "pledge themselves, as we hereby pledge ourselves and to accept the result and unite behind our platform and candidates for the good of our country and party."

Continuing the resolution said "We strongly urge that our Southern associates in the party resolve to send their delegates to the National Convention and join in writing a platform stating our party principles and select a nominee to lead our party to victory."

Eight States Represented

The resolutions were adopted at a meeting of the board of directors of the Midwest Democrat Conference. Members of the board are the national committeemen and women, and the state chairmen and vice chairmen, of the region. Eight of the thirteen states were represented at today's meeting, while Oklahoma, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and Missouri (the President's home state) did not have delegates attending.

While thus extending an olive branch to the Southern rebels, the Midwestern leaders revealed an implied threat when they pointed out that thirteen states have 244 delegates. The Southern group in this picture has 242 votes.

The state leaders present today were from Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa. James C. Quigley of Valentine, Neb., was chairman, and Jake More of Haran, Iowa, who was Henry A. Wallace's floor manager at the 1944 national convention, was secretary.

The decision to seek a voting unit, while not surprising, was considered significant in the light of the conference sidestepping the same issue at Omaha, Neb., last December. At that time, the Southern revolt had not developed and the Midwest leaders had not felt the full effect of what is now considered some politically unwise moves by President Truman.

Patronage in the Picture

Also, there has been much resentment in some of the states over patronage, particularly where Republicans have been appointed to posts in Washington by Mr. Truman. The Times

Carl D. Rice, national committeeman from Kansas, and a member of the resolutions committee, speaking for the unit-voting resolution, said that it "called attention that we, too, have a bloc," although "we are not proceeding on the theory that it is to be used." New York, N.Y.

In sustaining the pledge made at Omaha to stand by President Truman, the Midwestern leaders noted that "the times in which we live call for the abandonment of election year 'politics as usual.'"

Calling attention to problems which "self-seeking politicians hate to act upon in an election year, "the resolution pointed out the President had remained steadfast in seeking anti-inflation measures, civil liberties and other programs "without regard to political consequences." Mon.

Further, the resolution pointed out that "our President has steadfastly sought to work within the United Nations for peace * * * regardless of the so-called political consequences." 4-12-48

A fear of the "Henry A. Wallace Menace" was evident at the meeting, but almost all of the leaders predicted freely that President Truman would pile up a larger vote in 1948 than he did for President Roosevelt in 1944.

E. Cyril Bevan of Detroit, national committeeman from Michigan, saw the "Wallace cry" as applying to industrial centers. But, he added, "more people are realizing that a vote for Wallace is a vote for Republicans."

Mr. Rice declared that the Wallace move "won't cut any ice in Kansas."

John R. Franco, Michigan state chairman, said the Democrats expected to "deliver" his state to Truman by a greater margin than it did in 1944 to Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Rice told reporters at the meeting that the Kansas Democrats were aware that the candidacy of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower would be of great value to the Democratic ticket, but said "we accepted his statements at their face value."

South Protests Civil-Rights Stand In Prelude to What Might Be Wide Party Split

From Wire Dispatches.

Philadelphia, July 14.—The Democrats nominated Harry S. Truman for President tonight on a strong civil-rights platform.

President Truman's nomination came on the first ballot. The National Convention immediately began to nominate Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky for Vice-President—its last order of business before closing down for good. Thu. 7-15-48

Truman arrived from Washington to address the convention in its final hours and to fire the Democrats' first official campaign gun in the coming struggle against the Republican ticket of Governors Thomas E. Dewey and Earl Warren.

Laney Steps Out.

The harsh echoes of a North-South floor fight over party principles were still resounding when the delegates gave Truman the campaign banner last held aloft for them by the late Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Governor Ben Laney of Arkansas stepped out of the picture as the "white hope" of Southern rebels against Truman for the nomination. The Southerners immediately placed in nomination Senator Richard B. Russell of Georgia instead.

A lone-wolf Florida delegate, speaking only for himself, so he said, offered the convention the name of Paul V. McNutt, former Governor of Indiana. McNutt could have had second place at the 1940 convention had he not, at Franklin D. Roosevelt's request, stepped aside for Henry A. Wallace.

When the Southern demonstration for Russell had subsided, Governor Phil M. Donnelly of Missouri put Truman in nomination.

Demonstration Ear-Shattering.

The well-organized Truman demonstration which was turned upon the convention when Donnelly had concluded showed how hopeless was the effort to take the nomination away from Truman.

The carefully tailored outbreak for Truman was ear-shattering in volume. It made it appear that this convention, instead of accepting the Missourian reluctantly and sullenly, was full of zeal for his renomination.

So thick were Truman placards upon the floor and in the jammed aisles that it was impossible to see the delegates.

Every noise - making device known to man was utilized in the Truman demonstration. So thick was the crush of people carrying banners, blowing horns and shaking rattles that they finally gave up the effort to march and simply stood in one spot.

Even a Siren Used.

The heat didn't seem to bother the demonstrators. They cut loose with all they had, which seemed to be plenty. Just at this time the Truman family arrived by train from Washington.

In convention hall it wasn't exactly a parade. Everyone seemed to move in every direction. Signs resembling a donkey read:

"Great in '48 with Truman" and "All 48 in 48 for Harry."

Some fiend had brought along a siren. If you listened closely, you could hear it above the din.

The band warmed up on "Missouri Waltz" and finally played "Oh, Them Golden Slippers" at a breakneck pace.

One sign read "He is human, our Harry Truman."

A live donkey was led in and seemed properly astounded at the goings on. Courier-

An Indian in full dress did a war dance in front of the speakers' rostrum. Journal

The organist cut loose, too, to add to the confusion.

A five-foot Liberty Bell made of flowers was lugged onto the platform, the gift of the Allied Florists of Greater Philadelphia. The florists said it contained 8,000 flowers and 48 white doves.

Not content with his war dance on the floor, the Indian climbed on top of the speakers' platform and did a dance in the middle of the microphones, and water glasses. Louisville, Ky.

Two women fainted in the intense heat. Both revived, but one had to be helped from the hall by a policeman, who finally picked her up and carried her. The thermometer now read 95.

Truman Waits For Cue.

When Truman arrived he went to Chairman McGrath's office behind the platform until time to come on the sta g.e

This was quite a change from four years ago when he was nominated for the Vice-Presidency in Chicago. Then Truman sat on a platform rail and nibbled a sandwich during the speeches nominating him.

After 40 minutes of assorted bedlam, the Truman demonstration ended.

In placing Truman's name before the convention, Governor Donnelly called the President the country's "strongest guaranty of peace." Courier-Journal

Formally kicking off the nominating drive for his fellow Missourian, Donnelly read the record of the Democratic Party's 15 years in power and of Truman's contribution as senator, Vice-President, and President.

The economic and social legislation enacted during that span, he said, "are a part of our social and economic structure and are here to stay." Louisville

"The Republican leaders can contemptuously refer to the New Deal, and call it any iniquitous name they wish, but I challenge the Republican Congress to repeal a single one of those great and humanitarian laws," he said.

Donnelly told the delegates Truman had carried forward the Democratic program during the past three years "in spite of the opposition of the Republican Congress."

"Our party and the nation need such leadership," he said.

Tells of Important Decisions.

He stressed Truman's experience in foreign affairs and his drive for a strong national defense program.

He recalled that the President stepped into office in the closing months of World War II, and credited him with taking "decisions of the greatest historical importance in those months."

"In these vital requirements (of national defense and international affairs), the record of the President of the United States stands out clear and unquestioned," he said. Courier-Journal

"His conviction that a prepared America is a safe America has been gained not only by the knowledge acquired as President, but also through his own war experience," he added, referring to Truman's World War I service in France. Louisville, Ky.

"The policies he has advocated since the close of World War II are our strongest guaranty of peace." Thu. 7-15-48

He reminded the delegates of the President's sponsorship of the Marshall plan for European recovery and asserted that his stop-communism program "has the overwhelming support of the American people and of every freedom-loving nation on earth."

"His handling of the great international problem of control of the atom meets with the unqualified approval of the people of our country," Donnelly went on. "They agree with him that this progress must be continued.

"They concur in the position that the secrets of the atom will be shared with other nations only under safe and fair conditions proposed by the American delegates to the United Nations."

Donnelly also called attention to Truman's role in fostering the growth of the United Nations and his long experience in legislative affairs, saying:

"It is no fault of his that a Republican Congress has not seen fit to make use of that experience for the benefit of the nation."

Jackson Gets In Picture.

During Donnelly's speech a man carrying a huge sign reading "Sam Jackson for Vice-President" stood directly in front of the rostrum, shutting off the view. Chairman Rayburn finally ordered him to leave.

Jackson is a former Indiana senator. He was chairman of the 1944 Democratic convention.

When Donnelly wound up, "I present to the convention Harry S. Truman," the Truman version of bedlam broke out.

By now, it was 94 degrees in the hall and so humid it would have rained if someone had tossed up a couple of ice cubes.

After the Truman demonstration had ended, Will Rogers, Jr., son of the late great humorist, went up to second Truman's nomination. 7-15-48

Rogers, a former California member of the House, said:

"They say Harry Truman is a man of small stature. But he has given us one of our largest conceptions.

"Tonight, in Berlin, in Frankfurt, in France, and in Italy, free men can look forward with hope because of Harry S. Truman."

Rayburn left the platform to visit Truman. Representative John McCormack of Massachusetts took over as chairman.

Mrs. Marguerite Peyton Thompson, national committeewoman from Colorado, also seconded the nomination of Truman.

"Harry S. Truman," she said, "in the finest tradition of the Democratic Party, has fought and still fights for a richer world for all our people, for a democracy at home which would enfold and encompass every man and woman and child."

Thomas J. Dodd, Lebanon, Conn., made the next seconding speech for the President. He said:

"He has faced some of the greatest problems that have faced any man in all history, and he has faced them squarely and honestly. There are no tricks in Harry Truman."

One of Truman's greatest friends, Governor Mon C. Wallgren of Washington, came up for another seconding speech.

"The most important thing to mankind today is world peace," Wallgren said. "President Truman has properly advocated that we must not starve only for peace in our time, but peace for all time."

Idaho yielded to Pennsylvania for another Truman seconding speech. John J. Kane of Pittsburgh, president of the Pittsburgh Printing Pressmen's Union, made the speech. He seconded Truman's nomination for Vice-President in 1944.

The next Truman seconding speech was by Benjamin S. Adamowski of Illinois.

New York kept the chorus of Truman seconds going. North Carolina, with much anti-Truman sentiment in it, passed. North Dakota not only seconded Truman, but took occasion to urge Alabama and Mississippi to come back home to the party.

Julian Withdraws.

Ohio, through former Senator Robert J. Bulkley, went into the routine of nominating William Alexander Julian, treasurer of the United States, who was on the primary ballot under that State's law. But Julian promptly withdrew in favor of Truman.

Oklahoma seconded Truman. So did Oregon, in compliance with the outcome of its primary election. Rhode Island did likewise.

The boom to nominate Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas for the Vice-Presidency fell flat tonight when her own state, California, decided not to support her. The Democrats' glamour girl, being groomed to step into Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt"s shoes as the No. 1 woman of the party, had support from outside her delegation. G. R. Evans of the Kansas Young Oemocrats said her name would be placed before the convention if California would stand by her.

Maw Says West to Back Him.

Governor Herbert B. Maw of Utah told the convention that "tens of thousands" of Western Republicans would vote for a Democratic President this fall because of what he termed the Republican threat to destroy the economic and social gains of the last 16 years.

"The only hope of large sections of the West is in a President and a Congress that will deal with it on merit and not according to the dictates of strong groups who would rather exploit it than develop it," Maw said, adding:

"Tens of thousands of Western Republicans had made up their minds that if the Republican Party had no more to offer than the outmoded doctrines that threw us into a depression, the only hope for the West was a Democratic victory."

Four Demo Candidates Refuse To Pledge Bolt

342 The News

Birmingham, Ala

Four Alabama candidates for delegate to the Democratic nominating convention have refused to pledge themselves to bolt the convention if it writes any part of President Truman's civil rights program into the party platform.

Such a move was recommended Monday by the State Democratic Executive Committee. The committee asked the delegates to take a public stand on the matter.

Those objecting yesterday to the proposed walkout were Sen. Lister Hill, former Gov. Chauncey Sparks, Atty. Gen. Albert A. Carmichael and Charles G. Dobbins, editor of The Weekly Montgomery Examiner. Wed

They all released copies of statements sent to Committee Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, who personally favors the walkout.

"This pledge is asked more than three months before the Democratic convention meets and almost three months before we know who the Republican nominee is and what the Republican platform will be," Hill said. 4-7-48

HILL SAID HE opposed the nomination of President Truman and the civil rights measures. He said, however, there are other matters the convention will consider.

"There is the question of whether we shall have war or peace," he said, "there is the question of whether we shall go forward with the great programs of the Democratic party. . . ."

Sparks said flatly he would not bolt the convention if the civil rights program was adopted, but added:

"I shall do everything in my power as a delegate to prevent the party from declaring for the Truman civil rights program and from nominating Mr. Truman or any other person who proclaims this civil rights doctrine."

The attorney general said he would fight the adoption of the civil rights program and the nomination of a presidential candidate not acceptable to the South. Declaring he would stay with the convention until it adjuorned, he asked: The News

"How else could I represent the Democrats of Alabama. . . ? Certainly, I could not represent them if I walked out and was not even there." Birmingham, Ala

EDITOR DOBBINS SAID, "In a time so crucial for our nation and the peace of our time, I am unwilling to pledge my desertion from the Democratic Party." 4-7-48

Dobbins said he would oppose the president, but added that "a hog-tied Alabama delegation, which has virtually deserted the party before the Philadelphia convention even begins, would be in position to wield little influence for the state and the South."

H. M. ABERCROMBIE, Birmingham, candidate for delegate to the Democratic Convention, stated yesterday he would walk out of the conventaion if it adopts the civil rights proposals of President Truman. Birmingham, Ala

"It would grievously hurt Southern Democrats to be thus forced to break with the national Democratic organization," declared Abercrombie.

"On the other hand, we are all true Southerners and loyal Democrats. We cannot take the kind of treatment which President Truman advocates."

Abercrombie said "it goes without saying" he is against President Truman.

It's The South Vs. Negro Vote

The Courier

By JOHN L. CLARK

(Courier Political Analyst)

PHILADELPHIA—One of the most important events relating to the Democratic convention so far as Negroes are concerned had taken place before the convention formally opened. The battle to include the entire civil rights program of President Truman in the platform was fought by a score of witnesses before the Resolutions Committee—and the result appears to be a stalemate between Negroes and the South.

Pittsburgh, Pa

After the withdrawal of General Dwight D. Eisenhower and Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas for the Presidency, Truman's nomination became a certainty, and the convention was confronted with only two important issues—the civil rights plank for the platform, and the selection of the Vice Presidential nominee.

The civil rights plank in the platform became even more important than the choice of Vice President, for it was important that Negroes and liberals of the North be convinced that the National Democratic party was not under the domination of the Southern element.

Although President Truman had declared for civil liberties, nowhere had the Democratic party fully declared for these rights and liberties. This was true of Democratic members of the Congress, and it was also true of the National Democratic party.

It was therefore important that the party, in its national convention, either declare that it fully sustained the position of its standard bearer on the issue of civil liberties, or that it repudiates him on these issues.

ONLY ONE WAY

It would be taken as repudiation even if the platform remained silent, or couched its reference to civil liberties in general terms. Negroes and liberal forces pointed out that the only way the Democratic party could retain its position as the liberal party of the Nation was to incorporate the President's entire civil liberties program into the platform.

Sat 7-17-48

This was the position of the score or more Negro leaders, racial, and interracial organizations which were represented before the resolutions committee. More Negroes and interracial organizations appeared before the Democratic resolutions committee than appeared before the Republican platform committee, because they sensed the greater importance of the inclusion of a civil liberties plank in the Democratic platform than in the Republican platform. The Republican party is the party of the North, while the Democratic party is a national party, including the South. And the Northern Negro's fear of Southern domination must be allayed if they are to remain in the Dembcratic party.

FIVE FROM SOUTH

The nineteen-man resolutions committee consisted of Democratic bigwigs from all parts of the Nation—five of them came from the South. The serenity of the hearing rooms belied the intense emotion engendered by the issues presented.

It had leaked to The Courier that the committee had agreed that no questions would be asked of the various witnesses appearing before the committee to urge the adoption of recommendations concerning civil liberties. This agreement was faithfully observed, and the Southern membership of the committee took an unprecedented beating from a score of witnesses who characterized the South as the land of lynching and bigotry.

WHITE'S TIRADE

A quotation from Walter White's tirade before the committee was more or less typical of the denunciation indulged in by most of the speakers:

"The Democratic party," he said, "has been too much dominated by those who have attained and held power through disfranchisement, lynching and racial discrimination."

The Southerners on the committee remained quiet when such charges were hurled at them by a score of Negro witnesses. But it was more than they could bear to be denounced by a fellow-white Southerner. When Aubrey Williams, former head of the NYA, spoke in favor of including President Truman's equal rights program in the platform, he drew a fiery reply from ex-Governor Sparks of Alabama, a member of the committee.

Our Gravest Domestic Issue Is Faced Up To At Long Last

Sat. 7-24-48

Journal and Guide

AN EDITORIAL

WHATEVER one's political allegiance, there is no escaping the recognition that at their Philadelphia convention the Democrats made history. For the first time one of the two major parties realistically faced up to the gravest domestic issue which has been plaguing this nation for decades. There have been in the past only weasel words and political double talk with respect to the treatment of minorities and, specifically, with respect to civil liberties and rights. The Dixiecrats, with the exception of the implacable and impossibly bigoted Mississippians and the to-be-pitied 13 Alabamans who bolted the convention, let it be known that they'd accept Mr. Truman as the candidate, however unwillingly, if the platform included only an innocuous and meaningless plank on civil rights. The party machine leaders, reportedly, prevailed upon the President to accept such a watered down plank in the interest of harmony.

But there are forces on the move in this nation, at long last, which are tired of playing footloose with human rights. Those forces made known their strength when they achieved the almost impossible, the revision on the floor of the convention of the civil rights plank, a revision which threw out the committee-proposed version, intended to mollify the Magnolia Belt dissidents, and substituted in its place one which spelled out the essentials of the proposals made to Congress in February by President Truman. The Democrats may have failed to achieve party "harmony" and party "unity" thereby, but they certainly gained moral stature. As the New York Times commented, "The Democratic Party, came out with fire in its eye, in place of the glazed look of a week ago."

Norfolk, Va.

The action of the rank and file of the delegates is all the more significant when it is remembered that the party bosses, with the reported reluctant acquiescence of Mr. Truman, favored appeasing the South. Under the circumstances, for the delegates to have rewritten the plank in a floor test and to have gone further in doing so than any other convention of any major party ever has, is a development which will be marked by history as the turning point in the domestic history of the republic.

The Democratic Party's action tells the South, in unmistakably firm tones, that the rest of the country, roughly two-thirds of the other states, regard it as being out of step with the times. The courts have long been implicitly driving this lesson home. And the jurists have not been primarily damnyankee judges either; in fact, quite the contrary. Some of the most ringing and statesmanlike legal decisions have been written by such judges as Hutcheson of Virginia, Parker of North Carolina, Chestnut of Maryland, Waring of South Carolina, and Black of Alabama.

Sat. 7-24-48

The South has been condemned, further, by the most representative elected body in the country, the lower house of Congress. The House of Representatives has passed anti-lynching, anti-poll tax, and FEPC legislation more than once, only to have it filibustered to death in the Senate by the Bourbon South's spokesmen, aided, abetted, and guided in tactics by less demonstrative and vocal, but nevertheless effective, "conservatives" as Virginia's Byrd.

It might be noted for emphasis in passing that while the Virginia machine boss seldom filibusters himself, he helps mastermind the more rambunctious southerners and offers his office for strategy meetings.

We have the grim picture, therefore, of a section emphatically reprimanded by the Administration, the courts, the party to which it offers "solid" fealty, the majority of the representatives in the Congress, and many potent voices within the region itself, but still unwilling to adjust itself to realities or to pay more than lip service to its obligations under the Constitution. Sometimes we think it would have been better had the South made its secession from the Union stick.

Perhaps we ought to create some Forty-Ninth State to which all the rabble rousers who contend they speak for the section might migrate, and set up an epitome of fascist rule, barring anyone of non-white, non-Protestant, non-Caucasian, non-nativ born origin. Then they wouldn't have to contend blindly for states' rights or passionately oppose civil rights.

Demo Suicide Seen As Dixie Dictates On Labor, Negroes

The Worker

New York, N.Y. Sun. 7-18-48

By Joseph North

PHILADELPHIA. — The Democratic convention of 1948 may very well be described as the picture of a party in its death throes. The few gasps of life that could be heard were aroused by the name of Franklin D. Roosevelt which the orators used like medicine men mumbling some magic incantation. But the Truman people need more than dark magic.

7-18-48

For the spirit of FDR is not here, despite the fervid assurances of Jimmy Roosevelt and the pretty oratory of Helen Gahagan Douglas. It is elsewhere and this fact weighed heavily on the seating delegates in Convention Hall. I talked to many of them and it cropped up in nearly everything they said.

They know Henry Wallace's forces will be under this same roof within a week and this fact had much to do with the brawling that emerged on the civil right issue, the gestures toward labor on the Taft-Hartley Act, the tortured resolution on Israel. You could almost see the wire jerk as the delegates staged an "ovation" for Congressman William Dawson, Negro representative from Illinois, and for A. F. Whitney, president of the railway trainmen, the only labor notable who could be lured onto the platform. You could almost hear Less Biffle, of the Senate inner circle, pass word around to give the boys a great big hand. "We need the Negro and labor vote, boys." But despite such frenzied pleas the Dixicrats sat heavily on their hands.

IT IS NOT EASY to persuade anybody to commit suicide, and so the galleries saw some few sparks of life such as flared up when George L. Vaughn, Negro delegate from St. Louis, urged the adoption of the minority report of the Credentials Committee. This demanded the exclusion of the Mississippi delegation because it pledged unalterable opposition to Truman's candidacy for his civil rights gestures. What happened here is worth recounting in detail because I believe it reveals most clearly how wires were pulled behind the scenes. You can see the yawning gulf between word and deed.

The Worker

As Vaughn got going and vigorously reminded the delegates that civil rights of the Negro people were already guaranteed by the Constitution and the 14th Amendment, violent heckling started on the floor. When he mentioned the Mississippi delegation a roar of boos came up from the Bourbons.

Sun 7-18-48

The atmosphere, hitherto as quiet as Tamerlane's tomb, suddenly grew tense, and angry knots of Southern delegates formed in the aisles. Sen. Barkley, of Kentucky, then at the chair, appeared flustered and alarmed. He called for a voice vote, and from where I sat, near the platform, it was impossible to tell whether the roars of 'No' were louder than those of 'Aye'. But the Kentuckian promptly ruled that the majority of delegates favored the resolution to seat the Negro-hating Mississippi delegation.

WHEN INDIVIDUAL CRIES arose from the floor for a roll call, the chairman divulged that a "gentleman's agreement" had been reached in the Credentials Committee that a voice vote would suffice.

The Worker

By this time the galleries which had filled by late evening were stormily applauding Vaughan, the Missouri Negro, because he demanded the Negro people be given their Constitutional guarantees. A number of delegates clamored for the right to speak; particularly those from the big states where the Negro vote is decisive.

New York, N.Y.

John F. Shelley, chairman of the California delegation, stood on the table, shouting for recognition. At this moment Barkley announced the microphone had broken down. Shelley jumped to the platform and after a few words with gavel-pounding Barkley, the Kentuckian announced that California wanted it recorded that it opposed the majority report to seat the Mississippians. In rapid order the following states did likewise: New York, Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Iowa, Minnesota, Nevada, Washington, Wisconsin, District of Columbia. Their votes would have totalled over 500—about 40 percent of the 1,234 delegates here. But it never came to a roll call.

Sun. 7-18-48

It did not because the leading figures here had decided in advance to go through this rigmarole, give the anti-Truman Mississippians a pounding, allow the big states with the big Negro vote to go on record against the Bourbons, but not to push the issue to the point where the Dixiecrats could be defeated. For defeat them, they could—many observers felt—had any recognized leader put up a fight at this point.

But where was Helen Douglas? Or Jimmy Roosevelt? Or any of the ADA people? The convention rules provide a roll-call vote if one-fifth of the delegates wanted one. And had the Democrats really been in earnest about civil rights they could have licked the ranting Mississippians. But no leader emerged from his corner fighting like Hell to get a roll call vote and stir up enough delegates to defeat the Bourbons.

THE ROARING CROWDS in the galleries would have welcomed it—as would millions of Americans ported by men whom they labeled "Hermorphrodites" and "Aunt Nancy men." Some of the 100 signers of the declaration wilted under the barrage of ridicule and abuse. But the Women's Rights Movement, dubbed by scornful editors "A Petticoat Revolt" was dramatically launched.

Revolutionary Uprisings

The Worker

The path ahead was rough and stormy. These young pioneers were to grow old in the struggle. Mrs. Stanton and Mrs. Mott died at the age of 87. Susan B. Anthony, who came to leadership after the Civil War, died at 86. Not one of them ever had the joy of voting in her native land, in fact Miss Anthony was arrested in Rochester in 1872 for attempting to do so. Not until 1920, 72 years after Seneca Falls, was the right to vote finally won by all American women, when the 19th Amendment passed.

New York, N.Y.

The year 1848 was one of turbulent political struggles on a world scale—with revolutionary uprisings in Germany, France, Italy and Ireland. Here the struggles for the rights of labor and for the freedom of the slaves were assuming ever larger proportions. Many working women were involved that year in strikes to enforce the 10-hour day. Sarah Bagley, the first woman organizer, went before the New Hampshire legislature in 1847 to secure the first 10-hour law.

In 1848 Maine and Pennsylvania passed similar laws, which employers tried to evade by special contracts. They threatened to fire and blacklist workers who refused to sign. Workers signed counter-pledges to work only 10 hours. Women, especially textile workers of whom there were then 78,000, were extremely militant. In Philadelphia, in 1848, women weavers attacked the system by which those who toil most receive least and those who toil least receive most, and resolved to see labor organized on the basis preached by St. Paul: "If anyone would not work neither should he eat." This admirable thinking of a century ago is written today into the Soviet Constitution.

Sun. 7-18-48

A Pittsburgh paper described how women strikers drove out scabs with "true Amazonian vigor." They crashed the gates with axes, rushed the scabs out. Girl leaders, Mary Fulton and Elizabeth Haggerty, were arrested. "We went there to get our right!" was their defense.

The Civil War threw thousands more women into industry to be overworked and underpaid, and at its conclusion the issue of women's rights arose more acutely than ever before. In 1853, Harpers' Magazine called the movement "this female Socialism—equally opposed to nature and the established order or society founded upon it." All the forces of big business and entrenched politics were against votes for women.

The Fight For Enfranchisement

The Worker

Progressive men and women rejoiced when slavery ended. But they were outraged at a contemptible trick resorted to by the politicians, when the 14th Amendment was adopted, in 1868. It correctly defined citizens as "all persons born or naturalized in the United States." The 15th Amendment of 1870, stated: "The right of citizens to vote shall not be denied on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude." Suffrage should have then been the right of all the Negro people and all women. This the women had worked for; this would have been a complete victory. But in 1868 the qualifying word "male" appeared in the U. S. Constitution for the first time.

After the Civil War all women who believed in universal suffrage for men and women had joined the Equal Rights Association. In 1869, under the leadership of those two valiant fighters, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony, the National Women's Suffrage Association was organized to work exclusively for one purpose—votes for women. For another 51 years they spoke, wrote, organized in every corner of America.

When they began, Wyoming, a territory, had suffrage. It took 24 years to win the next state—Colorado. Utah and Idaho came along in 1896. After another 14 years women won in Washington, California, Oregon, Kansas and Arizona by 1912, Montana and Nevada in 1914, and New York, the only Eastern state, in 1917.

While the suffragists campaigned in the states, they carried on simultaneously annual conventions in Washington, demanded hearings from Congresional committees, and pressured the two major parties. In 1868, the Republicans, angered because the women had criticized the 14th Amendment, sarcastically referred them to the Democrats. Mrs. Stanton and Miss Anthony went to Tammany Hall on July 4th, and were grossly insulted by the plug-uglies there. The Republican and Democratic conventions alike turned deaf ears, year after year, and refused to put planks in their platforms for woman suffrage. By 1900 they were allowed 10 minutes by a chilly Republican platform committee and were denied a hearing by the Democrats.

The only Party candidate who campaigned for woman suffrage was Eugene V. Debs—the Socialist. The two old parties did nothing to help women get the vote. It was finally won in spite of the Democratic Party, over the stubborn opposition of President Woodrow Wilson, "the great liberator."

The Worker

Support From Labor and Negroes

After the Civil War the suffragists turned to the growing labor movement as an ally. Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton were accepted as delegates by the National Labor Union convention in 1868. Considerable objection was overcome by the spirited remarks of President William Sylvis, who was a strong advocate of women's rights. He said "the root of the matter lies in giving the ballot to all workers, regardless of sex, color or nationality.

"Terence V. Powderly, President of the Knights of Labor endorsed and spoke for suffrage in the '80's. Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor followed suit later.

How to Honor Them Today

Sun. 7-18-48

Organizations of the Negro people likewise endorsed woman suffrage. In a list of outstanding Americans who favored it at the turn of the century are Frederick Douglass, Booker T. Washington and Mrs. Mary Church Terrill, President of the National Association of Colored Women. In 1894, ex-Senator Bruce of Mississippi, the second Negro to be elected to the Senate, spoke at the national suffrage convention. A great bond of solidarity existed between the Negro people and the suffragists, who had fought together in the abolitionist movement and were now together struggling for full and equal suffrage. Sojourner Truth, the great Negro woman orator, had spoken for both, as far back as 1852, with Garrison Phillips and Douglass.

Only on the eve of victory did suffrage become "respectable" and rich ladies rush to capture its leadership. Through the long years of struggle the suffragists' position was very similar to that of the Communists of today. A question to Mrs. Stanton by a heckling congressman was: "Will voting women be willing to go to war." She replied, "They would decide if there would be war."

The Worker

Foremost among suffrage workers was the Communist, Anita Whitney, who was president of the College Equal Suffrage League in California, and second vice-president of the national organization for suffrage. She led her state to victory and helped to win other western states. Ella Reeve Bloor, now 86, was active in the suffrage movement, especially in Connecticut and Ohio, speaking from town to town. Maude Malone, who handled The Worker library, was the first militant suffragette in America—parading Broadway with posters.

New York, N.Y.

This courageous and inspiring struggle of bygone generations made it possible for women to vote in 1948. Will we do them honor by using our ballots effectively? Will 1948 measure up to that grand and glorious year of 1848—a century ago?

If those eloquent voices of yesterday could speak again they would surely stress peace, security, happiness for the people of the world, as the aims for which they won votes for women. To best celebrate the anniversary of Seneca Falls is to fight harder for these ends, against the forces which they fought yesterday.

Sun. 7-18-48

The old parties failed the woman for a century. We owe them nothing. They were tried and found wanting for all that women need and hold dear. Rather, we owe it to the memory of these brave pioneer women of yesteryears to be pioneers in 1948, as they dared to be in 1848. Today, this means to mobilize the woman's vote against the forces of greedy exploitation and brutal war-mongering, represented in the two old parties. To build a new people's party, with women equally represented as members, organizers, candidates and voters—this is to build a living and loving memorial to the great women of the past.

Cheered and Booed

Vaughn Touched Off Dems' Powder Keg With Blast at Dixie

Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sat. 7-24-48

By MARK HYMAN

PHILADELPHIA, (ANP)—The long-smouldering resentment to President Truman's civil rights proposal burst into the open on the Democratic convention floor when Atty. George L. Vaughn, veteran fighter, and famous for his winning of the nation-wide restrictive covenants battle, protested the seating of the Mississippi delegation on the grounds that the delegation had promised to bolt the convention if Truman were nominated, or anyone who favored civil rights. Sat.

From the time Vaughn started speaking, there were boos, catcalls from delegates from the deep South and cheers from the Northern delegations. There was pandemonium; yet Vaughn went on. He went into civil rights and the stand taken by America's 14,000,000 Negroes. He blasted lynching, unfair employment and all of the various violations of American rights. Through the jeers and cheers, he spoke with force and determination, making history at one of the most confused Democratic conventions of all times.

CRIES OF "VOTE"

At the end of his speech, the cries of "vote" went up. Demonstrations on the floor and among the spectators in the balcony grew into mounting chaos. Sen. Alben Barkley, temporary chairman and Vice Presidential favorite, tried to restore order, but to no avail. When Rep. Mary Norton came to the platform to give the decision that the delegation be seated, she was hardly audible. The aisles were jammed with Northern delegates shouting "vote." They were yelled at by Southerners who booed and jeered.

Sen. Hatch did no better with his presentation of the majority report which overrode Vaughn's minority report. Still the cries of "vote, vote," mixed with rebel yells swelled the confusion. The divided Democratic party was seeing history; it was looking confusedly into a new era.

DIE WAS CAST

Temporarily there was a victory for the South; yet the far-reaching effects of this historical outburst could be detected in the faces of both Northerners and Southerners. The die was cast.

The North scored the second victory when the two-thirds majority rule was voted down. This was proposed by the South in an attempt to sidestep the nomination of President Truman. Still the convention did not compose itself from the first outburst, proving its deep significance.

The Northerners who favored the speech and proposal made by Vaughn continued their demonstration throughout the evening. Although Barkley halted the meeting for order, there was no order. The day for bolting had come, if there were to be any; this was the day of secession, if such were to happen. The following speeches by Helen Gahagan Douglas, Congresswoman from California, and Rep. Mary Norton from New Jersey were lifeless sidelights. The ball was now rolling. The die was cast.

SOCIALISTIC MOB

Editor, The Advertiser:

Notably, the recent so-called Democratic Convention in Philadelphia was controlled largely by states which normally are not Democratic at all, but Republican, and "convention" votes are very different indeed from national election votes. Such distant states as Minnesota, Idaho, Oregon, Vermont, etc., had much to do with snubbing the South; going deliberately beyond the regular committee report on platform; "rubbing it in" by using H. S. Truman's bid for colored votes, and refusing to permit any reference to "the rights reserved to the states by the Constitution." By machine arrangement they overran any plea or reasoning, by the Southern representatives, on any such time-honored plank of real Democracy.

The time for the emancipation of the South from ruthless tramplers in the North—piratical exploiters of the name of "Democrats" has come. We have endured too much already from both wheedling and bulldozing, and we have nothing to gain by submitting to further snubs, jeers and insults by the wild socialistic mob calling themselves Democrats, but trampling underfoot the principles held sacred by Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Grover Cleveland and multitudinous other real Democrats.

POLITICAL PARADE

Examiner
Los Angeles, Calif

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

(Special to the Los Angeles Examiner)

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.

SOUTHERN conservative Democratic leadership has committed two major strategic campaign blunders in Philadelphia this week which may cost Dixie dearly in the years to come.

Dem.

7-16-48

The South should have supported Truman, to the extent of electing him if possible, and concentrated upon holding or strengthening its conservative lines in Congress with a view to resistance within the party to the impending drive for a new Northern policy of full racial equality in this country.

Southern leaders made another costly mistake when they let out a roar of protest against President Truman's first choice for second place on his ticket, Justice William O. Douglas.

The wise course for the South to have pursued would have been to seize upon the opportunity offered to them to oust a left-wing New Dealer from the United States Supreme Court, thus opening the way for the eventual reorganization of that tribunal through the gradual replacement of a bunch of Roosevelt "liberals," who now make this high bench as lopsided as a stage some sort of a rump convention at Birmingham, and still further play into Republican hands.

7-16-48

Why has Southern strategy here been a great sectional blunder? The answer is to be found in the two men, Truman and Dewey.

Fri.

The former, a Southerner from

ed upon drafting Douglas, whether or no.

It let this golden opportunity, like the sunbeams, pass it by!

In trying to fight Truman outside the breastworks, instead of within the party citadel, the South suffered disastrous defeat in the platform committee, and was left no alternative but to Gilbert and Sullivan elliptical billiard ball.

IF the Southern leadership here had been shrewder than it has proved to be, divided as it is in divergent and bickering groups, it would have whooped it up for Truman's favorite vice presidential nominee. and insist-

Missouri, has given lip service to the so-called civil rights program. If reelected, his own party could have balked him in Congress, and the racial issue would have been relegated to the area of the theoretical for at least four years.

But Dewey has already put an FEPC law, full of bristling teeth, on the statute books in New York. The South may rest assured that if Dewey is elected the new Republican President and Senator Ives will spearhead a determined drive to enact a federal FEPC law, on the lines of the Ives bill which in the present Congress finally reached the Senate calendar.

Examiner

IN trying to defeat Truman in July the South has made more probable a Dewey landslide in November, which if strong enough will sweep an increased number of Republicans into House and Senate.

So far as the other aspect touched upon here is concerned, the Supreme Court in the long run is of more vital importance to the South, and conservatives generally, than is Congress or the presidency itself.

This tribunal is the final court of appeal. It has been heavily slanted leftward by Roosevelt—packed if one likes that word better.

Los Angeles, Calif.

Many people in this country believe that New Deal Congresses during the past 16 years slanted many statutes in favor of bureaucracy and minority groups, such as organized labor, that are not in conformity with the Constitution, and that the Court itself has exercised legislative functions in this direction.

In the last analysis it is the Supreme Court which determines what the Constitution is.

If Douglas had resigned to run for the vice presidency a Court vacancy would have been created. It would have been a starter!

Fri. 7-16-48

If the South insisted upon getting rid of Truman it should have insisted also upon putting Douglas on the slate with him, thus, so to speak, killing two birds with one stone.

Truman Speech Cheers Maryland Delegation

Philadelphia, July 15 (AP).—The Maryland convention delegation today expressed itself as "very much heartened" by President Truman's "fighting mood" in accepting the Democratic nomination for the Presidency.

Typical delegate comment on the President's speech were: "Splendid," containing much "pep and vigor."

34d

The delegation, although disappointed by passage of the strengthened civil rights platform plank, will actively support the Truman-Barkley ticket in November, a spokesman said. The delegation voted "no" on the roll call on the issue.

Marylanders joined enthusiastically in the demonstration for President Truman.

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., delegation chairman, became separated from his demonstrating delegation—by a tuba and a cornet. He became sandwiched in a musical aggregation at the front of the hall, as two opposing columns of marchers met.

Senator Tydings of Maryland delivered one of the seconding speeches for nomination of Senator Barkley for Vice President.

The delegation originally had been pledged to Truman and Tydings, but was released by Tydings in favor of Barkley.

In the ballot on a proposal for a strong States' right platform pledge Maryland cast its 20 votes in the negative.

Walden Reports On Democratic Nat'l Confab

Alertness To Safeguard Vote Heritage Urged

Sun. 8-1-48

BY C. LAMAR WEAVER

ATLANTA, Georgia — (SNS) — President Truman's Civil Rights proposals were hailed here Friday night as a new day for minorities in America— an emancipation not only for Negroes, but for whites as well.

This acclaim was vigorously pronounced by Attorney A. T. Walde, President of the Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic clubs, in a spirited mass meeting on Civil Rights at Wheat Street Baptist Church.

Approximately 300 citizens were rejuvinated by the rally in which several speakers painted pictures of a political renaissance looming for Negroes in the South.

Attorney Walden had attended the recent Democratic convention in Philadelphia as an interested representative of his organization. His vivid picturization of the convention, especially the accounts of the relentless fight and sweeping victory of the approved civil rights plank in the party's platform, sent a spark of renewed hope throughout his audience.

COUNSELLED

He explained that although he was not an official party delegate at the convention, he was accepted cordially by the committee which drew up the civil rights plank. He modestly admitted that the committee on several occasions sought his advice in drawing up the civil rights plank which was finally embodied in the platform and approved by a majority vote.

The liberals were the spark plug of the convention, Walden declared. It was their indomitable spirit which literally set the convention afire. He said that it was this determination of Northern, Eastern and Western delegates that spelled defeat for opposing States Righters of the South.

The Lighthouse + Informer

Negroes played an important part in the convention, the speaker averred, explaining that they were among delegates from the Northern Eastern and Western states.

Extolling the President's acceptance address as a masterpiece of oratory in behelf of the common man, Walden praised President Truman for his forthrightness in sticking by his Civil Rights guns.

"No other president has shown more moral courage and backbone in such matters as Truman," he declared.

Columbia, S.C.

TIRED OF DISGRACE

The liberal movement of the party showed that the people of the North, East and West were tired of the South disgracing the nation and they had to be shown that the Civil War was over, he said determinedly.

Sun.

Atty Waldn looked with disdain upon any attempt by Negroes to abridge the laws of the nation. His remark was ostensibly leveled at A. Philip Randolph's advocacy calling for Negroes to refuse joining a jim crow Army.

8-1-48

"All the progress the Negro has ained has been through the enorcement of Federal laws," Wallen asserted.. "As such, they must ever attempt to buck it," he cautioned. .

(The speaker termed the South's pattern of second-class-citizenship for Negroes the weakest link in the nation's security.

C. A. Scott, of the Atlanta World nd President of the local chapter f the Negro democratic organizaon. served as chairman at the meeting. He said the time has come or the U. S. Constitution to mean ore than mere words and that it must function for all American citiens. The movement of time calls or absolute freedom of all peoples f the world, he added. The editor eveled an attacking barrage against he evils of those who would derive the Negro of his right to vote. He expressed the opinion that Negroes must be alert at all times to afeguard this sacred democratic rinciple.

O AROUSE CONCERN

Warren R. Cochrane, Executive ecretary of the Butler Street YMCA old the audience that "no person an afford not to be interested" in he political trend of the times. He aid the meeting at hand was conucted to create an aroused conern among Negroes to rally to their olitical freedom. The purpose of he meeting was not to tell one how e should vote, he explained. In ght of the Federal ruling which pened the Southern Democratic rimaries to Negroes, Mr. Cochrane leclared it to be expedient that Negroes integrate themselves into he Democratic party. Allegiance to any other party would jeopardize that privilege and make them liable to wholesale purging, he warned.

8/1/48

Rev. A. L. Brewster, of Dublin, Ga. a member of the organization and described as a statewide organizer of local chapters, rocked his audience jubilantly as he championed the Negro's right to vote as a true religious concept. The Negroes must carry the fight for full equality, he stressed, while reminding his audience that they must "prove to the world they would no longer be contented with taking a back seat." The minister implored that every Negro should be a Democrat.

Friday's meeting was the first in a series planned by the Negro Political group.

PEPPER WITHDRAWS TO AVOID BOLT TIE

The Times
New York, N.Y.

He Attacks Party Leadership, Urges Fellow Southerners Not to Combat Rights of Any

Wed. 7-14-48

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13 — To keep himself from being identified with a possible southern bolt, Senator Claude Pepper of Florida withdrew late this afternoon as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President.

"I release all promises of support and request that I not be nominated for any office within the powers of this convention," Senator Pepper told reporters at his headquarters. The Florida Senator, who seemingly had gained very little support for his candidacy, said he would support any candidates named by the Democratic national convention.

In a 600-word statement, Senator Pepper attacked the leadership of the Democratic party. He declared that his efforts and those of his associates had failed to bring about party unity and said that those who fought for party peace have determined that continued efforts could only make a bad matter worse.

"A Republican victory in November would not lead to a civil war but it most certainly would contribute to a divided world and might mean World War III," the statement read. "Certainly such selfish and ruthless forces as now command the Republican party would by their insatiable striving for power and for profit for the few at the expense of the people hasten the curse of a depression which would threaten the nation and the world with the utter collapse of economic and political democracy."

Senator Pepper declared that he was one of the many Democrats who, since the death of President Roosevelt, had sought to stave off the splintering of the Democratic party, and added:

Wed

"The present leadership of the Democratic party has proven incapable of holding the party together. Their failure is not alone due to its inability to follow in the footsteps of President Roosevelt, an impossible task for any living person, but to an unwillingness to accept and carry out with real fidelity the high principles and purposes to Franklin D. Roosevelt."

7-14-48

Saying that he had sought by his candidacy only to unite the party after the hope of nominating Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower failed, Senator Pepper said he had appealed to all factions of fellow delegates to gather on the Roosevelt policies. In an appeal to delegates not to divide on a Civil Rights plank, he said:

"I, as a Southerner, whose roots stretch back over two centuries in the South's proud past, have appealed to my fellow Southerners not at this critical period for human freedom to array themselves as their forefathers did in 1860 against human rights for any part of our people."

Sen. McGrath Reelected Party Chief

Philadelphia, July 15 (AP).—Senator J. Howard McGrath, who engineered the nomination of President Truman by the Democratic Convention here, today was given the job of electing him in November.

Without opposition and after he declared that the Democrats can win, McGrath was reelected chairman of the National Committee for a four-year term.

McGrath told the national party leaders that if they can "keep the team together," he is confident they can elect President Truman and Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, the No. 2 man on the ticket.

Praising the personal courage and confidence of the President,

Angry Democrats Plan To Seek Own Candidate

the national chairman said he has "no doubt" about the national election this fall.

Some Southern States failed to send their national committeemen and committeewomen to the session but McGrath reported this the best attended session of the top party leaders in many years.

Swept into office with McGrath were his entire staff and other national committee officials. They promised a "fighting campaign" in step with the fiery acceptance speech of Mr. Truman early today at Convention Hall.

Northern and Western Democratic leaders joined in saying that McGrath had done a fine job as national chairman. They promised to get in and fight the Republicans.

Joe L. Blythe of North Carolina reported that the party's campaign chest "is solvent and we expect to stay solvent.".

He did not list any figures and made no reference to the fact that some Southern States have refused to contribute because of the split with Persident Truman over civil rights.

Blythe said the convention had cost "a great deal of money but we still can pay off."

Mrs. India Edwards of Maryland, executive director of the women's division, said every woman party member is going "to get out and work her damnedest to elect President Truman and Senator Barkley."

The veteran Edward J. Kelly, former Mayor of Chicago and longtime Illinois national committeeman, referred to McGrath as a "dynamic personality."

Kelly added that President Truman had been the victim of a "whispering campaign."

"He's no great grammarian, he's nan that many of our great Presilents have been."

Kelly said he regarded Mr. Truman as the "saviour of the world."

James Roosevelt, son of the late President and newly elected naional committeeman from Caliornia, also pledged complete suport for McGrath and the Truman-Barkley ticket.

Young Roosevelt drew a laugh vhen he referred to himself as "a oyal rebel of the past."

This was a reference to his paricipation in the drive to make Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower the residential nominee, instead of Ir. Truman.

Dixiecrats After Florida Senator's Scalp; Lister Hill Obviously In Line Of Fire, Too

BY FRED TAYLOR

34d

Florida political pulse-feelers tell this column that if the presidential election had been held four or five weeks ago, the Dixiecrat Thurmond-Wright ticket might have carried the Gator state.

Even now, they say, the States' Righters pack a wallop, which they intend to use in an attempt to knock out ultra-liberal Sen. Claude Pepper, come 1950.

TAYLOR

They point out the States' Rights Democratic plumpers have been losing ground in Florida for some four or five weeks. As of today, my Palmetto-land informants are convinced, the presidential race is a nip-and-tuck affair between Truman and Dewey, with the GOP candidate probably having the edge.

This confirms a recent NANA report by Jay G. Hayden, veteran Washington analyst for The Detroit News, after a tour through the sunshine peninsula.

* * *

HILL'S SCALP—It has been apparent from the beginning of the Dixiecrat movement in Alabama that most of the States' Rights chieftains have their political knives out for Sen. Lister Hill. In fact, they had their blades out for him long before the Dixiecrat campaign was launched. Hill also comes up for re-election in 1950.

Alabama's senior senator, although not nearly so liberal as Pepper, is too liberal for many of the States' Rights leaders.

Frank Dixon, former Alabama governor, States'' Rights national committee member and one of the Thurmond-Wright ticket's main speakers, is the real head of the Dixiecrat movement in this state. Many feel Dixon would like to take over Hill's Senate seat, but he insists he's not going to run for U. S. Senate, for governor or for any other office.

* * *

HORACE WILKINSON, Birmingham lawyer, one of the state's 11 Democratic elector nominees, pledged first against Truman and next for Thurmond and Wright, is another of the Dixiecrats' big wheels. He has been making speaking forays into other Southern states. And he is anything but a Hill booster. It is no secret that Wilkinson would be tickled to see Hill get the bounce.

As for Marion Rushton, chairman of the States' Rights executive committee in Alabama, who announced his resignation some months ago as Democratic committeeman, what he thinks of the state's senior senator is well known. Rushton has been carrying on a political vendetta with Hill for years.

10-22-48

And there are others who are after Hill's political scalp.

* * *

LOOK TO FUTURE—Not even the most naive observers doubt that the States' Righters have big plans for future political campaigns.

And these planners envisage more future presidential races. Unquestionably the States' Righters hope to elect U. S. senators, governors and other state officials, as well as county and municipal officeholders.

Dixon told this column that this Sunday's strategy meeting of Dixiecrat chieftains in Memphis is primarily to set up a permanent organization. For it to be effective, it must be strong throughout the states, counties and cities.

In other words, it must have strong and willing men in office from top to bottom.

Planning to journey to Memphis with Dixon were John Newsome, North Alabama States' Rights campaign director; Sidney W. Smyer, Jefferson County States' Rights spearhead, and Wilkinson.

VIRGINIA BLITZ — Several Alabamians flew to Texas last week to help campaign squads of Mississippians, Louisiana and Arkansas Dixiecrat plumpers blitz Lone Star State voters for the Thurmond-Wright ticket in the closing days of the presidential race.

10-24-48

Among them were Bob Albritton, Andalusia attorney and Democratic elector nominee; O. P. Lee, Opelika lawyer, and George Huddleston, Sr., former Ninth District congressman.

Dixon, who went stumping for Thurmond and Wright through Arkansas, Texas and Louisiana last week, will journey to his former state of Virginia this week to help wage a campaign blitzkrieg in the last days of the tussle there.

The former governor, who spoke at Little Rock, says things look good for the Dixiecrats in Arkansas, but the situation in Texas, he says, is none too promising. Pollsters give Texas to Truman, with Dewey strength there on the upsurge.

Dixon considers Louisiana just about as securely in the bag for Thurmond and Wright as is Alabama.

The state's former executive, who grew up in Gloucester County, some 40 miles from Norfolk, has three speaking engagements in the Dominion State. He takes the stump at Charlottesville Monday, at Danville Tuesday and at Winchester Wednesday.

* * *

GOP MAZUMA — Alabama's biggest Republican wheel is Lonnie Noojin, Gadsden business man and national committeeman.

He is one of this state's most influential citizens and is well liked by both Democrats and Republicans.

To him fell the task of raising the heavy dough in Alabama for the Dewey-Warren campaign. The total GOP quota for the state was $25,000.

Noojin told this column he already had collected more than $21,000. This, plus funds raised by the state GOP headquarters, has put Republican collections well over the quota.

Most of this money has been sent to national headquarters for Dewey-Warren and senatorial campaigning in doubtful states.

"Is it true what they say about—California?"

34d Dem

JACKSONVILLE, Florida—Governor-Designate Fuller Warren, who is a bachelor, is going to California before his inauguration to meet California's Governor Earl Warren and study the citrus and tourist problems there in relation to Florida's. The last Southern bachelor governor to visit California went a-wooing, and came home without the girl and with a snub from the young lady's father, Governor Warren. We have all sorts of governors in the South. It is a land where statesmanship and demagog rival each other in greater incidence per capita than anywhere else in the civilized world.

Thurs. 6-10-48

Congressman Ed Gossett of Texas, author of the bill to reform the electoral college, writes me: "The electoral reform resolutions, H.J.R. 9, by me, and S.J.R. 200, by Senator Lodge, would go through this Congress easily if given the green light by the Republican leadership, i.e., Joe Martin and Senator Taft. We are trying to get the green light from them but have not yet been successful."

Columbia S.C

Contrary to some impression, this bill would not have Presidents elected by straight popular majority. It would retain the electoral vote principle, with each state given as at present a number of votes equal to the whole number of its representatives in the two houses of Congress. The bill would merely divide each state's electoral vote on the basis of the popular vote in that state.

Today the whole electoral vote goes to the nominee winning the popular majority, no matter how slim. The twin advantage of the Gossett-Lodge bill is that (1) it would make it worth-while for Republicans to try harder in the South and, therewith, encourage the two-party system there, and (2) it would take away the excessive power now in the hands of minority groups in doubtful states—the power which let Walter White boast last winter that the Negroes control the balance of power in 17 doubtful states of the East and North and would name the next President.

It is surprising that Florida, with fewer Negroes and more Northerners than other Southern states, should be ranking with the most all-out in Southern revolt. Floridians have repudiated the leads of both Senator Pepper and Governor Caldwell to name a delegation with a clear voting majority for Governor Wright of Mississippi and for bolting if need be. That certainly does sound like grass roots, incidentally. One reason may be that contact with more outsiders from the North and East than most Southern states enjoy has taught Florida not to be fatuous about the Democratic party and not to be so impressed either with "nation-mindedness" as are some of the publicists and politicians in my native Georgia. The revolt in Florida could be a sign of cosmopolitanism.

The complete route of Jim Folsom of Alabama, in the run-off for delegate-at-large last Tuesday, is not to be compared with the repudiation of Pepper and Caldwell in Florida on the sole issue of revolt. Even though Folsom was against bolting and the voters of Alabama were obviously very much in favor of it if need be, that cannot be taken as the reason for his amazing defeat. Senator Hill and former Governor Sparks, also against bolting, were easily elected to the delegation nevertheless, and Hill led the ticket. The Folsom defeat goes deeper. It is the voice of the Alabama branch-heads saying they are sick and tired. Frivolously, because he was entertaining, vital and young, they elected him. But even though farm people can be frivolous when there is no crying issue, they are not stupid, and they are not wanton. Their repudiation of Folsom proves it.
